VER. 2. Cry. Heb. "meditation." M.—The cry of the heart, (S. Chrys.) and "the groans," which the spirit forms within us. Rom. viii. 26. God cannot reject such prayers. If he seems inattentive, it is because we ask amiss. Jain. iv. 3. C.—He attends to the prayers of the Church, and of every faithful soul, (W.) and even exhorts sinners to come to him, that they may emerge from the abyss. H.

VER. 4. Morning. This hour of prayer is also specified, (Ps. lxxii. 1. and cxviii. 147.) as that of the evening is. Ps. iv. 9. and liv. 19. We read also of noon being a time for prayer among the Jews. Acts x. 9. Daniel (vi. 10.) diligently observed these holy customs. C.

VER. 5. Stand. Heb. implies "in order," as those who neglect prayer must be all in confusion. God enables those who are diligent, to see wonderful things. Bert.—Iniquity. No: he has it in abhorrence; (C.) consequently he cannot be the author of it, but hates those who commit evil, though he loves them as his creatures, and wishes their conversion. W.—On this subject I will meditate. M.

VER. 6. Eyes. God suffers them to remain for a time. S. Jer.

VER. 7. Workers, (operantur) "who work," (H.) and die impenitent.—Lie. All heretics, who kill their own and neighbours' souls, (S. Jer.) and in general all seducers, (C.) who will be treated like those who have committed murder. Euseb. Cæsar.

VER. 8. Mercy, not trusting in my own merit, (H.) but with the greatest awe. C.—The just must trust in mercy, not in man's power.—Temple, the Church, and in God's presence. W.—Some would infer hence that David was not the author 12 But let all them be glad that hope in thee: they shall rejoice for ever, and thou shalt dwell in them.

And all they that love thy name shall glory in thee.

13 For thou wilt bless the just.

O Lord, thou hast crowned us, as with a shield of thy good will.

PSALM VI.

DOMINE NE IN FURORE.

A prayer of a penitent sinner, under the scourge of God. The first penitential Psalm.

1 Unto the end, in verses, a psalm for David, for the octave.

2 O LORD, rebuke me not in thy indignation, nor chastise me in thy wrath.

3 Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I am weak: heal me, O Lord, for my bones are troubled.

4 And my soul is troubled exceedingly: but thou, O Lord, how long?

5 Turn to me, O Lord, and deliver my soul: O save me for thy mercy's sake.

6 For there is no one in death, that is mindful of thee: and who shall confess to thee in hell?

7 I have laboured in my groanings, every night I of this psalm. But the tabernacle is called by the same names; (1 K. i. 7, 24, and iii. 3.) so that this reason is not sufficient. C.

VER. 9. Enemias. Heb. "observers." They are always on the watch to discover any fault. Grant me thy preventing grace. Bert.—Let me not stumble, (II.) but cause me to walk cheerfully in thy paths. C.—If thou approve, it matters not how much worldlings blame me. S. Aug.

VER. 10. Their. Heb. "his." But it is incorrect. Houb.—S. Jer. has "their." Bert.—Vain. Heb. "wicked or deceitful."

VER. 11. Sepulchre, which never says there is enough. Prov. xxx. 15. C.—Dealt, &c. S. Paul authorizes this version, (Rom. iii. 18.) though the Heb. be rendered, "they flatter cunningly;" (Bert.) or "they sharpen their tongue," and polish it like a sword, that it may cut more easily. This may be applied to heretics. SS. Athan. Chrys. Jer. C.—Judge, or "condemn them." Heb. may be explained as a prediction. Bert.—The Holy Ghost could not dictate an imprecation or desire of revenge. But David might beg that God would frustrate the designs of his enemies; and, by treating them with some severity, hinder the execution of their wicked schemes, which would bring on their own ruin. S. Chrys. S. Aug. C.—Though the just desire the conversion of all, yet if any die impenitent, they approve of God's judgment, manifested at the end of the world. W.—Provoked. Heb. "rebelled against." I forgive them for what they have done to me. But I grieve at thy offence; make them return to a sense of their duty. C.—He might abhor the enemies of salvation, the world, &c. whom Christ has condemned. Bert.

VER. 12. Dwell. Heb. "protect," (S. Jer.) "or shade them." C.—The just will rejoice under thy protection, (II.) and at the conversion of the sinner. S. Chrys.

VER. 13. Us. Heb. "him." S. Jer. Aquila. C.—But neglecting the points, the Sept. is as accurate, and more beautiful. Bert.—Shield. Heb. tsinna, (II.) which was probably large enough to cover the body. C.—If God be with us, who is against us? H.—The just shall receive the sentence of eternal glory. W.

PSAL. VI. Domine, &c. VER. 1. For the octave. That is, to be sung on an instrument of eight strings. S. Augustin understands it mystically, of the last resurrection, and the world to come; which is, as it were, the octave, or eighth day, after the seven days of this mortal life; and for this octave, sinners must dispose themselves, like David, by bewailing their sins, whilst they are here upon the earth. Ch. W.—It may also signify, that this psalm was to be sung by "the eighth" of the 24 bands. 1 Par. xv. 21. David might compose it after sickness, with which he had been punished for his adultery; (C.) or under any distress; he expresses the sentiments of a true penitent, (Bert.) with which he was ever after impressed. H.—It is applicable to penitents of the new law. W.

VER. 2. Indignation. Lit. "fury." H.—Such strong expressions were requisite to make the carnal Jews fear God's judgments, though a being of infinite perfection can have no passion. S. Chrys.—David does not beg to be free from suffering, (H.) but he requests that God would chastise him with moderation. Jer. x. 24. and xvi. 28. C.—Justice without mercy is reserved for the last day. S. Greg.—Wrath. This regards those who have built wood, &c. on the foundation. They shall be purified by fire. S. Aug. Purgatory was then believed in the 4th Cent. Bert.—Let me not be condemned either to it, or hell. S. Greg. hic. and Ps. xxxvii.

VER. 3. Troubled, with grief. W.—I am sinking under my illness: my virtue is lost. C.—The whole human race is this sick man, requiring the aid of Jesus Christ. S. Aug.—The ineffable name Jehova, (H.) is repeated thrice, to insinuate that salvation must come from the Blessed Trinity. Bert. v. 9.—Under the allegory of sickness, the ravages of sin appear. M.

VER. 4. Long? Wilt thou leave me in distress? W.—He breaks off abruptly to express his sorrow, See Isai. vi. 11; Jer. xiii. 26. Bert.—True converts will wash my bed: I will water my couch with my tears.

8 My eye is troubled through indignation: I have grown old amongst all my enemies.

9 *Depart from me, all ye workers of iniquity: for the Lord hath heard the voice of my weeping.

10 The Lord hath heard my supplication: the Lord hath received my prayer.

11 Let all my enemies be ashamed, and be very much troubled: let them be turned back, and be ashamed very speedily.

PSALM VII.

DOMINE DEUS MEUS.

David, trusting in the justice of his cause, prayeth for God's help against his enemies.

1 The psalm of David, which he sung to the Lord, for the words of Chusi, the son of Jemini. [2 Kings xvi.]

2 O LORD, my God, in thee have I put my trust; save me from all them that persecute me, and deliver me.

3 Lest at any time he seize upon my soul like a lion, while there is no one to redeem me, nor to save.

* Matt. vii. 23. and xxv. 41. Luke xiii. 27.

are often tried a long time, that they may conceive how God will treat those who never return to him, (S. Aug. Euseb.) and that they may beware of a relapse. C.

VER. 5. Turn. God never abandons us first. Jer. ii. 27. Bert.—We drive him away by sin. S. Athan.—Save. I cannot take one step without thee. C.—Treat me not as my sins deserve; but mercifully restore me to favour. W.

VER. 6. Hell. The hardened sinner will not praise thee, (S. Aug.) much less will the damned, who are confirmed in evil. Bert.—Even those who are in "the grave," though just, cannot sound forth thy praises; and consequently, if I be cut off, the number of thy adorers will be diminished. This motive is often urged, as if God was forgotten in the rest of the world. Ps. xxix. 10. Isai. xxxviii. 18. C.—This life is the time for repentance. After death there is no conversion, but eternal blasphemies in hell. I will strive to prevent this misery, by continuing to do penance, till I am watered with thy grace. W.

VER. 7. Bed. S. Jer. "I will make my bed swim" (II.) with tears, or sweat. Bert.—Here we behold the effects of true repentance, which will not suffer the sinner to enjoy any repose, (C.) when he reflects on the pains of hell, and the perfections of God. H.—"O sweet affliction, which extinguishes the fire of hell, and restores man to the friendship of his God." S. Chrys.

VER. 8. Indignation of God, (Theod.) or of my enemies. I am also indignant when I behold my foes exulting in my ruin. C.—I have, Heb. "It," the eye. Bert.—The eye is naturally injured by excessive grief. Yet David could not think of his sins, without floods of tears. H.

VER. 9. Iniquity, who have fostered my passions, (Bert.) or sought my ruin. I now perceive who were my true friends. C.—Lord. He is twice mentioned in the next verse, in honour of the blessed Trinity, as a German commentator remarks, after the ancient interpreters (Bert.) and Fathers. They have constantly had an eye to these grand truths, which are nevertheless proved by clearer passages of Scripture. H.—David confides in God, as every true penitent may do, for protection. W.—He had also been assured of pardon by Nathan, the prophet. H.

VER. 11. Troubled. This is a prophecy, (S. Aug.) or a prayer for their speedy and earnest conversion, (S. Jer. C.) or a threat if they persist. W.—Speedily. At the last day, the wicked will perceive how short life has been. Tunc sentient peccatores quam non sit longa omnis illa que transit. S. Aug.

PSAL. VII. Domine, &c. Shiggaion (II.) is a word which has greatly puzzled interpreters. See Robertson in shape. Prot. have, "Shiggaion of David." The Rabbins confess that they know not its meaning, and it is of no service for the explanation of the psalm. Bert.—S. Jerom follows the Sept. (H.) which may suit very well. Others have, "ignorance." M.—"Perplexity." C.—"Secret." Vatab.—"Song of wanderings." Parkhurst, &c.—Chusi is scarcely less difficult to understand. The person who has inserted this historical title, and many others, without much judgment, had probably in view the wars of Absalom, and the curses of Semei. But the psalm seems rather to refer to the persecutions of Saul, (C. 1 K. xxii. 8. M.) who was of the tribe of Benjamin. H.—SS. Aug. Bas. and Chrys. explain it of Chusi, (W.) the Aracite, from a town of Benjamin, (C.) who defeated the counsel of Achitophel, (W.) as it is supposed that David was given to understand that his friend had betrayed him, and in consequence speaks of him in such harsh terms. But if that had been the case, he would have suppressed what was founded on error; (C.) and the supposition is contrary to the idea which we have of inspiration. Yet there is nothing in the psalm which requires the harsh expressions to be applied to Chusi. They may as well refer to Achitophel, who spoke in answer to him.

VER. 2. My God. This title is prompted by love and confidence. H.—All. David had only few followers, while he was pursued by Saul (C.) and Absalom. H.

4 O Lord, my God, if I have done this thing, if there be iniquity in my hands :

5 If I have rendered to them that repaid me evils, let me deservedly fall empty before my enemies.

6 Let the enemy pursue my soul, and take it, and tread down my life, on the earth, and bring down my glory to the dust.

7 Rise up, O Lord, in thy anger: and be thou exalted in the borders of my enemies.

And arise, O Lord, my God, in the precept which thou hast commanded: 8 and a congregation of people shall surround thee.

And for their sakes return thou on high.

9 The Lord judgeth the people.

Judge me, O Lord, according to my justice, and according to my innocence in me.

10 The wickedness of sinners shall be brought to nought; and thou shalt direct the just: "the searcher of hearts and reins is God." Just 11 Is my help from the Lord; who saveth the upright of heart.

12 God is a just judge, strong and patient: is he angry every day?

* 1 Par. xxviii. 9. Jer. xi. 20. and xvii. 10. and xx. 12.

VER. 3. Lion. In a spiritual sense this is the devil. 1 Pet. v. 8. S. Aug.—"Let him only see the sign of the cross, or the lamp continually burning before the altar, he will flee away. Should we wonder at this! the garments alone of Paul drove him from possessed persons." S. Chrys.—Will modern sectaries still ridicule these things!—While. Heb. "tearing, and not snatching away." But there is a similar construction, (Lam. v. 8) which shews that we ought to follow the Vulg. Bert.—Absalom, or any other enemy, may be this lion. W.—They threatened David with utter ruin, which he could never have escaped, without God's visible protection.

VER. 4. Thing, alluding to some calumny, (H.) with which he was assailed (W.) by Saul, Absalom, and Semei. Bert.—He disclaims all such ambitious or unjust sentiments, though he allows that he is not innocent before God. C.

VER. 5. That repaid. This seems better than "my peaceable one," as some translate the Heb. for it would be but a small commendation not to injure a friend: the pagans do as much. Dupont therefore agrees with the Vulg., and S. Jerom has, "If I have rendered evil to those who did me any, and sent my enemies empty away," or, as the Heb. is in the future, "I will let my enemies depart without fighting;" which is equivalent to, I will gain no advantage over them. Bert.—The man who takes revenge, injures himself, and becomes the devil's slave. S. Aug.—David had been so far from giving way to ingratitude, that he would not even hurt his enemy. H.—He let Saul escape, when he might easily have slain him. C.

VER. 6. Dwell. Heb. adds, "to dwell," (H.) as if the ignominy was not to be effaced. This would be very sensible for a king. Bert.—Glory is here synonymous with life, or sal. Gen. xlix. 6. Let my life and (C.) reputation be lost. W.—Suummum: rede nefas animam præferre pudori. Juv. viii.

VER. 7. Boasters. Heb. is rendered, "fury of my enemies."—My is found in some copies of the Sept. though the edit. of Comp. and Aldus agree with the Vulg., and Bos observes, that an ancient interpreter rendered the first word as we do. Berg.—Habar means, "to pass;" and, of course, behabroth (H.) may denote, in the borders; (Berg.) though S. Jer. &c. have, "rise up indignant over mine enemies." Avenge thy own cause, as they would overturn thy decree, which has called me to the throne. H.—Commanded. Shew thy power, and protect me, since thou hast ordered me to reign. W.—Convince my enemies of the injustice of their proceedings, (H.) and cause them to repent. Thy order is what displeases Saul. Protect me as thou hast promised. Chal. "Execute the judgment in my favour, which thou hast decreed." Then all will obey. C.—O Lord, my God. Heb. has not Lord, and some translate elai, "to me." But it also means, "my God." Bert.

VER. 8. High, on thy tribunal, to decide this dispute. The Fathers apply this to the ascension of Jesus Christ, who will judge the world. S. Aug. Theod. C. 2 Cor. x. 11.—The interference of Providence (H.) will induce many to come to thy tabernacle, (M.) to embrace the true religion, (W.) and sectaries will decrease. These will be refuted most effectually, when they see the law well observed. Berthier.

VER. 9. Innocence. Heb. "simplicity," which has the same meaning. H. He speaks of the justice of his cause (Muis) against his particular enemies. W.—S. Paul thus commends himself. 2 Tim. iv. 7. The justice of the saints is not merely imputed, as the first Protestants foolishly imagined: for how should God reward those whom he saw still in sin, and who were only reputed holy? a notion which their disciples have modified or abandoned, as they have also done what had been taught respecting grace. Justice is an effect of God's grace, and of man's co-operation. 1 Cor. xv. 10. Bert.—David begs that the disposer of kingdoms would convince Saul that he was not a rebel; and the world, that he had not lost God's favour, like his rival. H.

13 Except you will be converted, he will brandish his sword; he hath bent his bow, and made it ready.

14 And in it he hath prepared the instruments of death, he hath made ready his arrows for them that burn.

15 Behold he hath been in labour with injustice: he hath conceived sorrow, and brought forth iniquity.

16 He hath opened a pit and dug it: and he is fallen into the hole he made.

17 His sorrow shall be turned on his own head: and his iniquity shall come down upon his crown.

18 I will give glory to the Lord according to his justice: and will sing to the name of the Lord the most high.

PSALM VIII.

DOMINE DOMINUS NOSTER.

God is wonderful in his works; especially in mankind, singularly exalted by the incarnation of Christ.

1 Unto the end, for the presses: a psalm for David.

2 O LORD, our Lord, how admirable is thy name in the whole earth!

For thy magnificence is elevated above the heavens.

b Job xv. 85. Isai. lix. 4.

VER. 10. Reins; affections, (Jer. xii. 2. C.) and inmost recesses, which are open to God. M.

VER. 11. Just. This epithet refers to God, in Heb. Sept. might easily explain it of help, before the words and verses were divided; (H.) yet it is still taken in the former sense, in some Gr. and Lat. copies. The wicked shall be frustrated in their designs, though they may succeed for a time, (C.) consumetur, (Sym. H.) or rather let their ruin be determined on. 1 K. xxv. 17. C.

VER. 12. Strong. Heb. el, means also "God threatening every day;" (H.) which must be a proof of his patience, as the Sept. have intimated, since he could destroy at once. Thus nunquid, must be rendered "is he not?" Isai. xxvii. 7. Bert.—God cannot but be displeased at every sin. He threatens the offender daily by secret remorse, or by his preachers and good books. H.—But he often defers punishment (W.) till death, when the measure of crimes is full. S. Aug.—This silence or delay is one of the most terrible of his judgments, (H.) and a mark of his great indignation. If he were, however, to strike every one as soon as he had committed sin, where should we be! "He would soon be alone," as a pagan observed of "Jupiter, if he were presently to hurl his thunderbolts against every offender." C. See Val. Max. i. 2. Eccl. v. 4.

VER. 13. Except you. Heb. "if he be not." Houb. would read, "God will not be turned aside." Bert.—"For him who does not change, he will sharpen his sword." S. Jer. H.—God threatens before he strikes, (C.) expecting amendment. W.

VER. 14. For them that burn. That is, against the persecutors of his saints. G.—Heb. also, "he has made his arrows to burn." Houbigant after Sym. H.—The ancients used fiery darts or arrows. Ps. cix. Eph. vi. 16.

Sed magnum stridentem contorta phalarica venit, Fulminis acta modo.—En. ix. Herod. viii.

—The death of Saul seems to be foretold. C.

VER. 15. Iniquity. Heb. "a lie." All the labour of the wicked ends in smoke. See Mic. ii. 1. Is. lix. 4. H.—The psalmist sometimes speaks of many enemies, and sometimes of one, who was the chief. Yet what he says of him must, according to the genius of the Heb. language, be applied to the rest. Bert.—Saul, (C.) Absalom, and Achitophel, each found their ruin, in their unjust attempt. H.—They had injustice in view, and were actuated by envy, which destroyed them. W.

VER. 17. Sorrow. The evil which he designed for me (M.) will fall on him, like an arrow shot upwards. C.—Crown. Prot. "pate." H.

VER. 18. Justice. "Truly thou art just, O Lord," cries out S. Aug. "since thou protectest the just, so as to enlighten them by thyself; and so dispossess of sinners, that they are punished, not by thine, but by their own malice."

PSAL. VIII. Domine, &c. VER. 1. The presses. In Heb. Gittith, supposed to be a musical instrument; (Ch.) or, "the musicians from Geth," who were famous, and might follow David. 2 K. i. 20. and xv. 18. The Sept. must have read a v for i. (C.) Gothuth. Yet S. Jer. and Pagnin agree with them; (H.) and that sense seems as plausible as any other. The psalm relates to Christ alone; (Matt. xxi. 16. 1 Cor. xv. 26. and Heb. ii. 6.) who is represented treading the wine-press. Ia. lxiii. 3. Apoc. xix. 13. Bert.—The Jews confess that it speaks of the Messiah. Ferrand.—We may explain it also of the natural prerogatives of man, (C.) though (H.) this weakens the force of the prophecy. Bert.—S. Aug. applies the expressions to the good and bad in the Church. W.—It might be sung during the feast of tabernacles, after the vintage. M.

VER. 2. O Lord, (Jehova) our Lord, (Adonenu) S. Jer. Domitor noster "our Ruler." H.—God is Lord of all by creation, and still more of those who believe. W.—Adonai is pronounced by the Jews, and sometimes applied to men. But they have lost the pronunciation of the first term, which some read Jehovah, (C.) or Jaho, (S. Jer.) Jave, &c. H.—Admirable. It expresses all that

3 Out of the mouth of infants and of sucklings thou hast perfected praise, because of thy enemies, that thou mayst destroy the enemy and the avenger.

4 For I will behold thy heavens, the works of thy fingers: the moon and the stars which thou hast founded.

5 What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

6 ^aThou hast made him a little less than the angels, thou hast crowned him with glory and honour: 7 and hast set him over the works of thy hands.

8 ^bThou hast subjected all things under his feet, all sheep and oxen: moreover, the beasts also of the fields.

9 The birds of the air, and the fishes of the sea, that pass through the paths of the sea.

10 O Lord, our Lord, how admirable is thy name in the whole earth!

^a Heb. ii. 7.

He is. (Ex. iii. 14. Bert.) Essence itself. H.—Earth. This was verified after the incarnation; (S. Chrys.) for before, the Gentiles knew it not, and the Jews caused it to be blasphemed. Bert.—Now all confess the glory of Jesus Christ, the master-piece of God. C.—Heavens; which are nothing in comparison, (M.) for he hath created them. W. Hab. iii. 3.

VER. 3. Praise. But why does the prophet take notice of this proof of Christ's being the Messiah, while he passes over his curing the sick? &c. S. Chrysostom answers, because the other miracles had been performed in the old law, but God had never before opened the mouths of infants to proclaim "praise the Lord" as they did when they bore witness to Christ entering the temple. Other commentators greatly weaken this proof. Bert.—We read that after the passage of the Red Sea, wisdom opened the mouth of the dumb, and made the tongues of infants eloquent; (Wisd. x. 21.) which may be a figurative expression. The prophets and apostles, whom the world looked upon as fools, were chosen to declare the highest mysteries. All nature so clearly proves the existence of Providence, that, if other things were silent, infants would open their mouths to confound the incredulous. The condition of man from his infancy is, in effect, one of the plainest proofs of the divine wisdom. His imitative powers, the ease with which he takes his mother's milk, &c. are something surprising. Hippocrates even, concludes hence, that the child must have sucked, even in the womb, as the art is soon lost, and not easily recovered. God seems to be particularly pleased with the praises of children. Mic. ii. 9. Joel. ii. 16. S. Aug. admires how the Scriptures have been proportioned to the capacity of infants. Heb. "Thou hast increased strength." Aquila. C.—But S. Jerom retains praise, as our Saviour himself quotes it. Matt. xxi. 16. H.—Avenger. The old Vulg. read defensorem (it.) in the same sense. S. Chrys. explains it of the Jews; and other Fathers understand heretics and the devil. S. Aug. &c. C.—Ambrosius (con. Gent. i.) seems to think that all have an innate idea of Providence, ingenitum. The poor and simple confessed Christ, whom the proud doctors of the law, and Pharisees, rejected, despising his followers as children or fools. H.

VER. 4. Fingers, as if they had been formed in play, while the Incarnation is the work of God's right hand. Euseb. C.—Heavens, moon, and stars, denote the Church. No mention is made of the sun, because it is the emblem of Christ, who was the Creator. Bert. Apoc. xii. 1.—This text proves that the world was not formed by angels, as some ancient heretics asserted. David, perhaps, wrote this at night; and the sun and stars are not seen together. M.

VER. 5. Him. The prophet considers the nature of man at such a distance from the divinity. Being, nevertheless, united with it in Jesus Christ, it is raised far above the angels. Heb. ii. 6. Bert.—When we reflect on the meanness of our nature, on the one hand, and on what God has done for it on the other, we are lost in astonishment. The pagans were aware of the corporal infirmities of man, (Seneca Consol. xi.) but not of his spiritual disorders. Heb. has here, the son of Adam, or one of the lowest class; and not of ish, which means a person of nobility, vir. Ps. iv. 3. C.—Yet Christ applies to himself the former appellation, to shew us a pattern of humility. H.—S. Aug. inquires, what difference there is between man or the son. The Heb. v means, likewise, and; yet or would have been better. Ex. xxi. 16.—"Whether he have sold him, or he be in his hand." Amama.

VER. 6. Angels. Elohim means also "God," as S. Jerom, &c. explain it. Thou hast placed man like a deity upon earth. But S. Paul adopts the sense of the Sept. C.—S. Jerom doubted whether the epistle to the Hebrews belonged to him, or he would have done the same. Some of the Fathers suppose, (Bert.) that the prophet speaks of man before the fall. Theodor.—Yet he has Christ principally in view. C.—A little less may be better rendered, "for a little while;" βραχυ χρόνος. Acts v. 34. Ia. x. 25. modico. Heb. ii. Notwithstanding the prerogatives of Adam, before his fall, what is said by the prophet and S. Paul can be true of none but Christ; who was subject to death only for a short space, and quickly rose from the tomb, Lord of all. 1 Cor. xv. 26. If we do not see it yet, (Heb. ii. 8. Ps. lxxix. 2.) our faith must not waver. He is crowned, and will one day assert his dominion. Bert. Matt. xxviii. 18. Eph. i. 19. C.—In his assumed nature, Christ became less than the angels; but he has raised it above them, and is appointed Lord of angels, men, and creatures of every description. The sea and the winds obey him. Matt. viii. W.

PSALM IX.

CONFITEBOR TIBI DOMINE.

The church praiseth God for his protection against her enemies.

1 Unto the end, for the hidden things of the son. A psalm for David.

2 I WILL give praise to thee, O Lord, with my whole heart: I will relate all thy wonders.

3 I will be glad, and rejoice in thee: I will sing to thy name, O thou most high.

4 When my enemy shall be turned back: they shall be weakened, and perish before thy face.

5 For thou hast maintained my judgment and my cause: thou hast sat on the throne, who judgest justice.

6 Thou hast rebuked the Gentiles, and the wicked one hath perished; thou hast blotted out their name for ever and ever.

7 The swords of the enemy have failed unto the end: and their cities thou hast destroyed.

^b Gen. i. 28. 1 Cor. xv. 26.

VER. 8. All sheep. S. Paul did not judge it necessary to specify these things, as they are included in the word all. Bert. These tame cattle designate the believing Jews; beasts, the Gentile converts; birds, the proud; fishes, the voluptuous. S. Athan.—The birds may also be put for men of genius, who dive into the secrets of theology; and fishes, for anxious worldlings. Hesye.—SS. Aug. and Jerom understand that people who labour not for their salvation, or who are attached to the earth, men who rise up against God, or never elevate their thoughts to heaven, are emblematically specified by these creatures.

VER. 9. Sea. All things are subjected to man's dominion. Gen. i. 26. and ix. 2. C.—"The Stoics are in the right, who say that the world was made for us. For all its parts and productions are contrived for man's benefit." Lact. ira. xiii.

VER. 10. Earth. This repetition of the first verse insinuates, that as God was admirable in giving man the power to avoid sin and death; so he is wonderful in raising him again, in such a state that he can sin no more. W.

PSAL IX. Confitebor, &c. VER. 1. The hidden things of the son. The humility and sufferings of Christ, the Son of God; and of good Christians, who are his sons by adoption; are called hidden things, with regard to the children of this world, who know not the value and merit of them. Ch.—It may also signify, "to Ben, the master of music, over the young women." See 1 Par. xv. 18. C. M.—These authors have joined almuth, which S. Jerom, &c. read as two words, "on the death of the son." Prot. "upon Muth Labben." David might allude to the death of Absalom, or of some of his other children. But he has his Son, Christ, the conqueror of death and hell, principally in view, as this psalm sings of victory over nations. His incarnation and the afflictions of Christians are hidden in God. W.—Lamnatseach has generally a preposition, l, al, &c. after it, which might induce us to prefer rendering "death," before "secrets or young women." H.—But al may be understood, as it is found Ps. xlv. where all have, "for the secrets." In Heb. this psalm is divided (Bert.) at v. 22nd, and formerly it seems at the 17th. C.—This division is arbitrary, and of no consequence for the understanding of the psalm. Bert.—It would be well if there were no more serious controversy between Catholics and Protestants. The Jews agree with neither. Some unite the 1st and 2nd, as Kimchi does the 114th and 115th. Amama.—What is here rendered a psalm for David, is the same in the Heb. and Sept. as has been before expressed of David. Ps. iii. II.

VER. 2. Praise and thanks, or I will confess. W.—To thee. Heb. "to the." David had received many favours from God, and he has testified his gratitude, and shewn how we ought to praise God, (S. Jer. C.) with soul and body. Bert. W.—Wonders; victories gained over the neighbouring nations, so that Israel was at peace and liberty to transport the ark to Sion. 1 Par. xv.

VER. 4. Back; routed. After Saul's family was taken off, none durst oppose David. They saw that the Lord had set him on the throne. C.—Only after his sin, rebels began to molest him. H.—The Fathers explain this of the devil and his agents. S. Jer.—God repelleth the enemy, when man is not able to resist. W.

VER. 5. Justice, or rightly. C.—God alone always discerns what is just. S. Chrys.—Man overcomes the devil, with the assistance of God's grace. W.

VER. 6. Name, or destroyed them. The name is often put for the thing itself. Yet many of those nations who once made such a noise, are now quite forgotten. No traces of them can be found. H.—The Egyptians and Chanaanites had been exterminated. C.—Ever, for all eternity, as long as God shall reign, v. 8. 40. or Ps. x. 16. This shews that he speaks of the latter times, and of the final destruction of idolatry, by the preaching of apostolic men, (Bert.) and by the last fire. For some will be so infatuated as to uphold it even to the end. H.—We have even reason to fear that it will again become more general, (P. Apoc.) as faith shall decrease. Jesus Christ and his apostles gave it however (H.) a mortal wound, so that in the fifth age many of its mysteries were quite forgotten. Theod. SS. Aug. and Jer. C.—They took the towns, or the souls, of many from the strong-armed. Luk. xi. 21. Bert.—All sinners may be here styled Gentiles, because they were generally wicked. If their reputation survive here for a while, it will certainly perish in the future world. W.

VER. 7. Swords. "My enemies have sunk under the sword." Syr. H.—Francea is a German word for "javelin," pointed with iron, which they might

Their memory hath perished with a noise: 8 But the Lord remaineth for ever.

He hath prepared his throne in judgment: 9 and he shall judge the world in equity, he shall judge the people in justice.

10 And the Lord is become a refuge for the poor: a helper in due time in tribulation.

11 And let them trust in thee who know thy name: for thou hast not forsaken them that seek thee, O Lord.

12 Sing ye to the Lord, who dwelleth in Sion: declare his ways among the Gentiles:

13 For requiring their blood, he hath remembered them: he hath not forgotten the cry of the poor.

14 Have mercy on me, O Lord: see my humiliation which I suffer from my enemies.

15 Thou that liftest me up from the gates of death, that I may declare all thy praises in the gates of the daughter of Sion.

16 I will rejoice in thy salvation: the Gentiles have stuck fast in the destruction which they prepared.

Their foot hath been taken in the very snare which they hid.

17 The Lord shall be known when he executeth judgments: the sinner hath been caught in the works of his own hands.

either throw, or use in close fight. Tacit.—It is often put for a sword. Et Marti frangam. Juv. xiii.—The weapons of the enemy being exhausted, they are forced to yield.—Their. Heb. &c. "the."—Noise, as swiftly. These fierce nations are fallen like a huge Colossus. C.—Heb. "they themselves," or "with them."—Cities, &c.

VER. 8. In judgment. S. Jer. "to judge." H.
VER. 9. World. This globe must give place to new heavens and earth, (Bert.) after its inhabitants have been judged. H.—Justice. Men may be corrupt judges, but God cannot. W.

VER. 10. Poor. Heb. ladas, "the oppressed," (S. Jer.) "broken with grief." C.—Tribulation. God's assistance is requisite both in prosperity and adversity. He generally manifests his power only, when all human succour proves useless. H.—Thus he acted at the Red Sea, and when he sent deliverers to Israel. Our Saviour came at the time appointed, when he was most wanted. Theod. Gal. iv. 4. C.—"We are often oppressed with tribulation, and yet it is not the due time; that so we may be helped by the desire of being set free." S. Greg.—Thus the delay is for our advantage. W.

VER. 11. Know, with love. Such are always heard. What wonder if others be rejected, who flee from God? S. Chrys. and S. Aug. C.—The learned often trust too much to their own knowledge, whereas God has made choice of the simple. Matt. xi. 25. Bert.

VER. 12. Ways, (studia) "favours" (H.) works, &c. C.—This was done by the apostles. S. Aug.—Men ought chiefly to study the precepts of God. W.

VER. 13. Their, may be omitted, as it would seem to refer to the Gentiles. God declares that he will demand the blood of all that shed it without authority. Gen. ix. 5. H.—He had punished the Chanaanites, &c. for their cruelty, as he did afterwards the persecutors of his Church. If the names of Herod, Nero, &c. be infamous in history for their sanguinary proceedings, they are not less so on account of the judgments which God exercised upon them, even in this world. C. See Lact. de Mort. Persec. H.—God avengeth the blood of his martyrs. W.

VER. 14. Enemies. Israel has been so long under oppression.

VER. 15. Death, from the most imminent dangers. H.—Daughter. In the places where the inhabitants of Sion assembled, (Bert.) or publicly in the Church. W.—In hell, the damned would wish to die. Theod.—The gates of death may also signify sin, (Orig.) and the bad example of parents. S. Jer.

VER. 16. Hid. These are the enemies of salvation. Bert.—The nations which had oppressed the Jews found their fortifications and arms turned against themselves, (C.) which is often the case of the wicked. W.

VER. 17. Hands. Caught in the very act, so that he cannot deny the crime. Here we find in Heb. (C.) higaion sela, which S. Jerom renders, "by meditation for ever." H.—Sept. Sym. and some Lat. copies, "a canticle of the psalm's division," διαψαλματος. Here perhaps the psalm ended. C.

VER. 18. Hell; shall die, or be lost. (Convertantur.) Lit. "Let," &c. But it may be properly explained as a prediction, or menace. H.—"Those who are devoid of God's justice, return to the dominion of the devil." Robertson, Lexic.—Zeal, and not revenge, prompts David to speak thus. W.

VER. 19. Not perish. Heb. does not express the negation, but it must be understood. Bert.—Prot. supply it from the former part of the verse. The expectation of the just will not be frustrated.

VER. 20. Man. Heb. enosh, (H.) "weak," sinful "man." Bert.—Gentiles, or all notorious sinners. The Jews despised the Gentiles, as the Romans did all barbarians. W.

VER. 21. Lawgiver. Heb. mora. H.—Sept. intimate one who rigorously enforces his laws. M.—Sym. "a law" Heb. "instruction." C.—Houb. "fear."

18 The wicked shall be turned into hell, all the nations that forget God.

19 For the poor man shall not be forgotten to the end: the patience of the poor shall not perish for ever.

20 Arise, O Lord, let not man be strengthened: let the Gentiles be judged in thy sight.

21 Appoint, O Lord, a lawgiver over them: that the Gentiles may know themselves to be but men.

Psalm x. according to the Hebrews.

1 Why, O Lord, hast thou retired afar off? why dost thou slight us in our wants, in the time of trouble?

2 Whilst the wicked man is proud, the poor is set on fire: they are caught in the counsels which they devise.

3 For the sinner is praised in the desires of his soul: and the unjust man is blessed.

4 The sinner hath provoked the Lord, according to the multitude of his wrath, he will not seek him:

5 God is not before his eyes: his ways are filthy at all times.

Thy judgments are removed from his sight: he shall rule over all his enemies.

6 For he hath said in his heart: I shall not be moved from generation to generation, and shall be without evil.

S. Jer. "terror: let the nations know that they are men always." Sela is thus frequently explained as a part of the sentence by S. Jerom, though neglected by others. H.—It is no proof that the ps. ended here; but serves to excite attention. W.—The Gentiles lived without law, like beasts, except that their conscience sometimes admonished them of their duty. Rom. ii. 14. H.—Whether a person can ever silence it entirely, is a very serious and terrible question. The great ones stand in need of being admonished frequently of their frail condition. Bert.—When Pausanias, king of Sparta, asked Simonides to give him some important lesson, he replied, "Remember that thou art a man." Whoever reflects on this, will beware never to yield to sentiments of pride. The Fathers understand this lawgiver to be Jesus; or Antichrist, whom the wicked have deserved to have set over them. Theod. S. Athan. &c. C.—Those who will not believe in Christ, will give credit to Antichrist. S. Aug. 2 Thess. ii.

PSALM 10. VER. 1 or 22. In modern times, the Jews have done it. W.—The Church allows this title, though the Sept. found none in their copies, and therefore looked upon all to be one ps. The change of subject is no proof of the contrary, as such compositions mingle joy and fear together. David has shown how the just had got the victory. He now proceeds to declare what persecutions they had to endure. Bert.—After peace war succeeds. There is no settled state here below. H.—The same sentiments occur, Ps. xi. and xiii. &c. C.—Trouble. God assists his servants in distress; (v. 10.) yet sometimes he delays, in order "to inflame their souls with a desire of his coming." S. Aug.—He is present, (Acts. xvii. 28.) but only the men of prayer are truly sensible either of it, or of his absence. Bert.—The weak think he defers his aid a long time when they suffer any great persecution.

VER. 2 or 23. Fire. With zeal (W.) and indignation, or rather is oppressed (C.) and persecuted. See Mic. iii. 3. H.—They. Houb. would substitute "he is caught." But we may as well explain this of the sinner and the unjust, v. 3. Bert.—Indeed both are under perplexity, as the poor knows not why the wicked prosper. Bellar. M.—An answer is given to the complaint of the just, intimating that the wicked are caught in their own snares, (W.) and are not free from trouble. H.

VER. 3. Blessed by flatterers, while he is full of himself also, as the Heb. insinuates. C.—"The miser, applauding himself, has blasphemed the Lord. The wicked in the height of his fury will not seek, nor is God in all his thoughts." H.—This is more energetic, and encourages us to study the original. The worldling wishes there were no God; or banishes him from his thoughts as much as possible. Bert.

VER. 4. Seek to regain his favour, (W. M.) or rather (H.) he flatters himself that God will not punish him, v. 13. C.—Multum irascitur, dum non exquirat. S. Aug. See Ps. xxxv. 5.

VER. 5. Filthy. Heb. "as one in labour." He can enjoy no ease. Chai. "his ways are prosperous." Jun. "paved." C.—Removed. Heb. "height itself before him, he will blow upon all his enemies." This more forcibly denotes his violence and scorn. Bert. Acts ix. 1. M.—He ruleth for a time, and supposeth that his dominion will never have an end, and that he will enjoy constant happiness. W.

VER. 6. Evil. Always happy, or as the Heb. Chal. &c. may signify, "I shall not desist from evil." C.—I will gratify my passions. Who dares to oppose me? A.—The pride of Nabuchodonosor is known. Dan. iv. 19. &c.

VER. 7. Sorrow. Which he prepares for others, and yet feels himself. C.—Eliam ad perniciem laboratur. S. Aug.—To gain hell requires some trouble. H.—The wicked is his own executioner. C.

7 *His mouth is full of cursing, and of bitterness, and of deceit: under his tongue are labour and sorrow.

8 He sitteth in ambush with the rich, in private places, that he may kill the innocent.

9 His eyes are upon the poor man: he lieth in wait, in secret, like a lion in his den.

He lieth in ambush, that he may catch the poor man: to catch the poor, whilst he draweth him to him.

10 In his net he will bring him down, he will crouch and fall, when he shall have power over the poor.

11 For he hath said in his heart: God hath forgotten, he hath turned away his face, not to see to the end.

12 Arise, O Lord God, let thy hand be exalted: forget not the poor.

13 Wherefore hath the wicked provoked God? for he hath said in his heart: He will not require it.

14 Thou seest it, for thou considerest labour and sorrow: that thou mayst deliver them into thy hands.

To thee is the poor man left: thou wilt be a helper to the orphan.

15 Break thou the arm of the sinner and of the malignant: his sin shall be sought, and shall not be found.

16 The Lord shall reign to eternity, yea, for ever and ever: ye Gentiles shall perish from his land.

^a Infra xiii. 8. Rom. iii. 14.

VER. 8. Rich. S. Jer. "in the porches," is equivalent. Moderns translate, "villages," which Houbigant would change for a word signifying "ditches," without necessity. Bert.

VER. 9. Poor. "His eyes look round the strong," for aid; or "the poor," (Prot.) for destruction. See v. 14.

VER. 10. Fall. Prot. "and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by his strong ones." H.—He imitates the lion in the fable, which feigned sickness. Hor. ep.—But the Vulg. gives a better sense. C.—"He will bring under the broken, (poor) and will rush on violently with all his power." S. Jerom here explains chelecaim, valenter, instead of "the poor;" (H.) as some of the Gr. interpreters must have done, if it be true that his version is formed on the plan of the Hexapla, of a mere selection from Aq. Sym. and Theodotion, as Houbigant asserts, (Pref.) in order to confute the Jews. H.

VER. 11. End. God delays for a time; but he will punish. C.—Religion lays open all the sophisms of infidelity. Bert.

VER. 14. Sorrow. Thou punishest with pain. S. Aug.—Thou beholdest all the iniquity which is committed, (C.) but waitest until the measure be full. S. Chrys.—Terrible delay!—Poor. S. Jer. "art left thy strong ones," who distrust in themselves, and rely on thee. H.—Others explain cheleca, "poor and weak." Parkhurst.—Cheleca only occurs here and v. 9. 10. Prot. "the poor committeth himself to thee." H.

VER. 15. Found. When the means of sinning are withdrawn, he will repent; (S. Chrys. Aug. Is. xxviii. 19.) or it is a sort of irony: he will see whether, as he said, God will take no notice, v. 4. C.—He shall be utterly exterminated. Ps. xxxvi. M.—No vestige of his magnificent works, founded on injustice, shall remain. H.

VER. 16. Shall. Or Heb. "have perished." In the prophetic style, things to come are spoken of as past, on account of their certainty. Bert.—The wicked shall not appear in the kingdom of God, to pollute his earth. H.—Ye nations which have seized the promised land, expect not to keep possession. If God suffer the sinner for a while, it is because he is eternal, so that he will never let him escape. C.

VER. 17. Thou. Heb. "Thou, Lord, hast heard the desire of the humble. Thou wilt prepare their heart; thou wilt cause thine ear to hear." Prot. H.—Luther seems to have altered the text in his German version, in order to establish his error of the certitude of salvation; "their heart is sure that thine ear hath heard." The Heb. intimates that God prepares the heart for all good. Bert.—He hears before his servants cry out, (Is. lxv. 24.) since his spirit inspires the petitions. Rom. viii. 26. Gal. iv. 6. C.—The cry of the heart is charity, amore petitur. S. Aug. Mor. Ecc.—His just man is always ready to suffer whatever God may appoint. W.

VER. 18 or 39. Earth. S. Jer. is more expressive, "that the man of earth may by no means cherish pride any longer." Though he may be the greatest monarch, he is but man, dust and corruption, v. 21. H.—Christ, who shewed himself wonderful in humility at his birth, (v. 1.) will display his power at the last day, by giving sentence against the wicked, and by exalting his servants. W.

PSAL. X. In Domino, &c. Heb. Lamnatkeach ledavid, (H.) "to the master of music of, or to David." C.—S. Jerom supplies the word psalm. That David, or any other, should give the title of master of music to so great a prince may seem strange; and therefore the Vulg. may perhaps be as accurate. S. Jerom 17 The Lord hath heard the desire of the poor: thy ear hath heard the preparation of their heart.

18 To judge for the fatherless and for the humble, that man may no more presume to magnify himself upon earth.

PSALM X.

IN DOMINO CONFIDO.

The just man's confidence in God in the midst of persecutions.

1 Unto the end. A psalm to David.

2 IN the Lord I put my trust: how then do you say to my soul: Get thee away from hence to the mountain, like a sparrow.

3 For, lo, the wicked have bent their bow: they have prepared their arrows in the quiver, to shoot in the dark the upright of heart.

4 For they have destroyed the things which thou hast made: but what has the just man done?

5 ^bThe Lord is in his holy temple, the Lord's throne is in heaven.

His eyes look on the poor man: his eyelids examine the sons of men.

6 The Lord trieth the just and the wicked: but he that loveth iniquity, hateth his own soul.

7 He shall rain snares upon sinners: fire and brimstone, and storms of winds, shall be the portion of their cup.

^b Habac. ii. 20.

and Pagnin have "to the victor of David." Almost all agree that he composed this psalm (II.) when he began to be persecuted by Saul. He expresses his confidence in God; when his friends advised him to flee. C.—The Fathers take hence occasion to caution the faithful against the insidious speeches of those who pretend that they can procure greater security than the Church affords, (H.) and that they teach a doctrine of greater perfection. SS. Aug. Jer. &c. C.

VER. 2. How. My friends . . . say, &c. W.—To the. Heb. now "to your mountain," as the words are joined which were formerly divided, while a v has been lost, and another placed instead of i, as we may gather from the ancient interpreters. Chal. Syr. S. Jer. &c.—Most people suppose that David's friends exhort him to withdraw: but he waits for the divine order. Others think (C.) that these are the words of his enemies, who wished to fill him with dismay, that he might retire among the Gentiles, and adore their idols, 1 K. xxvi. 19. Mariana.—Sparrow. Heb. tsipor, any little "bird." H. Prov. xxvii. 8. M.—Heretics falsely style their conventicles the mountain. S. Aug. W.

VER. 3. Quiver. Heb. "on the string," ready to shoot. C.—But yet (H.) means "abundance," and may be well understood of the quiver. Bert.—Persecutors use all rigour, though they disguise the real cause of their resentment against the innocent. W.—Dark. Sept. add "moon." M.

VER. 4. Made. In choosing me for king, Heb. "the foundations are, or shall be destroyed; and what shall the just do? or, what has the just man done?" The foundations, both of religion and of the kingdom, depend on God's ordinances, as the Sept. well explain. Bert.—Pagnin has, "the nets;" S. Jerom, "the laws." In these days of infidelity and rebellion, the just must experience the greatest perplexity. H.—If faith be lost, who shall be just? Bert.—Persecutors, and especially heretics, pull down what others have built. W.

VER. 5. Heaven. This is the source of my confidence. C.—The admirable mother of the Machabees suggested this consoling motive, (Bert.) to strengthen her youngest son. 2 Mac. vii. 28. Heaven is the temple of the Lord, (H.) though the tabernacle may be so styled here. See Ps. v. 8. C.—The poor man is not in Heb. but it is chiefly of him that the psalmist speaks; (Bert.) and the Sept. and Arab. (C.) seem to (H.) have read it. Elihu remarks, that God does not disregard human affairs, as the wicked supposed. Job xxii. 12. C.—If his eyes seem to be shut, his providence watcheth. W.

VER. 6. Trieth, interrogat, which is rendered by examine, v. 5. H.—God juridically questions all, (C.) and makes them give an exact account of themselves, even of every idle word. H.—The word also means that he punishes, or chastises. C.—Heb. "the Lord trieth the just, but his soul hateth the wicked, and the lover of iniquity." S. Jer. &c. H.—Yet the original may be explained in the sense of the Sept. which is more beautiful and instructive; as the sinner will hardly believe that he is his own greatest enemy. Bert.—By continuing in sin he brings damnation on his soul. W.

VER. 7. Snares. Wonderful expression! The wicked cannot escape. H.—Brimstone, as he did upon Sodom. Gen. xix. 4. Jude 7.—Cup. At feasts, each person (C.) had his portion and his own cup. Dreadful indeed is the inheritance of the wicked. See Ps. xv. 5. Bert.—If God spare for a time, He must at last punish severely. W.

VER. 8. Righteousness. As, on the other hand, (H.) the upright shall behold God, (Matt. v. 8.) while the wicked shall be driven into darkness (C.) for all eternity. In vain do modern sophists pretend that hell will not last for ever 8 For the Lord is just, and hath loved justice: his countenance hath beheld righteousness.

PSALM XI.

SALVUM ME FAC.

The prophet calls for God's help against the wicked.

1 Unto the end: for the octave, a psalm for David.

2 SAVE me, O Lord, for there is now no saint: truths are decayed from among the children of men.

3 They have spoken vain things, every one to his neighbour: with deceitful lips, and with a double heart have they spoken.

4 May the Lord destroy all deceitful lips, and the tongue that speaketh proud things.

5 Who have said: We will magnify our tongue: our lips are our own: who is Lord over us?

6 By reason of the misery of the needy, and the groans of the poor, now will I arise, saith the Lord.

I will set him in safety: I will deal confidently in his regard.

7 ^aThe words of the Lord are pure words: as silver tried by the fire, purged from the earth, refined seven times.

8 Thou, O Lord, wilt preserve us: and keep us from this generation for ever.

9 The wicked walk round about: according to thy highness, thou hast multiplied the children of men.

because God is incapable of revenge, or of delighting in the torture of his creatures. They use the word revenge in a wrong sense. Bert.—God is not subject to any passion; but his justice requires that those should be eternally punished, whose will is always impious. H.—Can they shew that there will be room for repentance in the other world? (Bert.) or that the wicked would make use of it, if granted, since they would not repent as long as they lived? By the same arguments, they might as well prove that God could not punish at all. H. Dan. iii. 27.

PSAL. XI. Salvum, &c. VER. 2. Save. David, persecuted by Saul, (Bosuet) or Absalom; (Grot.) the captives at Babylon; (C.) our Saviour suffering, or coming to judge: (S. Aug.) in a word, any just man who sees the corruption of men, may use this language. H.—We cannot open the writings of the prophets, or of the Fathers, without meeting with such complaints. Heb. “no saint;” chasis, “pious” (Pagn. H.) clement person. C.—Truths. Heb. “people of veracity.” C.—Bias said, “All men are bad;” (Clem. Strom. l.) or, as Laetius expresses it, “Most people are wicked.” Hence few are chosen. H.—Christ is the truth. If we admire his doctrine, let us put it in practice. Bert.

VER. 3. Deceitful. Heb. “flattering;” and of course not free from deceit. Bert.—

“That man I hate, e’en as the gates of hell,

Who thinks one thing, and will another tell.” Iliad l.

—None can have (H.) confidence in a liar. S. Jam. i. 8. C.

VER. 4. Lips. “The saints do not curse, but foretell what will happen.” S. Jer.—Heb. “the Lord will destroy” the deceitful, (Bert.) who mean to injure men; (H.) and the proud, who attack God and religion, which they pretend they can prove (Bert.) to be a mere fiction, by their superior eloquence! H.

VER. 5. Own. “We have lips,” (Sym.) or eloquence to gain our cause against these miserable exiles. C.—Lord. Heb. adon, “master.” We admit of no superior, neither in heaven nor on earth. H.—Such was the haughtiness of Pharaoh, &c. Ex. v. 2. and 4 K. xviii. 19. Dan. iii. 15. C.

VER. 6. Arise, and redeem lost man; (Theod.) or, protect my servants (C.) from such insolent oppressors. H.—Regard. This may be put in the mouth of the afflicted. C.—“I will place my confidence in the Saviour, and will act boldly in him.” H.—His promises give me full assurance, v. 7. The Heb. seems to be incorrect, and very different from what the ancients read. C.—S. Jer. has, “I will place their aid in salvation;” (H.) which he explains of Jesus Christ. See Is. xii. 2. C.—Moderns insert many words. “I will save him, that they may learn to trust in me.” German.—“I will set him in safety from him that putteth at him.” Prot. Or “would ensnare him.” Margin. We may better translate, “I will put in safety, the Lord will act freely herein;” or, “safety which will act freely upon him,” the poor. Bert.—“I will raise up a Saviour, who with his breath will destroy the wicked.” Prin. disc.

VER. 7. Pure words, very different from those of the deceitful, v. 3. C.—Earth, dross, or in the crucible, or “for the ruler of earth;” (Pagnin. H.) current money. If we alter the Heb. a little, it may be, “with care, (bahalih, which is never elsewhere used for a crucible) gold refined seven times;” often, (Prov. xxiv. 16.) or as much as possible. C.

VER. 8. This corrupt generation; or, both in this world and in the next. Heb. “preserve them,” the just, or thy words. C.—“And thou wilt keep him.” Pagn.—Prot. marg. i. e. “Every one of them.” S. Jerom reads “us.” H.

PSALM XII.

USQUEQUO DOMINE.

A prayer in tribulation.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

HOW long, O Lord, wilt thou forget me unto the end? how long dost thou turn away thy face from me?

2 How long shall I take counsels in my soul, sorrow in my heart all the day?

3 How long shall my enemy be exalted over me?

4 Consider, and hear me, O Lord, my God.

Enlighten my eyes, that I never sleep in death:

5 Lest at any time my enemy say: I have prevailed against him.

They that trouble me, will rejoice when I am moved:

6 But I have trusted in thy mercy.

My heart shall rejoice in thy salvation: I will sing to the Lord, who giveth me good things: yea, I will sing to the name of the Lord, the most high.

PSALM XIII.

DIXIT INSIPIENS. 1.

The general corruption of men, before our redemption by Christ

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

THE fool hath said in his heart: ^bThere is no God.

They are corrupt, and are become abominable in their ways: there is none that doth good, no not one.

VER. 9. About. Their life is a circle of relapses; or rather they continually attack the just, (C.) but their designs are made subservient to their advancement in virtue, by the power of God. T.—Heb. “They (the just) shall go round the wicked, when baseness shall have raised herself up, on account of the children of men.” When God shall have restored the Jews to liberty, the Babylonians shall be, in their turn, oppressed by Cyrus and the Persians, whom they now despise: or, when the miserable shall be placed in power, the wicked shall not dare to approach them. C.—“The wicked shall walk round about, when the vilest of the sons of men shall be exalted.” S. Jerom. H.—The former have spent their life in vanity, and shall be kept for ever out of the kingdom of heaven; as the error of the Platonists, who assert that all things will come to pass again, the world being compared to a wheel, is manifestly refuted by Scripture, which assures us that God will preserve the just from this generation, (S. Aug.) and the wicked will knock at the door, like the foolish virgins, and will be rejected with, I never knew you. Matt. xxv. S. Jer. or some other learned author. W.—For some suspect that the commentary which goes under the name of S. Jerom, is not in the state in which it came from his hands.—H.

PSAL. XII. Usquequo, &c. VER. 1. Me? These expressions are figurative. God seems displeased: but it is often for our greater good. Some explain this of David, Ezechias, the captives, &c. It may be applied to every afflicted soul, which places her whole trust in God. C.

VER. 2. Day; frequently. W.—Sept. adds, “and night.” C.—These cares and perplexities arise from persecutions and from man’s weakness. W.

VER. 3. Enemy; Saul, &c. or the devil. S. Aug. C.

VER. 4. Death, by mortal sin, (W.) or through excessive sorrow. Jer. li. 39. Shew me thy favour, (C.) and I shall be secure. Sleep is represented as nearly related to death. Iliad xiv.

Tum consanguineus lethi sopor. Æn. vi. H.

VER. 7. Mercy. Man must attribute nothing to himself, otherwise he will be moved by pride. S. Aug. C.—Things; patience and reward. W.—The prophet feels a secret confidence arising in his breast, in consequence of God’s protection. —Yea, &c. is not in Heb. but it is in the Sept. Arab. and the ancient Fathers. Heb. “My heart shall be transported in thy salvation; I will praise the Lord, because he has rendered me the like,” as I placed my hopes in him: (C.) or, “he hath rewarded me.” The blessed Virgin adopts the language of this verse, and the prophet probably had the same salvation, Christ, in view. Berthier.

PSAL. XIII. Dixit, &c. VER. 1. Fool: the man of the most depraved morals, the atheist and deist. There have always been (Bert.) such pests of society. H.—David has refuted them again. Ps. lii. Bert.—Some have imagined that this psalm was composed in consequence of the blasphemies of Rab-saces, (4 K. xviii. 32. Theodoret, &c.) or of the Babylonians. C.—The Fathers explain it of Jesus Christ, denied by the Jews, &c.—Heart. This must be strangely corrupted, before the mouth can utter such impiety. H.—No God. Chai. “no power of God on earth.” Elohim denotes particularly “judges.” There have been a few philosophers who have denied the existence of God; and more who have called in question his Providence: though this amounts to the same thing. But the number of those who confess God with the mouth, and deny him by their works, is immense. H.—These live as if there were no judge. C.—By sin they come at last to think there is none to govern the world. W.—Plato (Leg. 10.) acknowledged that three sorts of people offend God; those who

2 The Lord hath looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there be any that understand and seek God.

3 They are all gone aside, they are become unprofitable together: there is none that doth good: no not one.

Their throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they acted deceitfully: the poison of asps is under their lips.

Their mouth is full of cursing and bitterness; their feet are swift to shed blood.

Destruction and unhappiness in their ways; and the way of peace they have not known: there is no fear of God before their eyes.

4 Shall not all they know that work iniquity, who devour my people as they eat bread?

5 They have not called upon the Lord: there have they trembled for fear, where there was no fear.

6 For the Lord is in the just generation: you have deny him; who say that He does not mind human affairs; or those who think that presents may prevail on him to connive at their wickedness. It is doubtful whether the mind can ever be so darkened as to believe that there is no God. Bert.—The heart may wish there were none to punish its impiety. H.—Liber-tinage or pride gives birth to so many infidels. They have begun by reducing conscience to silence. Their arguments only tend to destroy.—No, not one, is not in Heb. Sept. &c. except in v. 3. C.—Yet it occurs in the Vatican Sept., which is the best. Bert. C.—“They are become abominable, with earnestness there is none who doth good.” S. Jer. H.—Or they sin designedly and with affectation. C.—All are unable to do good without the Redeemer. W.—Some explain this of mankind in general, as all are born in sin. David refers also to actual and habitual sinners. Bert.—S. Paul (Rom. iii.) proves from this text, and Isai. lix. 7, that all stand in need of grace and faith, and cannot be saved either by the law of nature or of Moses. But it does not follow that faith alone will save, or that the most just are still wicked, as Calvin and Beza falsely expound the Scriptures. For the prophets speak of those who were not yet justified, teaching that all mankind were once in sin, and could not be justified but by Christ. At the same time, they assert that, when they are justified, they must serve justice to bear fruit, and obtain happiness. Rom. vi. These points are well explained by S. Aug.: (de Sp. et lit. i. 9.) “The just are justified freely by his grace,” not by the law or will; though this is not effected without the will, &c. The same holy doctor (a. 27) observes, that the just do not live free from all venial sins, and yet remain in the state of salvation; while the wicked continue in the state of damnation, though they do some good works. W.

VER. 2. God. Those only who seek God, understand their real interests. H.—The pagans, and particularly those of Babylon, lived in the greatest dis-solution, so as to call loudly for vengeance, v. 5. C.—Both the understanding and the will were gone astray. Bert.

VER. 3. Unprofitable. Without faith in Christ, none have meritorious works. W.—Not one. Such was the condition of the world before Christ, as all were born in sin. “No one,” says S. Aug. “can do good, except he shew the method.” All were immersed in ruin, “except the holy Virgin, concerning whom, for the honour of the Lord, I would have no question at all, in treating of sins.” S. Aug. de Nat. et Grat. con. Pelag. xxxvii. 44. C.—The Council of Trent approves of this reserve, when speaking of original sin. Our Saviour is the source of this privilege, and much more out of the question. He could not be guilty of any sort of transgression. He was in all things like to us, excepting sin. H.—Their, &c. What follows to shall not, (v. 4.) occurs in S. Paul; (Rom. iii. 11, 12, 13.) whence S. Jerom supposes that it has been inserted here, though the apostle took the quotations from different parts of scripture. Praef. in xvi. Isai. He informs us, that all the Greek commentators marked it as not found in Heb. or the Sept. “except in the Vulg. or καὶ οὐκ, which varied in different parts of the world.” There seems to be no reason why it should have been omitted designedly, whereas some might insert it, through the false notion that S. Paul had taken it from this psalm. C.—The Heb. is not therefore mutilated, but the Vulg. redundant. Amama.—Yet this is not absolutely clear. We find the quotation in the Rom. Sept. which is the most correct; (Bert.) though some prefer the Alex. MSS. H.—It is also in the Arab. and Ethiopic versions; so that it might have been in S. Paul’s copy. Our Saviour read a passage from Isaias, which is not extant, Luke iv. 19. Bert.—S. Justin, S. Aug. &c. agree with the Vulg.; and Luidan mentions a Heb. copy which had these verses, though the learned have reason to think that this Heb. was of a modern date. C.—Prot. 1577, inserted these three verses, (W.) which they now omit.—Sepulchre. They are never satisfied with destruction, (H.) and with vexing others. W.—We bear in ourselves the seed of corruption, which can be prevented from growing up only by the grace of Jesus Christ. Bert.—Perdition is from thyself, O Israel. H.

VER. 4. Know my just providence, though they would fain keep it out of sight, (v. 1.) that they may indulge their passions. H.—My people. These we may conclude, were just; (Bert.) at least in comparison with their cruel oppression, (H.) who made it their daily practice to injure them. (S. Aug.) as they could do it with facility. Num. xix. 9. Prov. xxx. 14. Mic. iii. 2. C.—The prophet, in God’s name, complains of their eagerness to hurt the good. W.

confounded the counsel of the poor man; but the Lord is his hope.

7 Who shall give out of Sion the salvation of Israel? when the Lord shall have turned away the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad

PSALM XIV.

DOMINE QUIS HABITABIT.

What kind of men shall dwell in the heavenly Sion

1 A psalm for David.

L ORD, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle? or who shall rest in thy holy hill?

2 He that walketh without blemish, and worketh justice:

3 He that speaketh truth in his heart, who hath not used deceit in his tongue:

Nor hath done evil to his neighbour: nor taken up a reproach against his neighbours.

4 In his sight the malignant is brought to nothing: but he glorifieth them that fear the Lord.

VER. 5. Where. This expression refers to there, which is in Heb. though this last part of the verse be wanting. Capel.—It is in Ps. lii. 3, and this renders the former omission (v. 3.) more credible. Bert.—When Cyrus approached to besiege Babylon, Nabonides, the king, met him, and gave him battle; but losing the victory, he, in a panic, retreated to Borsippe, and abandoned the defence of his capital. Beros. apud Jos. con. App. I. The citizens were in the utmost consternation. Isai. xlii. and xxi., &c. C.—But the wicked tremble at the prospect of temporal losses, (M.) and at shadows, while they boldly affront the Deity. Unbelievers find difficulties in the Catholic doctrines, which are frequently to be attributed to their own mistakes. H.—The pagans would not believe in God, but trembled before idols; which cannot hurt the faithful. W.

VER. 6. Man, who wished sincerely to practise his religion, like Daniel, &c. Such you have persecuted, and hence God has filled you with alarms, and will punish you. C.—Som: persevere in justice, amid the general contagion and insults of men. W.

VER. 7. Sion; whi.h God has chosen for his sanctuary. H.—Salvation, or the Saviour, whom Jacob expected. Gen. xlix. Bert.—This Redeemer would fill all, both Jews and Gentiles, with joy, who should embrace his faith. S. Aug. &c.—The prophet seems to foretell the restoration of the ten tribes to the kingdom of Judea, as it took place after the captivity. C. Diss.—But he sighed for, and designated more particularly, (H.) the Saviour of the world; who would redeem man from the tyranny of the devil, to the great joy of those who strive to supplant every vice, and to contemplate God, (W.) as some interpret the names of Jacob and Israel. H.—The Gentiles will then be ingrafted into the stock of Abraham, (M.) into the true olive-tree. Rom. xi. H.

PSALM XIV. VER. 1. David. The word psalm being appropriated to some, while others are styled hymns, &c. does not hinder the latter from being also psalms or spiritual songs, to be set to music: so the insertion of David, “the beloved’s name,” in some of these divine canticles, is no proof that the rest were not written by him. W.—The author describes the perfection of priests, &c. contrasts the sanctity of those who shall inhabit Jerusalem with that of the wicked mentioned in the last psalm. Some copies have To the end in the title, while others omit it, with the Heb. S. Chrys. &c.—Hill. The Jews comforted themselves with the hopes of seeing Jerusalem rebuilt, Ps. cxxxi. 1. The prophets describe those who should return from captivity, as holy people, (Isai. xxvi. 3. Soph. iii. 13. C.) a figure of the Church. H.—Heaven is also styled a tabernacle and mountain, (Apoc. xv. 5. Heb. xii. 22. Bert.) and is here chiefly (H.) meant. See ver. 5. W.

VER. 2. Justice. These two things characterize the true Israelite. C.—We must avoid sin, and do good, in thought, word and deed, v. 3. W.

VER. 3. Heart, as he thinks. H.—Those who sincerely love truth, will not deceive others. C.—We must be attached to all revealed truths, and avoid all the disorders of the tongue.—Up, which would otherwise have fallen to the ground, &c. Bert.—Reproach. Rashly giving credit to injurious reports, (C. S. Aug. Ex. xxiii. 1.) or speaking with insult, (Theod.) even in giving correction, (S. Hilary) or listening to detraction. W.

VER. 4. Nothing. He despises all wickedness, though done by kings, whose power he considers as the means of destruction. 1 K. xv. 26. Lu. xxiii. 9. The wicked dares not appear before an upright judge, like David. Ps. c. 2. Heb. may be “the wicked is despised.” S. Jer. H.—Those who follow the Jews, have “he thinks meanly of himself,” which is very good; but the sense of the Vulg. seems more pointed, (C.) though the other contains a noble maxim of the gospel. Bert.—Prot. “in whose eyes a vile person is condemned.” The sinner is the only person who is truly vile, in the opinion of the just, who forms not his opinion on outward appearances. H.—Lord. Glory is the reward of good works. W.—Neighbour. This sense is conformable to the Heb. without points, (Geneb.) and more beautiful than that of the Rabbins, “against his own interest,” (Jun.) “to do evil,” (Ainsworth) “friendship,” (Sym.) or “to afflict himself.” S. Jerom.—We find such vows strongly enforced. Num. xxx. 8. Deut. xxiii. 21. C.—Prot. “that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not.” H.—It were to be wished that oaths were not necessary. C.—But when they are, the Lord must be the arbiter of truth, and not idols; as by swearing, we testify that we

He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth not; 5 he that hath not put out his money to usury, nor taken bribes against the innocent:

He that doth these things, shall not be moved for ever.

PSALM XV.

CONSERVA ME DOMINE.

Christ's future victory and triumph over the world and death.

1 The inscription of a title to David himself.

PRESERVE me, O Lord, for I have put my trust in thee. 2 I have said to the Lord, thou art my God, for thou hast no need of my goods.

3 To the saints, who are in his land, he hath made wonderful all my desires in them.

4 Their infirmities were multiplied: afterwards they made haste.

I will not gather together their meetings for blood-believe God is the sovereign truth, and thus honour his name. See Lev. xix. 12. Mat. v. 33. II.

* Acts ii. 25.

VER. 5. Usury. This was always blameable, though Moses tolerated it with respect to the Jews lending to the Chanaanites. Deut. xxiii. 19. Lu. vi. 35. The Roman law condemned the guilty to pay double as much as the thief, who was to restore twice the value of what he had stolen. Cato l.—Under the semblance of kindness it does a real injury; (S. Hil.) etiam his inuisa quibus succurrere videtur. Columel. præf. C.—Bribes, (munera) "presents." Even these are dangerous, as they tend to prepossess the judge. II.—Both usury and doing wrong for bribes exclude from heaven. W.—A judge must shake such things from his hands, (Isai. xxxiii. 15.) as he cannot take them to give either a just or a wrong sentence. His duty requires him to give the former; so that the innocent would thus be purchasing what was his own. C.—The same maxims must be applied to all in authority, (H.) to witnesses, &c. C.—Those who have not failed in any of these respects, must be possessed of faith, and all other necessary virtues, before they can enter heaven. For when the scripture attributes salvation to any one virtue in particular, it does not mean to exclude the rest.—For ever. All terrestrial things are mutable; and of course, the psalmist speaks of heaven. If so great perfection was required, to appear in the tabernacle, how much more must be expected of the candidate for heaven! W.—The good Christian who has not yielded to temptation, may there enjoy undisturbed repose. Isaias (xlii. 15.) uses similar expressions, when describing the state of Jerusalem, after the defeat of Sennacherib. C.

PSAL. XV. &c. VER. 1. The inscription of a title. That is, of a pillar or monument, ἀνάθημα: which is as much as to say, that this psalm is most worthy to be engraven on an everlasting monument. Ch.—Mictam. Prot. "Mictam." Marg. or "golden psalm of David," or most excellent. S. Jerom. &c. have divided the word into two: "of the humble and upright David." H.—It may signify "inscribed." C.—But there seems to be no reason for abandoning the Sept. who were well acquainted with the original. The ps. is in the form of a prayer, which David pronounces in the person of Christ, to whom the apostles apply several verses; and, as the rest seem to be of the same nature, we must understand all of the Messias, praying, in his sacred humanity, (Bert.) that his body may remain incorrupt. It may refer to Ezechias, to the captives, or rather to David, persecuted by Saul, and provoked to serve false gods. 1 K. xvi. 19. But then many expressions must be explained figuratively, (C.) and this would tend to weaken the prediction, (Bert.) which all the Fathers have understood of Christ suffering. C.—The thing most worthy to be noted, (stilo-graphia) by the prophet David, is our Saviour's crucifixion; (W.) the memory of which must be perpetuated. Job (xix. 24.) wished that what he said about the resurrection, might thus be engraven on flint. H.—Preserve. David acknowledges his infirmity, and that all good comes from God. C.—Jesus was heard praying with tears, &c. Heb. v. 7. In his humanity, He might use these expressions, (H.) as He was the head of a new people, whom he wished to sanctify and instruct. Bert.—He often prayed, as the gospel informs us. W.

VER. 2. I have. Heb. "Thou, my soul, hast said." But S. Jerom. agrees with us.—Goods. Heb. "my good is not above thee." I can desire nothing greater. Bert.—Aquila and Vatable seem to have the same idea as the Sept. We reap all the profit from our piety. C.—The redemption was entirely for man's benefit, (W.) though it gave the greatest glory to God. H.—Since God, therefore, wants nothing, I will shew my kindness (Bellar.) to the poor. H.

VER. 3. Saints. Heb. "the magnificent" priests, God himself, (Ex. xv. 11. C.) and ceremonies of religion, (H.) for which David had a wonderful affection. C.—But Christ has displayed the greatest love towards all his converts, and they had need of it. Bert.—God here speaks, shewing that Christ should make known his wonderful charity to the apostles and other saints.

VER. 4. Haste. Men who are convinced of their own infirmities, hasten to find a remedy. W.—No sooner had fallen man been redeemed, than he strove to advance in the ways of perfection. Bert.—The sins, to which the saints sometimes yield, tend to make them more cautious (C.) and grateful to their deliverer, like S. Peter. Persecutions likewise cause them to cling closer to God, and fill them with interior joy. Acts v. 41. H.—If we explain it of the wicked, chastisement often makes them repent. Ps. lxxvii. 34. C.—"Their idols have been multiplied after their followers, I will not join in their libations of blood." S. Jer.—David was continually exposed to such temptations, among the idolaofferings: nor will I be mindful of their names by my lips.

5 The Lord is the portion of my inheritance and of my cup: it is thou that wilt restore my inheritance to me.

6 The lines are fallen unto me in goodly places: for my inheritance is goodly to me.

7 I will bless the Lord, who hath given me understanding: moreover, my reins also have corrected me even till right.

8 "I set the Lord always in my sight: for he is at my right hand, that I be not moved.

9 Therefore my heart hath been glad, and my tongue hath rejoiced: moreover, my flesh also shall rest in hope.

10 "Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell; nor wilt thou give thy holy one to see corruption.

* Acts ii. 31. and xiii. 35.

ters; but out of contempt, he would not even pronounce the name of the idols C.—Blood, or bloody. D.—The pagan (W.) and Mosiac sacrifices shall cease. Christ will unite us (Bert.) by a more excellent oblation of his own body and blood. H.—Christians shall be distinguished by a fresh appellation, being styled children of light and of God, in opposition to the sons of men, (S. Aug. &c. C.) and pagans.

VER. 5. Cup. Eternal happiness consists in seeing (W.) and enjoying God, (H.) and is promised to the patient. Though Christ was truly king of Israel, and exercised jurisdiction, (Jo. xii. and xviii. 37. Matt. xxi. &c. W.) yet it was not of a temporal nature; (H.) and his chief inheritance was the Lord, who would reward his merits. He has taught all clergymen to make this happy choice; as they declare when they become such. Man may call God his inheritance, as he was made for him; and though he may have fallen, if he rise again, his title will be restored, and he may obtain felicity, whether he live in the world or retire from it. W.—David alludes to the custom of allotting each his portion of wine and meat, which was greater in proportion to the person's dignity. He rejects with disdain all worldly and sensual joys. C.—God is not "a part," but the whole portion of a good man.—It is, &c. S. Jer. "Thou art the possessor of my lot." I trust in thee for all. II. 1 Pet. i. 4. 2 Tim. i. 12. In the ancient sacrifices a part was reserved for the offerer. But Jesus keeps nothing back.

VER. 6. Lines, with which land was measured. Bert.—Christ expresses his satisfaction with his church, which is gathered from all nations, to manifest the choicest virtues. Tit. ii. 14. Euthymius, S. Jer. &c. C.—This was his inheritance, not measured out with lines, (Jos. x.) but reaching to the very ends of the earth. Ps. ii. H.

VER. 7. Understanding. Heb. "counsel." In the night of tribulation God directs the reins, or affections of the soul. Christ might speak thus concerning his human nature. Bert. Lu. ii. 40. Heb. v. 7. David also gives thanks to God for enabling him to make so happy a choice, and to avoid being seduced. C.—He derives instructions from pain. W.

VER. 8. That I. Heb. "I shall not," &c. The sense is the same, but S. Peter agrees with us and the Sept. Acts ii. 25, &c. It is not of faith that the seven preceding verses regard Jesus Christ as the following do; but as the same person speaks, we may rationally infer that all should be explained of him. Though he always enjoyed the beatific vision, his soul had the affections of other men, and always tended to keep in God's presence. So the angels who see God, desire more and more to contemplate him. 1 Pet. i. 12. How earnestly ought we to strive always to keep in the divine presence! (Bert.) then we should constantly advance in virtue, and fear no dangers. The patriarchs thus walked with God, and arrived at such perfection. H.—The father was always at the right hand of his Son, to support and glorify him; and the Son, having continually performed what was pleasing to God, (Jo. viii. 29.) was placed at his right hand at his ascension, though his divinity had never been separated from him. C.—He had always God in view, and has left us a pattern how to behave. W.

VER. 9. Tongue. Heb. "glory." Yet Prot. translate, "tongue," (Acts ii.) as S. Peter follows the Sept. (H.) and he surely understood the force of the Heb.; so that his testimony in their favour is very strong. Commentators observe that the tongue manifests the joy of the heart, (Bert.) and the same word is used for the soul. Ps. vii. 6. C.—Yet very different words signify the tongue and glory; and we follow the text, adopted by the apostle. Joy naturally flows from the presence of the best of friends. Bert.—Our Saviour sometimes suspended this joy, that he might suffer the more for us. C.

VER. 10. Soul in hell. Beza, (in his 1st. edit. which he corrected afterwards) would translate "my corpse (cadaver, or carcass) in the grave;" for which he has been justly blamed. For, though the corpse is sometimes called soul, as it has been animated by it, (H.) and the soul and blood are often used synonymously, yet we shall find no instance of the body of any one still living being styled a soul. When speaking, therefore, of a person's future death, the soul means either life or the spiritual substance. Gen. xxxvii. 22. Ps. xlix. 16. Hence the explanation of the Fathers, who understand this of Christ's descent into hell, to free the saints who were detained in limbo, is more probable. Bert.—The instances which are adduced to maintain the opposite sentiment, which Calmet, &c. assert is more literal, either prove nothing, or they relate to people 11 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life, thou shalt fill me with joy with thy countenance: at thy right hand are delights even to the end.

PSALM XVI.

EXAUDI DOMINE JUSTITIAM.

A just man's prayer in tribulation, against the malice of his enemies.

1 The prayer of David.

HEAR, O Lord, my justice: attend to my supplication.

Give ear unto my prayer, which proceedeth not from deceitful lips.

2 Let my judgment come forth from thy countenance: let thy eyes behold the things that are equitable.

3 Thou hast proved my heart, and visited it by night, thou hast tried me by fire: and iniquity hath not been found in me.

deceased, whose bodies were not to be touched. See Gen. ix. 5. Lev. xvii. 11. and xxi. 11. Num. vi. 6. and xix. 13. Agg. ii. 14. Christ speaks of his body in the following part of the verse, (H.) calling it Holy, because it was never separated from the divine nature. Bert.—The erroneous interpretations or corruptions of Beza and Calvin on this head, opposing themselves to the consent of all the ancient Fathers, who believed this passage related to the descent into limbo, are noted. Gen. xxvii. Acts ii. 1 Pet. iii. The Prot. edit. vary. Some retain the word hell, others the grave; remarking that "this is chiefly meant of Christ, by whose resurrection all his members have immortality." And (Acts ii.) they paraphrase, "Thou shalt not leave me in the grave;" wresting that which regards the body, rising from the grave, to the soul, which was never there. W.—The last edit. of Jas. I. agrees however with us, in both places. "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thy holy one to see corruption." It is observable that in the Heb. editions, (except Stephen's and some few others) we find the word chaidic in the text, though the last i be properly omitted in the margin; as the word would otherwise signify "saints;" and thus make the apostles false witnesses. Acts xiii. 35, &c. H.—"But who shall lay any such thing to their charge? Other men may be deficient in their knowledge, and in their honesty; but inspired apostles could neither be deceived nor deceive. All the ancient versions, the Masorets," who order the word to be read in the singular, though printed plural in the text, and many of the best MSS. vouch for their veracity. Moreover it is not true that God will not suffer his saints to see corruption; and, if this were the meaning of the words, they would not predict the resurrection of any particular person: yet "these words, the apostles observe to the Jews, are a prophecy of some particular person, whose soul was not long to continue in the place of departed spirits, and whose body was not to be corrupted, both being soon to be reunited. Now David, say they, did not speak this of himself, &c. Have the apostles imposed a prophecy upon the Jewish people, and upon the world?" Kennicott. Dis. i.—This learned author was greatly encouraged to go on with his ten years' labour, in examining Heb. MSS. over the world, by finding many of them so favourable to the Christian religion, though it had been confidently asserted that all the MSS. were perfectly uniform. We may rejoice to see that he also approves of the Catholic explanation of this passage, and does not refer the whole to the burial of Christ. In effect, the Apostles' Creed clearly distinguishes this article from that of the descent into hell.—One. Mont. ventures to follow the Keri, "thy merciful one." H.—Corruption. "Neither wilt thou permit that sanctified body, by which other people are to be sanctified, to become corrupt." S. Aug.—Christ rose again before the holy women had embalmed his body, (Lu. xxvi. 53. Mark xvi. 1.) that no one might attribute the incorruption to that cause. His appearance was so glorious, as to dispel every doubt from the minds of those who would attend to reason. His descent into hell was not in consequence of any weakness, or that he might suffer, (C.) as Calvin blasphemously asserts, (H. T.) but he descended in triumph, to liberate the souls of the holy Fathers, (C.) or to announce to them the glad tidings of peace, the fruits of which they should shortly enjoy at his ascension, when he would open the gates of heaven to all the faithful. H.

VER. 11. Of life. The observance of the commandments, (S. Jer.) or the method of obtaining happiness by patience and humility. S. Aug.—Thou hast opened a new track to me (H.) in the resurrection, unknown to mortals. Euthym. Bellar.—For though some had been already raised to life, Christ is still called the first-fruits of those who sleep, or of the dead; because none had raised themselves to life, as he did. H. Jo. x. 18.—Yet he attributes all the glory to the Father, either because he is the origin of the Deity, or because Jesus considered himself as man, and was in all things obedient to his Father. Bert.—His sacred humanity was now glorified, and beheld the face of God in a more perfect manner than any mere creature can do, tasting inexplicable delights for ever. 2.—We must die and rise again, (W.) before we shall perfectly comprehend the ways of life. Then we shall form a true judgment of all terrestrial things. H.

PSAL. XVI. &c. VER. 1. Prayer. This psalm contains the model of a fervent prayer, (H.) which may be used by any person under affliction. W.—The Rabbins say David expresses too much confidence in his own integrity, and therefore was soon after permitted to fall; while others assert that he spoke thus after the murder of Urias, to avert God's wrath from his army before Rabbath. But this supposition is improbable, (C.) as well as the other. H.—The Fathers think that this ps. was composed during the persecution of Saul, and that it contains the sentiments of Jesus Christ and of his Church, under the persecution of infidels. There are some very difficult passages in it. C.—My 4 That my mouth may not speak the works of men: for the sake of the words of thy lips, I have kept hard ways.

5 Perfect thou my goings in thy paths: that my footsteps be not moved.

6 I have cried to thee, for thou, O God, hast heard me: O incline thy ear unto me, and hear my words.

7 Shew forth thy wonderful mercies; thou who savest them that trust in thee.

8 From them that resist thy right hand keep me, as the apple of thy eye.

Protect me under the shadow of thy wings. 9 From the face of the wicked who have afflicted me.

My enemies have surrounded my soul: 10 they have shut up their fat: their mouth hath spoken proudly.

11 They have cast me forth, and now they have justice. Heb. "attend to justice," (H.) which amounts to the same thing; as no one would make this petition, unless he supposed that he was in the right. "Hear the justice of my cause." Principles. Bert.—"Hear the just man." S. Jer. H.—Lips. I do not attempt to deceive thee, like the hypocrite; or rather I have not acted with deceit, or endeavoured to excite rebellion, as I have been accused. C.—In my just cause, hear my unfeigned petition. W.

VER. 2. Counenance. Pronounce sentence, (Est. i. 19. C.) if I have done wrong, I do not refuse punishment. Pa. vii. 5. H.—The Gr. and Lat. copies vary. Some read correctly with the Heb. "Let thy eyes behold what is wrong." "Yet S. Jer. (ep. ad Sun.) has "right," with the Syr. &c. Others more commonly read, "Let mine eyes behold justice." C.—Montanus, however, substitutes rectitudines for iniquitates, as Pagnin had rendered mescharim, and Prot. "the things that are equal." H.—"Holy preachers are the eyes of Christ... let them see what is just... and fulfil the justice which they preach." S. Jer.—God sees all things, and will pass a just sentence. W.

VER. 3. Firs. I have experienced all sorts of misery. C.—Iniquity. Heb. "Thou hast not found; I have thought." But the same word without points, zanothi, (H.) has the sense given by the Sept and they knew nothing of these points. Bert.—We may also translate, "Thou hast not found in me any criminal thoughts. My mouth has not transgressed thy orders." If some thoughts of taking revenge by killing Saul, presented themselves involuntarily, David repressed them; (C.) and when he was alone with him at night in a cave, he would not suffer him to be hurt, 1. K. xxvi. 7. Theod.—He asserts that he had gone through many tribulations without offending. Those who are innocent or penitent, may pray with this confidence; as the Church may, which has always some saints, on which account she is styled holy. W.

VER. 4. Mens. Houb. "My mouth shall not pass to the pretexts of Adam." I will not seek for excuses in sin. H.—"My mouth utters not vows to the vain works of men." Prin. disc.—But these versions are singular. Bert.—Hard Heb. "way of the robber." Purita, or prits, (S. Jer. H.) means also "fracture." Bert.—David was ordered by God to retire into the wilderness, and to caves, where he was obliged to live like robbers, (C.) and was even branded (C.) with the title of a fugitive slave by Nabab, 1 K. xxv. 10. H.—Yet the actions of David were very different from theirs. Bert.—He did not speak about the works of men, in power to condemn Saul, or any other, being averse to all detraction, and prescribing to himself the strictest laws, (C.) which God had ever promulgated. Prot. "I have purposed that my mouth shall not transgress. (4) Concerning the works of men, by the word of thy lips, I have kept me from the paths of the destroyer." The division of the verses is arbitrary. H.—David kept the narrow path of virtue. W.

VER. 5. Perfect. Heb. "support" me in these hard ways, where I am in continual danger of falling. C.—A Deo est incipere, a Deo est finire. S. Jer.—God's grace enables us to begin and to perfect every good work. H.—None can walk right of themselves. W.

VER. 6. Heard me, on former occasions. This encourages me to pray with more confidence (Bert.) and fervour. Bona vota quoties effectum percipiunt, multiplicantur. S. Greg. Mor. xxxv. 3.—Heb. also, "thou wilt hear me favourably." S. Jer. H.

VER. 7. Mercies. We become accustomed to the ordinary effects of grace, which are always admirable; and we are astonished only at miraculous conversions and occurrences. Orig.—Some such manifestation of the divine power seemed now requisite, to deliver David from such a powerful rival as Saul. C.—Syr. "Lord, make thy holy one appear as a prodigy, as the Saviour of those who hope in thee." S. Jer.—"O thou Saviour of those who hope." H.

VER. 8. Eye. God has shewn particular attention: to protect the apple of the eye. He watches still more over his servants, (Zac. ii. 8.) for whom all things procure good. Rom. viii. 28. Saul had declared himself against David, because he had been chosen to succeed him, and thus he opposed the designs of God. C.—The prophet prays that he may never give way to such impiety. W.—Wings, as a hen does her chickens. H.—Defend me from the furious countenance of my enemies. W.

VER. 10. Their fat. That is, their bowels of compassion: for they have none for me. Ch.—They have become fat, and have given way to greater insolence, as we see too often verified. Deut. xxxii. 15. Job. xv. 28. Pa. lxxii. 7. Chai. C.—Proudly. Libertines are often prompted by vanity to speak as they do against God and man. H.—If Collins, Tindal, &c. had been cast upon some desert island, they would probably never have written such irreligious works as there would have been none to applaud them. Lert.

surrounded me: they have set their eyes bowing down to the earth.

12 They have taken me, as a lion prepared for the prey; and as a young lion dwelling in secret places.

13 Arise, O Lord, disappoint him and supplant him; deliver my soul from the wicked one; thy sword 14 from the enemies of thy hand.

O Lord, divide them from the few of the earth in their life: their belly is filled from thy hidden stores.

They are full of children: and they have left to their little ones the rest of their substance.

15 But as for me, I will appear before thy sight in justice: I shall be satisfied when thy glory shall appear.

PSALM XVII.

DILIGAM TE DOMINE

David's thanks to God for his delivery from all his enemies.

1 Unto the end, for David, the servant of the Lord, who spoke to the Lord the words of this canticle, in the day that the Lord delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: and he said: [2 Kings xxii.]

VER. 11. Earth, to testify their wrath. So Virgil describes Juno.

Diva solo fixos oculos aversa tenebat. Æn. 1.

—Heb. ashurcnu, is rendered "by our step," (Mont.) or contemplation. But the Sept. have explained it as a verb, as well as S. Jerom, (Bert.) who reads, "marching against me; now they have surrounded me," (H.) like wild bulls. C.—Sym. "blessing me, they have presently cast down their eyes, they have prepared snares, to throw me down upon the ground." They have sought my ruin both by craft and by open force. Even those who were once my friends and admirers, are now turned against me. H.—He alludes particularly to the courtiers of Saul. C.—They intend utterly to destroy me, even to the ground. W.—Heb. "by our step they have now surrounded us," (Mont.) conformably to the Keri; though the text, followed by Pagnin, has, "In our path, they have surrounded me."

VER. 12. They have taken me, is not expressed in Heb. H.

VER. 13. Disappoint. Heb. "meet him," as an enemy. Lev. xxvi. 23.—Thy sword. The wicked are employed by God to chastise the just, and will then be thrown into the fire. Isai. x. 5. Jer. i. 23. C.—They little think that they are subservient to the designs of Providence, as they attribute their success to their own might. Whether we beg that God would take his sword from the wicked, or that we may be freed from their malice, is much the same. Bert.—Heb. may express the latter sentiment, "Deliver my soul from the wicked, thy sword, (14) the men of thy hand, worldlings, whose portion is temporal, in this life," &c. H.—Many other versions may be given: (C.) but they all tend to shew the fleeting pleasures of God's enemies, who are thus rewarded for their transient virtues, and reserved for eternal torments. H.—Man is not sufficient to resist that power, which they exercise by God's permission. Hence David begs that it may be taken away. W.

VER. 14. Divide them from the few, &c. That is, cut them off from the earth, and the few trifling things thereof; which they are so proud of, or, divide them from the few; that is, from thy elect, who are but few; that they may no longer have it in their power to oppress them. It is not meant by way of a curse or imprecation; but, as many other similar passages in the psalms, by way of a prediction, or prophecy of what should come upon them, in punishment of their wickedness.—Thy hidden stores: thy secret treasures, out of which thou furnishest those earthly goods, which with a bountiful hand thou hast distributed both to the good and the bad. Ch.—Of children. Heb. "their children are satiated." Doubl. Bert.—Some copies read blaw, (Rom. Sept.) instead of blaw. "They have been filled with hogs' flesh." The mistake was easy in Greek. C. S. Jerom agrees with the Vulg. H.—A numerous family was the great desire of the Jews. David is willing to forego every temporal advantage, and only prays that he may live in his own country, and attend the divine worship in the tabernacle. This was the glory of Israel, v. 15. 1. K. iv. 21. C.—He predicts the final separation of the wicked from the elect, which sometimes begins in this life. Their worldly joys are hidden or disapproved by God. W.—They feed on the poor servants of our Lord, (H.) whose life is hidden. M.

VER. 15. Appear. S. Jer. "I shall be filled, when I shall awake in thy likeness," (H.) at the resurrection; (Phil. iii. 21. and 1 Cor. xiii. 12.) or "when thy likeness, the Messias, shall rise again;" or (as the same expression is used by the Sept. as Num. xii. 8.) David begs for actual inspiration, "thou wilt comfort me with the prophetic spirit." C.—Perhaps he might also desire to see the tabernacle again, or even now prepare to erect a temple unto the Lord; (2 K. vii. 2. H.) or he begs for the gifts of grace and glory, which will restore the image of God, effaced by sin. 1 Jo. iii. 2. Bert.—Then the just being approved, will taste that joy which alone can satiate the heart of man, when he shall behold God. W.

PSAL. XVII. VER. 1. This title is almost wholly taken from the book of Kings, except Unto the end for; instead of which we read, And David spoke, &c. (H.) which are the words of the inspired writer; so that Ferrand is very rash in rejecting both these titles. David wrote this psalm after he had subdued the Moabites, &c. C.—He was inspired to write it (W.) twice, with some variations,

2 I WILL love thee, O Lord, my strength:

3 The Lord is my firmament, my refuge, and my deliverer.

*My God is my helper, and in him will I put my trust.

My protector, and the horn of my salvation, and my support.

4 Praising, I will call upon the Lord: and I shall be saved from my enemies.

5 The sorrows of death surrounded me: and the torrents of iniquity troubled me.

6 The sorrows of hell encompassed me: and the snares of death prevented me.

7 In my affliction I called upon the Lord, and I cried to my God:

And he heard my voice from his holy temple: and my cry before him came into his ears.

8 The earth shook and trembled: the foundations of the mountains were troubled and were moved, because he was angry with them.

* Heb. ii. 13.

(Bert.) 74 in number, (Aberbanel) or many more, if we believe Kennicott, who lays them to the charge of transcribers, perhaps (H.) with greater reason. C.—We cannot doubt but this psalm regards David. But there are some passages which refer to Jesus Christ and his Church more directly; and in general, David must here be considered as only (Bert.) the figure of the Messias, and of the just in his Church. W.—James Paine has endeavoured to prove, with great ingenuity, that the whole must be explained of Jesus Christ, and that the name of Saul stands for "the grave;" as the points which are of modern date, only need to be changed. Thus the sufferings of our Saviour, and the punishment of the Jews in the last siege of Jerusalem are described; and thus it is clear that S. Paul (Rom. xv. 9.) has cited this ps. in its proper sense. Bert. See v. 10. 41.—S. Jerom and Aug. explain it of the victories of David, of the Messias, and of his Church. C.—Saul may be particularly mentioned, because he was the most powerful. W.

VER. 2. I will love thee, as a mother does her son. He that loves has fulfilled the law. This word is omitted 2 K. xxi. 2. C.—Strength. Ibid.—Rock. H.—The Sept. have inserted some alterations in the Psalms, giving the sense of the Hebrew. W.—Others attribute the variations to David, or to the mistake of transcribers. H.

VER. 3. Firmament. Heb. "rock and my citadel, and my deliverer. My God, (or strong one) my rock." S. Jer. "my strong one." The two words which are rendered "my rock," are salhi and mitsudathi. H.—David frequently retired to such places for safety. The idea was beautiful and striking. Such a multiplicity of titles shews the gratitude (C.) and affection which David felt. C.—Here are nine, and we may add the three metaphorical Heb. terms, "rock, citadel, and buckler." Can we refuse to love One from whom we have received so many favours!—And in, &c. These words are most probably cited by S. Paul, (Heb. ii. 13.) though they occur also in Isai. viii. 18.—Protector Heb. "buckler." Bert.—Horn. This title is given to Jesus Christ, Luke i. 69. It is an allusion to beasts which attack their opponents with their horns (Theod. Deut. xxxiii. 17.) being an emblem of strength (W.) and glory. C.—And my, &c. (2 K.) he lifteth me up and is my refuge; my Saviour, thou wilt deliver me from iniquity. Heb. "violence."

VER. 4. Praising. Heb. "praised;" and (2 K.) the Lord, who is worthy to be praised. H.—Chal. agrees here with the Sept. and Vulg. which seems more natural. C.—The sense is the same. Bert.

VER. 5. Sorrows . . iniquity. Heb. "cables . . Belial." By these figurative expressions, David declares to what dangers he had been exposed. They seem to be more applicable to our Saviour's agony. Bert.—The wicked were constantly laying snares for both. We have the same idea enforced in the next verse. H.—The words are put into the mouth of fallen man, in the mass for Septuagesima. W.

VER. 7. Called. All these words are in the future, 2 K. and Heb. II.—But as they relate to an event that was past, they seem to be as well expressed here as they are in Dupont's Greek Psalms. Bert.—Both are true; as David had prayed, and would continue to pray, for God's protection; otherwise he would have deserved to lose it. We must always pray, and never faint. II.—Temple, "from my heart;" (S. Aug.) from the tabernacle at Gabaon, (Lyran) or from heaven. Chal. Euseb. C.—Earnest prayer is the best remedy against temptations and affliction. God will not fail to hear those who are sincere, as he did the prophet. W.

VER. 8. With them is not in Heb. Lo, illi refers to God. Furor fuit ei. Mont.—"He was wroth." Prot. Yet he displayed his power on the mountains, as if he had been displeased with them, or with the enemies (v. 4.) whom he would thus strike with awe. H.—These expressions are not to be taken in a gross literal sense. C.—God shewed himself as earnest in the protection of David, (H.) as if he had been in a rage; (C.) or as if the elements had all conspired to defend him. Theod.—This most pompous description (C.) alludes to the wonders wrought at Sinai, and the terrors which would happen at the death and resurrection of Christ, and at his last coming. Some moderns think that the 9 There went up a smoke in his wrath: and a fire flamed from his face: coals were kindled by it.

10 He bowed the heavens, and came down, and darkness was under his feet.

11 And he ascended upon the cherubim, and he flew; he flew upon the wings of the winds.

12 And he made darkness his covert, his pavilion round about him: dark waters in the clouds of the air.

13 At the brightness that was before him the clouds passed, hail and coals of fire.

14 And the Lord thundered from heaven, and the Highest gave his voice: hail and coals of fire.

15 And he sent forth his arrows, and he scattered them: he multiplied lightnings, and troubled them.

16 Then the fountains of waters appeared, and the foundations of the world were discovered:

At thy rebuke, O Lord, at the blast of the spirit of thy wrath.

17 He sent from on high, and took me: and received me out of many waters.

18 He delivered me from my strongest enemies, and from them that hated me: for they were too strong for me.

19 They prevented me in the day of my affliction: and the Lord became my protector.

overthrow of the Babylonians, and other enemies of God's people, are also denoted. The sinner, touched by divine grace, implores mercy, and feels the remorse of conscience, the ropes or sorrows of hell, and a dread of God's just judgments hanging over him. Bert.—These cause the most haughty and obstinate to tremble. W.

VER. 9. By it. This relates to the clouds, thunder, and lightning. Muis.—God's wrath is compared with smoke, fire, a dark night, or mist. W.

VER. 10. Fect. A violent storm of rain. Hence the Pagans borrowed: Jupiter et laeta descendit pluvius inibri. Virg. Ec. 7.

—The prophets Isai. (xxix. 6.) and Nahum (i. 3.) speak in the same lofty strains; (C.) and shall any one despise the language of Scripture? Nothing can exceed its sublimity. Heb. is rather more expressive, (v. 9.) "a fire devoured;" (v. 11.) "on a cherub, and flew; he flew most swiftly;" like an eagle. Bert.—Heb. videri. H.

VER. 11. Winds. God mounts his chariot, as it were, (Ezec. i. 4. &c.) to come speedily to David's assistance. Aeschylus, and other pagan authors, seem to have imitated this description. Euseb. prep. evan. xiii. 13.—The Fathers explain the former verse of Christ's incarnation, or of his second coming; and this of his ascension. S. Athan. &c.—They may also (H.) intimate that God is ready to pardon as well as to punish. W.—Plato (Phædro) represents the Deity on "a winged chariot, directing and taking care of all things." H.

VER. 12. Pavilion. Job xxii. 14. and xxvi. 9. The Jews had this idea of God's throne, of which we behold only the less brilliant side, as the Egyptians did that of the cloud. Ex. xiv. 19. The poets represent Jupiter surrounded with clouds and darkness. Hesiod. op. 125 and 255. Iliad O.—Air. The parallel passage, (2 K.) seems more accurate. Dropping waters out of the clouds of the heavens. Heb. "waters bound up in darksome clouds." C.—God is incomprehensible in himself, and his counsels are inscrutable. W.

VER. 13. Clouds. 2 K. The coals (Heb. "flames") of fire were kindled. Two words, habaw haberu, his clouds removed, (H.) omitted in this passage, are here supplied, as the former word is found in Syr. and Arab. But then hail and coals of fire seem improper for "they kindled into coals of fire;" and in the next verse they are redundant; being therefore omitted in 2 K. xxii. in the best editions of the Sept. and in the old Italic of Blanchini. Capel supposes they have been inserted from the preceding verse, which is rendered more probable by the Heb. MS. 5. Kennicott Dis. 1.—They have been inserted in some editions of Sept. from the Heb. of Theodotion, (C.) or Symmachus. Montf.—This unusual third hennistic occurs in a smaller type in Brettinger's (Ken.) and Grabe's Sept. but they indicate thereby that it was not in the Alex. MS. as it is not in that of the Vatican. If it were in its proper place, we should read at least grandinem, &c. This magnificent description of a thunder-storm (H.) may allude to that which routed the Philistines. 2 K. v. 24. Is. xxviii. 21. C.—The lightning seems to dispel the gloom. Theod. Flamin.—Though man is overpowered with God's majesty, yet he is instructed how to act by those whom God has commissioned to teach. W.

VER. 15. Arrons. Thunderbolts. Tela reponuntur manibus fabricata Cyclo-pum. Metam. Hesiod Theog. 708.

VER. 16. Discovered. The earthquakes were so great, that such dreadful effects might have been expected. These phenomena sometimes make the sea retire, and new islands appear. Pliny i. 84. and xxxi. 5. &c.—The Jews supposed that the sea was the common source of all fountains, and that the earth was founded on it. Ps. xxiii. 2. Eccl. i. 7. C.

VER. 17. Sent his angel, &c.—Waters, which often represent multitudes, (Apoc. xvii. 15. C.) and afflictions. W.—David seemed in danger of perishing. C.

20 And he brought me forth into a large place: he saved me, because he was well pleased with me.

21 And the Lord will reward me according to my justice; and will repay me according to the cleanness of my hands:

22 Because I have kept the ways of the Lord; and have not done wickedly against my God.

23 For all his judgments are in my sight: and his justices I have not put away from me.

24 And I shall be spotless with him: and shall keep myself from my iniquity.

25 And the Lord will reward me according to my justice: and according to the cleanness of my hands before his eyes.

26 With the holy thou wilt be holy; and with the innocent man thou wilt be innocent:

27 And with the elect thou wilt be elect: and with the perverse thou wilt be perverted.

28 For thou wilt save the humble people; but wilt bring down the eyes of the proud.

29 For thou lightest my lamp, O Lord: O my God, enlighten my darkness.

30 For by thee I shall be delivered from temptation; and through my God I shall go over a wall.

31 As for my God, his way is undefiled: the words

VER. 18. For me. He may allude to the giant Jesibienob, or to Saul, who surrounded him on all sides; (1 K. xxiii. 26. and 2 K. xxi. 15. C.) and, in general, to all his temporal or spiritual adversaries. W.

VER. 19. Affliction, when my friends joined Absalom. Theod.—In the rest of this psalm, the prophet chiefly uses words in the obvious sense, yet mystically speaks of Christ, and of the faithful. W.

VER. 20. Place, where I was not hemmed in by my enemies. H.—Saved me, by repentance, out of his infinite mercy, (Euseb. S. Athan.) without any deserts. W.

VER. 21. Will reward. S. Jer. "hath rewarded," (C.) yet the edition of 1533 reads retribuet. H.—Justice, with respect to my enemies, whom I have not injured; (C.) or my sincere desire to serve God. Theod.

VER. 23. Judgments. Commands, or treatment both of the just and of the wicked.

VER. 24. Him, by his grace. W.—Iniquity, and be careful not to relapse. Others explain it in the past time. I have not shed the blood of my enemy when I could have done it, 1 K. xxiv. 6. 14. C.—Fui immaculatus. S. Jer. H. It seems most probable that David composed this before his fall, as Abernethy, one of the most learned of the Jews, asserts. If he be only a figure of Jesus Christ, we may easily conceive how the latter might speak thus of his innocence, and declare his abhorrence of all sin, though he was made a sin-offering, having undertaken to expiate the iniquities of mankind. Bert.

VER. 25. And. He repeateth, (v. 21.) that God will render to every one as he deserves. W.—Matt. xvi. That all sins are equal is the error of the Stoics. H.

VER. 27. Perverted. No version can properly express this idea. God turns away from those who abandon him, treating every one according to his works. If we do not advance in piety, it is a sign that God perceives something amiss in us. Bert.—He cannot but abhor duplicity, and resist the wicked. Lev. xxvi. 23. 40. Prov. iii. 34. He will make the craft of men turn against themselves, as he evinced in the case of Laban, Joseph's brethren, Pharaoh, and Saul. Sinners complain of him without reason, Eccl. xviii. 25. C.—Some improperly use this text to shew, that people will adopt the manners of those with whom they associate, (H.) though it means that God will treat the good liberally, and the wicked with severity. Lev. xxvi. 23. 24. Amarna.

VER. 28. Proud, as thou hast already done. C.—Insignem attenuat Deus, Obscura promens.—Horat.

VER. 29. Lamp, giving me hopes of redress, and of the Messiah. C.

VER. 30. Temptation. David was almost continually assailed by enemies. C.—Sept. neuerhoion, signifies "a place for pirates;" denoting what crafty foes he had to encounter, (Bert.) or "a place or time to learn the military exercise," a warfare. Job vii. 1. But gedud, (H.) means "a troop," designed to make incursions, as those under Jephte and David. Heb. "In thee I will run armed;" (S. Jer.) or, "at the head of my troops." C.—"I will break, (Pagnin) or, run through an army." Mont.—No fortification can hold out. H.—He alludes particularly to the wall of the Jebusites, which Joab first mounted, though extremely high. 2 K. v. 6. C.—With God's help, every difficulty may be surmounted. W.—Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation, as our Saviour admonishes.

VER. 31. As for, might be omitted. H.—The conduct of God towards men is irreproachable. He will treat all according to their deserts, and will fulfil his promises of protecting the just. Euseb.—Heb. "He is the strong God his words are pure as gold. . . He is the shield," &c. Bert.

of the Lord are fire-tried he is the protector of all that trust in him.

32 For who is God but the Lord? or who is God but our God?

33 God, who hath girt me with strength; and made my way blameless.

34 "Who hath made my feet like the feet of harts: and who setteth me upon high places.

35 "Who teacheth my hands to war: and thou hast made my arms like a brazen bow.

36 And thou hast given me the protection of thy salvation: and thy right hand hath held me up:

And thy discipline hath corrected me unto the end: and thy discipline, the same shall teach me.

37 Thou hast enlarged my steps under me; and my feet are not weakened.

38 I will pursue after my enemies, and overtake them: and I will not turn again till they are consumed.

39 I will break them, and they shall not be able to stand: they shall fall under my feet.

40 And thou hast girded me with strength unto battle; and hast subdued under me them that rose up against me.

41 And thou hast made my enemies turn their back upon me, and hast destroyed them that hated me.

42 They cried, but there was none to save them, to the Lord: but he heard them not.

* 2 Kings xxii. 34.—b 2 Kings xxii. 35.

VER. 32. Our God. Will any one then hinder Him from doing as He has said? H.—Heb. "Who is the rock but our God?" Bert.—God is often styled a rock, tsur. Yet S. Jerom and Pagnin render it "strong," or "the strong one." H.—There is only one Lord and Saviour of all. W.

VER. 33. Blameless. Whatever good is in me, comes from his grace, v. 21. 24. H.—God has prevented me from killing Saul and Nabal; He has rescued me from the abyss into which I had fallen. C.

VER. 34. Harts. Prot. "hinds." H.—The Hebrews generally prefer to specify the female. Harts are remarkably swift, and this quality was greatly esteemed in a warrior. Asael is praised for it; (2 K. ii. 18.) and Homer styles his hero "the swift-footed Achilles." C.—As harts trample serpents under their feet, says Theodoret, so I treat my enemies.—High. Heb. "my high places," where I have so often baffled the efforts of my persecutors. H.

VER. 35. And thou. Chal. gives the same sense. "He strengthens," &c. C.—Heb. "and a brazen bow is broken by my arms." Mont.—Prot. "a bow of steel." Perhaps not knowing that the ancients had the art of making brass answer the same purposes. See Proclus, Hesiod, &c. H.—They made all sorts of weapons of it. Job (xx. 24.) seems even to insinuate that it was harder than iron. Our brass is too brittle. To break a bow, often means to obtain a victory, 1 K. ii. 4. Jer. xlix. 5. C.—David gained many over a lion or a bear, over Goliath, &c. W.

VER. 36. Of thy. The latter word is omitted in some copies of the Sept. while others change it into "my." But the Heb. is agreeable to the Vulg. C.—End. Thou hast preserved me by salutary correction. S. Aug. H.—Heb. "thy goodness shall multiply me" with children. Sym. conformably to 2 K. xxii. has "my obedience shall lift me up." C.—The Heb. may, however, admit the sense of the Vulg.—And thy, &c. is a paraphrase of the former sentiment, or it is borrowed from Theodotion. Bert.—Grabe marks from unto the end, &c. as omitted in Heb. H.—Luther and the Dutch translate, "When thou humblest me, then thou exaltest me," to shew the salutary effects of suffering. But there is nothing of the kind in the original. Amama.

VER. 37. Weakened, or tired. Chal. H.—I am now free from danger. All my enterprizes have succeeded. 2 K. viii. 6. and 1 Par. xviii. 13. See Prov. iv. 12. C.

VER. 38. I will. Bellarmine would supply "I said I will;" and thus all is connected. But these future victories relate more to Jesus Christ. Bert.—David also continued making fresh conquests, (H.) and so entirely subdued his enemies all around, that they were not able to make head, even against his successor.

VER. 40. Against me. No prince was ever more courageous than David, as the single combat with Goliath evinces. We know not that he ever lost a battle. He refers all the glory to God. C.

VER. 41. Upon me. An expression often used to denote a fight. Jos. iii. 12. &c. C.—God strengthens his servants, and weakens their enemies. W.

VER. 42. Lord. This must be understood of Absalom, who offered sacrifices, (2 K. xv. 12. Bert.) or of Saul, who, receiving no answer, consulted a witch. The Philistines also brought their gods with them, so that they were taken and burnt; (2 K. v. 21.) and the other pagans, finding no aid in their idols, might in time of danger, invoke the Lord. C.—This is "the testimony of a soul" (694)

43 And I shall beat them as small as the dust before the wind; I shall bring them to nought, like the dirt in the streets.

44 Thou wilt deliver me from the contradictions of the people; thou wilt make me head of the Gentiles.

45 A people which I knew not, hath served me: at the hearing of the ear they have obeyed me.

46 The children that are strangers have lied to me, strange children have faded away, and have halted from their paths.

47 The Lord liveth, and blessed be my God, and let the God of my salvation be exalted.

48 O God, who avengest me, and subduest the people under me, my deliverer from my enraged enemies.

49 "And thou wilt lift me up above them that rise up against me: from the unjust man thou wilt deliver me.

50 "Therefore will I give glory to thee, O Lord, among the nations, and I will sing a psalm to thy name.

51 Giving great deliverance to his king, and shewing mercy to David, his anointed: and to his seed for ever.

PSALM XVIII.

CELI ENARRANT.

The works of God shew forth his glory; his law is to be esteemed and loved.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

* 2 Kings xxii. 49.—d 2 Kings xxii. 50. Rom. xv. 9.

naturally Christian," as Tertullian (Apol. xvii.) speaks, to have recourse to the great and only God, in the utmost distress. H.—Deus ut conveniat oratur; ipsa veritas, cogente natura, erumpit. Lac. Inst. ii. 1.

VER. 43. Streets. Thus he treated the Ammonites, &c. 2 K. viii. 2. and xii. 31. C.—Jesus Christ will rule over his enemies with a rod of iron. Bert.

VER. 44. Gentiles. Here he begins to predict the glory of the Messiah, though what he says may be applied to himself. David's own people began to revolt, under Absalom and Seba; after he had subdued the most powerful nations around, 2 K. xx. 1. The chosen people rejected Christ, (C.) while the nations were converted. The reprobation of the former was prefigured by those rebels. W.

VER. 46. Faded, (inveterati sunt) "are grown old." H.—The Jews had been long the object of God's peculiar favours: yet they fall away. Thus we often see priests outdone in piety by simple laics. Bert.—David continues in the comparison of a tree which bears no fruit; (C.) thus lying, as it were, and frustrating the just expectations of the owner. Subjects do the like, when they revolt; (Isai. xxx. 9.) and thus deserve the title of strange. Prot. "the strangers shall fade away, and be afraid out of their 'ose places;" (S. Jer.) "shall flow away, and be contracted in their straits;" w/ile I shall be at large, v. 37. The last verb gachregu, (H.) occurs no where else. It may signify "shall be withered," or burnt, from charar. C.

VER. 47. Liveth. This is my consolation, though it must fill the obstinate sinner with dismay. H.—In a sort of transport, David wishes all happiness to his great benefactor. He may also speak of Christ's resurrection. C.—My God. Heb. "rock;" a title frequently applied to God, in acknowledgment of his stability and protection. Bert.

VER. 48. Avengest, or "grantest me revenges," (H.) and the victory; inflicting a just punishment on the wicked. David was too well informed to delight in sentiments of revenge. 3 K. iii. 11. Jesus Christ takes vengeance on his enemies, but this is done without passion. The love of justice is his only motive. David approves of this conduct. C.—Enraged enemies. Vulg. iracundia. H.—Sept. have thus explained aph, "wrath;" others join it with the following v. "But (C.) or yea," (H.) etiam. The former version is, however, very accurate. Bert.

VER. 50. Nations. S. Paul (Rom. xv. 9.) adduces this to prove the vocation of the Gentiles. C.—We cannot doubt but the great things announced in this psalm pertain to Christ. Bert.—We see the completion of this prophecy, as there is no Christian nation which does not use the psalms of David to praise God. Theod. &c.—This practice is very common (Pref. W.) in all places where either Jews or Christians are found.

VER. 51. Great. This is intimated by the plural salutes, "salvations;" as David had experienced innumerable favours. H. He speaks of himself in the third person, to lead our minds to the Messiah, in whom this was more gloriously accomplished. The greater honour of this chief family of Israel, consisted in giving birth to so great a personage, in whom all are blessed. C. Isai. xi. 1. Ecce. xxxiv. 23.—For ever. The true Church will never perish, (H.) God still protecting it, as he did David, v. 48. W.

PSAL. XVIII. &c. VER. 1. David. It is not known when this was composed. David praises the works and law of God. Some passages are applied

2 THE heavens shew forth the glory of God, and the firmament declareth the work of his hands.

3 Day to day uttereth speech, and night to night sheweth knowledge.

4 There are no speeches nor languages, where their voices are not heard.

5 Their sound hath gone forth into all the earth: and their words unto the ends of the world.

6 He hath set his tabernacle in the sun: and he as a bridegroom coming out of his bride-chamber,

Hath rejoiced as a giant to run the way:

7 His going out is from the end of heaven,

to Jesus Christ and his apostles, Rom. x. 18. C.—When any text of a psalm is thus quoted, many judiciously conclude that the whole must be understood in the same sense, as the harmony will thus be greater. It seems there are two literal senses here, one regarding the law, whether natural or Mosaic; the other pertaining to the apostles and the law of the gospel; (Bert.) the “beloved” David of the latter days. W.

VER. 2. Firmament. Heb. “expansion,” or region of the stars, far above our atmosphere. Bert.—These two sentences express the same idea, unless the former may denote what we behold, and the firmament be explained of the higher heavens, (II.) where we imagine the throne of God to be placed. Some have taken these expressions in a gross sense, and asserted that the heavens are animated. Job xxxviii. 7. But we must allow that they are figurative expressions, which seem to give a soul to plants, stars, &c. C.—The beautiful works of God extort our admiration. H.—The silence of heaven speaks louder than any trumpet. S. Chrys.—“Who can behold the heavens, and yet be so foolish as not to acknowledge that a God exists? said Cicero, (II.) a learned pagan; (Arusp. and Nat. Deo. 2. C.) though they cannot determine of what nature the Deity may be. Leg. i. M.—Hands. Chal. “Those who look up at the heavens, publish the glory of the Lord; and those who raise their eyes towards the air, announce his works.” C.—The silent works declare God’s Majesty to those who consider them, and his preachers make the same known to their hearers by word of mouth. W.—S. Paul reproaches the philosophers of paganism for not understanding the language of the creation. Rom. i. 20. Job xii. 7. H.—The Church, which is so often styled the kingdom of heaven, makes God known, not only as a Creator, but also as a Redeemer. The figure is here most beautifully preserved. Heaven denotes the Church, as the stars represent apostolic men, who cease not to perform their duties day or night, in happier days as well as under persecution. Jesus Christ is the true sun of justice, enlightening every man that cometh into the world. S. Jo. i.—The Fathers have made these remarks. Bert.—What a consolation must it be for Catholics to think that the true doctrine will never cease, no more than the succession of day and night! We have received our creed, our orders and mission, from the apostles. The chain of succession has never been broken. Unhappy those who make a religion of their own to damn souls! who run, though God send them not! H.

VER. 3. Uttereth, with great force and abundance, eructat.—Knowledge of God. Bert.—Our knowledge is always on the increase. Abenezra.—The vicissitudes of day and night prove the wisdom of their author. Euseb.—They seem to sing in succession the praises of God. Bellarm.—This evinces the power of God, as the perpetual propagation of the gospel does that of Jesus Christ, whose Church will last till the end. W.—All the chief reformers acknowledged that there was no salvation out of the one true Church, and that the Church of Rome is such. Nightingale, p. 263. II.

VER. 4. There. Sym. joins this with the preceding. “Will announce knowledge. Not by words or speeches, the sounds of which are not heard,” so as to be understood. H.—“They are not languages or words, the signification of which is unknown;” or Heb. “never has their voice been heard.” Beli, “not,” may also signify absque, “without;” and thus we may render, “no speeches, (or country) where their voice has not been heard.” Bert.—The sight of the heavens is sufficient to convince any one of the existence of God. II.—No nation, however barbarous, can plead ignorance. The Fathers have explained this of the gift of tongues, by means of which the apostles spoke languages which they had not studied. Acts ii. 4. S. Aug. &c.—Some of every nation have heard, (W.) or will embrace, (H.) the Christian religion. W.

VER. 5. Sound. So, S. Paul reads this text, though the Heb. have, “line.” Yet there is no reason why we should suppose that the Sept. read differently, or that the Jews have corrupted their copies, as they could derive no advantage from so doing (Bert.) here, unless it were to discredit the apostle; as infidels assert the truth of the Old Testament, to vilify the new. Kum (II.) may signify a “line,” (Bert.) or “writing.” Abenezra.—The greatest exactitude has been observed in forming the world, as if all had been measured by an architect. But the sense of the Vulg. is preferable, and is adopted by Sym. S. Jer. and the Syr. C.—Prot. “their line.” Marg. “their rule or direction.” Kolam, “their voice,” occurs in the preceding verse. The l might easily be lost, (H.) or omitted by a poetical licence. Genebrard. M.—Their, refers to the heavens representing the apostles, as S. Paul explains this text, to prove that all were inexcusable who would not believe the gospel. Bert.

VER. 6. Sun. Here God seems to reside, (Ferrand) and the magnificence of his works shines forth, inasmuch that almost all nations have offered divine honours to the sun, and even the Manichees adored it, imagining that it was the very body of Jesus Christ. S. Aug. con. Faust. xiv. 12 and xx. 6.—Heb. “For the sun he has placed a tent in them,” the heavens, (S. Jer. H.) or the ends of the world. The Jews supposed that the heavens rested, like a tent, upon the earth. C. Diss.—The Heb. prep. l, may have (H.) different meanings, ad solem

And his circuit even to the end thereof: and there is no one that can hide himself from his heat.

8 The law of the Lord is unspotted, converting souls: the testimony of the Lord is faithful, giving wisdom to little ones.

9 The justices of the Lord are right, rejoicing hearts: the commandment of the Lord is lightsome, enlightening the eyes.

10 The fear of the Lord is holy, enduring for ever and ever: the judgments of the Lord are true, justified in themselves.

11 More to be desired than gold and many precious stones: and sweeter than honey and the honeycomb.

posuit, &c. “He placed a tent in them, at or for the sun.” The idea of the Vulg. is more noble, but we would not exclude the other, which is very good, (Bert.) and obviates the gross mistake of the Manichees. Anama.—The Vulg. may admit the fig. hypallage, (M. Geneb.) as good authors say dare classibus aurores, and thus it may signify “he placed the sun in his tent.” II.—This vast body stands in need of no vehicle, or tent, but itself. Diodorus.—It was placed in the firmament at first, (Gen. i. 16.) and still performs its revolutions exactly. II.—Giant. Moderns would render “a strong man;” and Bythner remarks that the bulk of a giant would render him less fit for running, as if the stoutest wrestlers were not often the most active. Bert.—The sun is represented as a hero at some of the ancient games. S. Aug. and S. Jer. explain all this of Jesus Christ, who diffuses the light and warmth of his grace throughout the world. C.—He always resides with the Church, and is never divorced from her. W.

VER. 7. Circuit. So the Heb. word is rendered “revolution.” Sept. and Vulg. “meeting” occurus, may insinuate that the sun is found in the centre, while the earth moves daily and yearly round it, according to the Copernican system. But we must be more attentive to the life and motions of Jesus Christ, in whom the Deity resided corporally. Bert.

VER. 8. The law. As the sun gives light to the world, so the law serves to direct mankind, and is another most powerful motive for us to praise God. This raises our hearts and minds still more perfectly to him, recalling us from our wanderings, and confirming our knowledge. Light is necessary for the body, and the law for the soul. The prophet admires eight characteristics of this divine law, which he designates by different names; as in the 118th ps. some things relate only to the evangelical law, which converts souls, (Bert.) and lasts for ever. v. 10. H.—The law of nature and of Moses are nevertheless also commended, (Theod.) inasmuch as the morality is always the same; and some faith in Christ, to come, or already past, is requisite under every dispensation. Hence he is called the Lamb slain from the beginning. Implicit faith would suffice for the less informed, before our Saviour’s coming; but now, under the light of the gospel, we must express our belief in his incarnation, as well as in the blessed Trinity. More is required of those to whom more has been given. H.—Unspotted. Heb. and Sept. “irreprehensible.” C.—Who indeed could pretend to find any fault with it, since it comes from God! II.—The laws of men are imperfect, and liable to change. Those of Draco were too sanguinary, and gave place to Solon’s, which were deemed too mild, &c. How happy would all be if they would embrace the law of the gospel! Bert.—Converting. Heb. “tranquillizing souls.” (M.) by keeping the passions under. II.—Testimony, declaring the will of God to men.—Little ones. The simple, and the wicked; as both are so called. C.—Pethi, “easily persuaded.” M.—It directs the former, and keeps the latter in awe by punishment. C.—All, in general, must confess their ignorance, and want of the divine law, to reap any benefit from it. II.—This is the first lesson which it imparts. Bert.—The law is most pure in itself, whether we understand that given to Moses, or the gospel. But the latter makes the observers unspotted, by the grace which the Holy Ghost communicates to them, though all who barely read and know the law, have no share in this happiness. God is the author of salvation, sweetly inviting all by the perfections of his law, which confers light and gladness, to co-operate with grace, that they may obtain the promised reward. v. 12. and 2 Tim. iv. 8. W.—The like grace was offered from the beginning, so that none will ever be punished who has not deserved it, having had the means to perform his duty. II.

VER. 9. Justices. The law displays what is just, and renders those who observe it agreeable to God, (S. Greg. Naz.) filling their hearts with joy, by the testimony of a good conscience, and the prospect of felicity. C. Prov. vi. 23.

VER. 10. Fear; or “the law accompanied with fear;” of which he is speaking. This fear is filial and pure, such as a child must have of displeasing his father. Bert.—Yet even servile fear, which restrains us from committing sin, lest we incur punishment, is a gift of God, and prepares the way for charity. Trid. Sess. xiv. 4. But we must not stop here, like Achab and Antiochus. If we understand by fear, the moral law, it will subsist as long as there shall be men.—Themselves. Sept. en te uro, “by that very thing,” that they are the judgments of the Lord, (H.) who cannot do wrong. Dan. ii. 27. C.—Heb. “truth itself, is justified altogether.” H.—Infidels acknowledge that the morality of the Gospel is excellent, but they reject the dogmatical part. Would He, who has prescribed such noble rules of conduct, lead our understanding astray, by requiring us to believe what is false? Bert.

VER. 11. Stones. So S. Jerom renders the Heb. Prot. “than gold; yea, than much fine gold.” Paz (H.) denotes the finest gold of Uphar, or of the Phison; which is probably the river Phasis. Gen. ii. 11. C.—Yet many explain this word of the topaz or chrysolite, which is of a golden colour. The Vulg. expresses topaz, (Ps. cxviii. 127.) where the Sept. have, “a precious stone.”—Honeycomb, as the English and German versions have it, though the Heb. sig

12 For thy servant keepeth them, and in keeping them there is a great reward.

13 Who can understand sins? from my secret ones cleanse me, O Lord: 14 and from those of others spare thy servant.

If they shall have no dominion over me, then shall I be without spot: and I shall be cleansed from the greatest sin.

15 And the words of my mouth shall be such as may please: and the meditation of my heart always in thy sight.

O Lord, my helper and my Redeemer.

PSALM XIX.

EXAUDIAT TE DOMINUS.

A prayer for the king.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

2 MAY the Lord hear thee in the day of tribulation: may the name of the God of Jacob protect thee.

rify, "the dropping of the honeycombs;" which is the most excellent honey. Bert.—This interpretation is inserted in the Prot. margin, and answers to S. Jerom's favum redundantem. Nothing can be more delicious, or more magnificent. H.

VER. 12. For. I speak from experience. C.—If I had no other inducement, I would observe this law for the consolation, (H.) and repeated advantages which I have derived from it. Theod.—Those who keep the same, and content not themselves with reading or hearing only, may feel the same impressions.—Reward: on which account the prophet declares that he observed the justifications; (Ps. cxviii. 112.) though that passage is corrupted in the Prot. version. W.—Heb. "wherefore thy servant shall teach them;" (S. Jer.) or rather, "is instructed by them, and convinced that in keeping them there are frequent falls. Who," &c. 13. C.—Hekeb may indeed signify "a fall," or tripping up the heels. But it is more commonly rendered "a reward," (as Prot. Mont. &c. here agree) or end, as 1 Peter (i. 9.) has it. H.—The instruction, which the observer of the laws obtains, arises from that observance, inasmuch as "he is attentive to them." Sept. φύλασσι νόμους. This must therefore be understood, and is well expressed by Custodit. Taste, and see that the Lord is sweet. Ps. xxxiii. 9. Berthier.

VER. 13. Sins. Who can always decide when a sin is only venial? H.—Though I may have avoided the grosser transgressions, how can I be assured that my heart is innocent? C.—This assurance is reserved for Methodists, who seem to look upon it as essential, before a person can obtain salvation. But where does God specify this condition? We know that (H.) we are to work out our salvation with fear and trembling; and that S. Paul, though conscious to himself of nothing, said: yet in this I am not justified, &c. 1 Cor. iv. 4. and ix. 27. Phil. ii. 12. Heb. speaks of "ignorances," which might not however be wholly blameless. Bert.—(Once, or enemies; "... and from the proud preserve.") Sym. Chal. But he alludes to the distinction of sins of ignorance and of pride, (Lev. iv. 2. Num. xv. 30. C.) or malice. H.—David had not fallen into many sins of the latter description, though his adultery and murder were such. But the former are daily sins, into which even the just fall frequently. C.—None can be assured of their state, (Eccles. ix.) but are kept between hope and fear. W.

VER. 14. Those, &c. Or "from strangers," alienis, whose company we can not avoid with too much caution. H.—Heb. "the proud." It is conjectured (Bert.) that the Sept. read r for d, in mizzedim. H. Amama.—But this is not necessary, as they might include the proud, and all the wicked, under the name of "strangers," which term is particularly applicable to idolaters, (Isai. xli. 11.) and all scandalous sinners, who are strangers to the law; and from whose society and dominion we may all beg to be delivered. Bert.—Spare. Heb. "free," (S. Jer.) or "withhold." Nature is so prone to evil, that the prophet prays earnestly for grace to resist, or to be kept out of danger. H.—All sins cannot be avoided, but preserve me from wilfully committing any enormous crime. Rivet.—Deliver me from the devil's power. Theod.—Those who are in authority have much to dread, lest they be answerable for the sins of others, which they ought to have prevented; as all must fear giving scandal, &c. and so being accessory to another's crime. H.—Delicta aliena affligunt me. S. Aug.—Yet sins of frailty, and of malice, are here meant; (Beil.) which last ought to be strange, or very uncommon.—Over me. Sept. nov. H.—S. Aug. reads dominata, which agrees better with delicta. If my secret sins, or those of others, do not oppress me, I shall pray with confidence, and be heard. C.—Yet dominata refers to alienis, strangers, or proud people, (Bert.) who were continually alluring to evil, both by word and example. How great must be the influence of such over their subjects, when even their equals take the infection so frequently! Vulg. might be rendered, "If my own had not ruled;" in which sense Pius IV. used this explanation on his death bed, knowing that his kindred had abused their power. Du Thou, B. vi. A. D. 1549. H.—Sin, pride; the source of all evil. S. Jer.—"Let men at last blush to be proud, for whose sake God was troubled." S. Aug.—If mortal sin be absent, the soul is just, and will be, one day, free from stain. W.

VER. 15. Always. Heb. "to thy regards," such as thou mayst approve. H.—He joins mental with vocal prayer, speaking like an evangelist. Bert.—Helper. Heb. "rock." C.—S. Jer. and Prot. "strength." H.—Grace is requisite to persevere as well as to be converted. W.

3 May he send thee help from the sanctuary: and defend thee out of Sion.

4 May he be mindful of all thy sacrifices: and may thy whole burnt-offering be made fat.

5 May he give thee according to thy own heart; and confirm all thy counsels.

6 We will rejoice in thy salvation; and in the name of our God we shall be exalted.

7 The Lord fulfil all thy petitions: now have I known that the Lord hath saved his anointed.

He will hear him from his holy heaven: the salvation of his right hand is in powers.

8 Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will call upon the name of the Lord, our God.

9 They are bound, and have fallen: but we are risen, and are set upright.

O Lord, save the king: and hear us in the day that we shall call upon thee.

PSAL. XIX. &c. VER. 1. David. This psalm was to be sung when he or his successors went to battle. In a higher sense, it may allude to the victories of Christ, and of his Church. Bert.—Christians must offer up this prayer for their governors. W.—It was probably composed when the Ammonites and Syrians made such great preparations for war, v. 8. and 2 K. x. 6. 18. C.

VER. 2. Hear thee, the Ruler; or Jesus Christ praying for his people. W.—Tribulation. War is always such. The victors themselves suffer, and many souls perish. C.—Name. The Messias, as the Jews often explain the expression, (Hooke, Prin.) or God himself, as others have it. Nomen ejus ipse. C.—The blessed Trinity is all one God. The name of the Lord is a strong tower, &c. Prov. xviii. 10. It was made known to Moses, to give him confidence. Ex. iii. 13. H.—Great was the honour conferred on the patriarchs, that God should be styled the God of Abraham, &c. 1 But ours is not less, since we are authorized to call Him Our Father. Bert.

VER. 3. Sion, where God was supposed to reside, in the tabernacle; though he was also in heaven, v. 7. C.

VER. 4. Sacrifices. Heb. mincha, a sacrifice of flour, or unbloody; a figure of the Mass. W.—Minchoth, "thy presents" (Mont. H.) of fruits, &c.—Fat. Heb. also, "ashes," by miraculous fire, (Bert.) to testify God's acceptance; as at the sacrifices of Abel, (H.) Elias, &c. Lev. ix. 24. and 3 K. xviii. 31. and 1 Par. xxi. 26. God forbade lean victims to be offered, as they might shew a want of respect; (Mal. i. 8.) though he always regarded the heart (C.) and faith of the offerer more than the victim. Heb. xi. 4. H.—Sacrifices were offered before every important enterprise. 1 K. xiii. 12. C.—Fat here intimates what would be acceptable. W. Dan. iii. 40. M.

VER. 5. Counsels. We must suppose that those of a pious prince are right. C.—This condition is always understood. H.

VER. 6. Salvation. Jesus Christ, who gives us the victory over all our spiritual enemies, (C.) or in thy prosperity; (W.) which we shall attribute to God. The first words may also be addressed to Him. We shall rejoice if thou grant us the victory, and we will return thanks. Heb. "we shall praise, or be praised, for thy salvation; and in thy name we shall lift up the standard." C.—But there is no proof that nodgol, (H.) which occurs no where else, has this signification. It is probable that the Sept. read nodgol; and Houbigant adopts their version. S. Jerom has, "we shall dance." All the versions denote joy. Bert.

VER. 7. He hath saved. The prophets speak of future events as past. Bert.—The people were convinced of God's protection, (C.) and anticipated what they would say at their triumphant return.—Anointed (Christum) the king, (C.) priest, (W.) or our Saviour, at his resurrection, (S. Athan.) after he had subdued his enemies. W.—Powers. That is, in strength. His right hand is strong and mighty to save them that trust in him. Ch.—The plural is often used to denote something most excellent, (H.) great strength, or heavenly forces. W.

VER. 8. Call upon. Sept. Rom. Syr. &c. read, "we shall be exalted," μεγαλυνθήσομεθα, (C.) as v. 6. Some call upon or trust in chariots, &c. H.—Heb. "remember," which often implies to confide, (C.) and such we call upon as we hope will be able and willing (H.) to protect us. Bert.—Let our enemies assemble all their forces and auxiliaries, we shall not fear as long as God is for us. C.—The Jewish kings were forbidden to multiply horses, that they might not be tempted to confide in them. H.

VER. 9. Bound. Their chariot wheels are entangled. Ex. xiv. 25. C.—Those who trust in the power of man, fall into captivity. W.—Their feet are ensnared. Bert.—The king. Heb. "Let the king hear us when we call." Prot. (H.) "our king shall hear," &c. Syr. "Word of the Lord, redeem us; Potent king, hear," &c. But the Sept. is preferable, and the best critics often deviate from the Jews; (Muis. C.) though here the sense is very good, and adopted by S. Jerom. God is styled king in Heb. H.—This title is commonly given to the Messias. Bert.—The Chal. seems to have had the second person of the blessed Trinity in view, as many of the Jews were acquainted with this mystery, particularly after the propagation of the gospel, when the paraphrase on the psalms was probably composed. H.—When the head is safe, the body is also preserved. W.—We must pray for our superiors, that we also may lead a quiet life. 1 Tim. ii. 2. Their welfare is for the public good. H.

PSALM XX.

DOMINE IN VIRTUTE.

Praise to God for Christ's exaltation after his passion.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

2 IN thy strength, O Lord, the king shall joy; and in thy salvation he shall rejoice exceedingly.

3 Thou hast given him his heart's desire: and hast not withholden from him the will of his lips.

4 For thou hast prevented him with blessings of sweetness: thou hast set on his head a crown of precious stones.

5 He asked life of thee: and thou hast given him length of days for ever and ever.

6 His glory is great in thy salvation: glory and great beauty shalt thou lay upon him.

7 For thou shalt give him to be a blessing for ever and ever: thou shalt make him joyful in gladness with thy countenance.

8 For the king hopeth in the Lord: and through the mercy of the most High he shall not be moved.

• Matt. xxvii. 46. Mark. xv. 34.

PSAL. XX. &c. VER. 1. David, after his victory over the Ammonites; (Du Pin. C.) though many passages relate only to the Messiah, as the Chaldee and even some of the modern Jews confess, (Kimchi. Muis.) with the holy Fathers, who explain all of Him. C.—Those who overcome the devil, are here concerned. W.

VER. 2. King. Chai. adds, "the Messiah shall reign; and how shall he rejoice when thou shalt have delivered him!" The people had promised to return thanks in the former psalm. H.—Christ our king as man, having by his divine power overcome his enemies, rejoiceth. W.

VER. 3. Will. Heb. aresheh, "the proof or request," (H.) which manifests the will. The term occurs no where else. Bert.—Our Saviour's greatest desire was the glory of his Father, (H.) in man's redemption. W.

VER. 4. Sweetness. Heb. "of goodness," the effects of thy mercy. H.—Thou hast made David a king according to thy own heart, and granted him victory, and many favours, even before he had asked for them. The humanity of Jesus Christ was still more glorified, (C.) by a gratuitous predestination. S. Aug. Prædest. 30. Persev. 24. &c.—Stones. Heb. "fine gold or the topaz." Ps. xviii. 11. Bert.—David took the crown of Melchom, weighing a talent. 2 K. xii. 30. C.—God gave him the victory on every occasion. Eccli. xlvii. 7. H.—He crowned Jesus Christ, the martyr, and all those who have been ready to suffer for him. W.

VER. 5. And ever. David was much favoured, and reigned a long time, as well as his posterity. 2 K. vii. 12. 29. But this was literally verified only in the Messiah, (C.) who was his son; (H.) and founded his Church on a rock, to endure unto the end. C.—What do we ask for on earth? All will be lost if we have not life; and this we cannot obtain for ever, without rising again. Therefore Jesus said, I am the resurrection and the life. Jo. xi. 25.—We must live in him by faith, (Bert.) and suffer before we can expect a crown.

VER. 7. Thy blessing. (in benedictionem.) Thou shalt incite him with the torrent of thy blessings. H.—Blessing shall take hold of him, if we may so speak, (Bert.) and embrace him for ever. H.—All the saints receive glory. But Christ alone can impart it to others, as all are blessed in him. Gen. xxi. Jo. i. W.—When people wish any happiness to their friends, they need only desire that they may be like David. See Gen. xviii. 18. and xlviii. 20. Gal. iii. 16. C.

VER. 9. Thy hand. O king, Messiah, or God. No earthly monarch can always punish his enemies. But none can escape the hand of the Almighty. He will bring all to judgment. Bert.—The just approve of God's decree in punishing. This is all a prediction. W.—Let thine enemies find thy power, so as to return to good. S. Jer.—To find often means to attack, (Jud. i. 5. and 3 K. xiii. 24.) or to accomplish with ease. Deut. xxxiii. 1.

VER. 10. Anger. Lit "face;" (vultus. H.) which sometimes intimates favour, v. 7. This passage may allude to the vengeance (C.) which David exercised upon the Ammonites, whom he burnt in kilns, (2 K. xii. 31. Geier. Vat.) or to the destruction of Sodom. Gen. xix. 28. Lam. iv. 6. C.—It is a terrible thing to fall into the hands of an angry God, who will punish his enemies in a fire; to which S. Paul (Heb. x. 27.) attributes rage, (H.) or emulation, as it will seem to strive to surpass all others. O that we may meditate on this fire! that the love of God may consume all our defects!—Trouble. Heb. "swallow up;" which is more energetic.

VER. 11. Fruit of the womb, or all their possessions. The family of Herod was presently extirpated. Bert.—The works of the wicked must burn. S. Aug.—The severity shewn to the Ammonites was perhaps without example, v. 10. C.—But this will be more fully verified in the judgment of the wicked, whose schemes against Christ and his Church will fail. W.

VER. 12.—Intended. Heb. "turned aside," like a torrent. The Ammonites had violated the law of nations, and had attempted to raise up very powerful enemies to invade David. C.—Establish. Heb. leaves the sentence imperfect, to shew the utter weakness or impotence of God's enemies. Bert.

VER. 13. In thy remnant thou shalt prepare their face: or thou shalt set thy remnant against their faces. That is, thou shalt make them see what punish-

9 Let thy hand be found by all thy enemies: let thy right hand find out all them that hate thee.

10 Thou shalt make them as an oven of fire, in the time of thy anger: the Lord shall trouble them in his wrath, and fire shall devour them.

11 Their fruit shalt thou destroy from the earth: and their seed from among the children of men.

12 For they have intended evils against thee: they have devised counsels which they have not been able to establish.

13 For thou shalt make them turn their back: in thy remnant thou shalt prepare their face.

14 Be thou exalted, O Lord, in thy own strength: we will sing and praise thy power.

PSALM XXI.

DEUS DEUS MEUS.

Christ's passion: and the conversion of the Gentiles.

1 Unto the end, for the morning protection, a psalm for David.

2 OGOD, my God, look upon me: why hast thou forsaken me?

ments remain for them hereafter from thy justice. Instead of remnants, S. Jerom renders it funes, that is cords or strings: viz. of the bow of divine justice, from which God directs his arrows against the faces of his enemies. Ch. "Thou wilt strengthen thy cords against their faces;" (S. Jer.) or "thou wilt prepare thy arrows on thy bow-strings," &c. But as bemetharic (H.) may also have the sense of the Vulg. in thy remnants, we need not abandon this version; as it implies that after God shall have put his enemies to flight, he will turn their faces to receive "the last" of his arrows or blows; (Bert.) or He will meet them everywhere. H.—There seems to be some transposition in Heb. and the Vulg. as if we should read in reliquis eorum preparabis vultum tuum. "Thou wilt execute thy vengeance upon their children;" (C.) or, as this transposition is unnecessary, "thou shalt make them look at thy children;" (H.) the elect, to increase their rage. Bellar. Jans.—To behold the glory of the just, which might so easily have been their own, will greatly mortify the reprobate at the last day. H.

VER. 14. Exalted. God can receive no increase; but he manifests what he has. Theod.—Power. Lit. "powers." H.—While the wicked perish, the just sing God's praises. W.—We must beg that the kingdom of righteousness may spread over the world, (H.) and never cease to acknowledge the divine favours. Bert.

PSAL. XXI. &c. VER. 1. Protection, succour. Heb. ayeleth, hathruchar, or "for a speedy interposition," or succour. See ver. 2. 10. 25.—S. Jer. "the morning star." H.—Many of the titles are almost inexplicable, and this is one of the most puzzling; (C.) but is of no service for understanding the psalm, which certainly speaks of Jesus Christ, as the apostles have quoted several texts, and Theodorus of Mopsuesta was condemned for asserting that it was only accommodated to him. Cone. v. col. 4. Bert.—Grotius comes too near this system, by explaining it of Christ only in the figurative sense. We ought to do quite the reverse, if we allow that some verses regard David, as a figure of the Messiah; (C.) or rather, as the same person speaks throughout, we must understand the whole of Him. Bert. t. ii.—The Jews were formerly of the same opinion. (Lyran) but seeing the use which was made of this psalm by Christians, they have explained it of David, or of the miseries of the nation. Sept. seem to intimate that this psalm was sung at the morning service, (C.) or referred to the coming, or resurrection, of our Saviour, (S. Aug. W. Ps. iii. 6. M.) after the long night of infidelity. Didymus.—He is represented as the hart, or beautiful hind, whom the Jews hunted unto death, v. 17. Some band of musicians might be styled, after "the morning hind," as another seems to be after "the mute dove;" (Ps. lv.) and the wine presses, or "band of Geth;" (Ps. viii. &c.) though we cannot pretend to give a reason for these titles. Many, who are unwilling to confess their ignorance, say that these terms allude to some musical instrument, or favourite song, &c. C.—It would be as well to speak plainly that these things are hidden from us. H.

VER. 2. O God. Our Saviour repeated these words as they are in Heb. though the vulgar tongue was Syriac, (C.) or Greek mixed with the Abamenn. Paulus.—Eli (or Eloi. S. Mark) lamma sabachani. So he pronounced what the Jews would now read, Eli . lama or lamach. T.) hazabani; (C.) and in our method, ali . lone azbothoni. But it must be admitted (H.) that the true pronunciation is irretrievably lost. The Masorets vary from the ancient versions, (Masolef. Capel. Houb. Mr. C. Butler, Ilor. Bib. 4 edit. p. 69.) and from one another; so that after being at the immense labour of learning their rules, we shall be no more secure of attaining the truth. H.—It were, therefore, greatly to be wished that the learned would agree about some characters to express uniformly the Hebrew in modern languages, as it would greatly facilitate the knowledge of the sacred writings. Kennicott. Diss. i. p. 243.—We have only attempted to use such as might inform the reader what letters were in the original; and yet we are sorry to find that z, or the long a and e are often printed without the mark above; which shows the inconvenience of so many points, introduced by the Masorets. H.—Look upon me, are words admitted by Chris* "because (says Eusebius) they are not in Heb." But this reason is not conclusive, as he might have left them out, though they were in the original.

Far from my salvation are the words of my sins.

3 O my God, I shall cry by day, and thou wilt not hear: and by night, and it shall not be reputed as folly in me.

4 But thou dwellest in the holy place, the praise of Israel.

5 In thee have our fathers hoped; they have hoped, and thou hast delivered them.

6 They cried to thee, and they were saved: they trusted in thee, and were not confounded.

7 But I am a worm, and no man: the reproach of men, and the outcast of the people.

8 *All they that saw me have laughed me to scorn: they have spoken with the lips, and wagged the head.

9 *He hoped in the Lord, let him deliver him: let him save him, seeing he delighteth in him.

10 For thou art he that hast drawn me out of the womb: my hope from the breasts of my mother. 11 I was cast upon thee from the womb:

* Matt. xxvii. 30. Mark xv. 29.

The Sept. may have rendered one all, in this sense, "to me," as they have not added my to the first mention of God: or, they may have anticipated from v. 20 (Bert.) this explication. Christ speaks with reference to his sacred humanity, as his divinity suspended its beatific influence, that he might drink the bitter chalice. Theod. S. Jer.—He also speaks the language of his afflicted members, who think they are abandoned. S. Aug. C.—Sins. That is, the sins of the world, which I have taken upon myself, cry out against me, and are the cause of all my sufferings. Ch.—An ancient psal. of S. Germ. reads "lips," instead of sins. Heb. "roaring." S. Jer. C.—"Prayer," Sixt. Edit. "Why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring?" Prot. H.—The Sept. seem to have read shagathi, whereas the Heb. places the g after the a, or they have substituted the cause for the effect; as sin was certainly the cause of Christ's affliction, and of his Father's not granting present relief. Indeed our Saviour did not ask for it, but only expressed the sentiments of suffering nature, which he corrected by the most perfect submission, to teach us how to behave. Bert.—God is the God of all creatures, but more particularly of Christ, by personal union. W.—The latter tenderly expostulates, (H.) that he is not comforted like other saints, (Mat. xxvii. 48.) since he had undertaken to die for the sins of the world, and reputed them as his own. W.—Delicta nostra sua delicta fecit, ut iustitiam suam nostram iustitiam faceret. S. Aug.—He speaks in the name of his members. S. Tho. S. p. q. 16. a. 1.—Christ could commit no sin: (1 Pet. ii. 21. and 2 Cor. v. 21.) but as long as he had taken our iniquities upon himself, to expiate with his own blood, he could not be at ease till he had perfected the work. David was convinced that his own sins were punished by the rebellion of Absalom, as Nathan had declared. 2 K. xii. 10. C.

VER. 3. Folly. My cry proceeds not from impotent rage. Lu. iv. 28. Euseb. Agel. M.—I know that thou wilt grant my request. C.—I shall not cry in vain. Theodor.—It is not for my own folly that I suffer. Geneb.—"Many cry and are not heard, yet it is for their advantage, and not out of folly." S. Aug.—Christ prayed on the cross, as he had done in the garden, to have the bitter chalice removed. But this was not blameable, as it was done with entire submission. W.—The cry of the lips, or of human nature, which would be free from suffering, was not heard: (H.) because the cry of the heart, which desired that the justice of God should be satisfied, was much louder; and this petition was granted by Him who denied nothing to his Son. Jo. xi. 41. C.—This should be our model. Submission and perseverance will always be crowned. Heb. has now d instead of r, in the word duniya, "silence," which is also good; "there is no silence for me." In the night (Bert.) of death, (H.) God granted the petition. Bert.—Aquila gives this idea, non tacebis, as S. Jerom observes: "thou wilt do what I desire." Heb. may also mean: I have no rest, or I cry incessantly. C.—The prayer of Christ for relief, was conditional. He absolutely desired God's will to be accomplished, and thus he was heard, v. 25. Heb. v. 7. He was our pattern. S. Aug. ep. 120. W.

VER. 4. In the, &c. Heb. "the Holy one inhabiteth the praises of Israel," or "Thou holy, sancte, inhabitant, the praise," (S. Jer.) or, as the plural intimates, the source and object of all "the praises of Israel," (H.) and of the Church. W.—This may be connected with the preceding, or following verse. Thou art in the midst of us, so that thou canst not be ignorant of my situation, like the idols; or thou hast shewn great favours to our ancestors, v. 5. Theodoret and S. Jerom seem to take these words to be addressed by the father or by the prophet to Jesus Christ, who inhabited a body so free from sin. C.

VER. 6. Confounded. He interests his Father, by calling to mind the ancient patriarchs, (Ecclus. ii. 11. Bert.) who obtained their requests. W.

VER. 7. No man. Heb. ish, "a great man," vir, (Mont.) so far from being treated as a nobleman, I am not even respected as one of the meanest of men, (adam). H.—"Why not a man?" says S. Aug. "because he is God. Why a worm? because a mortal, born of the flesh, without generation." The ancient naturalists supposed that worms were not generated; and though this be now deemed inaccurate, the Fathers applied this notion to confirm the doctrine of our Saviour's being born of a virgin, which had been clearly revealed. C.—People. God afforded Christ no exterior (H.) or common consolation, while the wicked persecutors treated him as a worm. W.—The rights of humanity are respected

From my mother's womb thou art my God, 12 depart not from me.

For tribulation is very near: for there is none to help me.

13 Many calves have surrounded me: fat bulls have besieged me.

14 They have opened their mouths against me, as a lion ravening and roaring.

15 I am poured out like water; and all my bones are scattered.

My heart is become like wax melting in the midst of my bowels.

16 My strength is dried up like a potsherd, and my tongue hath cleaved to my jaws: and thou hast brought me down into the dust of death.

17 For many dogs have encompassed me; the council of the malignant hath besieged me.

They have dug my hands and feet: 18 They have numbered all my bones.

* Matt. xxvii. 48.

in the greatest criminals. But the enemies of our Lord added insult to torments. Isai. lii. 14. Bert.—It would be difficult to apply this to David. For even in the depth of his misery, when reviled by Semei, and dishonoured by Absalom, he was attended by the priests, and by a powerful army. C.

VER. 8. All. This often denotes only the greatest number. S. Jer.—For surely the blessed Virgin, and some others, must be excepted. H.—But almost all joined in persecuting Christ, (W.) while his disciples left him. C.—These two verses are quoted by the three first evangelists.—Spoken. Heb. "opened or distorted." Bert.—"They shoot out the lip." Prot.—These signs and expressions (H.) mark the greatest contempt, v. 14. Job xvi. 4. &c.

VER. 9. He hoped. Heb. "roll, or he (C.) rolled himself on the Lord." Prot. margin. But the text is conformable to ours. "He trusted on," &c. S. Matt. xxvii. 43. He trusted in God, let him deliver him now if he will have him. Oh which is here rendered quoniam, "since," (H.) may also mean "if," as it is in the Prot. marg. Thus both texts agree. Many passages are thus quoted, without adding, as it is written. Bert.—God permitted that these blasphemers should use the very language of the prophet, that the completion of what he said might be more conspicuous. Chal. "I have sung praises to the Lord, and he has withdrawn me from danger." This explanation is not contemptible. C.—But it is foreign to the context, and to all the other versions, as well as to the evangelists. H.—The collating of this psalm with the history of Christ, must convince every sincere person that he who was thus ignominiously treated, was the object of God's complacency, and that the Christian religion is true. Bert.

VER. 10. Womb. David might say this as a figure of Christ, in consequence of the many favours which he had received. Theodoret. C.—But none could use these expressions with propriety, but Jesus Christ, who had no man for his father, and who had the perfect use of reason, so that he could call God his God from the very first. All others are born children of wrath, except the blessed Virgin, whose privilege was still the fruit of redemption. Bert.—She conceived and bore her son, remaining a pure virgin. Euseb. S. Athan. &c.—The synagogue rejected the Messiah, but God received him, and made him head of the Church. S. Aug.

VER. 11. Cast. This custom is noticed, (Gen. xxx. 3.) and frequently in Homer. Thou art my only Father, (C.) as I am born miraculously, and have been hitherto protected. I now suffer death, but thou wilt raise me to life again. Ps. xv. 9. W.

VER. 12. Help. This Christ might say a little before he expired, foreseeing the distress of his Church, (C.) or he might use these words in his agony; (S. Jer.) as this agrees with the sequel. C.—Almost all have abandoned me; and those who would, are not able to protect me. W.

VER. 13. Calves. The insolent Jews and soldiers.—Bulls. The more inveterate enemies, the priests and Pharisees. S. Aug. &c.—Heb. "strong bulls of Basan," (Prot.) a fertile country east of the Jordan, where the finest cattle were found. Amos iv. 1. C.

VER. 14. As, is supplied by all the versions. Bert.

VER. 15. Water, in the agony, or on the cross, fainting away. Jos. vii. 5.—Bones. In extreme pain, (C.) they have been dislocated. H.—The bones signify the apostles, who were scattered through the world, to propagate the gospel. S. Aug.—Heart. Which lives and dies first, is now like wax in the fire. W.

VER. 16. Jaws. So that he said, I thirst. Bert. W.—He would answer Pilate nothing in his own vindication.—Death. The region of blessed spirits, (S. Jer.) or into the grave, where other bodies turn to dust. C.

VER. 17. Dogs. The pagan soldiers, who were instigated by the Jews, (Matt. xv. 26. C.) or the latter are here styled dogs, as they are by S. Paul. Phil. iii. 2. S. Jer.—The evangelists could scarcely have explained the authors, and manner of our Saviour's death more particularly; so that we might entitle this "the Passion of Jesus Christ, according to David." W.—Dug. The Jews have here, and God knows in how many other places, corrupted their text; reading "like a lion," though it have no sense, to avoid so clear a prophecy. W.—They keep cari in the text, though it (Amama) or the margin had formerly the proper reading, carni. The Chal. has both, "they have bitten like a lion," &c. in some editions only; which shews the antiquity of this variation, (H.) as the author

And they have looked and stared upon me. 19 *They parted my garments amongst them: and upon my vesture they cast lots.

20 But thou, O Lord, remove not thy help to a distance from me; look towards my defence.

21 Deliver, O God, my soul from the sword: my only one from the hand of the dog.

22 Save me from the lion's mouth; and my lowness from the horns of the unicorns.

23 *I will declare thy name to my brethren: in the midst of the church will I praise thee.

* Matt. xxvii. 35. John xix. 23. and 24.—b Heb. ii. 12

Joseph the blind, is supposed to have lived in the 4th century, though this is uncertain. C.—All the ancient versions of the Sept. Syr. &c. agree with us, as the Prot. do likewise. Even the Masora intimates that cari has not here the sense "of like a lion," as it has Isai. xxxviii. 13; and, though it might be pointed so as to signify the same as cari, they have rejected that punctuation, and obstinately maintain their reading, in opposition to many MSS. seen by Ben Chaim, &c. Bert. Kennicott mentions another MS. in the Bod. Lib. which has caru, with cari in the margin; and observes that Dr. Pocock, nevertheless, maintains the accuracy of the Heb. edit. in this, as well as in every other instance, asserting that car is perfidit, and cari the part. Benoni, perfidientes, with the m omitted. "But as this omission is very irregular, and never proper but before a suffixed pronoun, or in construct.; and as the ancient versions express it . . . as a verb, there seems to be but little doubt that this word was originally eru or caru, with an a inserted to express the kametz." Dis. 1. p. 500. The proposed interpretation would be rejected by the Jews, while they would exult in their error being countenanced by us. C. Diss.—This reason is perhaps (H.) weak, as their conversion is not expected; if by means of it, the Heb. Bible may be reconciled with the versions; "the council . . . hath besieged me, digging my hands." Bert.—But this expedient is at least doubtful; (H.) suggested only by Prot. who maintained the integrity of the Heb. text, which is now given up; and the Jews seem inexcusable, though the variation might originally arise (C.) from a mistake of transcribers. Houbig.—They ought not to have rejected caru even from the margin, which they confess was once in the text, as it is still in very correct copies. Drusius informs us that a Jew threatened Bomberg, when he designed to adopt this correction, that if he did, he would prevent any of his brethren from purchasing a single copy. The pusillanimity of Christians, and the obstinacy of the Jews, keep therefore the text in its present state. Amama, p. 461.—Ximenes had the courage to insert caru in his Polyglot. C.—In the edit. of S. Jerom, 1533, caru appears indeed in the margin; as he translated ficerunt, "they pierced," and eru in that of Mont. with a over cari, perhaps as a sign that the former was formerly in the margin, or should be translated, as it is by Pagnin, foderunt; though Mont. alters it for circumdederunt me, sicut leo manus meas, in obedience to the Jews. H.—Thus we behold what dissensions the alteration of a single u or i may occasion; (Ps. xv. 10.) and yet those are letters which the Jews seem to have treated with little ceremony, (H.) changing in 100 instances, (C.) or omitting them, since the introduction of the vowel points; (Houbig.) and they are so easily mistaken, that the greatest attention is requisite to make the distinction. However, one jot or one tittle shall not pass of the law till all be fulfilled. Matt. v. 18. H. See Zac. xii. 10.

VER. 18. They. Heb. "I shall or may tell all my bones." (C.) they are so dislocated. H.—Syr. "my bones have howled," as in mourning. C.—Upon me, out of contempt, (Eus.) or to prevent my escape, (Orig.) or deriding my naked condition. M.—David experienced nothing of the kind. S. Justin. apol. ii.

VER. 19. Vesture, or inner garment, which was all of a piece. C.—The soldiers perceived that it would be rendered unserviceable by cutting. H.—"Heretics attempt to divide the Church, but in vain." S. Jer.—Lots. This was verified above 100 years afterwards, in the person of Jesus Christ. Bert.—Let the Jews shew how it was accomplished in David. They assert themselves that nothing which had belonged to their kings was used by others. Their thrones, garments, &c. were all burnt. Maimon. &c.—Though this be doubtful we may employ this testimony against them. C.—At Siceleg the effects of David were indeed plundered; but David was absent, and not under torments, like the person here described. Our goods must be divided, either before or after death. Let us be solicitous to obtain the second covering, which may never be taken from us. 2 Cor. v. 4. Bert.

VER. 20. Thy help. So some editions of the Sept. read, but S. Jer. approves "my help," as it is in the Com. edit. conformably to the Heb. (C.) which seems more animated, though the sense is the same. Bert.—The humanity here addresses the divine nature, to obtain a speedy resurrection. S. Jer.—Heb. "O, my strength, haste thou to help me." What is man when left to himself! The whole of a spiritual life consists in keeping close to God, and being convinced of our own infirmity. Bert.

VER. 21. Dog. All my enemies are united to persecute me, in my desolate condition. Unicam meam, "my desolate one," the soul, which is the only thing which ought to fix our attention; since if we lose it, all is lost. This only one, self, is often, however, the most dangerous enemy. Bert.

VER. 22. Lowness. This sense appears to be preferable to the Heb. "hear me from," &c. C.—Yet some who render the orig. literally have, "save me from the throat of the lion, and from the horns of the unicorns; thou hast heard me." This seems very striking, as Christ henceforth recounts the glorious effects of his sufferings. The Sept. have explained hanithani as a noun, though it properly signifies, thou hast heard, or humbled. Bert.—They may not have read the last n. C.—Yet S. Jer. has, exaudisti me. "thou hast granted my request." 11.

24 Ye that fear the Lord, praise him: all ye, the seed of Jacob, glorify him.

25 Let all the seed of Israel fear him; because he hath not slighted nor despised the supplication of the poor man.

Neither hath he turned away his face from me: and when I cried to him he heard me.

26 With thee is my praise in a great church: I will pay my vows in the sight of them that fear him.

27 The poor shall eat and shall be filled; and they shall praise the Lord that seek him: their hearts shall live for ever and ever.

VER. 23. Brethren. So Christ styles his disciples, principally (C.) after his resurrection. Matt. xxviii. 10. Jo. xx. 17. Heb. ii. 11. S. Paul quotes this passage, which may convince us that this psalm relates to our Saviour alone; and he informs us, that we are brethren of Christ, because we spring from Adam, (Bert.) and are adopted by God: whence the apostles assume the title of children of God, after baptism. Rom. viii. 15. and 29. Eph. i. 5. C.—We are willing to be coheirs with Christ, but dislike the condition. Rom. viii. 17.—Church. This he will never cease to do. After the resurrection, he communicated many instructions to his apostles, which all tend to honour God. H.—S. Aug. here refutes the Donatists, who pretended that God's church was confined to a small part of Africa, and that he had abandoned the Catholic Church. He shews that this conduct would be injurious to God, and contrary to his solemn promises, as well as to this prediction, which speaks of all, and of a great Church, praising and fearing him, v. 24. 26. 28. and 29. The Church can, therefore, neither be destroyed nor hidden, though it may be persecuted. It will always be great, in comparison of any separate congregation which may pretend to the truth; and this appears not only with respect to the Donatists, but also to the Lutherans, &c. W.

VER. 24. Fear. Thus the Gemile converts are designated. Acts x. 2. 35 and xiii. 10. 26.

VER. 25. Israel. This may be something more general, as all the holy nation went under this name.—Supplication. Heb. also, "the lowness of the afflicted." Bert.—When I. Heb. Chal. and Syr. "he," (C.) Jesus, of whom the prophet speaks; (Bert.) though, according to the Vulg. He speaks himself which seems more agreeable to the context. H.

VER. 26. Great Church; the Catholic Church, dispersed throughout the world, in which many adore God in spirit and truth. S. Jer.—Here Jesus Christ praises his Father by the mouth of his priests and faithful, in whom the spirit works. Heb. "From thee shall proceed my praise," in the great Church. C.—Prot.—"congregation." H.—The Vulg. may have the same meaning, as the desire to praise comes from God. The Church which Jesus founded immediately after his resurrection, to pay his vows, must last unto the end; otherwise this service would be interrupted. This can only be verified in the Catholic Church, as she alone can prove her uninterrupted existence. She alone is spread throughout the earth, united under the same pastors, and partaking of the same sacraments. If the Church failed after three or four centuries, the vows of Christ must have ceased. Yet he assures us, that he will pay them as long as his kingdom shall continue, v. 29.—Fear him. Houbigant would substitute "thee." This change of persons is however very proper and remarkable, as Christ no longer addresses his Father, but gives a description of the worship which should be exhibited in his Church. Bert.—The eucharistic sacrifice is the vow here specified, which Christ offers by his priests daily. It is the only sacrifice of the new law, and the most perfect means of acknowledging God's supreme dominion, &c. S. Aug. S. Jer. &c. C.

VER. 27. Poor. Heb. hanavim, means also, "quiet and modest men," such as our Saviour calls poor in spirit. Mat. v. 3. The alone ought to partake of the holy sacraments. H.—The psalmist may allude to the feasts prescribed by the law, (Deut. xii. 7. and xxvi. 11.) and imitated in the love-feasts of the primitive Christians. The sacrifices of thanksgiving were symbols of that of the blessed Eucharist, of which the Fathers explain this text. Theod. S. Aug. &c. C.—Indeed, as it speaks of the times of the new law, this must be the meaning. H.—It describes that part of the Christian worship, which consists in participating of those sacred mysteries which give life to the humble and worthy receiver. Jo. vi. Prot. explains this eating, to mean "instruction." But that may be given any where; and the psalmist alludes to the public service, which is to be performed in the midst of the Church. Calmet would understand it of David, and of the sacrifices of the old law: which throws all into confusion. Bert.—The apostles clearly refer the text to Jesus Christ, who promised to institute the blessed Eucharist, after he had fed the multitudes, (Jo. vi.) and he fulfilled his promise at the last supper. S. Aug. ep. exx. 27.—This holy doctor observes, that the rich, or the fat ones, have eaten and have adored, (v. 30.) but yet are not filled, because they disdain to be humble. He speaks not of mere bread and wine, which cannot be lawfully adored; nor of Christ's body on the cross, or in heaven, which "is not eaten, but as it is in the forms of bread and wine on Christ's table, the altar." W.—Those who approach unworthily sign their own condemnation, which they bear about in their bodies. H.—Their. Heb. "your," though S. Jer. Chal. Syr. &c. agree with us. The sense is the same. My friends shall partake of the victims in abundance, after my restoration. "But the text is more naturally explained of the food . . . which we receive in the blessed Eucharist," and which imparts life eternal. The strong may partake, but they must first become mean in their own eyes. C.—The faithful and humble only derive benefit from this great sacrament. Its effect is a glorious resurrection in eternal life. W.—The sounder Prot. maintain that Christ is to be adored "in the symbols, before receiving." Thorndike. See Ana. to Slack, p. 14.

28 All the ends of the earth shall remember, and shall be converted to the Lord.

And all the kindreds of the Gentiles shall adore in his sight.

29 For the kingdom is the Lord's; and he shall have dominion over the nations.

30 All the fat ones of the earth have eaten and have adored: all they that go down to the earth shall fall before him.

31 And to him my soul shall live: and my seed shall serve him.

32 There shall be declared to the Lord a generation to come: and the heavens shall shew forth his justice to a people that shall be born, which the Lord hath made.

PSALM XXII.

DOMINUS REGIT ME.

God's spiritual benefits to faithful souls.

1 A psalm for David.

VER. 28. Remember. Our Saviour says, Do this in remembrance of me. H.—We must recollect what Christ has suffered and done for us, what was the condition of the world at his coming, and what the behaviour of his first disciples. These reflections will surely fill our breasts with love, admiration, and shame. The first Christians met together to break bread, they preached the word, and brought many to the faith. Bert.—We cannot explain this of David, except in a very exaggerated sense. But all is clear if we understand it of Jesus Christ, whose faith many nations have embraced, assembling to celebrate his sacred mysteries, and the festivals of his birth, &c. C.—The Gentiles shall enter into themselves, when they shall hear his doctrine, and embrace the true religion. W.—In his. Heb. "in thy." The sense is the same. The German version follows the Vulg. which Houb. also approves. Bert.

VER. 29. Nations. God placed David on the throne. He caused both Jews and Gentiles to submit to Jesus Christ. Matt. xxviii. 18. Rom. iii. 29. Theod.

VER. 30. Fat ones. Many ancient psalters read, "the rich," which is the true sense.—Adored. This may be taken as a prediction. C.—Heb. is in the future, "they shall," &c. Bert.—The rich of this world have no relish for the sacred nourishment. C.—Those who understand, and comply with their duty, amid the riches with which they are not possessed, but only surrounded, find the greatest comfort in participating of it along with their poorest brethren, who may be equal, or superior to them, in the eyes of their common judge. The orig. dishnum, (H.) comes from a root, which signifies to reduce a victim to ashes, in testimony of approbation. It may here designate priests, as well as the rich, and princes.—Earth. Dying, (Bert.) or to manifest their adoration in the Church. Euseb.—All shall adore Jesus Christ, particularly those who receive his sacred body at the hour of death. Heb. "who go down to the dust" H.

VER. 31. Shall.—Heb. "and his soul he will not vivify," which gives no distinct meaning. Some join it with the preceding, All shall adore . . yet he will not restore him to life. The living alone shall be able to sound forth God's praises, as it is often observed. Ps. vi. 6. Isai. xxxviii. 18. C.—Chald. "the Lord will not give life to the wicked; but the race of Abraham shall praise him. Others again explain it of Jesus Christ, "because he has not spared his life," he shall see a long-lived seed (Isai. liii. 10.) in the Church, which shall praise him for ever. H.—V. sometimes signifies "because," and though it is not clear that it has this sense here, the explication is very beautiful. None of the Greek versions admit the negation. They agree with the Vulg.; only Theod. reads, "his soul;" making the prophet speak instead of the Messiah. It is suspected that the Sept. read: instead of u, and lu for la. The Masorets acknowledge 15 places in which this change would be proper. The learned observe many more. Thus 1 Par. xi. 20. in Heb. we read that Abisai had "no (la) name among the three;" whereas it ought to be the reverse, (lu) ei nomen inter tres, "he was renowned," &c. Bert.—S. Jerom agrees with the present Heb. "and his soul shall not live." Prot. "and none can keep alive his own soul." Sym. "whose soul shall live, and seed shall serve him." H.—"The Messiah shall live for God, and his posterity shall serve him." (Bert.) as the faithful shall never cease to be influenced by his spirit, to testify their gratitude. H.

VER. 32. To, or by the Lord, who opened the mouths of the prophets to foretell the propagation of the Christian Church. C.—Prot. "It shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation: They shall come and shall declare," &c. H.—Heavens is added by the Vulg. to shew that the apostles, who are styled the heavens, (Ps. xviii.) shall proclaim these things. Bert.—Sept. &c. omit this word, as well as many Latin copies. One generation shall deliver the true doctrine to another, as long as the world shall last. C.—Which. Heb. ei has this sense, (Bert. Gen. iv. 25.) whom Cain slew, as all the versions agree, and S. Jerom renders quem fecit. H.—Yet many translate, "that he hath done these things," (Bert.) delivering me from danger, and raising the Messiah to life again, &c. C.—Thus Jesus foretold, with his dying breath, the glory which should always be given to his Father, in his true Church. Bert.—This is the generation which should be honoured with the title of children of God, and of Christ, (H.) and should partake of his sacraments. M.

PSAL. XXII &c. VER. 1. David. This psalm most beautifully describes the consolation which the just find in God's protection. H.—It may be applied to the Israelites in the desert, (Chal.) to David persecuted by Saul, or rather (C.) (700)

THE Lord ruleth me: and I shall want nothing

2 He hath set me in a place of pasture.

He hath brought me up, on the water of refreshment:

3 he hath converted my soul.

He hath led me on the paths of justice, for his own name's sake.

4 For though I should walk in the midst of the shadow of death, I will fear no evils, for thou art with me.

Thy rod and thy staff, they have comforted me.

5 Thou hast prepared a table before me, against them that afflict me.

Thou hast anointed my head with oil; and my chalice which inebrateth me, how goodly is it!

6 And thy mercy will follow me all the days of my life.

And that I may dwell in the house of the Lord, unto length of days.

* Isai. xl. 11. Jerem. xxiii. 5. Ezech. xxxiv. 11. and 23. 1 Pet. ii. 25. and v. 8.

settled quietly upon the throne, (Muis.) or to the Jews returned from Babylon. S. Athan. C.—The Fathers explain it mystically of Jesus Christ, the Shepherd of our souls. Didymus, S. Aug. &c. The allegories of a shepherd and of a person giving a feast to his guest, are well supported. C.—Ruleth, in Heb. Is my shepherd; viz. to feed, guide, and govern me. Ch.—Sept. replevit, pascit, as S. Aug. and S. Jer. read. S. Greg. Thaumaturgus understands this of the angel guardian. Paneg. in Orig.—Jesus Christ conducts us into the pastures of his Church, and feeds us (W.) with his own body, &c. C.—The saints never complain of want. Bert.

VER. 2. Place. Mont. "in the huts of grass, (or of young trees, germinis) he will make me lie down." See Cant. i. 6. Ezech. xxxiv. 15. H.—Shepherds were accustomed to conduct their flocks to shady places, during the heat of the day.—Refreshment. Heb. "still waters," like the pond of Siloe, (Is. viii. 6.) in opposition to the great streams of the Euphrates, &c. The fathers understand it of baptism; (S. Chrys. &c.) or of the truths of salvation. Euseb. C.—Baptism is the first justification. W.

VER. 3. Converted. Prot. "restoreth my soul" (H.) to her former tranquillity, or bringeth me back from my wanderings. Bert.—Justice. Those who have received baptism, must observe the law of Christ, (W.) as all indeed are bound to do. H.—Sake. Not on account of man's deserving (C.) by the force of nature. God must begin and carry on the work of our conversion, by his grace; with which we must co-operate. H.—The captives had been in the greatest distress among idolaters. They rejoice at the sight of the promised land, where they will fear no dangers. C.

VER. 4. Walk. In the greatest temptations, we may resist by God's grace. W.—Midst. Heb. "in the valley." The greatest darkness, and the most horrible precipices, give no alarm to those who are under God's protection.—Comforted me, as they have kept all enemies at a distance. The shepherd's staff or crook is designed for that purpose; and though it may be used to bring back the wandering sheep by beating them, yet it is not under that idea an object of consolation, but rather of terror. C.—The effects of timely correction are, however, comfortable; and it is a great mercy of God to chastise the sinner, lest he should run astray to his eternal ruin. H.—Some distinguish the rod from the staff, and say that the former is to punish, and the latter to support. S. Jer. Muis.—We are generally too backward in having recourse to God in our distresses, though he invites us so pressingly. Isai. xli. 10, &c.

VER. 5. Thou. Here the allegory of a shepherd seems less discernible, though it may allude to the provisions for winter; (Bert.) or rather it censures, as feasts are made for men; (M.) and the second allegory of a guest here commences. H.—The enemy had reduced me to the greatest misery. C.—But God has admitted me to his table. M.—This may be explained of the sacred mysteries received in the Church, (S. Amb.) or of the Scriptures, which nourish our souls. S. Jer.—No mention is made of the ancient sacrifices; and as this psalm must be understood in the spiritual sense, the prophet speaks of the blessed Eucharist, which imparts the unction of grace, &c. The enemy strives to make us keep at a distance from it. Bert.—Christ has himself prepared this table (S. Cyp. ep. 63. Enthym.) against all spiritual adversaries.—Oil. Christians are also strengthened by the sacraments of confirmation, penance, holy orders, matrimony, and extreme unction. W.—Three of these are administered with oil. H.—It was customary to anoint the head of guests with perfumes, (Matt. xxvi. 7. Lu. vii. 46.) both among the Jews and Gentiles. But the Fathers explain this text of chrism, used in confirmation. S. Athan. Theod. C.—Chalice. The blessed sacrament and sacrifice of Christ's body and blood. W.—Inebriateth. Heb. "overflowing;" being constantly replenished (Cant. vii. 2. IIud iv.) with wine; as people are not inebriated with water. This term, however, only means to take as much as is requisite. Gen. xliii. 34. "Thy chalice inebrating me," occurs in most copies of the Sept. in Sixtus V. &c. But the more correct edition of the Sept. and all the Greek interpreters, (S. Jer. ep. ad Sun.) agree with the Heb. and Vulg.—Hon. &c. is added by way of explanation; or rather, the Sept. have taken two words from the following v. ac tob, verumtamen bona. C.—Prot. "surely goodness and mercy," &c. H.—Theodotion and Syn. were not acquainted with this division, which seems less accurate, though the sense be much the same. Bert.

VER. 6. Follow me, like provisions from the king's table. 2 K. xi. 8. C.—

PSALM XXIII.

DOMINI EST TERRA.

Who they are that shall ascend to heaven: Christ's triumphant ascension thither.

1 On the first day of the week, a psalm for David.

THE * earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world, and all they that dwell therein.

2 For he hath founded it upon the seas; and hath prepared it upon the rivers.

3 Who shall ascend into the mountain of the Lord: or who shall stand in his holy place?

4 The innocent in hands, and clean of heart, who hath not taken his soul in vain, nor sworn deceitfully to his neighbour.

5 He shall receive a blessing from the Lord, and mercy from God, his Saviour.

6 This is the generation of them that seek him, of them that seek the face of the God of Jacob.

* Ps. xlix. 12. 1 Cor. x. 26.

"The grace of God prevents the unwilling to make him willing; and it follows the person who is in good dispositions, that they may not be in vain." S. Aug. Ench. 32.—Prævenit per fidem, subsequitur in custodiendo mandata Dei. S. Jer. Continual and final perseverance is a special grace of God. W.—And that. Heb. "and I shall." The Vulg. expresses the effect of a worthy participation of God's table, which leads to a happy eternity. Bert.—This is particularly applicable to priests, both of the old and of the new law. C.—Only those who remain in the house of God, in his church on earth, can expect felicity. H.—Days, in eternal life. W.—David always desired to be near the ark, (Ps. xxvi. and lxxvii. M.) as the figure of heaven. H.

PSALM XXIII. &c. VER. 1. Week. This title was found only in the common edit. of the Sept. Theod.—The Jews say the psalm was used on Sunday; (Bert.) and the Fathers explain it of the resurrection and ascension of our Lord, whom it regards in the more sublime sense, though it may also be literally explained of the temple, or translation of the ark, 2 K. vi. 12. C.—David appointed when the psalms were to be sung. Eccl. xlvii. 12. This speaks of the creation. M.—S. Paul applies the first verse to Jesus Christ, whom he styles the Lord, (1 Cor. x. 26.) and Creator, of whom David speaks. It is wonderful that so few have noticed this excellent proof of Christ's divinity. The authors of Principles Discussed, according to their general system of two literal senses, explain this psalm of the re-establishment of the Jews after the captivity, and of the propagation of the Christian Church; and it is not clear that two senses ought not to be admitted. But we must, at least, admit that the prophet speaks literally of Jesus Christ (Bert.) as well as of the ark, &c.—Therein. Though God be the Creator of all, he seems to have made a particular choice of Zion. Before the coming of Christ, all, except a few Jews (C.) and enlightened Gentiles, like Job, (H.) were buried in sin and ignorance. But now his kingdom is propagated widely; and in every place the Father is adored in spirit and in truth. S. Aug. &c.—All power is given to Jesus Christ, who rose again on the first day of the week. Not only the earth, but all that is in it, belongs to the great Creator. W.

VER. 2. Founded, or created it (Bert.) upon (Heb. hal, "above, in, near, to, with," &c. Amama) the seas, like a floating island. Prov. viii. 29. Jon. ii. 7. Job xxxviii. 11. This was the language of the ancients: Ipsa natat tellus Pelagi lustrata coronâ. Manil. Astr. 4. The earth was at first covered with water. Gen. i. 9. Ps. ciii. 6. C.—Seas and caverns have received a part of it, which was poured out again at the deluge. Several have rejected the antipodes, falsely supposing that there is water all under the earth, which the Scripture does not assert. Amama. H.

VER. 3. Place. The punishment of the Bethsamites, and of Oza, had filled all with alarm, so that David durst not introduce the ark into his palace. 1 K. vi. 19. C.—Though Christ created and redeemed all, yet only the just shall inherit felicity. W.

VER. 4. Heart, whose faith and intentions are pure, as well as their actions. —Vain, by neglecting good works, (S. Jer.) or seeking after trifles; (S. Aug.) or rather, according to the Heb. "who hath not sworn in vain by his soul." 2 Cor. i. 23. and 1 K. i. 26. To take the name of God in vain, means to swear falsely. C.—Prot. "who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity;" to swell with pride, (H.) or to swear by idols. Pr. in disc.—To his, &c. This is not in Heb. but must be understood, (C.) as a person can only intend to deceive men. So Dupont, who follows the Heb. so exactly in his Greek psalms in verse, (Bert.) reads, "Nor sworn an oath, that men he might deceive." H.—These two verses contain an abridgment of the gospel, and shew that something better than Mount Zion is understood. Heb. xii. 22. When we approach to the tabernacle, and to the sacred mysteries, we ought to put these terrible questions to ourselves. Bert.—We must carefully employ ourselves in good works, (W.) by which alone we can make our calling and election sure. 1 Pet. i. 10. H.

VER. 5. Blessing. David seems to have given the eulogium of Obededom, whose example taught him that the ark was only terrible to the wicked; and that it was a source of blessings to the just. 2 K. vi. 11.—Merely. "Heb. "justice." But these terms are used synonymously, and denote that God gives a just reward; "when he crowns our merits, he crowns his own gifts." S. Aug. Theod. C.—Mercy goes before; good works must follow, to obtain eternal glory. W.

7 Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lifted up, O eternal gates: and the King of Glory shall enter in.

8 Who is this King of Glory? the Lord, who is strong and mighty: the Lord mighty in battle.

9 Lift up your gates, O ye princes, and be ye lifted up, O eternal gates: and the King of Glory shall enter in.

10 Who is this King of Glory? the Lord of hosts, he is the King of Glory.

PSALM XXIV.

AT TE DOMINE LEVAVI.

A prayer for grace, mercy, and protection against our enemies.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

TO thee, O Lord, have I lifted up my soul.

2 In thee, O my God, I put my trust; let me not be ashamed.

3 Neither let my enemies laugh at me: for none of them that wait on thee shall be confounded.

VER. 6. The face. Heb. "Thy face, O Jacob, always." S. Jer.—Prot. (marg. God of) Jacob. Selah. H.—Thus they intimate that the Heb. is imperfect. All the preceding virtues belong to Jesus Christ, who obtained mercy for us. The generation of Adam multiplied, (Gen. v. 1) and soon forgot the Lord: but it shall not be so with the disciples of Christ, who must delight in fervent prayer, and in the constant practice of good works; and not merely serve him in certain fits of devotion. Bert. See Prov. xxix. 26. M.

VER. 7. Princes; or, "lift up your chief or highest gates;" portas principes. Heb. "gates, lift up your heads." Here the gates themselves are addressed, while the Sept. and Vulg. turn the discourse to the porters or princes. Bert.—The tops of the gates must be raised, to let the triumphal car pass through. Isai. vi. 4. Amos viii. 3. and ix. 1. The Church has constantly understood this passage of Christ's ascension. The saints in his train address the angels, who appear to be filled with astonishment. Theod. Euseb. C.—The gates of heaven are more properly styled eternal, than those of the temple, which were not yet erected; or of Jerusalem, which should be (Bert.) soon demolished. H.—This apostrophe to the gates is very striking, commanding them to allow more room for the crowd to pass in the train of the conqueror, who was usually seated on a lofty chariot. C.—The prophet contemplating the ascension of Christ, inviteth the angels to receive him; and by the figure, prospopeta, speaketh also to the gates by which he is to enter. W. Homer (H. 8.) represents the Hours as door-keepers of heaven removing a thick cloud, which obstructs the entrance. H.—These gates are supposed to open, by being lifted upwards. The Greeks style them cataracts. Gen. vii. 11. Tourneine.

VER. 8. Who. This is the question of the Levites, when the ark approached, or of the angels in heaven, who hold a dialogue with the attendants of Christ. These return a satisfactory answer only at the second demand, having first given four titles to their great king. Bert.—Some of the Fathers suppose that the angels in heaven were not acquainted with the incarnation. S. Just dial. Theod. S. Jer. in Isai. lxxiii. But the latter here asserts that the good and bad angels hold a dialogue, or that the former address the spirits in limbo, announcing to them their speedy deliverance in consequence of Christ's victory over the devil. The dialogue is rather (C.) between the angels in heaven, and the spirits of the just, (S. Athan.) or other angels, who accompanied Christ in his ascension. C.—The angels express their admiration of the glory with which (Christ, (W.) in our human nature, (H.) was environed; and the prophet replies, that he had overcome all his opponents, and again orders the gates to open. W.—The angels were not ignorant, but gave occasion to a further display of the conqueror's dignity, and expressed their surprise that men should enter heaven. M.

VER. 10. Hosts of all heavenly powers, (W.) and the arbiter of war. H.—Both Jews and foreigners were convinced that God granted victory to his people, if they had not forfeited his favour by their crimes, as in the case of Achan, and of the sons of Heli. Jos. vii. and 1 K. iv. Judith v. 24. The title of Lord of hosts, was very applicable to Christ after his victory. C.—Glory. S. Jer adds, "for ever;" thus frequently seia seems to form a part of the sentence though it be neglected by the Vulg. &c. H.

PSALM XXIV. &c. VER. 1. David. This word alone occurs in Heb. Sept. and S. Jerom add also Psalm. H.—S. Aug. and Theod. agree with the Vulg. C.—These variations prove that we cannot depend much on the titles; and the learned do not look upon them as the word of God. The psalm may have been composed, when David was persecuted by his son, (Bert.) or by Saul. It may also allude to the captives. This is the first of the seven alphabetical psalms. The 33d, 35th, 110th, 111th, 118th, and 144th, are of the same description, being written in this manner (C.) on account of their importance, (Kimehi) or to help the memory, (Bert.) or for copies, to teach young people to write. (Not—Each verse forms a distinct sentence, not much connected with the rest. We perceive some derangement in the present Heb. copies of this psalm, as the letters are not in proper order, though it might easily be restored by altering the divisions, &c. The Jews have been less attentive to preserve these divine canticles (C.) than their Thalmudical songs. Pellican in Ps. lxxxv. 9.—The Sept. and S. Jerom seem to have had better copies. Christ, the Church, (C.) or any pious soul, may address this fervent prayer to God under affliction.—Lifted up in the true spirit of prayer, (Bert.) with fervour and confidence. Deut. xxiv.

4 Let all them be confounded that act unjust things without cause.

Shew, O Lord, thy ways to me, and teach me thy paths.

5 Direct me in thy truth, and teach me; for thou art God, my Saviour; and on thee have I waited all the day long.

6 Remember, O Lord, thy bowels of compassion; and thy mercies that are from the beginning of the world.

7 The sins of my youth and my ignorances do not remember.

According to thy mercy remember thou me: for thy goodness' sake, O Lord.

8 The Lord is sweet and righteous: therefore he will give a law to sinners in the way.

9 He will guide the mild in judgment: he will teach the meek his ways.

10 All the ways of the Lord are mercy and truth, to them that seek after his covenant and his testimonies.

11 For thy name's sake, O Lord, thou wilt pardon my sin: for it is great.

12 Who is the man that feareth the Lord? He hath appointed him a law in the way he hath chosen.

13 His soul shall dwell in good things: and his seed shall inherit the land.

14 The Lord is a firmament to them that fear him: and his covenant shall be made manifest to them.

15. Lam. iii. 41. C.—Attention is requisite to obtain a petition, (W.) as well as fervour, &c. H.

VER. 2. In thee. Heb. bec. Thus the second verse will properly begin with b. (Capel. Houbig.) though the Jews place my God first, as it is in the Vulg. Deus meus, in te, &c. H.—Ashamed. Sept. Compl. adds, “for ever.”

VER. 3. Laugh. Saying scornfully where is their God? C.—Wait. This is often urged (Is. xlii. 23.) as comprising all the science of a spiritual life. We must neither despair nor omit the means of salvation. Bert.—Those who hope for the accomplishment of God's promises, will not be disappointed. C.

VER. 4. All, is not expressed in Heb. or some copies of the Sept. Bert.—Cause. No one can have reason to do so. But those who injure their harmless brethren, are more reprehensible, (H.) and the psalmist foretells that they will be put to shame. S. Jer.—This manner of praying frequently occurs in the psalms, to signify the event, and the approbation of the just. W.—Shew. The fourth verse ought to begin here with d. as in Heb. H.—Paths. The mysterious ways of Providence, (Euseb.) or the law which is unknown to many, (S. Athan.) and practised by still fewer. C.

VER. 5. And teach. If the verse were to commence thus, (C.) v would not be out of its place. H.—Without God's direction, we cannot walk in the narrow path. Bert.—Long. We must never cease to desire the knowledge of true doctrine. W.

VER. 6. World. God's truth or fidelity in performing his promises, and his tender mercies towards his people, are the motives most frequently urged. C.

VER. 7. Ignorances. Heb. “defects,” as youth is more apt to omit duties than to act very wickedly. Yet it is difficult to decide how grievous such sins may be. Bert.—Passion and ignorance concur to lead the inexperienced astray. H.—From the first use of reason, many are careless, and neglect to learn their duty. W.—Ignorance is sometimes a sin, though it may be more pardonable. 1 Tim. i. M.

VER. 8. Righteous. Though he is always ready to receive the penitent, he will punish the obstinate with severity. C. W.—Yet he points out the means of obtaining his favour. S. Aug.—A law. Heb. “will instruct.” C.

VER. 9. Mild. Only rebels are made the victims of justice. H.

VER. 10. Seek. Heb. “keeps.” But no one seeks after the law, who does not strive to keep it. Bert.—Jesus Christ shewed mercy at his first coming, and he will display truth at his second, judging all with equity. S. Aug.—Testimonies. When God gave the law to manifest his will, he attested heaven and earth, that all might observe it carefully. C.—The law is God's covenant, and the testimony of his will. He mercifully preventeth us with his graces, and will reward with truth and justice. W.

VER. 11. Great. “Original sin is common to all, and will not be washed away, except God be pleased to destroy it in baptism.” S. Jer.—David had committed adultery; and all must acknowledge their manifold guilt. C.—Though the guilt had been remitted, the punishment due to David's crimes was to be endured in this life, and he ought daily to pray for pardon. Bert.—The aversion from God in sin is great, and standeth in need of his gracious remission. W.

VER. 12. He hath.—This may be understood either of God, or of man, who has chosen a state of life. Bert.—Provided he be guided by the fear of the Lord, (C.) all things will turn to his advantage. H.

VER. 13. Dwell. Heb. intimates, “all night” at rest; yet so that he must only enjoy temporal goods like a traveller. Bert.—We ought to look up to heaven as to our true country, (C.) of which Palestine was only a figure. Ps.

15 My eyes are ever towards the Lord: for he shall pluck my feet out of the snare.

16 Look thou upon me, and have mercy on me; for I am alone and poor.

17 The troubles of my heart are multiplied: deliver me from my necessities.

18 See my abjection and my labour; and forgive me all my sins.

19 Consider my enemies, for they are multiplied, and have hated me with an unjust hatred.

20 Keep thou my soul, and deliver me: I shall not be ashamed, for I have hoped in thee.

21 The innocent and the upright have adhered to me: because I have waited on thee.

22 Deliver Israel, O God, from all his tribulations

PSALM XXV.

JUDICA ME DOMINE

David's prayer to God in his distress, to be delivered, that he may come to worship him in his tabernacle.

1 Unto the end. A psalm for David.

JUDGE me, O Lord, for I have walked in my innocence: and I have put my trust in the Lord, and shall not be weakened.

2 Prove me, O Lord, and try me; burn my reins and my heart.

* John xv. 25.

lxviii. M.—The land, is not expressed in Heb. “his seed shall receive (good) for an inheritance.” H.—Five blessings are here promised to those who fear God: instruction, a supply of necessities, a progeny to imitate his virtues, protection, and heaven. W.

VER. 14. Firmament, or strong support. H.—Heb. “the secret of the Lord is for them,” &c. He conceals nothing from his friends. C.—Both these senses are good, (Bert.) and the Heb. words are nearly allied. Robertson.—All who fear God, ought to interest themselves, and pray that he would enlighten the ignorant, and convert sinners. Bert.—The uncertain and hidden things of thy wisdom thou hast made manifest to me. Ps. l. M.

VER. 15. Lord. Our prayers are not heard, because they are not like this: fervent, incessant, and humble. We have all to fear from our passions, which are the most dangerous snares. Bert.

VER. 16. Alone. Desolate, (Ps. xxi. 21.) without any assistant. H.—Such is man destitute of God's grace. W.

VER. 17. Multiplied. Heb. “enlarged.” So in the gradual for the second Sunday of Lent, we read dilatata. Bert.—Afflictions must be endured. W. Sen. ep. 12.

VER. 18. See. The word kuan, “arise,” may be wanting, as the verse should begin with k. (C.) unless it be lost. MS. 2, repeats the former verse, perhaps to fill up the space. Kennicott.—Forgive. Heb. or “bear.” Bert. S. Jer. M.—If the cause be removed, the affliction will have an end. W.

VER. 19. Unjust. Heb. also “cruel,” (H.) or “violent.” But S. Jerom agrees with the Sept. Our spiritual enemies are the most dangerous and unrelenting, and we are too often off our guard. Bert.—The wicked, through hatred of God, (H.) seek to draw others into sin. W.

VER. 20. Soul. David was most concerned for it; (Bert.) and those who sincerely place their confidence in God, will never be confounded. W.

VER. 21. Adhered. Heb. “innocence, &c. have kept me.” C.—Those faithful subjects, who have accompanied me in my flight, stand guard to protect me. Requite them, O Lord, and grant peace to all my people. H.—My example encourages them to follow thy law, and they will be staggered, if thou grant not my request. M.

VER. 22. Deliver. Heb. pede, “redeem.” All the 22 (H.) letters of the alphabet are complete without this supplication for all Israel, or for the Church. W.—It might form a part of the last verse, or belong to the next psalm; unless it be a conclusion like that of Ps. xxxiii. (C.) out of the alphabetical order. Houbigant.—Israel. S. Aug. and some ancient psalters read, “Me, O God of Israel, from all my tribulations.” C.

PSAL. XXV. &c. VER. 1. David. Heb. and the most correct copies of the Sept. &c. have only “Of David.” H.—The Comp. and Ald. edit. add indeed A psalm. But these form no rule, as the Vat. Sept. is allowed to be the best. Bert.—The others may, however, be consulted, as in some instances they may be preferable. H.—This psalm might be composed to counteract the calumnies propagated against David, while he lived among the Philistines; (Theod. Flamin.) or it may contain the sentiments of the captives, as well as the two following canticles. C.—The Church, (S. Aug. &c.) or any afflicted soul, may thus appeal to the justice of God, (Bert.) and particularly the sacred ministers, when they are going to appear before him.—Innocence. Only those whose conscience reproaches them with nothing, can hold this language. God is a just and unerring judge. C.—Weakened. Heb. also “slide,” (Prot.) or “stagger.” Sym. I am confident that my enemies will have no advantage over me. C.

VER. 2. Burn, like gold in the furnace. Bert.—Purify all my affections and

3 For thy mercy is before my eyes: and I am well pleased with thy truth.

4 I have not sat with the council of vanity: neither will I go in with the doers of unjust things.

5 I have hated the assembly of the malignant; and with the wicked I will not sit.

6 I will wash my hands among the innocent: and will compass thy altar, O Lord.

7 That I may hear the voice of thy praise: and tell of all thy wondrous works.

8 I have loved, O Lord, the beauty of thy house; and the place where thy glory dwelleth.

9 Take not away my soul, O God, with the wicked: nor my life with bloody men:

10 In whose hands are iniquities: their right hand is filled with gifts.

11 But as for me, I have walked in my innocence: redeem me, and have mercy on me.

12 My foot hath stood in the direct way: in the churches I will bless thee, O Lord.

thoughts with the fire of divine love. S. Aug. S. Jer.—Make my dispositions known to the world. I have done no one any harm. C.—I take thee for the author of my cause with respect to Saul, whom I have not injured. Still, as I may not be innocent, do thou try me, as thou thinkest proper. W.

VER 3. Truth. Before such a judge, I fear no calumny. I have always endeavoured to imitate these divine perfections. C.—Heb. "I have walked constantly in thy truth," which could not be without loving it. Bert.

VER 4. Council. Heb. "men."—Darkness. Heb. "men of darkness;" which means the wicked, (Bert.) who love darkness. Prot. "dissemblers." H.—The sacred minister ought to avoid evil company. C.—David had often people of this description, like Joab and Abner, in his train; but he did not approve of their conduct. Some would restrain his words to idolaters: but this would make his declaration of little importance to Christians, as many would say the same, though they dare not say that they flee from wicked society. We must also banish all such thoughts as would destroy us. Bert.—David was inspired to speak the sentiments of his soul, and praise his own sincerity more than ordinary men may do. He instructs us to have no society with the conventicles of any false religion. W.

VER 5. Innocent. Heb. "in innocence," avoiding every thing which may defile and render me unfit to approach thy holy altar. Many things (C.) of themselves innocent, (H.) excluded the priests of the old law from officiating, and if they had partaken of any idolatrous sacrifices, they lost their dignity for ever. Ezec. xlv. 12. How much greater ought to be the sanctity of Christian priests! The Jews carefully abstained from eating what the law forbade. Dan. i. 8. Tob. i. 12. David would not sit down to a feast with the proud. Ps. c. 5. It was customary to wash before meat (Mat. xv. 2. and Mar. vii. 3.) and prayer. Aristeus informs us that the Sept. washed their hands every morning, before they began to translate the Bible, to shew what purity of soul was requisite. Pilate used the like ceremony, when he would have no hand in the condemnation of our Saviour; (Matt. xxvii. 24. C.) and thus people declared their innocence. Deut. xxi. 6. M.—People entering the house of God, and priests at the altar, adopt the same symbols of interior purity, and ought to be penetrated with the like sentiments. H.—David opposes the society of the good to that of the wicked, knowing that the former is a great inducement to virtue, and he declares that he will wash or converse with such. Bert.—These words are recited by the priest, to put him in mind of the purity required. Lev. xvi. 4. W.

VER 7. Hear. Heb. with points, "publish." Bert.—S. Jerom agrees with the Sept.—Thy praise. The former word is not expressed in the Vulg. or Heb. (H.) but it is understood; and occurs in some edit. of the Sept. as well as in the Syr. Houbig. &c.—Worldlings come to the assemblies of the faithful, but often without piety or advantage. Priests themselves but too frequently dishonour the altar, which they serve. Bert.—If they were careful to perform their sacred duties well, (H.) and had a sincere love for the spouse of Christ, many profanations would be avoided; (C.) as God suffers no greater injury from any, than from bad ministers. S. Greg. &c. H.—They ought to be recollected, and join mental with vocal prayer in their sacred offices. W.

VER 8. Beauty. The ark. 1 K. iv. 22. Sym. "the palace." C.—Heb. "the dwelling." The psalmist desires to imitate those fervent Levites, who chose always to attend the tabernacle. Deut. xviii. 6. C.—Mekon, when applied to the "dwelling" of God, may be properly rendered a temple, heaven, &c. Deut. xxvi. 15. Bert.—No one who reflects on the blessings dispensed in God's house, can fail to be struck with admiration. W.

VER 9. Take; lit. "destroy," (H.) or suffer me not to be contaminated or lost. W.—Heb. "gather." Prot. or "take not away." Marg. and S. Jer. H.—Heb. may be more expressive, and agrees with the parable, where God orders the cockle to be gathered into bundles, to be burnt. Bert.—Treat me not like the wicked and murderers, who are cut off before their time. C.—David alludes to a future state, as he knew that the wicked were not always punished here. Bert.—God is not in Heb. Sept. or S. Aug. C.—But it is understood. H.

VER 10. Gifts, to bribe; or rather, which the judges have received. Bert. Shochad is always used in a bad sense for "a bribe." C.—Est munus a lingua

PSALM XXVI.

DOMINUS ILLUMINATIO.

David's faith and hope in God.

1 The psalm of David before he was anointed.

THE Lord is my light and my salvation, whom shall I fear?

The Lord is the protector of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?

2 Whilst the wicked draw near against me, to eat my flesh.

My enemies that trouble me, have themselves been weakened, and have fallen.

3 If armies in camp should stand together against me, my heart shall not fear.

If a battle should rise up against me, in this will I be confident.

4 One thing I have asked of the Lord, this will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life.

a manu . . et ab obsequio. S. Jer.—The wicked use their worldly goods to corrupt others. W.—Jugurtha leaving Rome, said, "O venal city." Sallust.

VER 11. Innocence. He opposes the integrity of his proceedings to that of the wicked. C.—Yet still calls for mercy. H.—Every one should strive to be innocent, and to avoid the company of worldlings. W.

VER 12. Direct, (directo.) Prot. "in an even place," (H.) in the court where the Levites sung. Vatab.—I have followed the paths of justice, and hope soon to be able to praise thee in thy temple. C.—These seven last verses are daily recited at Mass. But do we reflect what innocence and fervour are required of the sacred ministers? I cannot assert that my paths have never strayed from the right way. Pardon my transgressions, and enable me henceforth to live so that I may be worthy to sound forth thy praise, and to appear in thy sanctuary. Bert.—Thee. Heb. "the Lord." H.—The psalms of David are now used in every Christian Church. Euthym. M.

PSAL XXVI. &c. VER 1. Anointed. Heb. has only, David. The rest of the title occurs only in some copies of the Sept. (Euseb. C.) and is not of divine authority. Yet if any attention be paid to it, we must suppose that David composed this psalm before his second anointing, as he speaks of great dangers. But this is all uncertain. Bert.—For dangers threatened David even after he had been declared king. H.—Before Samuel anointed him, he was not endued with the spirit of prophecy. See 1 K. xvi. 13. 2 K. ii. 4. and v. 3. C.—Some suppose that he alludes to the entertainment given him by Abimelech, (v. 5 and 12. Theod.) or to that night when, fearless of danger, he took away Saul's cup; (Ferrand) while Abenezra and De Muis rather believe, that he composed this psalm when his people dissuaded him from going out to battle. 2 K. xxi. 17. It expresses the sentiments of the Levites in captivity, (C.) and most beautifully consoles the just in distress. David did not write this for himself alone, but for all future generations. Hence it is not necessary to discover the particular circumstance of his life, to which this and many other psalms allude; nor is there any difficulty in explaining away the various imprecations, as they are not directed against any individual, but relate to all the enemies of the soul; while they foretell what the wicked shall suffer. Bert.—Afraid. "Find one more powerful, and then fear." S. Aug.—God both giveth light and strength, so that no enemy can hurt his servants. Lu. xxi. 15. W.

VER 2. Flesh. This expression marks the fury of his enemies. See Job xix. 22. and xxxi. 31. C.—That. Heb. and Sept. "and my foes." This may denote domestic, and the former word public, enemies. H.—Weakened. Heb. also, "have stumbled." Those who came to take Jesus Christ, verified this prediction. Jo. xviii. 6. C.

VER 3. This; God's protection (H.) and light, (M.) or in the very heat of battle: prelium. Sept. express the Heb. fem. pronoun, as they do with the Vulg. v. 4. unam. There is no neuter in Heb. which commonly uses the feminine, instead. C.—It may be deemed too scrupulous an exactitude, to express this in a version. The word petition may be understood. Bert. M.—The one petition of David comprised every blessing; as he had his mind bent on heaven. D.

VER 4. House; the tabernacle, (H.) or temple, (C.) unless he may rather allude to God's presence and union, or his enjoyment in heaven. Bert.—He had already expressed a similar wish. Ps. xxv. 8. C.—"When we love what God approves, he will surely grant our request. S. Aug.—David esteemed it as a special benefit to be in the Catholic Church, which is the only true house of God. W.—Delight; beauty and sweetness, as the Heb. implies. Many of the ancients read, "the will," voluntatem, with Sixtus V. &c. But the edition of Clem. VIII. agrees with the Heb. and Oriental versions. C.—To comply with God's will, is the only means of arriving at his beatific vision. H.—David was more grieved at being kept at a distance from the tabernacle, than from his own family. He envied the happiness of those who could attend the divine worship. M.

VER 5. Tabernacle; in the Catholic Church, so that the enemy can either not find, or at least cannot hurt, my soul. W.—I hope one day to enjoy rest in the temple. C.—The verbs are in the future, in Heb. both here and in the following verse. But they may be as well explained in the sense of the Vulg. Those who find themselves in danger, must still have recourse to God's presence. (703)

That I may see the delight of the Lord, and may visit his temple.

5 For he hath hidden me in his tabernacle: in the day of evils, he hath protected me in the secret place of his tabernacle.

6 He hath exalted me upon a rock: and now he hath lifted up my head above my enemies.

I have gone round, and have offered up in his tabernacle a sacrifice of jubilation: I will sing, and recite a psalm to the Lord.

7 Hear, O Lord, my voice, with which I have cried to thee: have mercy on me and hear me.

8 My heart hath said to thee: My face hath sought thee: thy face, O Lord, will I still seek.

9 Turn not away thy face from me; decline not in thy wrath from thy servant.

Be thou my helper, forsake me not; do not thou despise me, O God, my Saviour.

10 For my father and my mother have left me: but the Lord hath taken me up.

11 Set me, O Lord, a law in thy way, and guide me in the right path, because of my enemies.

12 Deliver me not over to the will of them that trouble me: for unjust witnesses have risen up against me; and iniquity hath lied to itself.

13 I believe to see the good things of the Lord in the land of the living.

(Bert.) where, as (II.) in the asylum of the tabernacle, (M.) or of the temple, they will be protected. C.—God rewards those with glory in death, who have suffered for his name. W.

VER. 6. Round. Heb. "my enemies around." But the Sept. understand it of David, (Bert.) or of the priest, who poured the blood of the victims on different sides of the altar. H.—Jubilation: singing and music, which are styled the fruit, or cakes of the lips. Is. lvii. 19. Oa. xiv. 3. C.—David diligently recounted God's benefits, with all his heart and voice. W.—He offered sacrifices by ministry of the priests, on the altar of holocausts, which was not in, but before, the tabernacle. M.

VER. 7. To thee, is understood in Heb. and the Rom. Sept. H.

VER. 8. Face hath. Heb. pointed, "faces seek ye." But Sept. S. Jer. Chal. &c. take no notice of these points; and even Prot. marg. has, "My heart said unto thee, Let my face seek thy face;" (Bert.) though in the text they derange the words, and add, "When thou saidst, Seek ye my face, my heart said," &c. H.—Seek. "I have sought for no reward besides thee." S. Aug.—I have earnestly desired to see thee face to face. 1 Cor. xiii. 12. W.

VER. 9. Decline not. Heb. "put not away." Prot. But the Vulg. seems preferable.—Forsake. Sept. (Compl. and Ald.) μὴ ἀποστροφῆς "send me not to the crows," an expression borrowed from profane authors, who said "to the crows," when they held a person in sovereign contempt. Theod. Bert.—Grave substitutes this word, though the Alex. and Vat. MSS. agree with us. H.—There seems to be a gradation in the condition of the reprobate here observed. God hides his countenance, withdraws, abandons, and despises them; and they only perceive their misery, when it is too late. Bert.—David implores aid in this life, and deprecates the divine anger, looking upon himself as an orphan, whom God takes under his special protection. W.

VER. 10. For. Heb. "Thought." David's parents fled to him. 1 K. xxii. 1. Yet they had made small account of him, till Samuel called him forth. 1 K. xvi. 10. The father-in-law and mother-in-law may be also designated. When a saint is deprived of every human advantage, he may still say with S. Aug. "They have taken from me what God gave, but they have not taken God from me, who gave those things." Bert.—Though I am like an orphan, I hope for all good from God, my father. Is. lxiii. 16. C.

VER. 11. Enemies, who strive to pervert me. Keep me in the right path, which thou hast already made known to me. W.

VER. 12. Will. Lit. "souls." H.—Some ancient copies have, "the hands."—Unjust. Heb. "false." H.—To itself, ought not to be urged no more than eat sibi, vade tibi. Gen. xii. 1. Cant. i. 7. C.—It is a Heb. idiom. H.—Many find fault with the Sept. and Vulg. in this place, but without reason; and they do not agree in their versions. Sym. and S. Jer. come near to us. Puach means to breathe, or entangle; and our version intimates, that "iniquity has entangled itself;" viphceach chamas, "and open lying." S. Jer. Bert.—The accusers of Susanna, and of our Saviour, could not agree in their testimony. The Chaldees continually calumniated the captives. Isai. lii. 4. Jer. l. 33. C.—Worldlings still do the same, (Matt. v.) delighting in lies, which will prove their own ruin. W.

VER. 13. I. Heb. "But I believe that I shall see." S. Jer.—"I had fainted, unless," &c. Prot. H.—Living, or of promise, as this country is often designated, (Muis. T. Du Pin. C.) or rather in heaven, (Bert. M.) where death shall be no more. H.—The Fathers explain it in this more elevated sense. C.—The just are comforted by God, and by the hope of heavenly rewards. W.—

14 Expect the Lord, do manfully, and let thy heart take courage, and wait thou for the Lord.

PSALM XXVII.

AD TE DOMINE CLAMABO.

David's prayer that his enemies may not prevail over him

1 A psalm for David himself.

UNTIL thee will I cry, O Lord: O my God, be not thou silent to me; lest if thou be silent to me, I become like them that go down into the pit.

2 Hear, O Lord, the voice of my supplication, when I pray to thee; when I lift up my hands to thy holy temple.

3 Draw me not away together with the wicked; and with the workers of iniquity destroy me not:

Who speak peace with their neighbour, but evils are in their hearts.

4 Give them according to their works, and according to the wickedness of their inventions.

According to the works of their hands give thou to them: render to them their reward.

5 Because they have not understood the works of the Lord, and the operations of his hands; thou shalt destroy them, and shalt not build them up.

6 Blessed be the Lord, for he hath heard the voice of my supplication.

7 The Lord is my helper and my protector: in him hath my heart confided, and I have been helped.

The land of the living may be opposed to the grave, where none can worship God. H.

VER. 14. And let. Heb. "and he will strengthen my heart, and wait" (instead of and, Prot. put, without reason, "Wait, I say) on the Lord." We must do our utmost: yet all our strength must come from God. H.—The prophet encourageth his own soul to exercise patience, fortitude, and longanimity (Pa. xxx. W.) unto the end. M.

PSAL. XXVII. &c. VER. 1. Himself. The Heb. and Sept. (Rom. and Alex.) have simply "of David."—Ledavid. H.—The psalm appears to be a sequel of the preceding, and we may adopt the rule of the Jews, who refer the psalms which have no particular title, to the same author and events as those which go before. It may relate to the captives, (C.) or to David under persecution, though the Fathers explain it of Christ suffering, &c. and rising again.—My God. Heb. "rock." This term is so often applied to God, that it might be added to his other ten titles. Bert.—Lest . . . to me, is not in the Rom. psalter. Euthym. &c.—Pit, grave; though it also denote "a prison." C.—S. Jerom has "be not deaf to me," &c. M.

VER. 2. Pray. Heb. "cry . . . to the recess of thy sanctuary, (II.) or to thy oracle." Sept. place the whole for a part. The tabernacle was often styled temple. 1 K. i. 9. To lift up the hands was customary in prayer, (1 Tim. ii. 8. Lam. iii. 41. Bert.) to testify whence our aid must come. H.—The Jews turned towards the holy place in prayer, (3 K. viii. 48. Eze. viii. 16.) even after the temple was destroyed. C.

VER. 3. Draw. Sixtus V. reads tradas, "deliver," &c. But the present trahas, is more conformable to the original. C.—Sept. add, destroy me not, as the Heb. might also signify. Suffer me not to follow bad example. They often paraphrase, to render the text clearer. A similar petition occurs, Pa. xxv. 9.—Hearts. Such double dealers are abominable, and quite opposite to the candour of a Christian. Jo. i. 47. and 1 Pet. ii. 22. Bert.—The psalmist prays that God would comfort and support him, as he knew that God tempteth no man. Jam. i. W.

VER. 4. Reward. He speaks prophetically, (v. 5.) or of spiritual enemies. Bert.—"If they do not understand by kindness, make them understand by torments." S. Jer.—He alludes to the calamities of the Babylonians, who had made such havoc, (C.) as well as to that of all who persecuted or rebelled against David. H.—His zeal prompts him to approve of their chastisement. W.

VER. 5. The works, (in opera.) The prep. seems redundant, though (II.) it was probably in both places, to insinuate that attention is requisite. The Jews perished, because they would not know the things that were for their peace. Lu. xiv. 42. Their city in ruins, is an emblem of the sinner's utter destruction.—Thou shalt. Heb. "he will." Bert.—The Chaldees gave supreme honour to idols, neglecting the true God. Their punishment was at hand. Kimchi. C.—Ignorance will prove no excuse, when people might be informed. God will save none, without their co-operation. W.

VER. 6. Blessed. This energetic epithet is generally applied to the Lord, and as it is also given to Christ, he must be true God. Rom. ix. 5. &c.

VER. 7. Protector. Heb. "buckler," to defend me from external enemies, as his grace enables me to do good.—Flesh. Heb. "heart." But joy would manifest itself over the whole body: (Prov. xvii. 22. Bert.) and the Syr. agrees with the Sept. "My flesh shall bud forth, and I shall sing his praises in glory." C.—Will. Heb. "candle," which was dictated by the will. It is suspected that the Sept. read differently. Only the saints taste true joy, so that they

And my flesh hath flourished again, and with my will I will give praise to him.

8 The Lord is the strength of his people, and the protector of the salvation of his anointed.

9 Save, O Lord, thy people, and bless thy inheritance: and rule them and exalt them for ever.

PSALM XXVIII.

AFFERTE DOMINO.

An invitation to glorify God, with a commemoration of his mighty works.

1 A psalm for David, at the finishing of the tabernacle. BRING to the Lord, O ye children of God: bring to the Lord the offspring of rams.

2 Bring to the Lord glory and honour; bring to the Lord glory to his name: adore ye the Lord in his holy court.

alone might be styled sensual. But this worldlings cannot understand. 1 Cor. ii. 14. Bert.—The Fathers explain this text of Christ's, or of our resurrection, (S. Jer. &c.) which was prefigured by the return from captivity. C.—Interior comfort causes the body to be refreshed; and the psalmist gladly (W.) expresses his gratitude. H.

VER. 8. People; (hox lamu) instead of which the Heb. has lamo, "their strength;" though the people of God had not been mentioned. S. Jerom translates, "the Lord is my strength." Houbigant shews that the Vulg. is most accurate. Bert.—Prot. marg. "his strength."—Salvation. Lit. "salvations," as he had many times protected David, as well as (H.) the priests and prophets, and all the chosen people. 1 Pet. ii. 9. C.—God causeth the good endeavours of the King for his subjects to prosper. W.

VER. 9. Exalt, or carry on thy shoulders, like the good shepherd. Lu. xv. 5. Restore thy people to prosperity. This was the wish of the carnal Jews. The Christian must raise his thoughts higher. C.—S. Jerom and Prot. "feed . . and lift them up for ever." Here the progress of justification appears. H.—God redeems and conducts us to eternal bliss. Bert.—As in Ps. xix. &c. the subjects pray for their superiors, so here the ruler offers up his petitions for those committed to his charge. W.

PSAL XXVIII &c. VER. 1, &c. Finishing. Sept. ἡκόσω or ἡκόσῳ, may also signify "the going out;" (H.) as if the sacred ministers exhorted their successors to perform their duty in the ensuing week, or on the last day of the feast of tabernacles. Lev. xxiii. 36. C.—Heb. has only "A canticle of David," (H.) and the rest was not in the Hexapla in the time of Theodoret, so that many pay no attention to it. The author seems to have supposed that the psalm was composed when David had finished the tabernacle, on Sion. C. 2 K. vi. and 1 Par. xvi.—But the psalmist had in view things of far greater importance, the propagation of Christianity among many great potentates.—W.—The Fathers explain it in this sense, though it may literally allude (C.) to the storm procured by the prayer of Elias, 3 K. xviii. 1. 41. H.—It might be composed in a thunder-storm, and used on similar occasions, (Muis) when a person had to go from home. H.—The seven voices may allude to the seven sacraments, or trumpets. Apoc. x. 3. Bert.—God. Sept. seemed to have read Aleim, or they have taken elim in the same sense, as it signifies "the mighty" as well as "rams." On account of this ambiguity, a double translation is given either by the Sept. or rather by some later writer, who may have inserted the explanation, O ye children of God, bring ye to the Lord; (H.) which has crept from the margin into the text. Amama.—It is marked as superfluous by Grabe, (H.) not being found in the best Greek copies; or at least having an obel, (Euseb.) to insinuate that it was not in Heb. in which state it appears in the Gal. Psalter, published in S. Jerom's works.—C.—It is not contrary to the original, though more explicit, (Bert.) as the address is made to all the faithful, (M.) or to the priests and nobility. H.—The apostles are styled rams, because they beat down error with the two Testaments; whence bishops' mitres have two horns. Lombard. Amama.—"Give praise to the Lord, ye troops of angels; render to the Lord glory and strength." Chal. C.—Be grateful for the favours which are here recounted. W.—Most people now translate, "sons of the mighty." Yet S. Jerom and Houbigant have, "offspring of rams;" filios arietum. Bring lambs to the Lord, as the original may certainly mean; though many who are attached to the Heb. allow also sons of God. Bert.—Montfaucon says that Origen marked with a lemniscus, what he judged "a better reading;" and thus obelized the first of these versions, and added the second with an asterisk. This liberty has been attended both with good and bad consequences. Ken.

VER. 2. Honour. Heb. "strength," which we must acknowledge. H.—The first design of sacrifice is to adore God in spirit. W.—Holy court. Heb. "in the holy beauty." 1 Par. xvi. 29. Even the priests were obliged to remain in the court, where they adored God, as sitting upon the Cherubim, in the most holy place (C.) in the Catholic Church. W.—External worship must be observed. Bert.

VER. 3. Voice. Separating the waters from the earth at the beginning, as the six other voices may denote the other works of the creation; or all these voices may signify the various effects of thunder, or may allude to the terrors preceding the last judgment, (Apoc. x. 3.) or attending the establishment and liberation of the Jewish and Christian Churches. The first voice was heard when Jesus was baptized, (Mat. iii. 17.) as the rest may intimate the institution and efficacy of the other sacraments. It is evident that something posterior to the reign of David is prefigured; (Bert.) and the Fathers have generally understood the psalm of the propagation of the gospel by the apostles, two of whom are styled sons of thunder. Mark iii. 17. C.—The psalmist speaks of greater things than attended the translation of the ark. He represents our Saviour

3 The voice of the Lord is upon the waters; the God of majesty hath thundered, The Lord is upon many waters.

4 The voice of the Lord is in power; the voice of the Lord in magnificence.

5 The voice of the Lord breaketh the cedars: yea, the Lord shall break the cedars of Libanus.

6 And shall reduce them to pieces, as a calf of Libanus, and as the beloved son of unicorns.

7 The voice of the Lord divideth the flame of fire:

8 The voice of the Lord shaketh the desert: and the Lord shall shake the desert of Cades.

9 The voice of the Lord prepareth the stags: and he will discover the thick woods: and in his temple all shall speak his glory.

preaching with great power and majesty, (Mat. vii. 29.) and subjecting the most powerful monarchs to his dominion. W.—Thunder is often styled the voice of God, and is occasioned by the collision of the clouds, (H.) which Moses calls the waters above. S. Bas. C.

VER. 4. Power and magnificence. The sacraments of confirmation, and the blessed Eucharist, or the wonderful propagation of the Church, amid violent persecutions. Bert.

VER. 5. Libanus. Which were the most famous. H.—Storms often tear up trees by the roots. C.—The effects of the gospel and of penance, may be described, or the terrors of the last day, when Jesus Christ will destroy the proud. Bert.

VER. 6. Shall reduce them to pieces, &c.—In Hebrew, shall make them to skip like a calf. The psalmist here describes the effects of thunder, (which he calls the voice of the Lord) which sometimes breaks down the tallest and strongest trees; and makes their broken branches skip, &c. All this is to be understood mystically, of the powerful voice of God's word in his Church; which has broke the pride of the great ones of this world, and brought many of them meekly and joyfully to submit their necks to the sweet yoke of Christ. Ch.—Calf, or "branch," as the Greek word also implies. But Heb. seems more naturally to signify "a calf; Libanus and Sirion, (or Sarion. Deut. iii. 9.) as the son of the unicorn." These two mountains are represented jolting together. C.—The violence of an earthquake has sometimes produced such effects. Pliny ii. 83. See Ps. cxiii. 4. Judg. v. 5. Hab. iii. 10. C.—And as. The construction of dilectus, seems rather to make this another nominative, "the Lord shall, &c. and the beloved, (H.) the Messias, like the son of the unicorn," shall perform the like wonders. It seems probable that the Sept. have read Jeshurun for Sirion, (Bert.) or viseron, instead of usurion; as it would only be a little transposed. H.—Jeshurun is a title of Israel, (Deut. xxxii. 15. and xxxiii. 5. 26.) who was a figure of the Messias, the beloved of God. Bert.—"And he will scatter them as a calf would do; Libanus and Sirion, are in motion, like the son of the rhinoceros." S. Jer. H. The most powerful submit to Christ, who works these wonders. W.

VER. 7. Fire. Lightning, which deals destruction around. C.—The Holy Ghost appeared in the form of parted tongues of fire, to enable the apostles to convert the desert of the Gentile world, and the Jews, represented by the desert of Cades, (W.) which was near their country, (H.) on the frontiers of Idumea. Num. xiii. 27. C.—Holy orders were instituted by Christ, to confer grace to the sacred ministers, according to their different stations or exigencies; (Bert.) or extreme unction, which prepares the soul for her separation from the body, may be here meant, if we follow the usual disposition of the sacraments; as the following sentence may allude to holy orders, which shakes or causes the desert to fructify, (H.) unless these words be rather applicable to matrimony. Bert.—Shaketh and shakes. S. Jer. has parturire faciens, making the desert bring forth." Chal. "frightens the serpents." All nature is alarmed at the sound of thunder. H.—The deserts then appear most terrible. C.

VER. 9. Prepareth. Heb. "delivereth," as a midwife (S. Jer. 5. Edit. Aquila) "maketh the hinds to calve;" (Prot. H.) or "to leap, (from eul. Bert.) or frighteneth." Hinds are supposed to bring forth with great difficulty. But the reverse seems to be the case. S. Chrys. in Job. xxxix. 3. C.—They are very swift, and trample serpents under their feet, nature having given them this power. S. Jer. Pliny vii. 32. The text may be understood of the last sacrament, which prepares us for our passage; (Bert.) or of matrimony, by means of which the world is peopled with rational beings, whose duty it is to glorify God in his temple. H.—This is also the effect of grace, and of the preaching of the gospel, (Bert.) which inspires people with a desire of running on in the way of perfection. Christ explains to them hidden mysteries in his Church, to which he brings multitudes, like the waters, ruling over them, and enabling them to overcome all temptations, till he crown his elect with eternal peace. W.—Glory. Running thither through fear, or to thank God for rain after a drought.

VER. 10. Duell. Chal. explains this of the deluge, which continued a long while upon the earth, to punish mankind. Heb. may also signify, "the Lord sitteth upon the flood," or clouds, as the Lord of nature.—Strength, or abundant rain, (Jos. xxxviii. 6.) with all other blessings; (C.) making his people as terrible to their enemies as the storm which has been described. M.

PSAL XXIX. &c. VER. 1. Dedication, when David sung after he had (H.) built a magnificent palace. 2 K. v. W.—David's, ledavid, or "to David," which some rather join with Psalm, (Muis) and explain the house of the tabernacle or temple; though it seems more probably to relate to the altar, which David erected, after the pestilence (C.) had destroyed 70,000. 2 K. xxiv. 25. There seems to be nothing respecting a dedication in the psalm; whence we may cor.

10 The Lord maketh the flood to dwell: and the Lord shall sit king for ever.

The Lord will give strength to his people: the Lord will bless his people with peace.

PSALM XXIX.

EXALTABO TE DOMINE.

David praiseth God for his deliverance, and his merciful dealings with him.

1 A psalm of a canticle, at the dedication of David's house.

2 I WILL extol thee, O Lord, for thou hast upheld me: and hast not made my enemies to rejoice over me.

3 O Lord, my God, I have cried to thee, and thou hast healed me.

4 Thou hast brought forth, O Lord, my soul from hell: thou hast saved me from them that go down into the pit.

5 Sing to the Lord, O ye his saints: and give praise to the memory of his holiness.

6 For wrath is in his indignation; and life in his good will.

In the evening, weeping shall have place, and in the morning, gladness.

7 And in my abundance I said: I shall never be moved.

8 O Lord, in thy favour, thou gavest strength to my beauty.

jecture that the title is not very authentic. The Greeks (Bert.) prefixed "unto the end," in the Rom. Sept. but not Grabe's, &c. H.—The Rabbins inform us that this psalm was used when people brought their first fruits to the temple, and that it will be sung at the dedication of the temple, which they expect the Messias will erect. Selden. Syn. iii. 13.—The Fathers explain it of Christ's resurrection. C.—It may be put in the mouth of a just man leaving this world. Bert.—The title of Psalm, most properly belongs to those which were played upon instruments; as a canticle refers to vocal music. When the instrument preceded, it was called A psalm of a canticle; as a canticle of a psalm intimated that man gave out the psalm, and instruments followed. W.—These distinctions are given by S. Chrys. &c. M.

VER. 2. Extol. Or publish thy great goodness and power, (H.) in the same sense as we say Hallowed be thy name. Bert.—Though God can receive no increase of glory, we must shew our gratitude. W.—Me. Thou hast not suffered my people to be wholly destroyed, nor myself to perish in consequence of my vain curiosity. C.—David sings this psalm in thanksgiving for his many deliverances. W.

VER. 3. Healed me. I expected to die every moment, and I had made choice of the scourge of pestilence, that I might not be more screened than my subjects, 2 K. xxiv. 13. C.

VER. 4. Hell. Preserving me from great dangers of sinning, (W.) or from death.—Saved. Heb. "granted me life." This may all be explained of Christ's resurrection. C.

VER. 5. Saints. Heb. "who have obtained mercy." Priests and faithful people come to return thanks, because God has turned away the scourge. C.—Memory, or name. Ex. iii. 15. C.—It is from God, and not from ourselves, that holiness comes. W.

VER. 6. Wrath, which is a short fury. M. Isai. liv. 7.—Heb. "momentary is his indignation;" or rather, "from his indignation comes destruction." roga, as the Sept. constantly (H.) agree. Job xx. 5. Is. xxviii. 12. &c. C.—"The miseries which are inflicted, are in consequence of his indignation." Prin. dis. Bert.—We are not miserable unless we have deserved it. S. Aug.—Even in chastising, God considers our welfare. W.—He takes no pleasure in our torments, but delights to crown us with life and happiness. H.—Eternal joys are the fruits of the short sorrows of this world, (Bert.) which is represented as one night or evening. H.—A few moments ago Jerusalem expected nothing but destruction. Thus the apostles grieved till Christ rose again; (C.) and the life of the just is a constant vicissitude of sorrow and of comfort. W.

VER. 7. Moved. David thought himself invincible; and, out of vanity, ordered his subjects to be numbered. God shewed his displeasure only for three days, and all was in confusion, v. 8. C.—Though we may imagine that we are firmly established, we must acknowledge that all our strength is derived from God, who sometimes leaves us to experience our own weakness. W.

VER. 8. Beauty. So Sept. and Syr. have read ledre, (C.) instead of leharmi, "my mountain," Zion, which David had taken from the Jebusites. The sense is much the same, though the reading of the Sept. seem more natural. Symmachus has followed another copy. Bert.—"Thou hast given strength to my first father." C.—The present Heb. is rejected by Houbigant, (Bert.) though it be conformable to Aquila. S. Jerom. &c. How necessary is it for us to be convinced, that all we have is the gift of God! H.—In prosperity man is too apt to give way to presumption. Bert.—David had yielded to this temptation, not Thou turnedst away thy face from me, and I became troubled.

9 To thee, O Lord, will I cry; and I will make supplication to my God.

10 What profit is there in my blood, whilst I go down to corruption?

Shall dust confess to thee, or declare thy truth?

11 The Lord hath heard, and hath had mercy on me: the Lord became my helper.

12 Thou hast turned for me my mourning into joy: thou hast cut my sackcloth, and hast compassed me with gladness:

13 To the end that my glory may sing to thee, and I may not regret: O Lord, my God, I will give praise to thee for ever.

PSALM XXX.

IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.

A prayer of a just man under affliction.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David in an ecstasy.

2 IN thee, O Lord, have I hoped, let me never be confounded: deliver me in thy justice.

3 Bow down thy ear to me: make haste to deliver me.

Be thou unto me a God, a protector, and a house of refuge, to save me.

4 For thou art my strength and my refuge; and for thy name's sake thou wilt lead me, and nourish me.

being sufficiently aware how jealous God is of his rights. C.—He confesses this mistake. Heb. "I was terrified." M.

VER. 9. Will I. We must not cease to pray, (W.) as we are always beset with enemies. H.—This text may be explained, "I prayed," that I might suffer instead of my people. 4 K. xxiv. 17. C.—But here the prophet seems rather to beg that he may not die, in order that he may publish God's praises. H.

VER. 10. Profit. The wicked on his death bed, cannot pray thus, as the justice of God is interested to punish his crimes, and to prevent their continuance. After death there is no merit; so that we ought to make good use of our time. Bert.—Corruption. The Fathers explain this of Jesus Christ. What good will my death procure, if I do not rise again? Orig. S. Jer.—Truth. See Ps. lxxxvii. 11. Bar. ii. 27. C.—The dead cannot make their voice heard in this world, though they may praise God in the other. M.

VER. 11. The Lord. Heb. points determine, "Lord, hear," &c. But the Greek interpreters agree with the Vulg. which seems better. Bert.—S. Jerom. however, makes this a prayer. "Hear," &c. H.

VER. 12. Joy. When thou orderest the angel. 2 K. xxiv. 16. C.—Sackcloth, of human nature, which was cut, and the price of our redemption came forth. S. Aug. S. Jer.—Thou hast changed my mourning weeds for robes of joy. D.

VER. 13. Regret. Or be filled with grief, compungar. H.—Heb. "that glory may sing thee, (or thy praise) and may not be silent." S. Jer. Sym. H.—Glory often signifies the tongue. D.—My is added, to shew that this was David's glory. (H.) who considered God in all events. Bert.—Prot. supply the word my. H.—Chal. "that the great ones of the world may praise thee incessantly."—Ever. In this my happy change. W.—Those who suppose that David sung this, when he purified his house from the abominations of Absalom, explain his illness (v. 2.) to mean the anxiety caused by that revolt. 2 K. xvi. 21. Bossuet. C.—He gives thanks for the favour which God had shewn him on that, or on any other occasion. H.—He might consider this purifying as a sort of dedication, as it was customary to dedicate even private houses. Deut. xx. 5. C.

PSAL. XXX. &c. VER. 1. Ecstasy. This word is not in Heb. nor in some of the best Greek copies. Theod.—It seems to be taken from v. 23. (C.) and intimates that the just may recite this psalm in the latter times, (W.) when they shall be in the greatest perplexity. H.—David composed it when he was obliged to flee from court, (1 K. xix. 1. and xxvii. 1. C.) or in the desert of Maon, seeing himself in the most imminent danger; 1 K. xxiii. 25. Kimchi. Du Pin) though some refer this psalm to the conspiracy of Absalom, (Theod. M.) or to the unprepared fall of David, (Euseb.) or to the captives. S. Chrys.—Our Saviour repeated part of v. 6. upon the cross; and he may perhaps be the object of the whole psalm. The Church prescribes only the six first verses to be recited at Complin. Bert.

VER. 2. Justice. Sym. "mercy." Thou art the judge between us. C.—How grievously soever I may be afflicted, yet I trust in thee. W.—"I fear that confusion which lasts for ever." S. Aug. D.

VER. 3. A God. Heb. "a rock of strength." Sept. "a God who holdeth his shield over me," brapaxerthn. H.—Refuge. Heb. "fortress." C.

VER. 4. Nourish. Heb. guide. H.—Sym. "take care of me." C.

VER. 5. Snare. The order to appear at court, after Saul had manifested his ill-will, could be considered in no other light.

VER. 6. Spirit. Heb. ruach. Our Saviour determines the signification of this word, and shews that the saints of the Old Testament believed that the soul

5 Thou wilt bring me out of this snare, which they have hidden for me: for thou art my protector.

6 *Into thy hands I commend my spirit: thou hast redeemed me, O Lord, the God of truth.

7 Thou hast hated them that regard vanities to no purpose.

But I have hoped in the Lord: 8 I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy.

For thou hast regarded my humility; thou hast saved my soul out of distresses.

9 And thou hast not shut me up in the hands of the enemy: thou hast set my feet in a spacious place.

10 Have mercy on me, O God, for I am afflicted: my eye is troubled with wrath, my soul, and my belly:

11 For my life is wasted with grief: and my years in sighs.

My strength is weakened through poverty: and my bones are disturbed.

12 I am become a reproach among all my enemies, and very much to my neighbours, and a fear to my acquaintance.

They that saw without, fled from me. 13 I am forgotten as one dead from the heart.

I am become as a vessel that is destroyed. 14 For I have heard the blame of many that dwell round about.

* Luke xxiii. 46.

survived after its separation from the body, which some commentators have unguardedly said could not be clearly proved. This text may be applicable both to David and to Jesus Christ in a literal sense, as nothing contradictory would ensue, no more than from the prediction, out of Egypt I have called my son, being verified both in the Israelites and in the Messiah; as both may truly be styled sons of God, though in a different sense. It is not so with that other prophecy, Behold a virgin, &c. which some say related both to the wife of the prophet and to the blessed Virgin: which cannot be, as they would not both have children, and still remain virgins. When two literal senses are admitted, they must not be contradictory. The verb is here in the future, both in Heb. Sept. and in the common Greek of the New Testament; (Lu. xxiii. 46.) though some MSS. of the latter have the present tense, which is adopted by Prot. &c. Bert.—David commits his cause to God, being convinced that his promises would not be in vain. S. Stephen says in like manner, Lord receive my spirit; (Acts vii. 58.) and "the saints use this prayer when they leave the body," (S. Jer. C.) as well as on any other important occasion, particularly when they receive the holy sacrament. W.—Redeemed, by freeing me from many dangers. The resurrection of Christ might be called a redemption: for which he had paid the price. Bert.

VER. 7. Vanities. Idols. (C.) superstitious practices, (Hammond) and lies. It may refer to Saul, who performed his promises so ill, and neglected the laws which he had made against witches. C.—Prot. "I have hated them that regard lying vanities." H.—The ancient interpreters, with S. Jerom, seem not to have seen the i, which changes the second into the first person, though here it would be less agreeable to the context. This i would appear unnecessary, if the present Heb. were correct. Bert. Houbig.

VER. 8. Humility. Heb. "affliction, thou hast known the tribulations of my soul." S. Jer. H.—Thou hast often rescued me from my enemies; and canst thou behold my present distress without pity? C.—When God knows his friend to be in misery, he does not fail to relieve him. Bert.

VER. 9. Place. The psalms were commonly composed after the danger was over. David had escaped the lance and the servants of Saul. C.

VER. 10. Belly, or entrails. M. Lam. i. 20. Eccli. ii. 29. H.—David was filled with indignation at the conduct of his enemies. C.—Both soul and body felt the effects of his great sorrow. (H.) which pervaded every part. W.

VER. 11. Poverty. Sept. have read ani instead of haoni, "my iniquity," which seems less accurate, as David had not offended Saul. Sym. has "malice," (C.) or "ill-treatment," adversus. H.—We may form some judgment of David's distress, from his being obliged to eat the consecrated bread at Nob. C.—Yet without making any change in the Heb. we may explain it in the sense of the Vulg. as ave signifies to be "bent down" Bert.—"Chastisements waste my strength." Pr. disc.—Jesus was a man of sorrows. Bert.

VER. 12. Among. Lit. "above;" super. H.—Houbigant would exchange i for me in Heb. "to all," &c. which seems more agreeable to the sequel, and does not contradict the Vulg. Bert.—David complains that none of his enemies were treated so severely as himself, (H.) though they were very wicked. M.—They all looked upon him with disdain, and even his friends fled from him. This is the picture of the world. A man fallen into distress is an object of general contempt. C.—Yet we ought rather to remember that such a one is sacred: macra res est miser; and that he ought to excite our compassion. H.—Fear. People are afraid to have it known that they were ever acquainted with me,

While they assembled together against me, they consulted to take away my life.

15 But I have put my trust in thee, O Lord: I said: Thou art my God. 16 My lots are in thy hands.

Deliver me out of the hands of my enemies; and from them that persecute me.

17 Make thy face to shine upon thy servant; save me in thy mercy.

18 Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I have called upon thee.

Let the wicked be ashamed, and be brought down to hell. 19 Let deceitful lips be made dumb;

Which speak iniquity against the just, with pride and abuse.

20 O how great is the multitude of thy sweetness, O Lord, which thou hast hidden for them that fear thee!

Which thou hast wrought for them that hope in thee, in the sight of the sons of men.

21 Thou shalt hide them in the secret of thy face, from the disturbance of men.

Thou shalt protect them in thy tabernacle, from the contradiction of tongues.

22 Blessed be the Lord, for he hath shewn his wonderful mercy to me in a fortified city.

23 But I said in the excess of my mind: I am cast away from before thy eyes.

(C.) lest they should be involved in my misery. H.—My friends dare not converse with me. W.

Si malè res cedit, superest tibi nullus amicus:

Omnia fortuna sunt inimica malis.—Lucian Anthol.

If fortune frown, no friend dares shew his face, All flee the wretched, and abhor their place.

VER. 13. Heart, past recovery. Prot. "dead man out of mind." H.—Vessel means, "any thing." C.—A broken pot is thrown away. M.

VER. 14. About. They blame me to my face. Heb. "fear on every side." H.—But magor signifies also "dwelling," as well as "fear;" and this dread arose only from the multitude of enemies. Bert.—Life. I was proscribed by Saul, (1 K. xix. 1. H.) and they were only solicitous how to destroy me. C.—They assembled to talk about my pretended (H.) faults, and to contrive my ruin. Jer. xx. 10. M.

VER. 16. Lots. Sept. Rom. αἵροι, as the same word, hittotai is rendered, Judg. xxi. 22. Others explain "times," with the Rom. Psalter, &c. in the same sense, to denote (Bert.) that all the vicissitudes of life, both prosperity and adversity, are at God's disposal. Theod.—If he protect me, all my enemies will rage in vain. C.

VER. 17. Shine propitiously, so as to free me from this storm. C.—Make me acquainted with the right path, and deliver me. W.

VER. 18. Brought. Prot. "be silent in the grave," (H.) or "in hell." This is a prediction. When I shall ascend the throne, they will be covered with shame. C.—Let them enter into themselves before they die. H.—Houbigant thinks that the Heb. had formerly, "let them be silent, and descend into the grave;" which seems judicious. David inveighs against his spiritual enemies, and against manifest impiety. Bert.

VER. 19. Iniquity. Heb. "harsh things;" calumnies. C.—Abuse. Sept. ἔξουθενάει, as if they "made nothing" of the just. H.—They seem to acknowledge no superior, and abuse their power. W.

VER. 20. Men. Thou comfortest thy servants internally, and often manifestest thy protection. H.—This thou wilt do when it is expedient, though the reward of the just in this life is generally hidden. They are, nevertheless, in great esteem with thee. W.

VER. 21. Face. The malice of the wicked has its limits; while God defends his servants, admitting them as it were into his own presence and tabernacle, where none dare assault them. The Eastern princes did not allow any, but their great favourites, to come into their presence. C. Est. v. and xv. H.—Disturbance. Chal. "troops of the strong." Heb. "From the pride or vexations." God will protect his friends, both from an open attack and from malicious speeches.—Thy is not expressed in Heb. Bert.—"from the harshness of the great ones thou wilt protect them in the shade, from the contradiction of tongues." S. Jer.—How shall we avoid the danger of being seduced by contradictory teachers, unless we have recourse to the Catholic Church? Tu curae ad Eccles. Cath. d. protegeris; &c. S. Aug. H.—Those who are united to God by contemplation and love, cannot be disturbed by men. Bellar. M.

VER. 22. In a. Sym. "as in a city shut up" with fortifications. C.—As seems to be understood, though some explain this of Ceila, (Bert.) or of Siceleg, which had been given to David for a retreat. He here apologizes for having recourse to an infidel. C.

Therefore thou hast heard the voice of my prayer, when I cried to thee.

24 O love the Lord, all ye his saints: for the Lord will require truth, and will repay them abundantly that act proudly.

25 Do ye manfully, and let your heart be strengthened, all ye that hope in the Lord.

PSALM XXXI.

BEATI QUORUM.

The second penitential psalm.

1 To David himself, understanding.

BLESSED *are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

2 Blessed is the man to whom the Lord hath not imputed sin, and in whose spirit there is no guile.

3 Because I was silent, my bones grew old; whilst I cried out all the day long.

* Rom. iv. 7.

VER. 23. Excess. Sept. "in my ecstasy." Heb. "haste." Prot. "consternation." Sym. H.—In sudden danger I exclaimed that all was lost; but God presently relieved me. Thus He prepared David for his exalted station; having taught him by affliction, to have pity on others. C.—He experienced for a moment a sort of diffidence, before he had time to reflect. But he presently turned towards God. A Protestant commentator, who, in general, is very guarded in his expressions, and who applies all this psalm to the Messiah, here falls into a horrible mistake, which he seems to have borrowed from Calvin: "The Messiah," he says, "was to experience once, what the damned will feel for ever. For the punishment of the damned properly consists in the consternation and grief which they will feel, to see themselves separated for ever from the sight of God." He refutes himself, by saying that Jesus Christ shewed us how to pray, when we are abandoned in like manner. Does any one experience here the torment of the damned? or could Jesus be ever the object of God's hatred? It would have sufficed to say that he was destitute of all exterior succour, and internally felt those torments which the gospel mentions. Bert.—Eyes. This he spoke in great agony of mind, which he would afterwards have recalled, like holy Job. C. iii. and xlii. W.

VER. 24. Saints. Heb. "merciful ones;" Assideans, priests, &c.—Truth. Heb. "will preserve the true;" (C.) or, "will observe the faithful." Bert.—Abundantly. Sept. "that act with great pride," as S. Aug. reads, and as Heb. and Vulg. may be rendered. H.—The prophet exhorts all to persevere unto the end. W.

PSAL. XXXI. &c. VER. 1. Understanding; (Prot. mascul. H.) shewing how he was brought to acknowledge his fault, and by penance to obtain pardon, (W.) justly giving the glory to God's grace. S. Aug.—Sept. Alex. ["A psalm] to David," of understanding; which is taken from some other copy. H.—Some suppose this word has been inserted from v. 8. Abenezra.—But there are several other psalms which have this title, (H.) intimating either that they contain great mysteries, (Euseb.) or that they are easy to understand. Agellius.—This is wholly of a moral nature. The Jews style it the heart of David, because it displays his sentiments of contrition. C.—He composed it most probably after Nathan had engaged him to confess his fault. Bellar.—It might be used on the solemn feast of expiation. Grot. Num. xxix. 7.—The Fathers explain it of the grace which we receive in baptism and in penance. S. Aug. S. Greg. &c. C.—Are they. Heb. "The blessings of him whose iniquity." Pagnin.—But the sense is the name, and S. Paul follows the Sept. which gives their version the highest authority. Rom. iv. 7.—Sins; or, "who is screened from the punishment of sin." Prin. disc. Sin has often this signification; and the psalmist would otherwise seem to say less than he had already expressed. Bert.—Covered, by charity, (1 Pet. iv.) as a physician covers a wound, to remove it entirely; and we must cover our former transgressions, by doing good works. S. Greg.—Then our sins will not appear at the day of judgment, (S. Jer.) nor be punished, as they are wholly destroyed. The Pelagians calumniated Catholics, as if they taught that sins were only shaven, as it were, the roots still remaining; which S. Aug. (con. 2 ep. Pelag. i. 13.) says, "None affirmeth but an infidel." Thus the doctrine of Calvin is condemned; who abuses these texts to prove that sins are only covered, and still remain even in the most just; which is contrary to innumerable passages of Scripture. (Isai. vi. Jo. i. 1 Cor. vi. &c.) and injurious to the perfections of God, and to the redemption of Christ, as well as to the saints in heaven, who are thus represented as still infected with all their sins. W.—This doctrine is now almost abandoned by Protestants, as it is contrary both to sound philosophy and divinity: for sin is nothing physical, but a want of moral rectitude. Bert.—God cannot fail to punish sin, wherever it really subsists. His spirit is surely free from guile. He cannot suppose that we are just by imputation of Christ's justice, unless we be really so. H.—By means of the sacraments the sinner becomes just, and God sees nothing in him deserving of punishment. C.—"If any one wishes his sins to be covered, let him manifest them to God by the voice of confession." S. Greg.—But, replies a Lutheran commentator, "God does not forget sin." What is this to the purpose, as long as the sin does not subsist in the offender? He allows that "the pardon of sin is inseparable from sanctification." Renew a right spirit within my bowels. Ps. i. 12. Bert.—The man who has felt real compunction, will be able to form a true notion of the happiness of a reconciliation. C.—Covering may allude to the custom of writing on wax, which might easily be effaced. Our sins are recorded in the book of God's justice. —M.

4 For day and night thy hand was heavy upon me: I am turned in my anguish, whilst the thorn is fastened.

5 I have acknowledged my sin to thee, and my injustice I have not concealed.

*I said, I will confess against myself my injustice to the Lord; and thou hast forgiven the wickedness of my sin.

6 For this shall every one that is holy pray to thee in a seasonable time.

And yet in a flood of many waters, they shall not come nigh unto him.

7 Thou art my refuge from the trouble which hath encompassed me: my joy, deliver me from them that surround me.

8 I will give thee understanding, and I will instruct thee in this way, in which thou shalt go: I will fix my eyes upon thee.

Isai. lxxv. 24.

VER. 2. Spirit. Sym. has "heart," or "mouth." C.—The latter is also in some copies of the Sept. Euseb.—The Rom. and Alex. Sept. have it, though Grabe substitutes spirit, (H.) which is recognised by S. Jer. (ad. Sun.) Heb. &c. Nothing is so contrary to true repentance as hypocrisy. S. Aug. &c. C.—If we do not co-operate with God's grace, our sins will never be effaced, though, before remission, our works can only dispose us to receive pardon. "Good (and meritorious) works follow." S. Aug. W.

VER. 3. Because I was silent, &c. That is, whilst I kept silence, by concealing, or refusing to confess my sins, thy hand was heavy upon me, &c. Ch.—The cry was then only an effect of vanity, like that of the Pharisee, full of his own merits; (S. Aug. S. Jer. C.) or David was silent till Nathan made him know his fault, which he afterwards ceased not to deplore. Theod.—It is supposed that he had continued impenitent for above a year. But he might feel remorse during that time, v. 5. Bert.—Cried. Heb. "roared," like a lion. C.—Because I acknowledged not my grievous sins, I was much afflicted. I prayed, but to little purpose. W.—Wishing to conceal the cause of my grief, (C.) I pined away (H. Lam. iii. 4.) and suffered greatly, because I did not confess. M.

VER. 4. I am turned, &c. That is, I turn and roll about in my bed, to seek for ease in my pain, whilst the thorn of thy justice pierces my flesh, and sticks fast in me. Or, I am turned; that is, I am converted to thee, my God, by being brought to a better understanding by thy chastisements. In the Hebrew it is, my moisture is turned into the drougths of summer. Ch. Prot. H.—But the Sept. may have taken l for a prep. before shaddai, as the other Greek interpreters say nothing of this moisture, which is the interpretation of modern Jews; and S. Jerom has (Bert.) "I was turned or occupied, in my misery;" versatus sum in miseria mea. There is no peace for the wicked. H.—God had not punished David exteriorly till after the admonition of Nathan, when so many evils poured upon him. But the king must have experienced cruel agonies of mind, till he was prevailed on by this wise physician to confess his fault, (C.) and thus let out the imposthume, which would not allow him to enjoy any repose.—Fastened. S. Jer. "while the summer (or heat; estas) was burning incessantly," sela, Heb. becharbone kayits means also in gladius spina. "The thorn has been turned into sword for my affliction;" (Bert.) or I have been as grievously tormented, as if a thorn or sword had pierced me. H.—Thy divine Providence chastises me, and my conscience tells me that I have deserved all my sufferings. W.—Many of the ancients read, while the thorn is broken, confringitur, (Ps. Rom. S. Greg. C.) which causes the extraction to be more difficult. H.—This thorn may denote sin, which, like a weed, had infected David's soul. Theod. C.

VER. 5. Sin. Or as some psalters read, "of my heart," with the Sept. Cassiod. &c. C.—"I know that thou wilt readily forgive the sins which are fully laid open before thee." S. Jer.—David no sooner perceived that he was the unjust man (H.) whom Nathan had described, than he exclaimed, "I have sinned;" and at the same moment God forgave him. 2 K. xii. 7. C.—If this psalm relate to his repentance, it seems he had already had recourse to God; but this is doubtful, as he appears to have entered into himself only after the prophet's reproach. Nothing can more effectually give peace to the soul than an humble confession, which costs human pride a great deal, when it must be made to our brethren. Bert.—The Jews were sometimes obliged to confess to God's minister. Lev. iv. 5. and Num. v. 7. M.

VER. 6. Holy. Even the angels rejoice at the sinner's conversion. Lu. xv. 7. The saints take part in the welfare of their fellow creatures, and praise God for his mercies shewn unto them. C.—Time. During this life, (Is. lv. 6. Eccl. ix. 10. Chal. Muis.) or when they shall be treated in like manner. Piscat.—As I now repent, so must those who are afflicted, pray that they may obtain pardon; then they will not be oppressed, though their miseries may appear very great, like a deluge. W.—Yel. Heb. rak, "surely." Bert.—"Therefore shall every merciful one pray unto Thee, finding time; that when many waters shall inundate, they may not approach unto him." S. Jer. H.—A deluge denotes great calamities. Is. xlii. 2. Even the terrors of the last day will not disturb the just, (C.) nor will they inspire the wicked with true repentance. H.

VER. 7. Refuge. Heb. "hiding;" (Ps. xxx. 21. H.) or asylum. C.—Which. Heb. "thou shalt surround me with songs of deliverance. Sela." Or "my praise saying, thou wilt environ me always." S. Jer. H.—Perhaps th may now occupy the place of m, as the Greeks all agree and the sense is at least the same. Bert.

9 Do not become like the horse and the mule, which have no understanding.

With bit and bridle bind fast their jaws who come not near unto thee.

10 Many are the scourges of the sinner, but mercy shall encompass him that hopeth in the Lord.

11 Be glad in the Lord, and rejoice, ye just, and glory, all ye right of heart.

PSALM XXXII.

EXULTATE JUSTI

An exhortation to praise God, and to trust in him.

1 A psalm for David.

REJOICE in the Lord, O ye just: praise becometh the upright.

2 Give praise to the Lord on the harp; sing to him with the psaltery, the instrument of ten strings.

3 Sing to him a new canticle, sing well unto him with a loud noise.

4 For the word of the Lord is right, and all his works are done with faithfulness.

5 He loveth mercy and judgment; the earth is full of the mercy of the Lord.

6 By the word of the Lord the heavens were established; and all the power of them, by the spirit of his mouth:

7 Gathering together the waters of the sea, as in a vessel; laying up the depths in storehouses.

8 Let all the earth fear the Lord, and let all the inhabitants of the world be in awe of him.

VER. 8. Fix. Heb. "consult with my eyes concerning thee." The Vulg. better. C.—Prot. marg. "my eye shall be upon thee." H.—God thus engages to watch over, and direct his servant, (Gen. xlv. 21. Jer. xxiv. 6. C.) giving him instruction, by means of chastisements. W.

VER. 9. Do not. This may be spoken by God, or by the psalmist; as an admonition to hear the counsel of those divinely commissioned. C.—Who come. Prot. "lest they come near," (H.) and threaten to bite or to run over thee. C.—But the Heb. may have the sense of the Vulg. qui non accedunt. S. Jer.—It may be a prayer, that God would offer a sort of violence to restrain the sallies of the sinner, (H.) and to convert him; (W.) or God threatens the obstinate with rigour of his justice. Many delude themselves, thinking that he will always treat them with lenity, and be ready to receive them. Bert. Is. xxxvii. 29. But the prophet admonishes them not to follow their senses alone, nor to imitate brute beasts, as he had done with regard to Bethsabee and Urias. M.—The bit (canus) was a sort of muzzle, "to hinder horses from biting."—Xenophon.

VER. 10. Many. Sinners deserve much punishment. But if they will repent they may find mercy. W.—This may be also the declaration of God, though the prophet seem to speak in the next verse. Bert.—God humbles the pride of haughty monarchs, like Sennacherib and Nabuchodonosor, treating them like beasts. C.

VER. 11. Glory, which is lawful when God is the object. 1 Cor. i. 31. My glory I will not give to another. Is. xlii. 8. C.—Heb. "praise him" S. Jer. H.—Joy is the end of true penance, to which the prophet invites all. W.

PSAL. XXXII. VER. 1. David. There is no title in Heb.; and the Greek copies vary. This psalm may be considered as a continuation of the former, with the last verse of which it may be well connected. C.—Some suppose that David composed it after he had been rescued from the giant Jesibienob. v. 15. 1 Par. xx. 4. Ferrand.—It is not certain that he is the author; but as other psalms without a title are ascribed to him, we have no reason to deny that he wrote this. Bert.—Many explain it as a thanksgiving of Ezechias. Theod. &c.—But we need not refer it to any particular event. C.—Upright. But it is not seemly in the mouth of a sinner. Eccli. xv. 9. W. Ps. lxxix. 16. C.

VER. 2. Psaltery. Heb. nebel, (H.) which does not resemble the modern psaltery. C.—We must carefully observe mortification, and the decalogue. W.

VER. 3. New. Interesting, like the canticle of the lamb, or of redemption, Apoc. Public worship and music are very useful, when performed with attention. Bert.—The prophet invites all to praise God for the blessings granted by Christ in the new law. W.—Noise, proceeding from the heart, the cry of which alone penetrates heaven. H.

VER. 4. Faithfulness. He always fulfils his promises, and his laws are just; (W.) therefore he deserves our praise. C. Ps. cxliv. 13.

VER. 5. Judgment. God joins these virtues together, (W.) as we ought to do. H. Lu. vi. 36. Mat. v. 48.—He punishes the wicked, and rewards the good. But his mercy displays itself on the earth, as there is no misery in heaven. S. Aug.—Its effects appear more since the coming of our Saviour. C.

VER. 6. Mouth, by his command. Euthym. Gen. i. 6.—The Fathers here find the blessed Trinity expressed; (C. M.) and the Council of Trent admonishes us to follow their unanimous interpretation, which is here adopted by Baumb-

9 *For he spoke, and they were made: he commanded, and they were created.

10 The Lord bringeth to nought the counsels of nations; and he rejecteth the devices of people, and casteth away the counsels of princes.

11 But the counsel of the Lord standeth for ever: the thoughts of his heart to all generations.

12 Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord; the people whom he hath chosen for his inheritance.

13 The Lord hath looked from heaven: he hath beheld all the sons of men.

14 From his habitation which he hath prepared, he hath looked upon all that dwell on the earth.

15 He who hath made the hearts of every one of them: who understandeth all their works.

16 The king is not saved by a great army: nor shall the giant be saved by his own great strength.

17 Vain is the horse for safety: neither shall he be saved by the abundance of his strength.

18 Behold the eyes of the Lord are on them that fear him: and on them that hope in his mercy.

19 To deliver their souls from death: and feed them in famine.

20 Our soul waiteth for the Lord: for he is our helper and protector.

21 For in him our heart shall rejoice: and in his holy name we have trusted.

* Gen. i. 8. Judith xvi. 17.

garte, a Prot. 1719. S. John informs us that all was made by the Word, from whom the Father and the Holy Spirit cannot be separated. Bert.—Seneca (con sol. 8.) seems to have had some idea of this mystery. Quisquis formator universi fuit, vive ille Deus est potens omnium; sive incorporalis Ratio, ingentium operum artifex; sive divinus Spiritus, per omnia maxima et minima aequali intrusione diffusus. The power of them may designate the stars and angels, which the Heb. styles "the army" of heaven. Is. xxiv. 21. Mat. xxvi. 53. C.—The word of God is omnipotent, (W.) "the Creator . . . both of visible and invisible things." Nic. Creed. H.—Calvin rejects this proof of the Trinity as weak, (Amama) as he did not like the word Trinity, nor perhaps the mystery itself. H.

VER. 7. As in. This is agreeable to S. Aug. and some ancient psalters; though the Sept. have "like a bottle" made of leather, וְכַיִּים עֲשָׂה. Moderns would translate, "like a heap." But Sym. and S. Jer. agree with us, (see Ps. lxxvii. 13. C.) as well as the Chal. and Houbigant. God has made the bed of the sea capable of containing such quantities of water, some of which evaporate and descend again from the clouds, to make the earth fruitful. Yet many take no notice of this admirable economy. Bert.—Theodoret and Athanasius understand the clouds to be meant by this vessel; but the former sentiment seems better. These waters, as well as hail, &c. are instruments of God's vengeance. Deut. xxxii. 24. The depths have the same import. God calls them forth at pleasure, (Amos v. 8. Gen. vii. 11.) and confines them within bounds. Job. xxxviii. 11.

VER. 9. Created. Heb. "on foot," to express God's absolute dominion. C.—This passage shews that bra means properly created out of nothing. Gen. i. Matter did not exist before God spoke. Bert.

VER. 10. And . . . princes. This seems to be lost in Heb. as all the Greeks have recognised it. Bert.—God prepares the causes and means when he forms his decrees, which are wholly independent. He is not forced to wait for a favourable opportunity. C.—He confounded the tongues at Babel, and his absolute decrees are always executed. W.

VER. 12. Inheritance, in opposition to the Gentiles. 1 Pet. ii. 9. Bert.—God made choice particularly of the Jews, as he does now of Christians. W.

VER. 14. Prepared. S. Jer. "from his most established throne;" whence he beholds all the conduct of men, (C.) though he fill all places, and work in all. Bert.—His power and wisdom (v. 15.) are infinite. W.

VER. 15. Every one, sigillatim. Heb. yachad, means also "together;" whence the Origenists inferred (H.) that all souls were made at first with Adam. S. Jer.—Thus they explained how they came to be all infected. Bert.—But God rather creates them when he infuses them into the body. Carthus. H.—S. Aug. could never decide this important question. This text only proves that God is equally Creator of all; (Eccli. xviii. 1. C.) and He alone made the hearts and souls of all men, as καταρτίας implies. Ps. iv. 10. and Geneb. Amama.

VER. 16. Giant. Or Heb. "strong man." Monarchs and the stoutest men have been overthrown by Providence, like Pharaoh and Sennacherib, and the giant Og. C.—History proves that great armies have not always gained the victory. Ps. lxxv. 13. and cxlvi. 10. Bert.

VER. 17. Safety. Either of himself or his master. W. Prov. xxi. 21.—This can only be attributed to God's protection. v. 13.

VER. 20. Waiteth. Heb. "longeth." H.—Protector. Heb. "shield." Infidels

22 Let thy mercy, O Lord, be upon us, as we have hoped in thee.

PSALM XXXIII.

BENEDICAM DOMINUM.

An exhortation to the praise and service of God.

1 For David, when he changed his countenance before Achimelech, who dismissed him, and he went his way. [1 Kings xxi.]

2 I WILL bless the Lord at all times, his praise shall be always in my mouth.

3 In the Lord shall my soul be praised; let the meek hear and rejoice.

4 O magnify the Lord with me: and let us extol his name together.

5 I sought the Lord, and he heard me: and he delivered me from all my troubles.

6 Come ye to him and be enlightened: and your faces shall not be confounded.

7 This poor man cried, and the Lord heard him: and saved him out of all his troubles.

8 The angel of the Lord shall encamp round about them that fear him: and shall deliver them.

9 O taste, and see that the Lord is sweet: blessed is the man that hopeth in him.

• Luke i. 53. — 1 Pet. iii. 10.

deride the confidence of the just, as an effect of pride, supposing it to be beneath the dignity of God to take notice of so small a creature, while he governs so many worlds. But if there be other worlds besides this, God is sufficient for all; (Bert.) and he will not neglect the work which his hands have deigned to form. H.

VER. 22. Thee. All-perfect Being, shew thy protection to all who trust in thee. W.—He who wishes to receive much, ought to increase his hopes. C.—“Who is so full of hope as boldly to say, by my hope measure thy mercy?” Theod.

PSAL XXXIII. &c. VER. 1. Achimelech. So Clem VIII. corrects what Sixtus V. had printed Abimelech, conformably to the Heb. &c. Some editors have since preferred the latter word, (C.) which is retained in Berthier and Calmet, though we should think such changes improper, unless they were made by proper authority. H.—Many of the ancients suppose that Achimelech (who is also styled Abimelech, the high priest at Nob) is here meant, from whom David concealed his real design. Euseb. S. Athan. S. Jer. &c.—Others rather think that the psalm was composed after David had escaped the great danger at the court of Achis, by counterfeiting madness. 1 K. xxi. 13. S. Aug. Muis, &c.—Achis alone is styled king among the Satraps. Those who ruled over the Philistines, generally bore the title of Abimelech, as the Egyptian monarchs had that of Pharaoh. Bert. Gen. xxi. 22. C. W.—This psalm is alphabetical. The last ver. beginning with p, is supererogatory, and may belong to the next psalm. See Ps. xxiv. C.—There seems also to be something wanting in v. 6. (Houbig) unless e and v have each only one hemistich. H.—From the change of names, and of David's countenance, S. Aug. gathers the vocation of the Gentiles, the real presence, &c. W. See 1 K. xxi. H.

VER. 2. Mouth. The just praise God in adversity, as well as in prosperity. W.—David had lately been delivered in a wonderful manner. C.

VER. 3. Praised. Heb. “glory.” Ps. xxxi. 11. H.—Others, seeing my treatment, will give praise to thee, the Author of all good, (C) and I shall be praised while I serve thee. W.

VER. 4. Together. (in idipsum) “If you love God, draw all to the love of God.” S. Aug.—The multitude will not diminish his attention to you. C.

VER. 5. Troubles. Heb. “fears or straits;” angustias. S. Jer. H.—The Vulg. adopts the Alex. Sept. θυσίαι: the Vatican copy has κατοικίαι, “habitations,” at Nob, Geth, &c. Seek the Lord, while he may be found. Is. lv. 6. Those who entertain doubts about religion, who are in sin, or tend to perfection, must all strive to find the Lord. The matter is of the utmost importance. Bert.

VER. 6. Come. “by faith and good works.” S. Jer.—Enlightened. Heb. also, “flow together.” S. Jer.—You need not be afraid of impoverishing him. C.—The points would require, (Bert.) “They looked . . . and were lightened, (Prot.) or flowed unto him.” Murg. H.—But the Sept. &c. knew nothing of them, and Houbigant agrees with our version. Bert.—And. Here v comes in its proper place, though for only half of the verse. H.

VER. 7. This. I myself, whom you beheld in the midst of afflictions. H.—Poverty is a great inducement for God to shew mercy. Bert.—The poorest may approach without fear. W.

VER. 8. Encamp. Lit. “send.” H.—This is explained of Jesus Christ, by S. Aug. and S. Jerom. C.—Heb. and Sept. (καταβυβαλέτω) intimate that the angel himself shall encamp round God's servants, so that no evil shall come near them. H.—This has often been verified. Gen. xxxii. 1. and xlviii. 16. and 4 K. vi. 16. &c. C.—One angel is here represented as equal to a great army. A Prot. commentator observes, that David attributed his escape to the protection of an angel, and was very thankful for it. We see, therefore, what advantages we may derive from the blessed spirits? What then should hinder us from addressing our prayers to them? Bert.

10 Fear the Lord, all ye his saints: for there is no want to them that fear him.

11 *The rich have wanted, and have suffered hunger: but they that seek the Lord shall not be deprived of any good.

12 Come, children, hearken to me: I will teach you the fear of the Lord.

13 ^bWho is the man that desireth life: who loveth to see good days?

14 Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile.

15 Turn away from evil, and do good: seek after peace, and pursue it.

16 The eyes of the Lord are *upon the just: and his ears unto their prayers.

17 But the countenance of the Lord is against them that do evil things: to cut off the remembrance of them from the earth.

18 The just cried, and the Lord heard them: and delivered them out of all their troubles.

19 The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a contrite heart: and he will save the humble of spirit.

20 Many are the afflictions of the just: but out of them all will the Lord deliver them.

• Eccli. xv. 20. Heb. iv. 13.

VER. 9. Taste, in the blessed Eucharist, (S. Athan. S. Aug. Theod.) or by experience. C. 1 Pet. ii. 3.

VER. 10. Want. In the old law, God was more particularly engaged to defend his servants from distress. Though, as they were sometimes under oppression, they knew that they were to look for more substantial blessings in heaven. Hence they would not have exchanged their condition for that of the richest worldling. Such ought to be still more our sentiments, since we have beheld Christ dying naked on the cross, and his martyrs rejoicing under the most excruciating torments. C.

VER. 11. Rich of this world, (1 Tim vi. 17. M.) are often poor in spiritual gifts. W.—Those who are poor in both respects, are truly miserable, (H.) since they cannot satisfy their craving appetite. But the prophet admires those who are poor in spirit, whether they have many possessions or not. Bert.—The fear of the Lord is his treasure. Is. xxxiii. 6. The saint is content under every dispensation of Providence. H.—Lazarus was truly rich even here; and in heaven he is covered with glory. Lu. xvi. 20. S. Jer. C.—Heb. “the lions have wanted.” S. Jer.—This may have been the case; yet those who fear God shall be filled; or, the rich may be designated by the name of lion's whelps, on account of their power and avidity. C.—The same term, cephirim, is often applied to men in power. Eze. xix. 2. Job 4. 10. Bert.—Good. If the saints be sometimes deprived of provisions, they know that it is better for them; as God directs all for their good. H.

VER. 12. Children: docile and free from pride and hypocrisy.

VER. 13. Good days. S. Peter (1 ep. iii. 10) adopts this sense, though the Heb. is rendered, “and desireth days, that he may see good.” The apostle shews that heaven is here principally meant, though a virtuous life is the best to procure even present happiness. Bert.—Many of David's followers probably continued their views to the latter. C.—Every one desireth to be happy, but only the virtuous are really so. W.

VER. 14. Guile. He very properly begins with regulating the tongue, as this member may prove very dangerous. Prov. xviii. 21. Jam. iii. 5. By detraction, it wounds three people; and it causes no less evil by flattery. C.

VER. 15. Good. It will not suffice to refrain from criminal actions. Ps. xxxvi. 27.—Peace, both private and public. Jer. xxix. 7. C.—A person may, notwithstanding, have much to suffer. But S. Peter prevents this objection, by proclaiming those happy who suffer for justice sake. v. 14. Bert.—Good works are necessary as well as faith. W.

— Nam frustra vitium vitaveris illud

Si te alio pravum detorseris.—Hor. ii. sat. 2

VER. 16. Eyes. S. Basil understands the angels. God protects his servants, (H) while he treats the wicked with severity. C.

VER. 17. To cut, &c. S. Peter leaves this out: perhaps because temporal punishments would not be so often inflicted upon the wicked under the new law; as God tries his faithful, and teaches them to wait till judgment, when all will be treated according to their deserts. Bert.—He sees all men's actions, and will reward them accordingly. W.

VER. 18. Just. This word is omitted in Heb. but it is supplied by all the versions; which shews that the original is not quite perfect. Bert.—If this were left out, the passage would refer to the wicked, v. 16. Yet S. Jerom. found the Heb. in this state. H.—Troubles. Many experienced the divine protection in a wonderful manner, and though others fell victims of persecution, (Heb. xi. 36.) yet they were perfectly resigned to God's will, (Bert.) and thus obtained their wishes, receiving a better reward in eternity. C.

VER. 19. Them. Heb. “broken-hearted;” to the humble and distressed. H.—God is very near to such. C. Ps. l. 19. and xc. 15. See S. Polyc. ad Phil. ii.

21 The Lord keepeth all their bones, not one of them shall be broken.
 22 The death of the wicked is very evil: and they that hate the just shall be guilty.
 23 The Lord will redeem the souls of his servants: and none of them that trust in him shall offend.

PSALM XXXIV.

JUDICA DOMINE NOCENTES ME.

David, in the person of Christ, prayeth against his persecutors: prophetically foreshewing the punishments that shall fall upon them.

1 For David himself.

JUDGE thou, O Lord, them that wrong me: overthrow them that fight against me.

2 Take hold of arms and shield: and rise up to help me.

3 Bring out the sword, and shut up the way against them that persecute me: say to my soul: I am thy salvation.

4 *Let them be confounded and ashamed, that seek after my soul.

Let them be turned back and be confounded, that devise evil against me.

5 Let them become as dust before the wind: and let the angel of the Lord straiten them.

* Infra xxxix. 15.

VER. 20. Many. David was too well informed to promise that the just would experience no affliction? but it will not last for ever. C. Heb. xii. 6.—If God seem to forsake them for a time, he gives them interior strength, and will at last crown his own gifts. W.

VER. 21. Broken. Their virtue which is denoted by the bones. (M.) shall not sink under torments. So Christ encouraged his disciples by assuring them that a hair of their head should not perish. Mat. x. 30 S. Aug. C.—The elements of our bodies cannot be divided or destroyed by human force, so as to prevent their resurrection. The identical bodies shall rise again, though they may have been subject to many changes, reduced to ashes, or consumed by wild beasts. This mystery has often offended incredulous philosophers. Jesus Christ is the just, by excellence; and this prediction was fulfilled in his person, as S. John (xix. 36.) does not confine himself to the type of the paschal lamb. Bert.

VER. 22. Evil or "bad." Chal. Heb. also, "malice shall slay the wicked." They can attribute their misfortunes only to their own misconduct. Bert.—Guilty, and shall be treated as criminals; a fate which the just shall never experience. v. 28. The death of Saul seems to be foretold. C.—The wicked are forced to quit the world and their bodies which they have idolized, and are hurled into everlasting fire. S. Bern.—In punishment of former transgressions, they are suffered to fall into more sins; while those who place their confidence in God's grace, will be preserved. W.—"Death is not indeed the last, but those torments destined for the prodigal in hell, occupy the last place." Plato, Leg. ix.

VER. 23. Redeem. This verse greatly resembles that which is placed, in like manner, out of the alphabetical order, at the end of Ps. xxiv. Heb. in both, "Redeem, O Lord," &c. H.

PSAL. XXXIV. &c. VER. 1. David. Some of the Greek copies add, "psalm," and "unto the end." It was composed during the persecutions of Saul, &c. and is applied by the Fathers to Jesus Christ, who quotes v. 19. (Jo. xv. 25. C.) and it seems to be in the same state with several others, which speak of his sufferings. Bert.—The expressions are very animated, and though vengeance was not so strictly forbidden under the old law, (Matt. v. 44.) yet we may explain them as predictions. Theod.—David always evinces the greatest moderation. (Ps. vii. 5.) and treated even Saul with the utmost respect. What he says, therefore, was dictated by a sincere desire of their conversion, and that they might prevent eternal torments; as well as to set the conduct of God in a proper light, and to encourage the virtuous. Asterius. C.—His name implies one "beloved," &c. inasmuch as he was the figure of Christ, the conqueror of death and hell. S. Aug. W.—Judge. Heb. "plead." I do not wish them to be condemned unheard. C.—A vindictive person does not thus commit his cause to God. Jesus Christ was all mildness. But in the spiritual warfare, we may well address these words to God, (Bert.) who is often represented as a mighty warrior. Ex. xv. 3. C.

VER. 2. Arms. Heb. migen, "buckler," of a smaller size (1 K. xvii. 6. 7.) than the shield, (tsinna) which was used to cover the whole body. S. Jerom renders the latter word by hastam, "the spear." C.—But this text speaks of defensive weapons.

VER. 3. The way. This may be applied by the word conclude, which Houbigant rejects, observing that S. Jerom has præoccupat, (Bert.) as it is in the Par. ed. 1538. H.—But I find præcipit. Bert.—"Prevent" the designs, stop the passage, or "hurl my persecutors headlong." H.—Take offensive weapons. He foretells the ruin of those who persecuted the Church. W.—Salvation, though my enemies deny it. Ps. iii. 2.

VER. 4. Let them. So most people render the Heb. though it may be understood in the future. (Bert.) as Montanus translates. H.—Me. The wicked shall be confounded in the end, when the just shall triumph. W.

6 Let their way become dark and slippery; and let the angel of the Lord pursue them.

7 For without cause they have hidden their net for me unto destruction: without cause they have upbraided my soul.

8 Let the snare which he knoweth not come upon him: and let the net which he hath hidden catch him: and into that very snare let him fall.

9 But my soul shall rejoice in the Lord; and shall be delighted in his salvation.

10 All my bones shall say: Lord, who is like to thee? Who deliverest the poor from the hand of them that are stronger than he; the needy and the poor from them that strip him.

11 Unjust witnesses, rising up, have asked me things I knew not.

12 They repay me evil for good: to the depriving me of my soul.

13 But as for me, when they were troublesome to me, I was clothed with hair-cloth.

I humbled my soul by fasting; and my prayer shall be turned into my bosom.

14 As a neighbour and as an own brother, so did I please; as one mourning and sorrowful, so was I humbled.

VER. 5. Dust. Heb. mots, small "chaff." Ps. i. 4. Vatab.—Angel. The evil spirits are employed to punish the wicked, as the good protect the just. Ps. xxxiii. 8. Some Fathers have supposed that every man was attended by a good and a bad angel. Hermes ii. Orig. xxxv. in Lu. S. Greg. Nys. vit. Mos. Cassian viii. 17. and xiii. 12.—But the Church admits the power of the wicked spirits only against those who take part with them, or "as far as God allows them" (S. Jer.) to tempt. The devil is like a dog chained down, which can bite none but those who come within its reach. S. Aug.—Both good and bad angels are ministers of God's justice. H.

VER. 6. Slippery. The systems of infidels, who deny a future existence, are of this nature. If they were even true, the just would have lost nothing by pursuing a virtuous course. Bert.

VER. 7. Their. Lit. "the destruction of their net." H.—Some would translate shachath, "the pit of," &c. But the Sept. is preferable; and chapheru means they have "covered with shame," as well as dug for my soul. Bert.—Pit ought to be removed to the latter part of the verse. Saul laid many falsehoods to the charge of David, (C.) and insidiously sought his ruin. H.

VER. 8. Fall. He foretells the destruction of Saul, and his own glory. C.

VER. 9. Salvation. In the midst of troubles he is not devoid of hope, and after his deliverance he looks for eternal happiness. W.

VER. 10. Lord. Some Latin copies repeated this, while others in the original passed over the word entirely. S. Jer. ad. Sam.—"Be thou my life whom I always seek." S. Aug. Poor, in general, or David, who was supplied by Abimelech with food. 1 K. xxi. 3. C.

VER. 11. Not. Accusing me of disloyalty, &c. Flaminius.—We must not imagine that David was cited to the bar. This is admirably explained of Jesus Christ at the tribunal of Pilate, (C.) and of the high priests. H. Mat. xxvi.—God knows not what cannot be; (W.) and therefore Christ could not acknowledge what was falsely laid to his charge. H.—The martyrs, &c. have often been exposed to the shafts of calumny. Bert.

VER. 12. Depriving, servitatem. H.—Heb. denotes the condition of one who has lost a husband or father. I had exposed my life for the welfare of the state, and of those who now seek my ruin. C.—Yet David was not slain. This was verified in our Saviour. W.—Sept. have árevelan, "loss of children;" as Christ was abandoned by his disciples. M.

VER. 13. To me. Heb. also signify, "when they were sick," which manifests a more heroic charity: though yet it is more natural to suppose that David would assume these robes of penance when he was under affliction, as S. Jerom intimates. cum infirmaver ab eis. Bert.—Our Saviour's life was a continual penance, though he stood in no need of it for himself. W.—David was aware that the best method of avoiding the attacks of his enemies, was to make God his friend, by sentiments of humility, and by penance. S. Aug. C.—Bosom. I shall reap the advantage from my prayer, if it be of no service to my enemies. Geneb. Lu. x. 6. M.—May what I wish for my enemies fall to my own lot. I have prayed for them in secret and with the utmost fervour. C.—I have repeatedly urged my request. (Houbig.) or I am confident my prayer will be of some service, at least to myself. Bert.

VER. 14. Please, complacebam. "treat lovingly." H.—Vulg. follows the regimen of the Sept. impetoravi, which may govern an accusative case. Heb. is plainer, "I walked." (Bert.) or, "behaved myself as though he had been my friend or brother," Prot. H.—So. Sept. seem to have explained am, "truly," instead of mother; as the points would determine the Heb. "like one who bewails his mother;" (Bert.) or, "like a mother mourning. I bowed down in grief." S. Jer.—An ancient Greek interpreter has, "like one mourning for a brother born of" (711)

15 But they rejoiced against me, and came together: scourges were gathered together upon me, and I knew not.

16 They were separated, and repented not: they tempted me, they scoffed at me with scorn: they gnashed upon me with their teeth.

17 Lord, when wilt thou look upon me? rescue thou my soul from their malice: my only one from the lions.

18 I will give thanks to thee in a great church: I will praise thee in a strong people.

19 Let not them that are my enemies wrongfully rejoice over me: "who have hated me without cause, and wink with the eyes.

20 For they spoke indeed peaceably to me: and speaking in the anger of the earth they devised guile.

21 And they opened their mouth wide against me; they said: Well done, well done, our eyes have seen it.

22 Thou hast seen, O Lord, be not thou silent: O Lord, depart not from me.

23 Arise, and be attentive to my judgment: to my cause, my God and my Lord.

24 Judge me, O Lord, my God, according to thy justice, and let them not rejoice over me.

25 Let them not say in their hearts: It is well, it is a John xv. 25.

the same mother." I felt the affliction of my enemies and sympathized with them, endeavouring to alleviate their distress as much as possible. C.—Such was the conduct of David, the figure of the Messiah; so that the expressions which seem too strong, must not be taken for imprecations. Bert.—Christ was the good Samaritan who relieved the wounded man. Luke. x. W.—S. Paul admonishes us to weep with those who weep. Rom. xii. 15. M.

VER. 15. Against me. Heb. "in my distress," (Houbig.) or "infirmity." S. Jer.—Thus was my kind attention repaid. H.—My enemies became only the more insolent, and stood beside me, to shew their contempt. C.—Scourges. Heb. also, "vile men," (Bert.) necim, people stricken, gathered themselves upon me, and I knew not." Mont. H.—The Rom. psalters have "and they were ignorant," ignoraverunt. C.—David could not think that he had given any offence: much less had our Saviour. H.—He knew no just cause why the Jews persecuted him, as they were actuated by malice. W.—David knew not personally those who afflicted him. M.

VER. 16. Separated, and could not agree in their testimonies. This may be one meaning of charak, as it has several. Bert.—"They did tear me, and censured not, (16) with hypocritical mockers in feasts, they gnashed," &c. Prot. H.—Many of their attempts have been frustrated by thy Providence, yet they do not enter into themselves. Theod.

VER. 17. One. Sept. "daughter," Aquila, "solitary," μοναχὴν. Prot. "darling," or my soul which is so desolate. Ps. xxi. 21. H.—So Christ said, Why hast thou abandoned me? (Mat. xxvii.) not affording me such consolation as other saints enjoy in their agony. W.

VER. 18. Strong, gravi. Heb. hutsam, numerous, (1 Mac. i. 1. M.) and "weighty," (H.) which is the consequence of great numbers, (Bert.) and of virtue. S. Aug. understands the Church, which is not carried away like chaff before the wind. Amama dislikes this. H.—The resurrection is foretold, (v. 17.) and here the Catholic Church is signified. W.

VER. 19. Wrongfully. Heb. "liars," (S. Jer. H.) alluding to Saul, &c. C. Christ explains this of himself Jo. xv. W.—Who. Some supply a negation. Bert.—"Neither let them wink with the eye who." Prot. This sign might indicate friendship, or evil machinations. Prov. vi. 13. and x. 10. C.—"They pretended by their looks what they did not entertain in their hearts." S. Aug. M.

VER. 20. Spoke. Heb. adds lo, "not." But it may be better explained as an interrogation. "Have they not spoken?" &c. as the enemies used deceit. Houbig. Bert.—Earth. This word is omitted in Sept. Rom. S. Aug. &c. But Theodoret reads it, and it is in all the other Greek interpreters, and in the Arab. and Syriac. C.—(Heb. "they devise deceitful matters against them that are quiet (righe, divided, &c.) in the land." Prot. or "in the plunder of the earth they devise deceit." S. Jer. H.—They appear friendly, but when alone they talk to the earth, like people in deep study and full of passion. C.—This terrestrial anger is the source of much evil. Bert.—The Jews and Herodians said, Master, &c. designing to inveigle our Saviour. Mat. xxii. The priests and Pharisees also accused him boldly, and instigated the people to demand his crucifixion. W.—They were split into parties, and invaded those who were the reverse of passionate. M.

VER. 21. Done, enge. Heb. heach. H.—This term occurs ten times in Scripture, and here denotes the joy felt in the destruction of an enemy. Thus the Jews insulted over Christ expiring on the cross. Bert.—Seen. No farther re-well, to our mind: neither let them say: We have swallowed him up.

26 Let them blush, and be ashamed together, who rejoice at my evils.

Let them be clothed with confusion and shame, who speak great things against me.

27 Let them rejoice and be glad, who are well pleased with my justice: and let them say always; The Lord be magnified, who delight in the peace of his servant.

28 And my tongue shall meditate thy justice, thy praise all the day long.

PSALM XXXV.

DIXIT INJUSTUS.

The malice of sinners, and the goodness of God.

1 Unto the end, for the servant of God, David himself.

2 THE unjust hath said within himself, that he would sin: there is no fear of God before his eyes.

3 ^bFor in his sight he hath done deceitfully, that his iniquity may be found unto hatred.

4 The words of his mouth are iniquity and guile: he would not understand that he might do well.

5 He hath devised iniquity on his bed, he hath set himself on every way that is not good: but evil he hath not hated.

^b Supra xiii. 3.

serve is necessary: he is fallen, or we have accused him of nothing but what we have seen. C.

VER. 22. Silent. I have chosen thee for my judge and protector. C.—Pro-nounce sentence if they be in the right; and if not, rescue me from their fury. H.

VER. 23. Attentive. Heb. "watch over." He implores present assistance. Bert.

VER. 24. Thy. Many copies read "my," with S. Aug. Euthym. &c. But thy agrees with the Rom. (C.) and Alex. Sept. and Heb. H.

VER. 25. It is well, occurs only once in Heb. which may be imperfect, as many versions supply the second. Bert.—Mind, as we could have desired. Prot. "Oh, (marg. adds ah) so would we have it." H.—Things go on well according to our mind. M.

VER. 26. Great. S. Aug. reads, "malicious." C.—At the day of judgment the wicked will be condemned. W.—If this judgment were not to take place religion would be a fable: as impiety is not always punished in this world. Bert.

VER. 27. Them. The blessed in eternal glory. W.—Justice. Or wish that sentence may be pronounced in my favour. C.—Delight. Heb. "who delights," S. Jer. H.—But the Greek interpreters read as we do. Bert.

VER. 28. Meditate. Heb. word is used to signify speaking with reflection. C. PSAL XXXV. &c. VER. 1. Himself. Psalm is understood. It is expressed in S. Amb. and S. Jerom. (C.) and in the Alex. Sept. H.—Eusebius improperly assigns the cause of the omission to the piece being of a moral nature. Many suppose it refers to Saul, who had promised that he would give ear no more to the detractors of David, when the latter restored to him his spear and cup. 1 K. xvi. Theod. &c.—But it seems rather to express the sentiments of the captives at Babylon, like the Ps. x. xi. xiii. and lii. C.—David gloried in the title of servant of the Lord, though he bore the sceptre. Ps. xvii. Bert. Ps. cxv. 16. M.—He applies this instruction to himself, and to all in the lowest stations. W.

VER. 2. Himself. Heb. libbi, "in my heart." But this is visibly incorrect, and we should substitute lobu, as S. Jer. Chal. Syr. &c. have done. C.—Yet Sym. translates, "concerning the disorder of the impious within, my heart has said, there," &c. Heb. may also signify, "the transgression of the wicked saith within my heart." Prot. H.—I am inwardly convinced how great the malice of the wicked may be. It touches me to the very heart. Both senses are good. The wicked are bent on evil, and this fills the virtuous with grief. Bert.—Eyes. They sin publicly, (Ps. xiii. 1. C.) and on purpose, preferring vice before virtue, (W.) and constantly bent on doing evil, so that they become odious to all. M.

VER. 3. Unto hatred. That is, hateful to God (Ch.) and man; (H.) or that he may be able to hurt, as Heb. also may insinuate. Bert.—Sept. "to find and hate his iniquity." But he acts not with sincerity. He wishes to defend his evil ways. S. Aug. &c.—He still flatters himself with impunity. Ps. ix. 25. or x. 11. To find, often means to punish. Gen. xlv. 16. &c. C.—God frequently abandons those who sin through malice. W.

VER. 4. Well, to those in distress. Ps. xl. 2. Though wise enough in worldly concerns, he seemed quite ignorant when any virtuous actions were proposed. C.—Sometimes ignorance is excusable when a person does his best to obtain knowledge. But when he is negligent, the ignorance is gross, and sinful in proportion to the importance of the thing. If one desire to be ignorant to prevent remorse, this only increases the guilt, and God often leaves such destitute of the ordinary graces which he gives to others; so that they fall into a reprobate sense, and into more horrible sins. W.

VER. 5. Set himself, "persevering" in wickedness. S. Aug.

6 O Lord, thy mercy is in heaven, and thy truth reacheth even to the clouds.

7 Thy justice is as the mountains of God, thy judgments are a great deep.

Men and beasts thou wilt preserve, O Lord: 8 O how hast thou multiplied thy mercy, O God!

But the children of men shall put their trust under the covert of thy wings.

9 They shall be inebriated with the plenty of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the torrent of thy pleasure.

10 For with thee is the fountain of life; and in thy light we shall see light.

11 Extend thy mercy to them that know thee, and thy justice to them that are right in heart.

12 Let not the foot of pride come to me, and let not the hand of the sinner move me.

13 There the workers of iniquity are fallen, they are cast out, and could not stand.

PSALM XXXVI.

NOLI ÆMULARI

An exhortation to despise this world; and the short prosperity of the wicked; and to trust in providence.

1 A psalm for David himself.

VER. 6. Clouds. The mercy of God is great, and his fidelity indisputable. Some think these were concealed till the coming of the Messiah; (Pa. lxxxiv. 11. S. Bern.) and many of the Fathers accuse Aristotle of confining Providence to the regions above the moon, by perverting this text. S. Clem. Strom. 5. &c.—But Gesner has produced 80 passages from that author which prove both a general and particular Providence. C.—God does not leave the most wilful sinner without some good motions, and sufficient grace, that they may repent if they do not harden their own hearts. He has promised such helps, and is most faithful and desirous to receive again the penitent sinner. W.

VER. 7. Of God. A title which is often given to things of superior excellence. So divina condimenta of Plautus, (Pseudol.) denote ragouts or sauces of the best quality; (H) and sacra fames of Virgil, means great hunger. See Jon. iii. 3. Cant. viii. 6.—Deep. After praising the mercy of God, the psalmist expresses his admiration of his inscrutable justice. Rom. xi. 33. C.—Preserve, salvabis. The latter are designed only for man's benefit, and will end with time. H.—But man is destined for eternal happiness, v. 9. C.—God wishes the salvation both of the learned and of the stupid, (S. Jer. W.) of the Jew and Gentile, (Arnob. 1 Tim. iv. 10.) of good and bad. He makes his sun to shine on both. Mat. v. 45. Euseb. Piscat. C.

VER. 8. O how. So the Heb. and Sept. read; quoniam modum may also (Bert.) signify "as." God has given such proofs of his great mercies to all. H.—Of men. People must lay aside their stupidity and resentment with brutes, to obtain the eternal joys which are prepared for men. W.

VER. 9. House. In the temple, (C.) or in the Church of God, (S. Amb.)—The pleasures enjoyed in this communion of saints, (H.) is but a foretaste of what may be expected in heaven. C.

VER. 10. With thee, Lord, is the fountain of life, Jesus Christ.—See light, or the Holy Ghost. S. Amb. Theod.—We shall see thee, Father of light, in thy Son. Orig. Prin. i. 1. C.—The saints behold in the light of God all that they can desire to know; and of course they will not be unacquainted with our wants and petitions, though they have not the asses' ears of Calvin. H.—Light and life denote all happiness. C.—The psalmist might have a sublime idea of these pleasures. Bert.—But none will perfectly understand their excellence till they are put in possession of them. H.

VER. 11. Mercy and justice, are here of the same import. Bellar. Muis.—Deliver us from captivity, and extend thy mercies to all thy people. C.—Heart. Many who have sufficient learning, are destitute of this better quality. The right of heart are always more knowing than those who are only learned in speculation, and puffed up with pride. Bert.

VER. 12. Sinner. Heb. and Sept. "sinners," who are always striving to supplant the just by pride and evil example. Bert.—Let me not listen to their wicked advice. S. Aug.—Let not the enemy invade our country any more. C.—The just may pray that no bad example or pride may place an obstacle to his salvation. W.

VER. 13. There. The devil fell by pride, and man by his persuasion. Neither could escape punishment. W.—There, in heaven, (S. Jer.) and in paradise, pride proved fatal; (C.) while it will be punished in hell. S. Amb.—Pride and injustice will entail destruction upon our persecutors. Babylon shall shortly fall a prey to Cyrus. C.—Stand. Heb. "kum," "rise again." The proud are seldom converted, (Bert.) and the rebel angels had no redress. M.

PSAL XXXVI. &c. VER. 1. Himself. Heb. has simply, "for David," (C.) as well as the Greek of the Vat. "It is a mistake in Bellanger to say in general that the Greek adds "a psalm," since this is true only with respect to the edit. of Aldus; and Comp. says Berthier. But he is not quite accurate, as Eras-

BE not emulous of evil doers; nor envy them that work iniquity.

2 For they shall shortly wither away as grass, and as the green herbs shall quickly fall.

3 Trust in the Lord, and do good, and dwell in the land, and thou shalt be fed with its riches.

4 Delight in the Lord, and he will give thee the requests of thy heart.

5 Commit thy way to the Lord, and trust in him, and he will do it.

6 And he will bring forth thy justice as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day. 7 Be subject to the Lord, and pray to him.

Envy not the man who prospereth in his way; the man who doth unjust things.

8 Cease from anger, and leave rage; have no emulation to do evil.

9 For evil doers shall be cut off: but they that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the land.

10 For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be: and thou shalt seek his place, and shalt not find it.

11 *But the meek shall inherit the land, and shall delight in abundance of peace.

* Matt. v. 4.

mus inserts "a psalm" in his edit. of S. Jerom's Sept.; and the Alex. copy, which is equally famous with that of the Vatican, has [unto the end, a psalm] for David. Grabe has indeed marked all but the last word as a peculiarity, or not to be found in Origen's copy. But he has published his edition with such accuracy, that we may distinguish what his MS. contained from other interpolations. It were to be wished that the same attention had been paid to the Vatican copy. But hitherto all the editors have taken the liberty to make alterations without specifying where; so that we can have no security that we ever quote the real MS. of the Vatican. The learned prefect, Zacagni, gives abundant proof of this in his letter to Grabe, which has been published by Kennicott, Diss. 2. Yet any of these editions may be quoted as the Greek or Sept. as we have yet no copy perfectly authentic: and the learned are not even agreed which standard ought to be followed. If that which presents the greatest number of Origen's corrections be preferable, the Alex. MS. must bear away the palm. If the reverse, the glory must be given to its rival in the Vatican, which approaches the nearest to the volgata, or to the edition of S. Lucian. See Kennicott. These remarks may be of service, as Berthier often seems inclined to place the Vat. edit. on the same level with the Latin Vulg. H.—This psalm is alphabetical. The Syriac, Sept. &c. read, (v. 28) the unjust, &c. avilim; a word which seems now to be deficient in the Heb. which has no ver. beginning with av. C.—Some other derangement has taken place. Houbig.—The verses might be so divided as to begin every second verse with a fresh letter, and so to retain 42 verses. See v. 7. and 20. The matter is of no great importance. The prophet has comprised several duties in alphabetical order, to help the memory, (Bert.) and to excite attention. W.—He may predict the death of Saul, (Rabbins) or hint at the rebellion of Absalom in his old age; (v. 25. Ferrand) or rather he may comfort the captives at Babylon, promising them liberty, and denouncing the fall of their oppressors, above ten times. He admonishes them not to be scandalized at the distress of the just, and the prosperity of the wicked. C.—Emulous. Heb. "Fret not thyself." Prot. "Mingle not with;" (Bert. Pagnin) "contend not." S. Jer. H.—Envy. Their splendour is deceitful. C.—Be not, therefore, seduced (H.) to imitate the wicked (M.) nor offended, that they should prosper here. W.

VER. 2. Wither. Heb. "be cut down." C.—Fall. Heb. "wither." S. Jer. H.—This admirably describes the transient glory of sinners. Is. xl. 6. Jam. i. 10. C.—All life is short. W. 1 Pet. i. 24. M.

VER. 3. Riches. Sept. and Houb. read emune, "abundance." He begins with a. The sense is much the same. Bert.—"Thou shalt feed on faith," (S. Jer.) or "incessantly." Sym.—The Jews entertained the greatest desire of the promised land. C.—It may hear denote our soul, (Orig.) the Church, (S. Aug.) the Scriptures, (S. Athan.) or heaven. S. Jer. &c. C.—Trust in God and be content. He will give thee what is requisite. W.

VER. 4. Heart. Provided they be rational. S. Aug.—He will enable thee to repose in peace, and to taste innocent pleasures in the Lord. C.

VER. 5. Commit. Lit. "lay open." Heb. "roll." H.—This expresses the most unbounded confidence. Ps. liv. 23. Prov. xvi. 3.—Do it. Whatever may be proper. He will display thy justice, (v. 6.) and free thee from anxiety, (C.) taking care of thee. 1 Pet. v. 7. M.

VER. 6. Day. This will appear at the last judgment. S. Aug.

VER. 7. Be. Heb. dom, begins only this verse with d. The other letters occupy two verses, (Bert.) the second of which may commence with any of the letters. H.—"Be silent to the Lord; wait upon Him." S. Jer. H.—If he should suffer thee to be afflicted, envy not those who are in a more prosperous condition, nor give way to indignation. v. 8. C.—None can be truly subjected to God, who do not comply with his laws and pray. Orig. S. Aug.—We must 12 The sinner shall watch the just man: and shall gnash upon him with his teeth.

13 But the Lord shall laugh at him: for he foreseeth that his day shall come.

14 The wicked have drawn out the sword: they have bent their bow;

To cast down the poor and needy, to kill the upright of heart.

15. Let their sword enter into their own hearts, and let their bow be broken.

16. Better is a little to the just, than the great riches of the wicked.

17 For the arms of the wicked shall be broken in pieces; but the Lord strengtheneth the just.

18 The Lord knoweth the days of the undefiled; and their inheritance shall be for ever.

19 They shall not be confounded in the evil time; and in the days of famine they shall be filled: 20 because the wicked shall perish.

And the enemies of the Lord, presently after they shall be honoured and exalted, shall come to nothing, and vanish like smoke.

21 The sinner shall borrow, and not pay again: but the just sheweth mercy and shall give.

22 For such as bless him shall inherit the land: but such as curse him shall perish.

23 With the Lord shall the steps of a man be directed, and he shall like well his way.

24 When he shall fall, he shall not be bruised, for the Lord putteth his hand under him.

25 I have been young, and now am old; and I have not seen the just forsaken, nor his seed seeking bread.

26 He sheweth mercy, and lendeth all the day long; and his seed shall be in blessing.

27 Decline from evil, and do good; and dwell for ever and ever.

28 For the Lord loveth judgment, and will not forsake his saints: they shall be preserved for ever.

The unjust shall be punished, and the seed of the wicked shall perish.

29 But the just shall inherit the land, and shall dwell therein for evermore.

30 *The mouth of the just shall meditate wisdom; and his tongue shall speak judgment.

31 ^bThe law of his God is in his heart, and his steps shall not be supplanted.

* Prov. xxxi. 26.—^b Isai. li. 7.

wait patiently for his aid. Lam. iii. 26. Is. xxx. 15. "Allow the gods to judge what's best for us." Juv. Sat. 18. H.

VER. 8. Evil. Repining (M.) at the ways of Providence, &c. C. v. 1.—Re-flect on God's will. H.—Laboras; sed in via Dei. S. Aug.—Heb. "be not angry nevertheless (ac, a word which Houbig. deems useless) to do evil; (Mont.) or "against the wicked," (Prin. dis.) as lehareah may perhaps signify; though it is more usually taken for a verb, as the points decide. Bert.

VER. 9. Land of the living. W.—David knew that many truly pious people would never obtain riches in the land of Chanaan, even though they might have remained there, if the nation had been faithful. He therefore comforts them with the prospect of a better land. If this were not the meaning, the Church would put these canticles in the mouth of her children to little purpose. Bert.

VER. 10. While. "Till the day of judgment. Orig. S. Amb.—And shall. Heb. "and it shall not be." Prot. "it, or he shall not subsist." S. Jer. H.—The state of the wicked is not therefore so enviable. The captives witnessed the fall of the great Colossus, the empire of the Babylonians. C.

VER. 10. Meek. Heb. hanunim, also means "the afflicted." Bert.—Captives, ye shall be reinstated in your dear country. Our Saviour alludes to this text, (Mat. v. 4.) and the Fathers beautifully explain it of heaven. Euseb. S. Aug. C.—What is now become of those who have heretofore filled the world with tumult and bloodshed to obtain dominion? They are confined to the land where everlasting horror and no order dwells. They would wish they had never existed, as our Saviour mentions; while those who passed through life unknown, or despised, but always seeking God, are now arrived at the summit of all their wishes. H.—O holy religion! thou explainest all these things. The just have ceased to exist: but their better part has inherited the land of the living. Yet a little while, and all will be in order and in its proper place; though that of the wicked deserves not the name. Bert.

VER. 12. Watch. Heb. "plot against." H.—Teeth. In rage to destroy him, (C.) whose virtue is a continual censure of his impiety. H.

VER. 13. Laugh. This expression is often used to denote the triumph of divine justice, whose day will set all right: that day (2 Tim. iv. 8.) which ought to be constantly before our eyes. Bert.—God cannot indeed mock at any one. C.—But the wicked "deserve scorn and vengeance." H.—Digni sunt ut irideantur in vindicta. S. Jer.—The day of their judgment or condemnation is at hand. (Ezec. xxi. 25. 1 K. xxvi. 10. H.) when they will be sought for in vain (v. 10. C.) by their foolish admirers. They will seek to hide themselves from the indignation of the Lamb.

VER. 14. Heart. Heb. "of way." Prot. "such as be of upright conversation." Only those whose heart is pure, will observe the right path. H.

VER. 15. Broken. In the form of imprecation, he foretells the event. W.—Heb. is in the future, to imply as much. Bert.

VER. 16. Wicked. Heb. "of many wicked," or "of the impious great ones." H.—What the just man hath, is preferable to the immense riches of sinners, acquired by injustice. In this sense Hesiod and Pœtacus said, "half is more than all." The wicked are never satisfied. Eccle. iv. 9. Prov. xiii. 25. Riches are a dangerous temptation, (C.) and the sentence is generally true, "every rich person is either unjust or the heir of one who has been such," (H.) aut heres injusti. S. Jer.—It is difficult for the rich to enter heaven; and the unjust are certainly excluded. Yet if we confined our views to this world, it is evident that the rich may better procure the sweets of life. Bert.

VER. 17. Arms of the body, brachia. All that they have admired perishes in death, (C.) while the just then possess true riches.

VER. 18. Days, or "ways," according to some copies of Sept. S. Aug. &c. God approves the conduct of the just. He takes notice of the time of their sufferings, and comforts them during life, (C.) yes, for ever.

VER. 20. Because. Only this verse begins with c, as the seventh does with d. H.—Smoke. All their riches shall vanish, and their works be disregarded by God. But they will not be annihilated, as they would desire; otherwise the justice of God would not be executed on them. Bert.—There is a continua. antithesis between the good and bad. The latter shall shortly lose all their splendour. "I fear, lest offending the gods, I may receive glory among men," said the poet Ibius, (C.) conformably to our Saviour's declaration concerning the vain glorious, they have received their reward. Mat. vi. 5. Heb. "shall be as the fat of lambs, consumed and reduced to smoke." H.—S. Jerom seems to have read differently, "boasting like unicorns, they shall be consumed, as smoke, they shall be consumed." Syr. and Chal. intimate that they shall be like victims, "fattened" for slaughter, and burnt. C.

VER. 21. Give. Having both the will and the power to be liberal. H.—"He shall lend without expecting any advantage, while the wicked falls into such misery as not to be able to pay his debts. This is not always the order of Providence. C.—But the just is often enabled by economy to relieve his brethren, at the same time that the libertine wastes his estate, (Bert.) or at least unjustly defers to pay his debts. M.

VER. 22. Bless him. The just, (v. 21. Prin. disc.) or rather the Lord, v. 20. Bert.—"Are blessed of him," &c. S. Jer. Chal. H.

VER. 23. With. Or by the decrees of the Lord. The Heb. and Sept. have, "By," rapa. Bert. — God gives grace to do all good, (Prov. xvi. 9. C.) and likes the way which He points out. The just also find the greatest consolation in virtue. H.

VER. 24. Him. To break the fall. Heb. "the Lord upholdeth him with his hand." Prot. H.—The just man is like a courageous wrestler, who may slip, but yields not. Orig. Euseb.—His fall is not mortal, (C.) though he may be guilty of venial sin. Prov. xxiv. W.

VER. 25. Seeking, in vain. H. Rom. and Gothic Ps. read, "wanting." This does not condemn the mendicant orders. M.—Nothing was more unusual under the old law than the extreme distress of the just: yet Job and Lazarus were reduced to it. They were not, however, discontent. C.—They found the bread of life in the conformity to God's will. Jo. iv. 34. H.—Their souls were enriched with grace, which was never wanting, as the Fathers explain this passage. Bert. Amos viii. 11.—It is certain that there were poor among the Jews; (Deut. xv. 11.) and who would assert that they were all wicked, or the children of such? Yet the prophet had not witnessed (C.) any person renowned for virtue reduced to this condition (H.) though he does not deny but it might be possible. C.—The proposition may be restrained to those who have been very charitable, and who are not often thereby reduced to want. Dan. iv. 24. Genebrard. M.—But the word just is more comprehensive; and S. Paul gives several instances of persecuted saints (Heb. xi.) which is confirmed by the parable, or rather by the history, of Lazarus. Bert.—At any rate, the Church is never deprived of the word of God. S. Aug. W.

VER. 26. Lendeth. "To receive interest," δανείζει, from God. Prov. xix. 17. S. Aug. &c. C.—He maketh known the divine word. Orig.

VER. 27. Dwell in the land of the living, rather than in that of promise, from which many just people were banished during the captivity. Bert.—He who complies with these two conditions, will inherit heaven. W.

VER. 28. Saints. Heb. "merciful ones." He will free them from captivity. C.—Punished. This sentence seems to be improperly omitted in Heb. which otherwise neglects the letter a, as the Chal. Syr. and S. Jer. do as well as a few copies of the Sept. The Rom. edit. with the Arab. and Ethiopic, reads ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐκδικηθῆναι, "the innocent shall be avenged," (C.) or "punished;" which is inaccurately put for ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐκδικηθῆναι, the wicked shall be punished, or "expelled;" (Bert.) though Grabe prefers the former verb. H.—S. Cyril acknowledges both readings. C.

32 The wicked watcheth the just man, and seeketh to put him to death.

33 But the Lord will not leave him in his hands; nor condemn him when he shall be judged.

34 Expect the Lord and keep his way: and he will exalt thee to inherit the land: when the sinners shall perish thou shalt see.

35 I have seen the wicked highly exalted, and lifted up like the cedars of Libanus.

36 And I passed by, and lo! he was not: and I sought him, and his place was not found.

37 Keep innocence, and behold justice; for there are remnants for the peaceable man.

38 But the unjust shall be destroyed together: the remnants of the wicked shall perish.

39 But the salvation of the just is from the Lord, and he is their protector in the time of trouble.

40 And the Lord will help them, and deliver them: and he will rescue them from the wicked; and save them, because they have hoped in him.

PSALM XXXVII.

DOMINE NE IN FURORE.

A prayer of a penitent for the remission of his sins. The third penitential psalm.

1 A psalm for David, for a remembrance of the sabbath.

VER. 31. Supplanted. The devil shall have no advantage over the just, (C.) who aim constantly at perfection. Orig.

VER. 32. Death, mortification. Some read perdere, or occidere. The wicked are constantly laying snares for destruction, (C.) and to draw others into mortal sin. W.

VER. 33. Judged, "by him." Illu seems to be superfluous; (Bert.) or it implies that God will revise the sentence of wicked judges. H.—The just have nothing to fear. God will pass an equitable sentence, and the condemnation of men shall do no harm. Orig.—The mistakes of human tribunals prove the necessity of a general judgment.

VER. 34. See the truth of these maxims. C.—While the wicked enjoy power they often conceal their injustice, which appears as soon as the veil is removed by death, when people cease to fear them. H.

VER. 35. Cedars, &c. Sept. have read differently from the present Heb. and present a more beautiful sense. C.—Prot. "and spreading himself like a green bay-tree, (marg. or 'a green tree that groweth in his own soil,') yet he passed away, and lo," &c. H.—Ezrach, denotes an evergreen, (Rabbins) "a laurel covered with verdure." C.—Houbigant has "a cedar," ezrach.

VER. 36. I passed. This is better than the Heb. "it has passed," transiit, as a tree changes not its place, and all the ancient interpreters agree with us. Bert.—His place, is not expressed in Heb. But it implies that every vestige of the proud is soon lost. This might serve to curb the violence of those who disturb mankind! H.—The wicked may here refer to Nabuchodonosor, the devil, Judas, &c. C.—We may behold the riches of sinners with our bodily eyes: but if we consider them with the eyes of faith, they presently vanish. S. Amb. S. Aug.

VER. 37. Remnants, or rewards. W.—Heb. acharith, "the reward," (Pag.) "the last end of man is peace," (Mont. H.) or "the posterity (v. 38.) of such a man shall be happy." C.—"There are future things for the peaceful." Sym.—The expectations of the just are not confined to this world. They have something laid up for heaven, whereas the wicked have nothing. H.—These lose all by death; and the thought makes them take refuge in the foolish hope of being annihilated. Bert.

VER. 38. Together.—At the last day, (H.) or all without exception shall perish; the wicked, with their posterity and riches. W.

VER. 39. Silencium. This is an effect of God's grace. W.

PSALM XXXVII. &c. VER. 1. For a remembrance, viz of our miseries and sins; and to be sung on the Sabbath day. Ch.—This sabbath might also allude to the indolent rest which occasioned the fall of David. 2 K. xi. 1. H.—Heb. mentions not the sabbath; and it is not known (C.) why the Sept. made this addition. The prophet may have Christ suffering for our sins in view, (Bert.) though he probably composed this psalm when he was afflicted with an illness after his fall. Rab. Muis. &c. C.—It contains an excellent model for penitents, (C.) to enable them to regain peace of conscience, (S. Greg.) and paradise, from which they are banished by sin. S. Aug.—This remembrance (W.) is most essential. H.

VER. 2. Wrath. God is incapable of passion: but man deserves to be treated with the utmost rigour: and this David deprecates, begging that God would act rather like a physician in his regard. Theod. C.—The same petition occurs in psalm vi.; and this ought to caution people not to make imprecations, since God's judgments are so terrible. Bert.—S. Aug. and S. Greg. explain this text of the fire of hell, and of purgatory. 1 Cor. iii. 15. H.—though some be saved by the latter, "yet is that fire more grievous than whatever man can suffer in this life." S. Aug.—"I esteem that transitory fire more intolerable than all

2 REBUKE me not, O Lord, in thy indignation; nor chastise me in thy wrath.

3 For thy arrows are fastened in me: and thy hand hath been strong upon me.

4 There is no health in my flesh, because of thy wrath: there is no peace for my bones, because of my sins.

5 For my iniquities are gone over my head: and as a heavy burden are become heavy upon me.

6 My sores are putrified and corrupted, because of my foolishness.

7 I am become miserable, and am bowed down even to the end: I walk sorrowful all the day long.

8 For my loins are filled with illusions: and there is no health in my flesh.

9 I am afflicted and humbled exceedingly: I roared with the groaning of my heart.

10 Lord, all my desire is before thee, and my groaning is not hidden from thee.

11 My heart is troubled, my strength hath left me, and the light of my eyes itself is not with me.

12 My friends and my neighbours have drawn near, and stood against me.

And they that were near me stood afar off: 13 and they that sought my soul used violence.

* Supra vi. 2.

present tribulation. S. Greg. W.—We may therefore pray. "Here burn," &c. with the same S. Aug. who assures us, (Gen. con. Man. ii. 20) that "he who cultivates not the field of his soul, will, after this life, experience either the fire of purgatory or eternal punishment." H.

VER. 3. Arrows. Afflictions. (W.) or the word of God, which convert the sinner. S. Aug.—The admonition of Nathan had made the deepest impression on David. He was also visited by sickness, like Job vi. 4. and xix. 21.

VER. 4. Sins. These occasion my great affliction, when I reflect on thy justice. W.—I chastise myself. Euseb.—S. Aug. explains all this of original sin. C.—Jesus bore the weight of all our sins, which are above our comprehension, v. 5. Bert.

VER. 5. Me. They press upon me like a deluge or huge weight. C.—The sin of David had many aggravations. Bert.—His punishment was also great. C.—His spirit was almost overwhelmed, as the sins which are not bewailed, bring on other transgressions. W.—It is not so much sin as the neglect of penance, which destroys men. Bert.—This folly is here acknowledged by David. H.

VER. 6. Foolishness, or sin. Shame has made me conceal the state of my soul; and hence the evil has increased. S. Jer. &c. C.—The poisoned wound has infected other parts which were sound: (W.) chaburah denotes sores, or "wounds still fresh or mortifying," (H.) rather than scars. M.—All sin is properly styled foolishness, as no prudent man should commit any. Orig.

VER. 7. End. Heb. "exceedingly," while a person feels his state is not desperate. Bert.—Sorrowful. Heb. "in black," which may refer either to the mourning attire, (C.) or to the "countenance." Sym.—Grief will allow me to take no rest. Orig.—I dare not look up to heaven, (C.) nor can I walk straight, to perform any good work (W.) of myself. H.

VER. 8. Loins. Voas, as the Alex. and Comp. Sept. read, though the Vat. has phox, soul, (H.) with the Arab. &c. —Illusions. Heb. nickle, "burning." Pagn.—"shameful ulcer." Houb.—"Ignominy." S. Jer. H.—David acknowledges that the irregular motions of concupiscence were an effect of his transgression. The Jews and Greeks place these sensations in the loins. 3 K. viii. 10. Plato triplicem finxit animam, cujus principium in capite, iram in pectore, cupiditatem subter præcordia locavit. Cicero, Tusc. 1. C.—Flesh. Concupiscence striving in me.

VER. 9. Heart. I give vent to my inward grief by loud lamentations.

VER. 10. Desire, to be restored to thy favour. W.—Thou alone canst heal me. C.

VER. 11. Troubled. Heb. "beasts," palpitat. Houb.—Itself. Heb. "even they are," &c. H.—I was no longer enlivened with the spirit of prophecy, (S. Bas.) till my conversion, (S. Aug.) nor an object of favour. H.—I was abandoned to myself (C.) quitting thy light. S. Amb.—My eyes have been hurt by weeping (H.) and maladies (C.) while my heart is become so corrupt, that I do not relish or discern spiritual things. H.—The beauty of virtue, and the enormity of vice, do not strike me. M.

VER. 12. Have. Heb. "over against my wound (H.) or leprosy." C. Prot. "stand aloof from my sore." H.—But the original means rather "near to." Sept. may have read u for i in night. Bert.—But Sym. and S. Jerom translate, "stood against my leprosy, (H.) and my neighbour stood at a distance;" as if they had been afraid of the contagion. Job (xix. 13. 19.) makes the same complaints. C.—These manners of worldlings may be seen in every age, and ought not to fill us with surprise. Bert. Jo. xv. 18. —David was abandoned by Achitophel, and by most of the tribe of Juda, (Theod.) as our Saviour was by his disciples. S. Aug.

VER. 13. Violence. Heb. "laid snares." This treatment might be expected

And they that sought evils to me spoke vain things, and studied deceits all the day long.

14 But I, as a deaf man, heard not: and as a dumb man not opening his mouth.

15 And I became as a man that heareth not: and that hath no reproofs in his mouth.

16 For in thee, O Lord, have I hoped: thou wilt hear me, O Lord my God.

17 For I said: Lest at any time my enemies rejoice over me: and whilst my feet are moved, they speak great things against me.

18 For I am ready for scourges: and my sorrow is continually before me.

19 For I will declare my iniquity: and I will think for my sin.

20 But my enemies live, and are stronger than I: and they that hate me wrongfully, are multiplied.

21 They that render evil for good, have detracted me, because I followed goodness.

22 Forsake me not, O Lord, my God: do not thou depart from me.

23 Attend unto my help, O Lord, the God of my salvation.

PSALM XXXVIII.

DIXI CUSTODIAM.

A just man's peace and patience in his sufferings; considering the vanity of the world, and the providence of God.

1 Unto the end, for Idithun himself, a canticle of David.

from enemies, since friends proved so treacherous. H.—They would willingly have slain David. The will is often put for the deed. C.—Things. Endeavouring to engage me again in sin, being displeased because I had quitted their evil company; (W.) or they raise their fortune, by causing dissensions in the state. This might be well applied to the Pharisees, who persecuted Christ.

VER. 14. Mouth. I utterly renounce all sin. W.—David would make no reply to Semei, (Theod.) nor our Saviour to Pilate. C.—Silence is often the best defence. H.—Eagerness to justify one's self, causes trouble and disedification. Bert.—The prophet joins the deaf and dumb; as those who have naturally the former defect, are also affected with the latter. Pliny x. 69. H.

VER. 16. Hoped. This was the reason of his silence. Bert.—He knew that God was in a manner engaged to defend those (C.) who rely (W.) wholly on Him; and he declared such to be his disposition. H.—Hear me. The same term thahane means, "wilt answer" (Mont.) as a judge and advocate. H.—God will one day manifest the justice of his elect. Bert.

VER. 17. For. On this account I turn to thee, and entreat thee not to suffer my enemies to gain the victory. W.—My humble and earnest prayer is another motive of confidence.—My enemies is not expressed in Heb. C.—I decline saying any thing in my own defence, lest I should offend God. M.

VER. 18. Scourges. Prot. to "halt," letselah. H.—S. Jer. ad plagas. Chal. "for calamity." (Bert.) See Ps. xxxiv. 16. I speak not through impatience, as I know that my sin deserves still more. C.—I resign myself to thee. W.—This was admirably verified in Jesus Christ, the victim for our sins. C.—Before me. I cannot forget my transgression. H.

VER. 19. Sin. Though Thou knowest all things, I will confess that I may be saved; and will meditate on what I have deserved. W.—He goes to the source of his malady. C.—"Be not secure after confession of thy sin, as being always ready to confess and to offend. Declare thy iniquity in such a manner as to take care on account of thy sin." S. Aug.—Confession without repentance is only a mockery. H.

VER. 20. Stronger. Heb. "strong, and they," &c. H.—Art thou deaf to my cries? C.

VER. 21. Detracted me, by insinuating that my repentance is hypocrisy. Another mode of detracting is by making known secret faults, (W.) as calumny imputes false ones. H.—Goodness. Sept. "justice." Many Greek and Latin copies add: "They have rejected me, the beloved, (Theod. Arab.) as one dead, as an abomination."—Forsake, v. 22. S. Amb. C.

VER. 23. Attend. Heb. "hasten;" which is the sense of προσχεῖς, "attend." Sept. H.

PSAL. XXXVIII. &c. VER. 1. Idithun was one of the four chief masters of music, called Ethan, 1 Par. vi. 44. and Idithun ib. xvi. 41. Some think that he was the author of this psalm; but it was rather given to him by David to sing. C.—The title shews that the psalms were designed for the public service of the Church, and not for David alone. Bert.—This refers to the Christian Church, though some explain it of the Jews in captivity, (W.) with R. Salomon, while others think that it was composed during some of David's persecutions. It is connected with the preceding, and with the two next psalms. C.

VER. 2. Tongue. The matter is very delicate and important. James iii. 2. Prov. xviii. 21. Is. xxxii. 17. Eccl. xxii. 33. and xxviii. 28.—Me, and was treating me with injustice and calumny. H.—Chilo, the sage, said: "I know how

2 I SAID: I will take heed to my ways: that I sin not with my tongue.

I have set a guard to my mouth, when the sinner stood against me.

3 I was dumb, and was humbled, and kept silence from good things: and my sorrow was renewed.

4 My heart grew hot within me: and in my meditation a fire shall flame out.

5 I spoke with my tongue: O Lord, make me know my end,

And what is the number of my days: that I may know what is wanting to me.

6 Behold thou hast made my days measurable: and my substance is as nothing before thee.

And indeed all things are vanity: every man living.

7 Surely man passeth as an image: yea, and he is disquieted in vain.

He storeth up: and he knoweth not for whom he shall gather these things.

8 And now what is my hope? is it not the Lord? and my substance is with thee.

9 Deliver thou me from all my iniquities; thou hast made me a reproach to the fool.

10 I was dumb, and I opened not my mouth, because thou hast done it. 11 Remove thy scourges from me.

12 The strength of thy hand hath made me faint in rebukes: thou hast corrected man for iniquity.

to bear ill treatment," (Laert. 1.) and this is a proof of "the greatest wisdom and virtue." H.—Ουτος ἀπαίματος. Menand. C.—Weak men seek revenge; but the wise resolve to govern their tongues, and do not stand up in their own just defence, though they be, therefore, more persecuted. W.

VER. 3. Renewed. I was conscious of no offence against my enemies, (H.) but I reflected that I had forfeited my virtue, (Euseb.) and therefore gave vent to my grief. H.—Being afraid of saying any thing amiss, I refrained from saying what was good. But I perceived that this was wrong. S. Aug.—I deprived myself of all pleasure. C.—The seven first verses detail the arguments used by philosophers to comfort man, which all prove of little service. We must have recourse to God, v. 8. Bert.

VER. 4. Out. This alludes to his sorrow for his sins, (Orig.) or to the fire of charity, which is enkindled by meditation on the last end, &c. (v. 5.) or rather it means, that while he repressed his tongue, he could not but feel an inward zeal and indignation, (C.) in consequence of grief suppressed. W.—See Jer. xx. 9. M.

VER. 5. End, as I desire to die, like Elias, 3 K. xix. W.—The just have frequently expressed such sentiments, to move God to pity, (Job vii. 1. Ps. ci. 4.) though they wished to live, that they might praise God on earth, (C.) if it were his will. H.—This text may indicate the impatience (Bert.) of the mere philosopher, (H.) or David desires to know to what a degree of perfection he must arrive. Orig. S. Amb.

VER. 6. Measurable. Heb. "of a hand's breadth." H.—Sym. "a spithame, or twelve fingers' breadth," perhaps in allusion to the Greek proverb, a "spithame of life," which denotes one very short. Drus.—The Gr. copies vary: some read, (C.) with the Vat. παλαιάς, "ancient," and others of the palestra with the Alex. παλαιστράς, or "contentious." I am obliged always to wrestle with my adversaries. Grot.—My days are short, and spent in conflicts. H.—S. Chrys. S. Amb. &c. mention both. The former word is adopted by the Arab. Ethiop. &c.; but the Heb. has tephachoth, "of a palm," or four fingers' breadth; (C.) and S. Jer. breves, "short." H.—Substance. S. Jer. "life." Heb. "age."—Living. Heb. "standing," how well soever he may seem to be established. Prot. "at his best estate, is altogether vanity." Selah." H.—The wisest of men confirms this at large, Eccl. i. 1. C. Jam. iv. 14.—"What is this long while which has an end?" Cic. pro. Marcel. M.

VER. 7. Image, "of God." S. Greg. &c. Heb. "in a shadow or darkness," where the fall of a leaf affrights him. Life is so short and miserable, why should we strive to heap up riches? C.—For whom. Heb. "who shall gather," &c. H.—The term is used respecting harvest rather than money. C.—Heb. has disquieted in the plural, and the rest of the words in the singular; but S. Jerom agrees with us, conturbatur . . & ignorat cui dimittat ea. H.—The prophet still utters complaints. One step farther is necessary to ensure peace. Bert.—He acknowledges that his life is but a shadow, and that we ought not to grieve for temporal losses. W.

VER. 8. Substance. Sept. hypostasis. Heb. "hope." H.—I can depend only on thee. C.

VER. 9. Thou hast. Heb. lo, "do not;" ne, or nonne; or "hast thou not made?" &c. as the following verse intimates. Bert.—Thou hast suffered me to be reproached by the foolish, who prosper in this world. W.—The fool may denote the devil, (S. Jer. Orig.) and all the lovers of iniquity. Flam. C.

And thou hast made his soul to waste away like a spider: surely in vain is any man disquieted.

13 Hear my prayer, O Lord, and my supplication; give ear to my tears.

Be not silent; for I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were.

14 O forgive me, that I may be refreshed, before I go hence, and be no more.

PSALM XXXIX.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI

Christ's coming, and redeeming mankind.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David himself.

2 WITH expectation I have waited for the Lord, and he was attentive to me.

3 And he heard my prayers, and brought me out of the pit of misery and the mire of dregs.

And he set my feet upon a rock, and directed my steps.

4 And he put a new canticle into my mouth, a song to our God.

Many shall see, and shall fear: and they shall hope in the Lord.

VER. 10. It. S. Aug. reads "me," conformably to some copies of the Sept. Arab. &c. C.—He is at a loss to explain the reason of the prophet, and suggests that this perhaps ought to be referred to the following sentence, "Because thou hast made me, remove," &c. H.—Such is the inconvenience of having incorrect copies. Amama.—The Alex. and Vat. Sept. both have me, (II.) which is omitted in Complut. C.—David knew that he was scourged by divine Providence. W.

VER. 11. In (thy) rebukes, belongs to the next verse in Heb. and Sept. referring to man in general, unless the prophet mean himself. Bert.

VER. 12. Spider. S. Jer. "moth." Sym. "thou dissolvest like corruption his desirable thing;" (II.) which means the soul, (Bert.) or "beauty." Prot. Remorse of conscience and God's judgments make a man pine away.—Disquieted is omitted in the Sept. S. Jer. ad Sun. C.—It is not found in the Alex. and Comp. edit. (II.) and seems to be taken from v. 7. It does not alter the sense. Bert.—"Man is vanity always." S. Jer.—As a spider which has consumed its moisture, so he decays. W.

VER. 13. Were. 1 Par. xxix. 15. I can expect aid from no other but thee. C.—Heaven is our home. W.—"Life is a travelling from home." Plato in Alcibiades.

VER. 14. More. In a state to do good. W.—Grant me relief. Eccl. ix. 10. Job vii. 8. C.

PSAL. XXXIX. &c. Psalm. Prot. intimate that this was not in the Heb.; but we find mizmor, "canticle," which is equivalent. H.—David speaks of his own restoration to health as a figure of Jesus Christ, who is principally intended, Heb. x. 7. The end of the psalm is nearly the same with the 69th. C.—Some arbitrarily (Bert.) explain the words with relation to the revolt of Absalom. Bossuet.—Others think it may refer to the captives, (Ven. Bede) to Daniel, or Jeremias, rescued from prison. See Theodoret, who explains it of men waiting for the general resurrection. It may express the sentiments of the Church, when the persecutions ceased. Euthym.—Christ sometimes speaks in his own name, and sometimes in that of his members. S. Amb. S. Aug. C.—It is certain that David had Christ in view; and if he allude to himself, it is only as the figure of him. Bert.

VER. 2. Expectation, or patience. H.—God has, at last, granted my request.

VER. 3. Misery. Heb. "confusion," (Bert.) or "noise," (S. Jer. H.) from the greatest danger. Theod.—Dregs. Mud. Jer. xxxviii. 6. S. Aug. &c. explain this of the Christian saved by faith from the sink of his sins. C.

VER. 4. New. Excellent. H.—I was before uttering complaints, now I give thanks with joy, for my health and conversion. C.—Song. Heb. "Praise." The penitent changes his language, which is no longer understood by worldlings. Bert.—Many. S. Aug. reads, the just, who take part in the welfare of their brethren, (Ps. xxxi. 11.) while the wicked are filled with alarm, at the ways of God; who humbles or exalts people as he pleases. C.

VER. 5. Vanities. Heb. "the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies." Prot. H.—All the world is vanity, (Ps. xxxviii. 6. &c. C.) though idolatry may be here meant. S. Cyr.

VER. 6. Thoughts, or designs, "over us," as Heb. adds. No one can fathom the counsels of the Lord. It is folly, therefore, to attack his mysteries. H.—Like. Prot.—"and thy thoughts which are to usward, they cannot be reckoned up in order unto thee." Lit. non ordinare apud te. Mont. H.—But haroc means also equipare, which corresponds with the Vulg. Bert.—Syr. "none is comparable to thee." C.—Number. Christ and his apostles preached, so that many followed their doctrine. W.—David also had many witnesses of his gratitude. They crowded round him. Some would improperly make multiplicati sunt, agree with mirabilia, discalogismi, which is in the masculine. Bert.—"I find no order before thee; if I would declare and number, they are more (wonders) than can be counted." S. Jer. H.—I am at a loss how to express myself, and must be content with the interior sentiments of gratitude. See Ps. lxx. 15. C.

VER. 7. Sacrifice and oblation. Neither bloody nor unbloody sacrifices of the law will do. M.—Pierced ears. Sept. and S. Paul read, a body thou hast fitted to 5 Blessed is the man whose trust is in the name of the Lord: and who hath not had regard to vanities, and lying follies.

6 Thou hast multiplied thy wonderful works, O Lord, my God: and in thy thoughts there is not one like to thee.

I have declared and I have spoken: they are multiplied above number.

7 *Sacrifice and oblation thou didst not desire; but thou hast pierced ears for me.

Burnt-offering and sin-offering thou didst not require: 8 then said I, Behold I come.

In the head of the book it is written of me, 9 that I should do thy will: O my God, I have desired it, and thy law in the midst of my heart.

10 I have declared thy justice in a great church; lo, I will not restrain my lips: O Lord, thou knowest it.

11 I have not hid thy justice within my heart: I have declared thy truth, and thy salvation.

I have not concealed thy mercy and thy truth from a great council.

* Heb. x. 5.

me. Heb. x. 5. H.—Nobilius mentions, that he found the reading of the Vulg. in one Gr. MS. in Eus. &c.—The Arab. has both. "Thou hast prepared a body for me, and opened my ears." C.—Both are, in effect, of divine authority. The version adopted by S. Paul, cannot be rejected, no more than the Heb. confirmed by the Vulg. James Pierce asserts, that the Heb. is incorrect, oznam being put for az zip, "then a body," as the letters are not unlike. The dissertation is ingenious: the author is, however, suspected of Socinianism. We know not the reason why the Vulg. here abandons the Sept. The sense is much the same; the prophet noticing the entire obedience of the Messias, (Bert.) and the apostle comprising his whole person. M.—His body was miraculous, (II.) and the incarnation the work of God. C.—Nothing could come up to his submission. "Thou hast dug ears for me," (S. Jer. H.) alluding to the custom of making slaves for ever, (Ex. xxi. 5.) or "thou hast fitted, (C.) opened, (Prot.) my ears," enabling me to hear, and to obey. H.—The sacrifice of Christ was never interrupted, from the first moment of his incarnation. C.—He was always doing the will of his Father. H.—This sacrifice is the most essential. God rejected all such as were destitute of this condition, or were not offered by people determined to observe the whole law. 1 K. xv. 22. Is. i. 11. Jer. vii. 22. Porphy. Abs. ii. C.—No sacrifice of the Old Testament was sufficient to satisfy God's justice for sin. Christ, by the ear of obedience, performed the redemption of man by his death, as was determined from eternity. See Heb. x. W.—And is omitted in the Lat. version of S. Paul, holocaustum pro peccato, inadvertently, or rather to intimate, that he was speaking of the holocaust of expiation. Heb. x. 6. 8. and xiii. 11. and Lev. xvi. 27. Bert.—S. Aug. also admits only one species of sacrifice, "holocausts likewise for sin." But others distinguish them from the victims destined to expiate the sins of individuals, (Lev. v. &c.) of which the prophet also speaks. C.

VER. 8. Head, or beginning, (Gen. i. Jo. i. and viii. 25. S. Jer. &c.) or at the commencement of this book of Psalms, (S. Aug.) or rather in the whole Bible. C.—Kephais denotes a volume, (Suidas) or stick, on which books were formerly rolled, being written on parchment. The Jews still observe the same custom in their synagogues. C. Lu. iv. 17. 20.—Heb. "In the volume of the book," means, in the book, (Amama) or the Bible, which is the book by excellence, where the incarnation and death of Christ, for man's redemption, are clearly specified. H.—This is the sum of the Scriptures. W.—They bear witness to Christ. Jo. v. 39. Luke xxiv. 27. H.—The apostle uses the word capitulum, for the sum. Heb. viii. Whatever sense be chosen, we should meditate on this head, or volume. But Christ signed, as it were, this solemn engagement, from all eternity. If we adopt the passage to David, we may translate, "I come, having on me the volume of thy Scriptures." See 4 K. xi. 12. C.

VER. 9. Heart. So the Vat. Sept. reads; while other editions have kidias, "belly." S. Jer. ad Sum.—Heb. "bowels." H.—The sense is the same. Bert.—I love the law so much, that I would hide it in my bowels, (C.) or in the most secret place. Theod.

VER. 10. Thy, is not expressed in Heb. or Gr. but understood. Bert.—Church, in the tabernacle, (Theod.) or rather in the Catholic Church; the propagation of which, (H.) and the preaching of the gospel throughout the world are foretold. W.—The justice, or mercies of our Saviour, are every where proclaimed. S. Jer. C.

VER. 11. Thy. Some copies of the Sept. have, my justice, as well as the Ethiopic version. Eus. S. Aug. &c. C.—But the Vulg. is more correct. Bert.—Council. Christ conceals not his mercy and truth from the greatest and wisest congregations. He spoke boldly before Annas and Caiaphas, as S. Paul did at Athens, &c. W.—David testifies his gratitude, and invites all to praise God with him. C.—But we must particularly learn from our Saviour, a horror of sin; the knowledge of his mysteries; confidence in his mercy; and a conviction, that we can never be saved but by his grace. He has announced these things, and then he finishes his career, by suffering for us, and pours forth his supplications to God. Bert.

12 Withhold not thou, O Lord, thy tender mercies from me; thy mercy and thy truth have always upheld me.

13 For evils without number have surrounded me; my iniquities have overtaken me, and I was not able to see.

They are multiplied above the hairs of my head: and my heart hath forsaken me.

14 Be pleased, O Lord, to deliver me: *look down, O Lord, to help me.

15 *Let them be confounded and ashamed together, that seek after my soul to take it away.

Let them be turned backward, and be ashamed, that desire evils to me.

16 Let them immediately bear their confusion, that say to me: 'Tis well, 'tis well.

17 Let all that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee: and let such as love thy salvation say always: The Lord be magnified.

18 But I am a beggar and poor; the Lord is careful for me.

Thou art my helper and my protector: O my God, be not slack.

* Infra lxxix. 2.

VER. 12. Withhold not. The prophet now speaks in the name of Christ's mystical body, the Church, praying to be made a partaker of mercy, and to be delivered from evils, (W) or Christ speaks as the victim for our sins. H.—Upheld me. This might be also rendered as a prayer, "May thy," &c. with the Heb. and some copies of the Sept. Bert.

VER. 13. My iniquities. That is, the sins of all mankind, which I have taken upon me. Ch. C.—The sins even of those who believe, are so numerous, that they cannot be seen in particular. We may faint at the sight of so many sins committed by Christians. W.—Forsaken me in the agony. C.—Christ had all the sins of mankind laid upon him. Bert.—He did not suffer to release those who were already damned; though they had received sufficient graces, in consequence of the merits of his future death. H.—Christ knew the number and enormity of sin. M.—But he would not disclose his knowledge. H. Mar. vi. 5. M.

VER. 14. Be pleased. The rest is nearly transcribed. Ps. lxxix. C.—The Church prays for her weak members. W.

VER. 15. Backward, as those who came to seize Christ were twice. Jo. xviii. 6.—He prays for their conversion. S.—Shame might have proved very salutary to them. Theod.—The reprobate will be confounded. W.

VER. 16. 'Tis well. The Hebrew here is an interjection of insult and derision, like the Vah. Mat. xxvii. 40. Ch.—As S. Jerom here expresses it, Vah, Vah. See Mark xv. 29. M.—The Jews have now become objects of contempt, (C.) a just punishment (H) of scoffers, who wish evil to the good.

VER. 17. Magnified. Thus may those speak, who sincerely love God. W.

VER. 18. Beggar. King David might assume this title, as well as all mankind. S. Aug.—The same may be applied to Christ, according to his human nature, as the end of this psalm, and the following, belong to him, more than to David. C.—He speaks in the name of penitents, whose sins he had undertaken to wash away. W.—Careful. Heb. "will think of me." H.—Slack. The faithful prayed for the coming of our Saviour, as they still entreat him to hasten the reward of the good. W.

PSAL. XL. VER. 1. Himself; implying, that David composed this psalm, though the word is not expressed in Heb. or Gr. Berthier. T. iii.—The same articles, however, occur, which have been thus rendered before. H.—Some explain this psalm of the sickness of Ezekias, (Ven. Bede) or of that of David, a little before the revolt of Absalom. Rab. Muis. Bossuet.—This may be described as a figure of our Saviour's sufferings. C.—For it would be rash not to acknowledge, that He is here the principal object in view, (Theod.) since he has applied (v. 10.) to the traitor's conduct, (C.) and all the rest may properly allude to the same events. The psalmist speaks of the Messias in the six first verses, and introduces him, in the remainder, uttering his own sentiments, (Bert.) respecting his passion and resurrection. W. Isai. liii. 4. M.

VER. 2-3. Understandeth. Believing with eagerness, (H.) or reflecting seriously on Jesus Christ, (Bert.) who was pleased to be poor for our sakes. H.—And the poor, is not in the ancient Sept. (Eus.) nor Heb. &c. But it only expresses the same idea as the word needy, (Bert.) being added to show the extreme misery to which our Saviour was reduced. H.—The Fathers explain the passage in this sense, though some would suppose, that David speaks of his own conduct, (C.) or of those who adhered to him in his distress, while most followed Absalom. Flam.—Day of death or judgment. Happy the man, who makes the life of Christ his constant meditation, (Bert.) and endeavours to imitate his example, and divine charity! H.—The Church recites this psalm for the sick. Those who assist them may hope for similar treatment. But such as are not scandalized at Christ, on account of his poverty and afflictions, may be pronounced blessed, (Lu. vii. 23.) as He will deliver them from distress, if they place their confidence in Him. W.—The sick are relieved, when they think on Christ's sufferings. M.—Preserve. Heb. "will preserve . . . and thou

PSALM XL.

BEATUS QUI INTELLIGIT

The happiness of him that shall believe in Christ; notwithstanding the humility and poverty in which he shall come: the malice of his enemies, especially of the traitor Judas.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David himself.

2 BLESSED is he that understandeth concerning the needy and the poor: the Lord will deliver him in the evil day.

3 The Lord preserve him and give him life, and make him blessed upon the earth: and deliver him not up to the will of his enemies.

4 The Lord help him on his bed of sorrow: thou hast turned all his couch in his sickness.

5 I said: O Lord, be thou merciful to me: heal my soul, for I have sinned against thee.

6 My enemies have spoken evils against me: when shall he die and his name perish?

7 And if he came in to see me, he spoke vain things; his heart gathered together iniquity to itself.

He went out and spoke to the same purpose.

8 All my enemies whispered together against me: they devised evils to me.

* Supra xxxiv. 4.

will not deliver him unto the will of his enemies." Prot. —But S. Jerom has "and he will not," &c. H.—Sixtus V. reads, "into the hands of his enemy," after S. Aug. &c. Others add, "he will purify his soul from, or on the earth." C.—Our Lord will give to such servants more grace in this life, and glory in the next, nor will he suffer them to yield to temptation. W.—He will defend them and heal them, when sick. C.

VER. 4. His bed. Lit. "on the bed of his sorrow." His, seems to have been formerly in Heb. (Houb.) though it be now omitted, (Bert.) as it was in the time of Sym. "the bed of misery," (S. Jer.) of infirmity.—Thou hast. Heb. "thou wilt make." Prot. "turn," (marg. H.) "change, or take away." In the east, the bed was removed entirely, (Jo. v. 8.) and this expression may denote, (C.) that the sick man should be cured, and no longer be confined to his bed. (S. Chrys.) or that God would take him by the hand, to support him, and turn his bed, like a tender mother, to make it more comfortable. Geneb. C.—When the just are sick unto death, Christ will give them greater consolation. W.—He will withdraw their affections from all terrestrial things and remove whatever has been dangerous to them. S. Greg. Mor. xxiii. 15. The ineffable name has been thrice repeated in these verses, to insinuate, that all good is wrought by the blessed Trinity. Bert.

VER. 5. Thee. Christ prays for his members, acknowledging their sins, (W.) which he had undertaken to expiate. The Fathers explain this of his prayer in the garden. C.—Have we ever reflected on sin, which reduced the Lord of all to such poverty and distress? Bert.

VER. 6. Perish? When shall we have a change, and see Absalom on the throne? When shall we get rid of this man, who reproves our conduct? So were the Jews animated to destroy Christ. Theod.—The rest of the psalm more visibly relates to him. C.—His enemies were greatly disappointed. H.—For after they had put him to death, he rose again, and his name and kingdom became more glorious. W.

VER. 7. If he, any one among my enemies. H.—The Scriptures often pass from the plural to the singular, (Bert.) to comprise every one distinctly. H.—Yet S. Aug. &c. read, "they came," &c. omitting if, as some of the Sept. edit. do likewise: though inaccurately, according to S. Jer. and Sun. C.—It occurs in the Rom. copy, and Grabe inserts it in a smaller type. The sense is not altered. H.—The conspirators affected to shew David some marks of civility, to obtain their ends. The Jews often strove to entangle Jesus, by their questions, (Matt. xix. 3. and xxii. 17. 24. and Jo. viii. 3.) while Judas continued in his company, to gratify his own avarice, and to betray him. C.—Such were their vain projects. H.—Those who came maliciously to hear Christ, blamed him as an enemy to the law, or as one who cast out devils by Beelzebub. W.

VER. 8. To me, seems useless, though it be added conformably to the Heb. (Bert.) or rather it intimates, that the enemies made no secret of their plots. H.

VER. 9. Word of affecting the regal power, &c. S. Amb.—No more? Jesus Christ speaks. They have unjustly condemned me: But can I not rise again? or the words may be put in the mouth of his enemies. Shall we have any thing to fear from the dead? If we were to confine him only, he might perhaps escape. C.—Heb. "an evil disease, say they; cleaveth fast unto him: and now that he lieth, he shall rise up no more." Prot.—"The word of the devil they poured out among themselves; he who hath slept, shall rise no more." S. Jer.—Yet lo may be explained, an non, "shall not he," &c. Sept. have seen this insulting interrogation of the Jews who ridiculed what Christ had said of his future resurrection. Bert.—They determined to put him to death; but they could not prevent his glorious (W.) appearance again on the third day. H.—Those who explain this of David, say, that the sleep denotes a mortal illness, or a grievous fault, for which it was expected, that the king would die. Kimchi. Munster. &c.

9 They determined against me an unjust word: shall he that sleepeth rise again no more?

10 For even the man of my peace, in whom I trusted, who eat my bread, hath greatly supplanted me.

11 But thou, O Lord, have mercy on me, and raise me up again: and I will requite them.

12 By this I know, that thou hast had a good will for me: because my enemy shall not rejoice over me.

13 But thou hast upheld me by reason of my innocence: and hast established me in thy sight for ever.

14 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from eternity to eternity So be it. So be it.

PSALM XLI.

QUEMADMODUM DESIDERAT.

The fervent desire of the just after God: hope in afflictions.

1 Unto the end, understanding for the sons of Core.

2 AS the hart panteth after the fountains of water; so my soul panteth after thee, O God.

3 My soul hath thirsted after the strong living God; when shall I come and appear before the face of God?

4 My tears have been my bread day and night, whilst it is said to me daily: Where is thy God?

5 These things I remembered, and poured out my soul in me: for I shall go over into the place of the wonderful tabernacle, even to the house of God:

With the voice of joy and praise; the noise of one feasting.

6 Why art thou sad, O my soul; and why dost thou trouble me?

VER. 10. Bread. This characterizes the traitor, who had received the holy Communion, and had been entrusted with the purse by our Saviour, yet betrayed him with the sign of peace. C.—To violate the laws of hospitality was greatly resented by the very pagans. Plut. Symp. vii. 4.—Supplanted me, or kicked like a wild colt, as Plato complained that Aristotle had done, when he set up another school. H. ἡμῶν ἀνταδραστής. Laert. Elian iv. 9.—David might allude to Absalom, though the Holy Ghost speaks of Judas. C.—Our Saviour himself says, (W.) that the Scriptures may be fulfilled, he that eateth bread with me, shall lift up his heel against me: Qui emanducal mecum panem levabit contra me calcaneum suum: ἐπῆρεν ἐν' αὐτὴν τὴν πτέρυν αὐτοῦ, "has lifted up," &c. as the Heb. expresses it here. Judas had attempted to betray Christ already, and would do it more effectually hereafter; so that both the present and future might agree with him. We also find the psalm translated qui edebat panes meos, &c. But the difference is very small. H.—To lift up the heel, is the posture of one who attempts to supplant his adversary. M.

VER. 11. Them. No one is ignorant of the destruction of Jerusalem, and of the miserable condition of the Jews (M.) throughout the world. C.—Christ will render every one according to his deserts. W.

VER. 12. Over me. Thus the divinity of Christ was proved, since he rose victorious, in spite of his enemies. C.

VER. 13. Innocence. Jesus was the spotless lamb incapable of sin. He effaced it by his blood, and is therefore crowned with glory. Heb. ii. 9. Phil. ii. 9. C.—This innocence made him a fit victim for sin. W.

VER. 14. So be it. Chul. "Amen." This word at the beginning of a discourse, implies an affirmative oath; (Matt. vi. 13.) and at the end, it is a mark of approbation. Num. v. 22.—Here the Jews terminate the first book of the psalms, which they divide into five. C.—S. Jerom rejects this division, as our Saviour mentions only the psalms, and the last psalm has no such conclusion. W. It has Alleluia. All the rest have Amen. See Ps. lxxii. lxxxix. cvi. Heb. Birt.—The observations which have been made in this first part, will serve to explain many other passages, on which we shall therefore be shorter, as well as in specifying the variations from the original, which are for the most part only apparent, as the intelligent reader may be convinced, by the preceding remarks. H.

PSAL. XLI. VER. 1. Understanding. See Ps. xxxi. M.—Core, who composed (T.) or sung (M.) most of the psalms in this second part. T.—Pieces of a joyful nature were generally assigned to them, according to the Jews and S. Jer. Ps. lxxxiv. M.—They were descendants of the famous schismatic, the miraculous preservation of whose innocent children teaches us, that the good will not be punished with the guilty, and that we must be raised above this earth, lest hell devour us. Num. xvi. 31. and xxvi. 10. W.—The sentiments of the captives, (C.) and of every sincere Christian, are here expressed. S. Aug.—David may have been the author, (C.) as it is generally believed. Bert.

VER. 2. Waters. This was sung at the baptism of Catechumens, (S. Aug.) teaching them to thirst after heaven. H.—The hart being infected with poison, thirsts exceedingly, as sinners must do for pardon. W.

VER. 3. Strong. Most Bibles before Clement VIII. read "fountain." C.—El signifies both God and strong. Bert.—The Levites desired earnestly to serve

Hope in God, for I will still give praise to him: the salvation of my countenance, 7 and my God.

My soul is troubled within myself: therefore will I remember thee from the land of Jordan and Hermoniim from the little hill.

8 Deep calleth on deep, at the noise of thy flood gates.

All thy heights and thy billows have passed over me.

9 In the daytime the Lord hath commanded his mercy; and a canticle to him in the night.

With me is prayer to the God of my life, 10 I will say to God: Thou art my support.

Why hast thou forgotten me? and why go I mourning, whilst my enemy afflicteth me.

11 Whilst my bones are broken, my enemies, who trouble me, have reproached me.

Whilst they say to me day by day: Where is thy God?

12 Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why dost thou disquiet me?

Hope thou in God, for I will still give praise to him the salvation of my countenance, and my God

PSALM XLII.

JUDICA ME DEUS.

The prophet aspireth after the temple and altar of God.

1 A psalm for David.

JUDGE me, O God, and distinguish my cause from the nation that is not holy, deliver me from the unjust and deceitful man.

God in his temple; Christians must wish to appear before him in heaven, (C.) when they will be free from temptations. Idols may destroy, but they cannot give life. W.

VER. 4. Bread. Ovid imitates this: Cura dolorque animi lachrymæque alimenta fuere. Met. x.—The tears of compunction obtain the remission of sin. S. Jer.—God. Thus the idolaters deride those who could not point at their God. H.—The Babylonians had conquered all the surrounding nations, and despised their deities. C.—The wicked laugh at the just, who are for a time in distress, comfort themselves with weeping. W.—Those who saw David wandering (H.) in the mountains, at a distance from the tabernacle, might ask him what religion or God he followed. M.

VER. 5. These sarcasms fill me with grief, (C.) while the solemn ceremonies of religion, which, I remember, were observed in the temple, cause my heart to overflow with joy. Bert.—I shall. Prot. "I had gone with the multitude; I went with them to the house of God with the voice of joy and praise; with a multitude that kept holiday." Yet the holidays of the Catholic Church are now ridiculed by many. Prot. H.—the original may have several other meanings. The tabernacle may here designate the musack of the Levites. 4 K. xvi. 18. C.—Feasting. Some such religious feasts were prescribed. Deut. xii. 12. H.—David was not permitted to build the temple, nor to enter the tabernacle: but he speaks of heaven. W.

VER. 6. My countenance. Heb. "his," as Aquila, &c. read. C.—Yet as the words are repeated, (v. 12.) there seems to be a fault in the text, (Bert.) owing to v. "his" being taken in here, instead of explaining it by and, v. 7. H.—The arrangement of the letters in the Vulg. is preferable. C.

VER. 7. Little hill of Sion. I hope that I shall soon again behold the fertile regions along the Jordan. C.—But these hills of Hermon, &c. are nothing when compared with heaven: They serve only to remind us of our banishment. Bert.—The difficulties of our present abode, hemmed in on all sides, teach us to place our hopes in heaven. W.

VER. 8. Flood-gates. The Hebrews imagined there were immense reservoirs of water above, (C.) which might serve to drown the earth, as at the deluge. Gen. vii. 11. Both heaven and earth seemed to be armed against the psalmist. H.—One affliction succeeded another, (C.) and God appeared to have abandoned his servants to temptations. But he enables them to come off with victory, and fills them with more joy in their trials: so that they may sing in heart, and pray. W.

VER. 9. Night. In affliction, as well as in prosperity, we must praise the Lord. Rom. Sept. "in the night he will manifest it."—Mercy.—H.—This is very beautiful, but not agreeable to the original. Bert.

VER. 11. Whilst. Prot. As, "with a sword in my bones, mine enemies reproach me." H.—Thus the martyrs were tortured and upbraided. C.

VER. 12. Countenance. To whom I look up with confidence. M.—The just are comforted with the hope of God's sight. W.

PSAL. XLII. &c. VER. 1. David. Sept. "it has no title, in Heb." being composed by the same author, and on the same subject, as the preceding. C.—David teaches the faithful how to begin a good work; and priests how they ought to officiate at Mass. W.—Holy. Heb. "merciful." The Babylonians (719)

2 For thou art God, my strength: why hast thou cast me off? and why do I go sorrowful, whilst the enemy afflicteth me?

3 Send forth thy light and thy truth: they have conducted me, and brought me unto thy holy hill, and into thy tabernacles.

4 And I will go in to the altar of God: to God who giveth joy to my youth.

5 To thee, O God, my God, I will give praise upon the harp: why art thou sad, O my soul? and why dost thou disquiet me?

6 Hope in God, for I will still give praise to him: the salvation of my countenance, and my God.

PSALM XLIII.

DEUS AURIBUS NOSTRIS.

The Church commemorates former favours, and present afflictions; under which she prays for succour.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core, to give understanding.

2 WE have heard, O God, with our ears: our fathers have declared to us,

The work thou hast wrought in their days, and in the days of old.

3 Thy hand destroyed the Gentiles, and thou plant-edst them: thou didst afflict the people, and cast them out.

4 For they got not the possession of the land by their own sword: neither did their own arm save them.

But thy right hand and thy arm, and the light of thy countenance: because thou wast pleased with them.

5 Thou art thyself my king and my God: who commandest the saving of Jacob.

6 Through thee we will push down our enemies with and their king, treated the Jews with great cruelty. C.—After we have proved ourselves, according to the admonition of S. Paul, (1 Cor. xi.) before approaching to the holy Eucharist, we may beg of God to judge and to protect us. W.

VER. 2. Me. Without thy assistance, I can do nothing. My enemies seem too strong, while thou appearest to disregard my prayer. W.

VER. 3. Light, your Messiah, as the Jews confess, (Jarchi) truth, the holy Spirit. S. Chrys.—Both the titles may be applied to our Saviour. Bert. S. Jer.—We are in the utmost distress; be pleased to send us relief. C.—As thou hast sent Christ into the world to impart these graces, grant that we may know, and comply with our duties, before we approach to thy holy altar.—Holy hill, the Church, (W.) or tabernacle on Sion, where the Jews wished to be present. C.

VER. 4. Youth. S. Jer. "the God of my joy and exultation." H.—Syr. and Arab. agree with us, and Gil means, (C.) a young man, in Arab. and Heb. Hammond.—People in youth, shew forth the effects of joy. Bert.—Accompanied with light, and a pure intention, we may offer sacrifice to God, who changeth our corruptions into newness of life. W.—The Levites might sing near the altar, but could not offer victims. C.

VER. 5. My God. This word is sing.; but the former "Elohim," is plural, to intimate one God in three persons. W.—Harp. Heb. cinnor, which Sym. renders, "the psaltery." The sons of Core were chiefly door-keepers: but they also played on musical instruments. C.

VER. 6. God. Trust in God, whom I hope to see face to face. W.

PSAL. XLIII. &c. VER. 1. Understanding. See Ps. xli. M.—David or the Corites composed this piece, to comfort the just under persecution. Bert.—It may allude to the situation of the Jews at Babylon, (C.) or under Antiochus Epiphanes, (Ven. Bede) though S. Paul, (Rom. viii. 36.) applies v. 22. to the persecutions of the primitive Christians, which seems to shew, that the whole psalm refers to them, (Bert.) as the Fathers have explained it. Yet it may literally be understood of the Israelites (C.) also, (H.) as well as of the Christian martyrs, since all things happened to the Israelites in figure. W.

VER. 2. Old, in calling Abraham, and rescuing the Hebrews from the Egyptian bondage, &c. W.—God formerly protected our Fathers; but how are things changed! C.—Gideon uses nearly the same words. Judg. vi. M.

VER. 3. Plantedst them, thy people. See Jer. ii. 21. and xii. 10. Ezech. xvii. 6.—Out, by means of insects, &c. Wisd. xii. 8. Jos. xxiv. 12. C.—The Hebrews were miraculously assisted, (W.) without any merit of their own, (C.) as all were wicked at first. Yet Abraham was freely chosen, that the visible Church might be preserved. W.

the horn: and through thy name we will despise them that rise up against us.

7 For I will not trust in my bow: neither shall my sword save me.

8 But thou hast saved us from them that afflict us: and hast put them to shame that hate us.

9 In God shall we glory all the day long: and in thy name we will give praise for ever.

10 But now thou hast cast us off, and put us to shame: and thou, O God, wilt not go out with our armies.

11 Thou hast made us turn our back to our enemies: and they that hated us, plundered for themselves.

12 Thou hast given us up like sheep to be eaten: thou hast scattered us among the nations.

13 Thou hast sold thy people for no price: and there was no reckoning in the exchange of them.

14 Thou hast made us a reproach to our neighbours, a scoff and derision to them that are round about us.

15 Thou hast made us a bye-word among the Gentiles: a shaking of the head among the peoples.

16 All the day long my shame is before me: and the confusion of my face hath covered me.

17 At the voice of him that reproacheth and de-tracteth me: at the face of the enemy and persecutor.

18 All these things have come upon us; yet we have not forgotten thee: and we have not done wickedly in thy covenant.

19 And our heart hath not turned back: neither hast thou turned aside our steps from thy way.

20 For thou hast humbled us in the place of affliction: and the shadow of death hath covered us.

21 If we have forgotten the name of our God, and if we have spread forth our hands to a strange god:

VER. 5. Saving (salutes) the manifold instances of protection. H.

VER. 6. Horn, like bulls. W.—This we have done in former times. C.—Not man's strength, but God's favour, granteth the victory. W.

VER. 9. We glory. Lit. "be praised." H.—We have always attributed our success to thee. C.

VER. 10. Now. He foretelleth divers states of the Jews, and of the Church. W.

VER. 11. To. Lit. "after," post. They were formerly defeated; now it is our turn. H.

VER. 12. Nations. Many never returned from captivity. C. See Deut. xxviii. 43.

VER. 13. Reckoning. Prot. "thou dost not increase thy wealth by their price." H.—Thou art eager to get quit of them, as of the vilest slaves. Theod. Grot. Isai. i. 2. and lii. 3. Exchange. Some copies of the Sept. read ἀλλοτρίων "jubilation," with the Ethiopic. S. Aug. &c.—While others have more correctly ἀλλαγῶσι, like the Vulg. There were none to purchase, so that thou hast given the people for nothing. C.—At the last siege of Jerusalem, the Jews, who had sold (W.) or bought Christ for thirty pieces of money, (H.) were themselves sold for the smallest price; thirty being given for one penny. See Joseph. de B. Jud. W.

VER. 15. Head, out of contempt. M.—The Gentiles propose us as an example of a people fallen a prey to the divine indignation. 4 K. xix. 21. Lam. ii. 15.

VER. 17. Detracteth me. S. Jer. "blasphemeth" God, while they upbraid us, as a faithless people. C.

VER. 18. Covenant. Till the passion of Christ, the Jews did not wholly fail from God, and then many were chosen from among them, to found the Christian religion. W.—The Corites speak in the name of their faithful brethren, whom no provocations had induced to follow the superstitious practices of Babylon. C.

VER. 19. Neither. Lit. "and or yet." H.—But the negative particle is taken (W.) from the first part of the verse. C.—S. Jer. "Neither hast thou," &c. M.—Yet many adhere to the Heb. &c. "And thou hast turned," &c. Though it may be taken in a dangerous sense, (C.) yet it may only signify, (H.) that God had removed his people from the country where his worship was observed, and had refused them his protection; hence their paths have been unfortunate. Theodoret.—This agrees better with the sequel. Bert.—It is no proof that God is the author of sin, in either sense. T.

VER. 20. Affliction. Heb. or "dragons," (S. Jer. M.) alluding to the deserts, to which the Jews retired, when the Assyrians invaded them. The text may be more applicable to the first Christians, who might truly say that they had not 22 Shall not God search out these things: for he knoweth the secrets of the heart.

* Because for thy sake we are killed all the day long: we are counted as sheep for the slaughter.

23 Arise, why sleepest thou, O Lord? arise, and cast us not off to the end.

24 Why turnest thou thy face away? and forgettest our want and our trouble?

25 For our soul is humbled down to the dust: our belly cleaveth to the earth.

26 Arise, O Lord, help us and redeem us for thy name's sake.

PSALM XLIV.

ERUCTAVIT COR MEUM.

The excellence of Christ's kingdom, and the endowments of his Church.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed, for the sons of Core, for understanding: A canticle for the beloved.

2 MY heart hath uttered a good word: I speak my works to the king:

My tongue is the pen of a scrivener that writeth swiftly.

3 Thou art beautiful above the sons of men: grace

* Rom. viii. 38.—† Heb. i. 8.

transgressed. Houbig.—To the martyrs, death was but like a shadow. S. Greg. Mar. iv. 17.—Here it denotes great darkness and misery. M.

VER. 21. If we. This is a Heb. idiom, to express, we have not. W.

VER. 22. Slaughter. They will not suffer us to be quiet respecting our religion, striving to delude us: or, if we prove resolute, like Daniel, they expose us to torments. C.—This was more fully verified at the first propagation of the gospel, (Rom. viii. 36.) as it still continues to be among those, who cease not to persecute Catholics by artifice, as well as by open violence. Christians in every age (H.) are persecuted, more than the prophets (W.) generally were. H.

VER. 23. Sleepest thou, seeming not to attend to our sufferings. M.—End, shall we never be restored to favour? C.

VER. 25. Dust. We are at death's door, being oppressed with grief, as long as thou dost not assist us. W.—We petition in the most fervent (H.) and humble posture. Isai. xlix. 23. Mic. vii. 17. C.

PSAL XLIV. &c. VER. 1. For them that shall be changed i. e. For souls happily changed, by being converted to God; (Ch.) or it may allude to the variety of speakers here introduced. Bert.—Prot. leave shoshannim, which some translate, "on the lilies," (Aquila. S. Jer.) or "instrument of six strings." C.—The beloved, viz. our Lord Jesus Christ. Ch.—Heb. "of loves;" or of the young women, friends of the bride, (yedidoth) who sung the Epithalamium, as we see in the 18th Idyl of Theocritus. The Jews formerly explained this psalm of the Messiah, as well as all the Fathers after the apostles. Heb. i. 8. Many passages cannot refer to Solomon's marriage with the daughter of Pharaoh, though some might be referred to that event, as a figure of Christ's union with his Church. C.—The whole had better be understood of Christ, (Bert.) being intended for the instruction of all converts from paganism and schism. W.

VER. 2. Uttered. Heb. rachash, "boileth," as one unable to contain himself. Bert.—Sprak, or "dedicate," dico, (H.) though here it only means to speak. C.—He addresses the object of his praise, instead of invoking the muses. S. Jer.—Swiftly. I have not to meditate. C.—The Holy Ghost moves my tongue. (2 Pet. i. 21.) as fast as my hands can write. Jer. xxxvi. 18. and 4 Esd. xiv. 39. H.—High mysteries, in honour of the great king, occupy my thoughts, and to him I refer this canticle. W.

VER. 3. Beautiful. The corporal beauty of Christ may be problematical. H.—But justice is the truest beauty. S. Aug.—All admired his eloquence, (Lu. iv. 22. and Jo. vii. 46.) and innumerable converts were made, by the preaching of his word. S. Jer.—The young women here address the spouse.—Therefore, I say, (Rabbins) or "because" God hath chosen thee freely. Solomon was styled the beloved, (2 K. xii. 25.) and was highly favoured. Wisd. viii. 20. and 3 K. iv. 23. &c. But this was only a figure of Christ, (C.) whose hypostatical union was an effect of gratuitous predestination, (S. Aug. præd. xv.) though his other graces were merited. S. Chrys. Sa. C.—He was most excellent in all sorts of gifts. W.

VER. 4. Mighty. (Potentissime) Erasmus (Apol. con. Sutor.) complains, that he could not learn, whether this was a noun or an adverb, without consulting the originals. Amama.

VER. 5. Reign. Devise, execute, and perfect the establishment of thy spiritual kingdom. W.—Solomon was no warrior; but he only wanted enemies to be so. The sword of Christ is his word, (Heb. iv. 12.) anger, (Apoc. xix. 15. C.) or human nature. S. Jer.—Some translate, "and ride," because kings were mounted on chariots, and governed their people with the reins of justice, &c. Robertson.—Justice. These titles are eagerly desired by monarchs; as martial prowess, clemency, and justice, (C.) render them objects of terror, and of love. H.—Christ conquered by his miracles, mildness, &c. (C.) propagating the truth, and punishing the rebellious. W. Pa. ii. 8.

VER. 6. Fall. This seems to be placed too soon, in order to shew the rapidity of the conquest. C.—"Thy arrows are sharp, shot into the hearts," &c. H.—Some explain in corde, (as the Heb. Sept. &c. read) of the voluntary submission of those who had formerly been enemies of the Messiah. S. Chrys. &c.

4 Gird thy sword upon thy thigh, O thou most mighty.

5 With thy comeliness and thy beauty set out, proceed prosperously, and reign.

Because of truth, and meekness, and justice: and thy right hand shall conduct thee wonderfully.

6 Thy arrows are sharp: under thee shall people fall, into the hearts of the king's enemies.

7 ^bThy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: the sceptre of thy kingdom is a sceptre of uprightness.

8 Thou hast loved justice, and hated iniquity: therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows.

9 Myrrh, and stacte, and cassia, perfume thy garments from the ivory houses: out of which 10 the daughters of kings have delighted thee in thy glory.

The queen stood on thy right hand, in gilded clothing: surrounded with variety.

11 Hearken, O daughter, and see, and incline thy ear: and forget thy people and thy father's house.

12 And the king shall greatly desire thy beauty: for he is the Lord thy God, and him they shall adore.

ity of the conquest. C.—"Thy arrows are sharp, shot into the hearts," &c. H.—Some explain in corde, (as the Heb. Sept. &c. read) of the voluntary submission of those who had formerly been enemies of the Messiah. S. Chrys. &c. —"Thy sharp arrows, the people subject to thee, shall fall into," &c.—Men are sometimes represented as arrows. Is. xlix. 2. Bert.

VER. 7. O God, O Gods. The Sept. thus mark the voc. case, (Pa. xxxviii. 17. H.) and it is clear, that the Messiah is here styled God, (Heb. i. 8.) though some of the Jews would evade this proof by saying, "God is thy throne." 1 Par. xxix. 23. Even Munster translates, O Deus, and the Jew Agesila, o thea Elohim is never addressed to any one by the prophets, but to the true God, (Bert.) and this title alludes to the judicial character of Christ, (Acts x. 42. C.) of whose kingdom there shall be no end. Luke i. 33.—Calvin is very bold in asserting, that David spoke properly of Solomon, as if the apostle had applied the text to our Saviour only in the mystical sense: whereas many things cannot belong to the former, and the Chaf. and Fathers expound this psalm of Christ and his Church.—Solomon did not persevere in wisdom, and his beauty was equalled by that of Absalom, &c. W.—Crellius and Grotius in vain attempted to weaken this proof of Christ's divinity, as a Jew, who disputed with Origen, did. con. Cels. i. D. H.

VER. 8. God. Sym. 62. Theophyl.—Elohim is used in both places, (H.) with a singular verb, as being spoken of the Deity. S. Iræn. iii. 6. Bossuet. D.—"O Elohim, thy Elohim," (H.) which implies more than one person in God. Bert.—Many kings might be preferred to Solomon; but Christ was raised above all. W.—Fellows. In consequence of the free gift of God, in uniting the human nature to the second person, the Messiah advanced in glory; (H.) or rather the prophet speaks of his subsequent merits, which entitled him to the greatest felicity.—The oil of gladness, alludes to the reward of his labours. Ad robro seems to require this sense, though the Heb. may be rendered, "because." Bert.—Either the cause or the effect may be meant. M.—Solomon was chosen before many of his elder brothers; but Christ was anointed by the Holy Ghost. Acts x. 38. C.

VER. 9. Perfume. Lit. "from thy garments, from the ivory houses, out of which they have delighted thee, (10.) the daughters of kings, in thy honour." They esteem it an honour to wait upon thee, and perfume thy robes, which are placed in chests of ivory, with odoriferous herbs. H.—The ancients admired such garments. Gen. xxvii. 27. Amos iii. 15.—They had been given, together with the ivory boxes, as a present to Solomon at his marriage, and might give him delight, (C.) as it was then deemed unpollute to refuse a present. Ody. 2.—Stacte. Lit. "the drop" gutta, (H.) distils from the myrrh, the wood of settim, (Num. xxiv. 6.) and may denote aloes, but not the plant. C.—Mortification and humility (W.) raise the soul on high. 2 Cor. ii. 16. H.—The blessed Virgin is here styled a house of ivory. The Church, and all who observe purity, may be considered as God's temples. 1 Cor. iii. 17. C.—The virtues of Christ are this precious perfume. S. Aug. &c.—Houses. Sep.—Baptis, a word which means "a tower." Some have not understood this, and have rendered it, gravibus, "heavy," (S. Jer. ad Prin.) which others have improperly corrected by gradibus, "steps." C.—Houbigant would change three words, and translate, "from ivory vessels, the vases of thy anointing."

VER. 10-11. Clothing. Heb. "in gold of Ophir." H.—The Church is spotless. Eph. v. 26. The attendants of this glorious queen, are the nations converted, or Christian virgins. They are not the maids of Pharaoh's daughter, whose marriage was never commended. Bert.—House. Paganism, and the observances of the old law. Bert.—The Church, and every faithful soul, may be styled the daughter, as well as the spouse of Christ.

VER. 12. Lord. Heb. adonai, "thy master," and worship him, (H.) like a dutiful wife. 1 Pet. iii. 6. and 3 K. i. 16.—God is not found in the Sept. The 13 And the daughters of Tyre with gifts, yea, all the rich among the people, shall entreat thy countenance.

14 All the glory of the king's daughter is within in golden borders, 15 clothed round about with varieties.

After her shall virgins be brought to the king: her neighbours shall be brought to thee.

16 They shall be brought with gladness and rejoicing: they shall be brought into the temple of the king.

17 Instead of thy fathers, sons are born to thee: thou shalt make them princes over all the earth.

18 They shall remember thy name throughout all generations.

Therefore shall people praise thee for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

PSALM XLV.

DEUS NOSTER REFUGIUM.

The Church in persecution trusteth in the protection of God.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core, for the hidden.

2 OUR God is our refuge and strength: a helper in all troubles, which have found us exceedingly:

3 Therefore we will not fear, when the earth shall be troubled; and the mountains shall be removed into the heart of the sea.

4 Their waters roared and were troubled: the mountains were troubled with his strength.

5 The stream of the river maketh the city of God joyful: the most High hath sanctified his own tabernacle.

6 God is in the midst thereof, it shall not be moved: God will help it in the morning early.

7 Nations were troubled, and kingdoms were bowed down: he uttered his voice, the earth trembled.

* 2 Kings vi. 15.

title belongs to Jesus Christ, the spouse, who has been twice called God before. C.

VER. 13. Daughters of Tyre; the city, with her dependant villages. Bosuet.—Tyre might send presents on this grand occasion, or might even pay tribute. 2 Par. ix. 26. C.—Idolatrous nations submitted to Christ. Bert.

VER. 14. Is within. Rom. Sept. &c. have "of Hesebon," by mistake, for Esathen. C.—Queens in the East, could not appear much abroad. Kimchi.—When they go out, they cannot be seen. The beauty of the Church consists in virtue, and in the grace of God. C.—Borders. Charity influences the exterior works of piety, (T.) and gives beauty to the ceremonies (S. Bas.) and decorations used by the Church, with such magnificence. H.

VER. 15. Neighbours. The Jews, as well as the Gentiles, shall embrace the faith. C.—Virginity became honourable only after the coming of Christ. S. Chrys.

VER. 16. Temple. Even virgins (H.) out of the Church, cannot please the king. S. Aug. W.

VER. 17. Sons. "shall be thy children." H.—This was the wish of those present. But it does not appear that the daughter of Pharaoh had any children, (C.) and thus it seems improbable, that she is here spoken of, as the psalmist foretells the establishment and glory (Bert.) of the Church, by means of the apostles, (S. Chrys.) and their successors, who are made princes over all the world. Let those who are cut off acknowledge this, and come to the unity, that they may be introduced into the temple of the king. S. Aug. W.—Innumerable saints of all ranks, kings and emperors, acknowledge the Church for their mother, and submit to her. C.

VER. 18. They. Heb. Sept. of Ald. and Comp. and the Gr. Fathers, have "I will;" yet this is contrary to the Vat. and Alex. Sept. (Bert.) and seems less accurate. Houbig.—The prophet was not to live for ever, so that the fame of the Church was to be spread by others. Bert.—Ever. There shall be pastors and faithful people to the end. W.

PSAL XLV. VER. 1. It may allude to the defeat of Sennacherib, (Houbig.) or might be sung by the Corites at the dedication of the second temple, when peace was restored to the world, after the death of Cambyzes. Eze. xxxviii. The Fathers explain it of the Christian Church, delivered from persecution. S. Chrys. &c. C.

VER. 2. Troubles. Those of English Catholics have been very great; yet they increase. W.

VER. 4. Their. Heb. S. Amb. &c. read, "its." C.—Both sea and land may be in confusion; we shall fear nothing, having God for our protector. H.—Though many and noble personages have revolted from the faith in England, yet the Catholic Church will never fail, (W.) even if it should in these islands. H.

8 The Lord of armies is with us: the God of Jacob is our protector.

9 Come and behold ye the works of the Lord: what wonders he hath done upon earth, 10 making wars to cease even to the end of the earth.

He shall destroy the bow, and break the weapons: and the shields he shall burn in the fire.

11 Be still, and see that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations, and I will be exalted in the earth.

12 The Lord of armies is with us: the God of Jacob is our protector.

PSALM XLVI.

OMNES GENTES PLAUDITE.

The Gentiles are invited to praise God for the establishment of the kingdom of Christ.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core.

2 O CLAP your hands, all ye nations: shout unto God with the voice of joy.

3 For the Lord is high, terrible: a great king over all the earth.

4 He hath subdued the people under us; and the nations under our feet.

5 He hath chosen for us his inheritance, the beauty of Jacob which he hath loved.

6 *God is ascended with jubilee, and the Lord with the sound of trumpet.

7 Sing praises to our God, sing ye: sing praises to our king, sing ye.

8 For God is the king of all the earth: sing ye wisely.

9 God shall reign over the nations: God sitteth on his holy throne.

10 The princes of the people are gathered together,

VER. 5. Stream. Jerusalem was surrounded by placid streams, which are here opposed to the great waters, as in Isai. viii. 6. The Church, after persecution, is restored to peace, and adorned with all graces. C.—Tabernacle. This is the source of our joy. Apoc. xxi. M. and xxii. 1. Eze. xlvii. 1.—The advantages of the virtuous, both here and in heaven, are great. Bert.

VER. 7. Trembled. We have witnessed the commotions in the East, under Cyrus, and his son; the latter of whom seems to be styled Gog, (Eze. xxxviii. 19.) and perished in Judea, which he intended to plunder. C.

VER. 10. Shields. Heb. "the round things," which some explain, "chariots," without need. Bert.—Fire. The Fathers apply this to the peace which reigned at the birth of Christ, or to that which Constantine gave to the Church. C.

VER. 11. Still. We have only to admire the work of God. Bert.—He will bring all to a happy issue for his elect, though the wicked may rage. II.

PSAL XLVI. &c. This psalm appears to be a sequel to the former psalm, and is addressed to the Gentiles who were present at the dedication of the second temple, as Darius had ordered his governors to assist the Jews. 1 Eud. vi. 16. See Est. viii. 17.—Many explain it of the translation of the ark: but the Fathers behold the establishment of Christianity, and the ascension of Christ. v. 6. C.

VER. 4. Feet. The Chanaanites were subdued by Josue, and others by David, &c. The army of Cambyzes became a prey to the Jews. Eze. xxxix. 10. C.—All who embrace the true faith, even kings, become subjects, and not heads of the Church. W.

VER. 5. Beauty. The temple. Eze. xxiv. 21. Both Jews and Gentiles form the Church.

VER. 6. Trumpet. Christ ascended, accompanied by choirs of angels. His apostles proclaimed his truths. C.—They were not left desolate, but joyful; having the Paraclete sent to them.

VER. 7. King. Christ is God, by his divine nature, and our king, by his humanity. W.

VER. 8. Wisely. Heb. mascil, which is so often rendered "understanding" in the titles. No one can do well, what he does not understand. C.—The union of faith and good works, is singing wisely. S. Chrys. C.—Concordant manus & lingua. S. Aug. D.—Let each strive to know the mysteries of faith. W.

VER. 9. Throne. Christ reigns over the heart with all power. Matt. xxviii. 18.

VER. 10. Gods. Judges appointed by the king of Persia over the Jews, &c. (C.) or rather the apostles, who were more than men, (S. Jer.) and exercised a greater power than any earthly monarch. C.—The richest princes have submitted to the God of Abraham, whose seed was to prove a blessing to all. Gen. xviii. 18. Heb. as it is now pointed, "the princes of the people are gathered unto the people of the God of Abraham, for He is far elevated above the gods, with the God of Abraham: for the strong gods of the earth are exceedingly exalted.

PSALM XLVII.

MAGNUS DOMINUS.

God is greatly to be praised for the establishment of his Church.

1 A psalm of a canticle, for the sons of Core, on the second day of the week.

2 GREAT is the Lord, and exceedingly to be praised in the city of our God, in his holy mountain.

3 With the joy of the whole earth is Mount Sion founded on the sides of the north, the city of the great king.

4 In her houses shall God be known, when he shall protect her.

5 For behold the kings of the earth assembled themselves: they gathered together.

6 So they saw, and they wondered, they were troubled, they were moved: 7 trembling took hold of them.

There were pains as of a woman in labour. 8 With a vehement wind thou shalt break in pieces the ships of Tharsis.

9 As we have heard, so have we seen, in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God: God hath founded it for ever.

the shields of the earth," as kings are often styled. C.—Prot. "for the shields of the earth belong unto God: He is greatly exalted;" or (Sept.) "the earthly potentates, who are of God, have been," &c.—We might explain the Vulg. in the same sense, if Dei were substituted for Dii, (H.) as it should be. C.—Dei sunt optimates terra, & ipse summus elevatus est. Houbig.—S. Jer. agrees with the Vulg. (H.) which is the clearest, (Bert.) only he renders hanc, "the people" of the God, as it may also signify, and retains the word shields, which we explain the strong gods, or the "strong ones of God." H.—The blessed Trinity is not divided, but more distinctly professed in baptism than it was under the law. W.

PSAL XLVII. &c. VER. 1. On the, &c. is not in Heb. nor Euseb. &c. It means Sunday, (S. Amb. W.) or rather Monday, being sung on that day. S. Jer. &c. H.—The subject of the former canticle is continued, in thanksgiving to God, for some signal victory, or for the peace which God afforded to his people, after the death of Cambyzes. C.—The Fathers explain it of the propagation and peace of the Church. H.

VER. 2. City, or temple, which lay to the north of old Jerusalem, on Sion; C.—Yet Genebrard, &c. place this mountain south of Salem. M.—The concourse of priests and people gave it the appearance of a great city. Eze. xl. 2. Is. xiv. 18.—The Church is built upon a rock. C.—The Jews and Christians are under the greatest obligation of praising God. W.

VER. 3. With. Heb. "the beautiful situation, the joy of the whole earth, (M.) Sion, sides of," &c. Chal. "Sion, thou art beautiful as a bride." Christ's Church is thus described. Apoc. xxi. 2. C.—Its figure, (H.) the temple, was the glory of the whole country. Ps. xxv. 8. Lam. ii. 15. C.—But the Church alone extends to the sides of the north, or over the world. W.

VER. 4. Houses. Heb. "palaces;" Sept. "towers." Βασις, a word which has again been mistaken for gravis or gradibus, as v. 14. and Ps. xlv. 9. God is the defence of his people, (Prov. xviii. 10.) the Church, Mat. xvi. 18. C.—All particular houses, or churches, must come to the unity of faith, (W.) and to the seat of Peter. S. Iren. iii.

VER. 5. Earth is superfluous. S. Jer. ad Sun. C.—Yet it is found in the Vat. Sept. &c. H.—The kings of the earth assembled against the Church, (Ps. ii. 2.) as many came to oppose Jerusalem, under Cambyzes. Eze. xxxviii. 2. 13. C.

VER. 6. Saw. They could not say, like Cæsar, Veni, vidi, vici. For they no sooner came to invade the unsuspecting people, than they began to tremble. Eze. xxxviii. 11. &c. Ps. xlv. 7. H.

VER. 7. There, denotes the promptitude of vengeance, as well as the following allusion. Is. xiii. 8. 1 The. v. 3.

VER. 8. Vehement. Heb. "eastern."—Tharnis, such strong-built ships, as might go to Tarsus, in Cilicia, (Gen. x. 4. C.) or to India. M.—The merchants of Tharsis, the naval officers, shall say, &c. There shall be a great commotion, &c. Eze. xxxviii. 13. 19.—The same storm proved fatal to the land and sea-forces of Cambyzes. His navy is mentioned by Herodotus, (iii. 11. and 44.) and was probably stationed over against Acco, or Ptolemais, as the king perished at the foot of Carmel. C.—Nothing maketh a deeper impression than the sentiments of religion. God's grace enableth the soul to sustain all conflicts, and to overcome. W.

VER. 9. Seen. All the promises have been fulfilled. How could any one have thought that we should have been permitted to dedicate this temple under the patronage of the king of Persia? 1 Esd. vi. 8. Who would not have feared, lest the Christian religion should perish, under such violent persecutions? Con-

10 We have received thy mercy, O God, in the midst of thy temple.

11 According to thy name, O God, so also is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is full of justice.

12 Let Mount Sion rejoice, and the daughters of Juda be glad; because of thy judgments, O Lord

13 Surround Sion, and encompass her: tell ye in her towers.

14 Set your hearts on her strength; and distribute her houses, that ye may relate it in another generation.

15 For this is God, our God unto eternity, and for ever and ever: he shall rule us for evermore.

PSALM XLVIII.

AUDITE HÆC OMNES GENTES.

The folly of worldlings, who live in sin, without thinking of death or hell.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for the sons of Core.

2 HEAR these things, all ye nations: give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world.

3 All you that are earth-born, and you sons of men: both rich and poor together.

4 My mouth shall speak wisdom: and the meditation of my heart understanding.

5 *I will incline my ear to a parable; I will open my proposition on the psaltery.

* Ps. lxxvii. 2. Matt. xiii. 35.

verts admire its beauty and strength. C.—The completion of the prophecies is a wonderful confirmation and comfort of Christians, (W.) whose faith is founded indeed for ever. H.—The gates of hell shall not prevail. M.

VER. 10. Temple. Ναός. Sept. S. Amb. &c. though the Vat. and Alex. copies have Δαός, "people," with the Arab. Ethiop. S. Aug. &c. H.—In the Church we receive many graces, (C.) even Christ himself, (S. Amb.) to which those who refuse to be Catholics, can have no title. W.

VER. 11. Earth. All who hear of the wonders of God, must praise him; and who can be ignorant of what He has done, (C.) in the defeat of the enemies of his people, (H.) of Sennacherib, Cambyzes, &c.? Yet all the earth will be instructed only by the propagation of the Gospel. C.—Justice, against thy enemies, (H.) though this word may here imply "mercy," in opposition to the judgments, v. 12. C.—These perfections are never at variance. W.

VER. 12. Juda. Sept. Sym. &c. have "Judea," (C.) which would intimate, that the psalm was composed after the captivity. But the Heb. reads Yehuda, "Juda," with S. Jerom. H.

VER. 13. Surround. Heb. "walk round, (H.) tell her towers." S. Jer.

VER. 14. Strength. Perhaps the outward wall, (Eze. xl. 5.) not seen in Solomon's temple.—Houses. Heb. palaces. Sept. "houses built like towers." Βασις. Jerusalem was not rebuilt or fortified, when the second temple was dedicated. 2 Esd. i. 3. C.—The fortresses of the Church are the holy Fathers and Doctors, who watch in her defence. Her pillars shall not fail. The particular Churches are all united in the same faith, and these reflections ought to prevail on all to embrace the same. W.

VER. 15. Our God. Christ incarnate works all this. He shall rule over the Church, not for three or four hundred years only, but as long as time shall last; and He shall have a Church triumphant in eternity. W.—Evermore. Heb. hal-moth. The letters being differently arranged, are rendered, "in death." S. Jer. "even unto death." Prot. (H.) "in youth," (Chal.) or "in the secret" of Providence. It may form a part of the following title, "over the young women," as Ps. ix. and xlv. C.—But then it would probably come after lammateach. The psalmist inculcates the perpetual duration of the Church under God's conduct, by three terms. In sæculum & ultra . . . usque ad mortem, "till death," (Pagn.) or "incessantly." Sym. H.—This psalm may also express the sentiments of a penitent, (Bert.) or of one who is put in possession of unchangeable felicity. H.

PSAL XLVIII. &c. VER. 1. Psalm. S. Amb. adds, "of David." It is written in an enigmatical style, like the book of Ecclesiastes, and is very obscure. But the drift is, to impress the captives with a contempt of worldly grandeur, which will end in death. The redemption of mankind and the resurrection of Christ are foretold, v. 8. 16. &c. C.

VER. 3. Earth-born. Heb. "sons of Adam," a title belonging to the meanest. Progenies terra. Perseus vi. 56. C.—So Callimachus styles the giants, "mud-born." H.—Yet Houbigant explains it of the rich, (Bert.) who have lands, and leave their names to them, v. 12. H.—Of men. Heb. ish, noblemen. M.—Ye just (S. Aug.) and polite. S. Athan.

VER. 5. Proposition. Heb. "riddle." Bert.—The ancients delighted in parables, which required attention to discern the meaning, and thus people had the pleasures of ingenuity. Music often accompanied their precepts. Strabo i. 12. C.—Utile dulci. H.—The psalmist intimates, that he had attended the best masters, (C.) even the Holy Ghost. S. Chrys.—He delivers the instructions which he had received from God, on the instrument of ten strings, to imply,

6 Why shall I fear in the evil day? the iniquity of my heel shall encompass me.

7 They that trust in their own strength, and glory in the multitude of their riches,

8 No brother can redeem, nor shall man redeem: he shall not give to God his ransom;

9 Nor the price of the redemption of his soul: and shall labour for ever, 10 and shall still live unto the end.

11 He shall not see destruction, when he shall see the wise dying: the senseless and the fool shall perish together:

And they shall leave their riches to strangers: 12 and their sepulchres shall be their houses for ever.

Their dwelling places to all generations: they have called their lands by their names.

13 And man, when he was in honour, did not understand: he is compared to senseless beasts, and is become like to them.

14 This way of theirs is a stumbling-block to them: and afterwards they shall delight in their mouth.

15 They are laid in hell like sheep: death shall feed upon them.

that we must keep the ten commandments. W.—He listens if the instrument be in tune. C.

VER. 6. The iniquity of my heel. That is, the iniquity of my steps, or ways: or the iniquity of my pride, with which, as with the heel, I have spurned and kicked at my neighbours: or the iniquity of my heel, that is, the iniquity in which I shall be found in death. The meaning of this verse is, why should I now indulge those passions and sinful affections, or commit now those sins, which will cause me so much fear and anguish in the evil day; when the sorrows of death shall compass me, and the perils of hell shall find me? Ch.—The old serpent is constantly laying snares for our heel. Gen. iii. 15. H.—Original (S. Jer.) and actual sin, (Euseb.) particularly final impenitence, (Rabbins) and the punishment of our transgressions, (Abenezra) are much to be feared, (H.) as well as concupiscence. S. Amb.—All that will fill us with alarm in the day of vengeance, will be the having been supplanted, like wrestlers, by our iniquity, (C.) of which we have not repented. H.—Any such injustice must be dreaded, as it will bring on damnation. W.—Instead of heel, Sym. has “steps,” including all the unjust actions of life. H.

VER. 7. They that trust, &c. As much as to say, let them fear, that trust in their strength or riches; for they have great reason to fear: seeing no brother, or other man, how much a friend soever, can by any price or labour rescue them from death. Ch.—I address myself particularly to the rich, who are in the greatest danger.

VER. 8. No. Prot. “none of them can by any means redeem his brother; nor, &c.” H.—But the Sept. translate as well, and the sense is the same. Matt. xvi. 26. Bert.—If Jesus Christ, thy brother, does not redeem thee, will any other do it? (S. Aug.) or though thy brother neglect, the man, Christ Jesus, will suffice. S. Amb.—But with respect to death, no redemption will be admitted. It is appointed for all once to die. H.—A man shall be more precious than gold, says Isaias, (xiii. 12) of the Babylonians, whom the enemy will not spare, for any consideration. We must therefore make good use of our time. Eccl. ix. 10. Prov. xi. 4. C.

VER. 9. And shall labour for ever, &c. This seems to be a continuation of the foregoing sentence; as much as to say, no man can by any price or ransom, prolong his life, that so he may still continue to labour here, and live to the end of the world. Others understand it of the eternal sorrows, and dying life of hell, which is the dreadful consequence of dying in sin. Ch.—The just, on the contrary, who have laboured for eternity, shall see the death of the wicked, or of the wise of this world. Euseb. &c.—It may also be a prediction of Christ's life of sufferings and future glory, (Bossuet) or express the sentiments of infidels, who deny a Providence; because both good and bad perish alike. Eccl. iii. 18. S. Aug.—Heb. “he rests for ever,” (S. Jer.) or “shall he be undisturbed?” C.—Both those who disbelieve a future state, and those who live as if they did, shall suffer. W.—This v. is included within a parenthesis by Prot. (For the redemption . . . is precious, and it, &c.) H.

VER. 11. He shall not see destruction, &c. or shall he not see destruction? As much as to say, however thoughtless he may be of his death, he must not expect to escape: when even the wise and the good are not exempt from dying. Ch.—Strangers. This is very distressing. Flindar. Olym. x. Eccles. ii. 18.—The endeavours of the wicked to establish their families, will be vain, while they themselves shall never more return from their graves hither. W.

VER. 12. Sepulchres. Heb. Kobrom is better than the present Kirbam, their “interior,” and is adopted by the Chal. Syr. &c. C.—“Their inward thought is, that their houses shall continue for ever.” Prot. H.—Called. That is, they have left their names on their graves, which alone remain of their lands, (Ch.) or, they have called cities and countries by their own names, as Alexander and Romulus did, Alexandria, (H.) and Rome. M. &c.—They have spread their fame throughout the world. C.—Scarcely two translate the four last verses alike. Bert.

And the just shall have dominion over them in the morning: and their help shall decay in hell from their glory.

16 But God will redeem my soul from the hand of hell, when he shall receive me.

17 Be not thou afraid, when a man shall be made rich, and when the glory of his house shall be increased.

18 For when he shall die, he shall take nothing away; nor shall his glory descend with him.

19 For in his life-time his soul will be blessed: and he will praise thee when thou shalt do well to him.

20 He shall go in to the generations of his fathers: and he shall never see light.

21 Man, when he was in honour, did not understand: he hath been compared to senseless beasts, and made like to them.

PSALM XLIX.

DEUS DEORUM.

The coming of Christ: who prefers virtue and inward purity before the blood of victims.

1 A psalm for Asaph.

THE God of gods, the Lord hath spoken: and he hath called the earth,

VER. 13. Compared. Heb. “he is like dumb, or perishable beasts.” H.—So much is man degraded by his attachment to riches and pleasures. Theod. C.—Some explain this of Adam, (S. Chrys.) reduced to the necessity of labouring, and dying, like brutes. v. 21. Eccl. iii. 18. C.—This is a very serious reflection, to think that man should so far neglect the gifts of reason, as to strive for temporal advantages only, like irrational creatures. W.

VER. 14. They shall delight in their mouth. Notwithstanding the wretched way in which they walk, they shall applaud themselves with their mouths, and glory in their doings, (Ch.) though it be to their shame. Phil. iii. 10.—Heb. their posterity shall applaud their maxims, (C.) as many of their followers contributed to keep them in the delusion, (H.) which the damned will deplore, when it is too late. v. 15. S. Jer.—A thirst after worldly advantages has proved their ruin; yet they obstinately persist in their evil ways. W.

VER. 15. In the morning. That is, in the resurrection to a new life; when the just shall judge and condemn the wicked.—From their glory. That is, when their short-lived glory in this world shall be past, and be no more. Ch.—Sic transit gloria mundi. H.—Then the world shall be turned upside down. C.—The just shall have their day, (M.) when the beautiful palaces of the wicked shall be exchanged for darkness, and horrible torments. H.—“Their bodies shall grow old in hell, because they have stretched out their hand, and destroyed the habitation of the house of his majesty.” Targum.—Their figure shall be destroyed in hell, after his dwelling. S. Jer.—They can rescue themselves no more than sheep. Those whom they oppressed shall be their judges. All friends will forsake them. W.—Crowds shall be confined to those mansions, where the fire is not extinguished. M.

VER. 16. Redeem. Chal. and some Rabbins seem to understand this of purgatory. “He will draw me from hell, and give me a place in his habitation.” Genab.—Others explain it of Christ's resurrection, or of the liberation of the patriarchs from limbo. Cassiod.—It seems a full solution of the enigma. v. 6 I repent, and shall have nothing to fear. Bert.

VER. 18. Him. “The glory of a man increases with his prosperity, but it does not go down with him when he descends” (S. Amb.) into the grave. He there finds the same reception as the most ignoble.

VER. 19. To him. The wicked are very selfish. They will seem grateful to those who are in power, and will cringe to get riches. H.—Yea, they will seem to thank God for their prosperity, (W.) or rather, they will assume these appearances with men. Heb. “he will bless his soul during life, (Bert.) with all pleasures.” Lu. xii. 19. Deut. xxix. 19. C.—To him, is not in Heb. which insinuates, that people are flattered during their prosperity. H.—Yet Houbigant would restore this word, “and he will praise thee when thou shalt have done him a kindness;” c may have been placed for i, as Sym. seems to have read awp. H.—The proper use of riches is to do good. Luke xvi. 9.

VER. 20. Fathers. Like them he shall die. H.—Heb. reads in the second person, with Syr. Aquila, &c. C.—Yet Prot. Mont. and others agree with us and the Sept.—And he. Heb. “they.” The—edit. however, has ayrai. Each individual, as well as the whole collection of the damned, shall be deprived of light and comfort. H.—Chal. “the just shall live like his fathers, a long and happy life; but the wicked shall enjoy no light in the life to come.”

VER. 21. Understand. Heb. yabin, though (v. 13.) we find yabin, “shall remain all night.” C.—But this is probably a mistake, as the prophet concludes with repeating this important instruction: (Bert.) Remember, O man, not to degrade thy rational soul. W.—Thou wast honoured by all, and made to the likeness of God. M.

PSAL XLIX. &c. VER. 1. For Asaph. The prep. L is placed before his name, as it is before David's. H.—Yet whether he was the author of the psalm, (C.) or only set it to music, (W.) is uncertain. M.—The 72d, and ten following psalms, bear his name, and it is observed, that the style is not so flowing as those which are attributed to the royal prophet. Moller.—It is certain, that

From the rising of the sun, to the going down thereof: 2 out of Sion the loveliness of his beauty.

3 God shall come manifestly: our God shall come, and shall not keep silence.

A fire shall burn before him: and a mighty tempest shall be round about him.

4 He shall call heaven from above, and the earth, to judge his people.

5 Gather ye together his saints to him: who set his covenant before sacrifices.

6 And the heavens shall declare his justice: for God is judge.

7 Hear, O my people, and I will speak: O Israel, and I will testify to thee: I am God, thy God.

8 I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices: and thy burnt-offerings are always in my sight.

9 I will not take calves out of thy house: nor he-goats out of thy flocks.

10 For all the beasts of the woods are mine: the cattle on the hills, and the oxen.

11 I know all the fowls of the air: and with me is the beauty of the field.

12 If I should be hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine and the fulness thereof.

13 Shall I eat the flesh of bullocks? or shall I drink the blood of goats?

14 Offer to God the sacrifice of praise: and pay thy vows to the most High.

Asaph was a prophet, and chief musician in the days of David. 1 Par. vi. 39. and xvi. 2. and 2 Par. xxix. 30. Bert.—But the psalms that have this title relate to the captives, and may have been composed by some of his descendants. This and the following seem designed to shew, that something more than bloody victims was required by God; and thus the Israelites, who could not offer sacrifices at Babylon, were comforted; and the people taught by degrees, to look for something more excellent than the law of Moses. C.—The first and second coming of Christ are here described. D.—God's angels, just men, judges, (C.) idols, &c. W.—Heb. El Elohina, Yhova, "the mighty God, the Lord." H.—From these three titles, some of the Fathers have proved the blessed Trinity. E.—But this argument is not conclusive. Bert.—They ought, however, to fill us with awe, when he shall come to judge the earth, his chosen people, (v. 4. C.) or all mankind. Bert. M.—Christ will come, surrounded by many legions of angels. H.

VER. 2. Beauty. This may refer to God, or to Sion, (C.) where the Church of Christ began. W.

VER. 3. Silence. Christ displayed the light of truth from Sion, at his first coming. But he would not judge any till the second. Jo. iii. 17. and viii. 15. S. Jer. C.—Before him, at the last day, (H.) or in hell. S. Athan.—Our Saviour appeared formerly with great mildness: but he will come with majesty and terror, after fire shall have destroyed all transitory things. W.

VER. 4. Earth. As if they were animated. Deut. iv. 26. and xxxii. 1. Is. i. 2. Jer. ii. 12.—Some understand the angels and apostles by heaven. C.—Judge. Lit. "to divide," discernere, (H.) the goats from the sheep. Matt. xxv. 32. C. M.—The whole earth, particularly the elect, will approve of God's decree. 1 Cor. vi. 2.

VER. 5. His saints. Heb. "my merciful ones," (H.) the chosen people, (C.) particularly priests, (Theod.) who might have too high an opinion of the legal sacrifices, (S. Chrys.) or all the elect are meant. Matt. xxiv. 30. Euseb.—The Hebrews were the only nation which then offered sacrifices to the true God, though some individuals might do it among the Gentiles. C.—Before, super, or, "who make a covenant with him respecting sacrifices." Prot. "those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Mal. i. 12. H.—The Sept. seem to have read us for i, more accurately, as the prophet speaks till v. 7. Bert.—Judgment should begin at the house of God. And if first at us, what shall be the end of them that believe not the gospel of God? 1 Pet. iv. 17. Rom. ii. 9. H.—Those who believe not, are already judged. Jo. iii.—Sacrifice generally precedes a covenant. Gen. xv. 17. M.

VER. 6. Heavens. Apostles, (S. Jer.) or angels. Chal. S. Athan.—God is judge. His sentence must therefore be just, (M.) and we ought to tremble. 1 Cor. iv. 4. H.

VER. 7. Testify. I will require thee to speak the truth, and attest the world. Ps. lxxx. 9. C.

VER. 8. Sight. I complain of no neglect (M.) in these outward ceremonies. H.—God required no victims during the captivity; but he always demanded praise, (v. 14. C.) a contrite heart. Ps. l. 19. &c. H.—The prophets often admonished the people of this truth, (Is. i. 2. Jer. vii. 20. C.) that they might not set too high a value on sacrifices, (H.) which, though pleasing to God, are of no service to him; as all the world is his property. W.

VER. 10. Oxen. S. Jer. and Prot. "the cattle upon a thousand hills." But 15 And call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

16 But to the sinner God hath said: Why dost thou declare my justices, and take my covenant in thy mouth?

17 Seeing thou hast hated discipline: and hast cast my words behind thee.

18 If thou didst see a thief, thou didst run with him: and with adulterers thou hast been partaker.

19 Thy mouth hath abounded with evil, and thy tongue framed deceits.

20 Sitting thou didst speak against thy brother, and didst lay a scandal against thy mother's son: 21 these things hast thou done, and I was silent.

Thou thoughtest unjustly that I shall be like to thee, but I will reprove thee, and set before thy face.

22 Understand these things you that forget God; lest he snatch you away, and there be none to deliver you.

23 The sacrifice of praise shall glorify me: and there is the way by which I will shew him the salvation of God.

PSALM L.

MISERERE.

The repentance and confession of David after his sin. The fourth penitential psalm.

1 Unto the end, a psalm of David, 2 when Nathan, the prophet, came to him, after he had sinned with Bethsabee. [2 Kings xii.]

our version is very good, and adopted by the Syr. Ferrand, &c. C.—Aleph means an ox as well as a thousand; and i may have been added to the preceding word, instead of u, at the beginning of this. Bert.—We find u here improperly in either, "beast." Houbig.—No mention is made of fishes, because they were not used as victims. C.

VER. 11. I know your number, and have absolute dominion over all. Is. xxxvii. 28. C.—Field. Ripe fruits. S. Cyr. Alex.—With God all things are present. S. Aug. Lombard, 1 dist. 35. F. Amama.

VER. 13. Goats? Can any of you be so stupid! M.—Some of the pagans believed, that their idols delighted in the smell of victims. H.

VER. 14. Vows. A faithless promise is very displeasing. Eccl. v. 3. True religion must be interior, (C.) also 1 Cor. xiv. 15. H.—We must discharge, not only our general, (M.) but also our particular vows, (W.) and obligations. H.

VER. 15. Call. Prayer is a perfect act of religion, and a confession of God's dominion.

Qui fingit sacros auro vel marmore vultus,

Non facit ille Deos: qui rugat, ille facit.—Mart. viii. v. 24.

To neglect prayer is, in some sense, to deny God. C.—He is pleased to exercise our confidence, (H.) and will have us to call upon him in distress. M.

VER. 16. Sinner. He is not blamed for praying; but his hypocrisy is condemned. Bert.—The world is full of such hypocrites, who have God in their mouths, but not in their hearts, and whose voice alone is the voice of Jacob. Gen. xxvii. 22. 1. xxix. 13. Tit. i. 16.—The wicked judges, who condemned Susanna, (Dan. xiii.) should have attended to these lessons. C.—Thou that teachest another, teachest not thyself. Rom. ii. 21.—It is surely to be expected, (H.) that those who undertake to teach others, should shew good example, and serve God with sincerity, (W.) and not content themselves with the glory of their vocation. M.

VER. 20. Lay. Heb. "slandertest." Prot. But dophi occurs no where else. Bert.—The sinner sits to detract, or with pleasure, (M.) habitually offends. H.

VER. 21. Silent, and deferred punishment, (S. Aug.) waiting for thy conversion. Rom. ii. 4.—Unjustly, is not expressed in Heb. Bert.—Face, judgment and hell, (Chal.) or all these things, (S. Jer.) and thy manifold transgressions. The sight will be most intolerable. C.

VER. 23. Lest he. Heb. "I tear you in pieces." Prot. H.—Rapiat ut Leo. S. Aug.—It may be understood of death, (Theod.) or of God. C.

VER. 22. Praise. This kind of improper sacrifice, and those of justice, and of a contrite heart, (Ps. iv. and l.) must accompany outward sacrifices, to make them acceptable. The latter has always been obligatory, (W.) as well as the former. H.—This ps. proves, that the old victims should give place to one far more excellent, the body of Christ, the sacrifice of praise which the Church offers, S. Aug. con. advers. xx. orat. con. Jud. vi. and ep. cxx. 18. W.—Eucharist means even "good grace," or thanksgiving, being intended to enable us to render that tribute of praise, which he requires. H.—There. Heb. "to him that ordereth his conversation aright, will I," &c. Prot.—The difference consists only in the points. Bert.—Syr. "There I will shew him the way of his salvation," or according to S. Chrys. "even my salvation." C.—By adoring God in spirit and truth, (H.) we may be saved. M.

PSAL. L. VER. 2. Bethsabee. Sept. "Bersabee." Some copies add, "the wife of Urias." H.—The rest of the title is in Heb. &c. so that it is one of the 3 HAVE mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy.

And according to the multitude of thy tender mercies, blot out my iniquity.

4 Wash me yet more from my iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.

5 For I know my iniquity, and my sin is always before me.

6 To thee only have I sinned, and have done evil before thee; *that thou mayst be justified in thy words, and mayst overcome when thou art judged.

7 For behold I was conceived in iniquities; and in sins did my mother conceive me.

8 For behold thou hast loved truth: the uncertain and hidden things of thy wisdom thou hast made manifest to me.

9 ^bThou shalt sprinkle me with hyssop, and I shall be cleansed: thou shalt wash me, and I shall be made whiter than snow.

most authentic. Nathan did not give the admonition till about a year had elapsed after the transgression, (2 K. xii.) when David was made to enter into himself, by a prophet inferior to himself. Bert.—After his departure, he is supposed to have composed this psalm, to testify his repentance to all the world. C.—He had also in view the state of the captives. Theod. &c.—The two last verses seem to have been added at Babylon, (Abenezra) as a similar addition has been made (Ps. cv. 47. and 1 Par. xvi. 35. C.) by some inspired author. H.—David knew that something more than confession was requisite, and that he must submit to temporal punishments, even though the prophet had assured him that his sin was remitted. He prays to be washed still more from evil habits, v. 4. W.

VER. 3. Thy great mercy. Such is the purport of the Heb. chasdec, though (II.) the Chal. and Syr omit great. My sin requires the deepest compunction. I must strive to repair the scandal I have given. C.—Mercies. I stand in need of many sorts, mitigation of punishment, true sorrow and perseverance, and that I may make some amends for my bad example, &c. W.

VER. 4. Yet more, by baptism. Euseb. S. Amb. apol.—The true penitent never ceases to deplore his sins, like David, S. Peter, and S. Paul. Eccl. v. 5. *The psalmist prays, that all the remains of sin may be obliterated. Jo. xiii. 10. W.

VER. 5. Me. I do not forget it, but am covered with shame. C.—Sin is our greatest enemy, and continually cries for vengeance. H.—While David did not confess, his sin lay heavy upon him. W.

VER. 6. Only, or principally, who art the only God, (1 Tim. i. 17. W.) the judge and witness of my crime. H.—David was a king, and acknowledged no judge among men. S. Amb. c. x.—Soli Deo reus est. Cassiod.—Urias, whom he had injured, was no more. S. Aug.—The action had been done in secret: (2 K. xii. 12.) but many began to suspect, and to blaspheme. H.—Judged. S. Paul reads thus, (Rom. iii. 4.) though the Heb. be, “when thou judgest.” S. Jerom has also judicaberis, so that we might infer, that the Heb. is now incorrect, or that beshophete means in judicare te. Bert.—Houbigant changes the order of the verses, “cleanse me from my sin, that thou mayst be blameless when thou comest into judgment: For I know,” &c. H.—Susanna was preserved from sinning by the thought of God’s presence. Dan. xiii. 25.—If David fell, he confessed his fault. Bert.—God is faithful to his promises, and desires the conversion of sinners, though some would represent him as cruel, and unconcerned about his creatures. The psalmist prevents this unjust inference, (II.) and proves, that God is both just and merciful. W.—He acknowledges his ingratitude, as the captives confess, that their sins have brought on them this chastisement, though they had not injured the Babylonians. Theod. Flam. C.—God had often promised pardon to those who truly repent. An appeal is made to his truth and mercy.

VER. 7. Sins. Heb. “iniquity, . . . and in sin did my mother warm or conceive me.” Original sin has a manifold deformity, and is the fatal root of other transgressions. See S. Aug. Ench. S. Tho. i. 2. q. 82. a. 2. est multiplex virtute. H.—The prophet speaks here undoubtedly of original sin. Amama.—No text could be more express, as the Fathers and the Jews agree. Yet Grotius, whose opinions are almost always singular, and dangerous, maintains, that the expression is hyperboical, and only implies, that David had been long subject to sin, even from his infancy, as Job was naturally of a merciful disposition. Job xxii. 18.—Thus free-thinkers abuse the Scripture, and setting aside all authority, will only see what they think proper. C.—The weakness of man is a motive for pity: (M.) David pleads for it, yet allows, that the fault was entirely his own, and that he had grace sufficient to have avoided it. C.—The consideration of our sinful origin, ought to move us to beg, that we may be washed still more, and that we may not yield to our evil propensities. W.—We may resist them, and therefore David would not make vain excuses in sin, as God loves the truth, and a sincere confession. M.

VER. 8. Uncertain. Heb. “in the interior,” I am full of sin, and thou requirest that I should constantly adhere to virtue. See Job xiv. 1.—To me. This increases my crime, (C.) as I cannot plead ignorance. M.—Those who have true faith, are more easily converted. But God gives to all some good, which he

10 To my hearing thou shalt give joy and gladness; and the bones that have been humbled shall rejoice.

11 Turn away thy face from my sins, and blot out all my iniquities.

12 Create a clean heart in me, O God: and renew a right spirit within my bowels.

13 Cast me not away from thy face; and take not thy holy spirit from me.

14 Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation, and strengthen me with a perfect spirit,

15 I will teach the unjust thy ways: and the wicked shall be converted to thee.

16 Deliver me from blood, O God, thou God of my salvation: and my tongue shall extol thy justice.

17 O Lord, thou wilt open my lips: and my mouth shall declare thy praise.

18 For if thou hadst desired sacrifice, I would indeed have given it: with burnt-offerings thou wilt not be delighted.

^b Lev. xiv. Num. xix.

loves in them, and is ever ready to preserve his gifts, and to save his creatures. W.

VER. 9. Hyssop, which was used in sprinkling lepers, &c. (Lev. xiv. 6.) not that the like ceremony, or even sacrifice, would suffice to heal the wound of the soul. Sincere contrition, (v. 18, 19.) and the virtue of Christ’s blood, are necessary. C. Heb. ix. 19.—The heat (Num. xix.) and operation of this sovereign medicine was shewn to the prophet. Jo. xix. W.—The sprinkling of the priest might be of service, if the heart was contrite. Heb. ix. 13. M.

VER. 10. Rejoice, when thou givest me an assurance of pardon. My bones, or virtue, shall then be restored. Heb. “the bones which thou hast broken may exult.” S. Jer. H.—God gives contrition, after which the whole interior is filled with joy. Bert.—When the affections are purified, the soul takes delight in God’s word, and revives. W.—The assurance of being pardoned, gives her fresh alacrity in his service. M.

VER. 11. Face. Anger. If the sinner consider his fault, God will forget it. C.—His justice requires that he should punish the impenitent. W.

VER. 12. Create. Heb. bera, a term never used but for a new production. Whatever comes immediately from God must be pure, and as David had fallen into impurity, he earnestly implores this gift. He prays for the new heart of flesh. Ezech. xxxvi. 26. H.—Thou hast said, Behold, I make all things new. Apoc. xxi. Oh that I may be included, that I may sing a new canticle, having become a new man! 2 Cor. v. 17. Eph. iv. 24. Bert.—Right. Heb. “constant,” (H.) the Holy Spirit, thy inspiration, or that uprightness, of which I have been deprived. C.—Bowels, or interior. W.—These sentiments ought to animate priests, when they hear confessions. W.

VER. 13. Spirit of prophecy, which is not withdrawn, except for some crime. Orig. Inet. p. 35.—David had been without this privilege, till his repentance. S. Athan. Yet S. Chrys. and Theodoret maintain the contrary. C.—He prays for final perseverance, which is due to none, (Bert.) and that he may fall no more. W.

VER. 14. Salvation, or thy salutary joy, (Bert.) “the joy of thy Jesus,” (S. Jer.) for whom he prays, (S. Aug.) knowing that He will save his people from their sins, and that there is salvation in no other name. H.—Perfect. Lit. “principal.” Sept. “conducting;” such a spirit as may suit one who is to command. H.—This may denote sound reason, (4 Mac. Philo Nobil) which keeps the passions under, (S. Chrys. Job xxx. 15.) or God himself, to whose Spirit all others should be subservient. Rancé often inculcated to his Monks, the importance of having this principal spirit, which includes every virtue, particularly of liberality, as the Heb. nediba, implies. Bert.—“Thy free Spirit.” Prot.—How earnestly should we endeavour to be disentangled from all the chains of our passions! H.—David might also fear, lest he had forfeited the throne, like Saul, whom the Spirit left. 1 K. x. 9. and xvi. 14. Kings affected to be styled liberal. Lu. xxiii. 25. C.—He repeats his petition thrice, in allusion to the three persons in one God, (S. Aug. &c.) and prays, that the Messiah may still spring from him, notwithstanding his sins, and that he may have a constant and willing spirit to fall no more. W.—Principal, or liberal, may refer to the Holy Ghost, the fountain of all grace, or to the king, who ought to be generous. M.

VER. 15. Thee. The sinner cannot testify his gratitude better, than by promoting the conversion of others. W.—This is a sort of satisfaction. M.—While engaged in sin, David could not well exhort his subjects to repentance. His example was rather an inducement for them to transgress. Bert.—But when they saw his grief, and knew that God had pardoned him, they were no longer tempted to despair. He also watched more carefully over their conduct.

VER. 16. Blood, from death, which I have deserved. S. Athan. That of Urias, and his companions, (W.) cries to heaven for vengeance. 2 K. xi. 24. H.—Hence the word sanguinibus, is used. Bert.—Spare me, and my people.—Justice, which has given place to mercy. C.—The latter word is here used by Sym. and justice may have this meaning. Theod.—Sixtus V. reads exultabit, instead of exultabit, which Sept. ἀγαλλιάσει. (C.) requires. Heb. terannem, “shall sing aloud of.” Prot. “shall praise thy justice.” S. Jer.—Extol agrees better with exultabit, though both have nearly the same sense. H.—God’s justice will pardon the penitent, as he has promised. W.

VER. 18. Sacrifice. If my crime were of such a nature as to be expiated by 19 A sacrifice to God is an afflicted spirit: a contrite and humbled heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

20 Deal favourably, O Lord, in thy good-will with Sion; that the walls of Jerusalem may be built up.

21 Then shalt thou accept the sacrifice of justice, oblations and whole burnt-offerings: then shall they lay calves upon thy altar.

PSALM LI.

QUID GLORIARIS.

David condemneth the wickedness of Doeg, and foretelleth his destruction.

1 Unto the end, understanding for David, 2 when Doeg, the Edomite, came and told Saul: David went to the house of Achimelech. [1 Kings xxii. 9.]

3 WHY dost thou glory in malice, thou that art mighty in iniquity?

4 All the day long thy tongue hath devised injustice: as a sharp razor, thou hast wrought deceit.

5 Thou hast loved malice more than goodness; and iniquity rather than to speak righteousness.

6 Thou hast loved all the words of ruin, O deceitful tongue.

7 Therefore will God destroy thee for ever: he will pluck thee out, and remove thee from thy dwelling-place: and thy root out of the land of the living.

8 The just shall see and fear, and shall laugh at him, and say: 9 Behold the man that made not God his helper:

But trusted in the abundance of his riches: and prevailed in his vanity.

10 But I, as a fruitful olive-tree in the house of God, have hoped in the mercy of God for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

11 I will praise thee for ever, because thou hast done it: and I will wait on thy name, for it is good in the sight of thy saints.

certain victims, I would surely have offered them: but my heart has offended, and must do penance. C.—The legal victims were not of themselves sufficient to remit sin.—M.—Contrition was necessary. Is. lxvi. 2. Ezec. vi. 9. Bert.—The Scripture often prefers internal, before outward sacrifices. This of the heart must precede those of justice, and of praise. W.—The heart must be broken, to make place for love. Compunction is thrice urged. The two first terms in Heb. are the same, "contrite," (H.) broken, or disconcerted. Κατελασθῆ ὀλίον ἔραπ. Odys. M.—The captives might adopt this prayer. Dan. iii. 39. C.—External sacrifices are commended in the next verses, as they are good, (H.) being instituted by God. M.

VER. 20. Deal. These two verses have no necessary connexion with the preceding: they may have been added by some prophet at Babylon, (C.) or David foresaw the destruction of the city by the Chaldees. S. Chrys.—He might fear that his sin would draw ruin on the capital, as a much less offence did, and as in all ages, the sins of the rulers have fallen on their subjects. 2 K. xxiv. H.—Though the place was not destitute of fortifications, (C.) he might pray that they might be completed, (Bert.) as they were by Solomon, who built the temple and various walls, so that David might very well add this conclusion, (3 K. iii. 1. and ix. 15. H.) alluding to the sacrifices which should be offered in the future temple. Bert.—He insinuates, that his pardon may prove beneficial to his people, and sues for it to be granted for their sakes. M.

VER. 21. Justice; works of piety, (Pa. iv. 6.) or victims vowed or prescribed by the law; the same which are afterwards styled holocausts (C.) by two different terms, hola and calil. H.—The latter includes fruits, &c. C.—While we are in sin, our good works are less acceptable. M.

PSAL. LI. &c. VER. 2-3. Achimelech. Sixtus V. Sept. &c. read Abimelech. But the former is the true name. See 1 K. xxii. 9. 20. C.—The word understanding implies, that we ought to reflect on the misery of detraction, and bear our crosses with submission. Bert.—Doeg was but half a Jew, and persecuted the faithful. W.—Iniquity. Heb. chesed, means also mercy, and some translate, "the mercy of God! or, the great mercy." Noble exploit! C.—But our version seems more natural. El may be a prep. as Sym. has καθ. Bert.—If Doeg, who was the most powerful of the shepherds of Saul, (1 K. xxi. 7.) thought it his duty to give his master information of what had passed, he ought to have stated the matter fairly, instead of insinuating, that the high-priest was ill-affected. H.—Nothing could be more false, as he supposed he was acting agreeably to the interests of Saul, and of the state. C.

VER. 6. Ruin. Sept. καταποντισμοῦ, "drowning," or to make the innocent suffer "ship wreck."

PSALM LII.

DIXIT INSIPIDENS.

The general corruption of man before the coming of Christ.

1 Unto the end, for Maeleth, understanding to David. THE fool said in his heart: "There is no God.

2 They are corrupted, and become abominable in iniquities: there is none that doth good.

3 God looked down from heaven on the children of men: to see if there were any that did understand, or did seek God.

4 "All have gone aside, they are become unprofitable together: there is none that doth good; no, not one.

5 Shall not all the workers of iniquity know, who eat up my people as they eat bread?

6 They have not called upon God: there have they trembled for fear, where there was no fear.

For God hath scattered the bones of them that please men: they have been confounded, because God hath despised them.

7 Who will give out of Sion the salvation of Israel? when God shall bring back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

PSALM LIII.

DEUS IN NOMINE TUO.

A prayer for help in distress.

1 Unto the end, in verses, understanding for David.

2 When the men of Ziph had come and said to Saul: Is not David hidden with us? [1 Kings xxiii. 19.]

3 SAVE me, O God, by thy name, and judge me in thy strength.

4 O God, hear my prayer: give ear to the words of my mouth.

5 For strangers have risen up against me; and the a Ps. xlii. 1.—b Rom. iii. 12.

VER. 7. They, is not found in Heb. Doeg would not dare to enter the tabernacle, after he had slain the priests. C.—Houbigant properly supplies thy. Bert.—Living. The Jews inform us, that Doeg slew himself with his master at Gelboe, and that David punished his offspring with death. C.

VER. 8. Laugh, at the last day, when they will have nothing to fear, nor the wicked to hope. In this life, the just are full of compassion; but they cannot but approve of God's judgments. C.

VER. 9. The man. Heb. hageber, "the hero."

VER. 10. Fruitful. David foretells his own prosperity on the throne, (W.) when this wretch shall be no more. H.—He was at this time in great perplexity, (C.) in banishment from the house of God. M.

VER. 11. I punished the wicked, and asserted thy just providence. H.—Good. Thy saints find the greatest comfort in thee. C.

PSAL. LII. &c. VER. 1. Maeleth, or Machalath. A musical instrument, or a chorus of musicians: for S. Jerom renders it, per chorum; (Ch.) and Aquila, "for dancing." Sixtus V. &c. read incorrectly, "for Amalec." The psalm is nearly the same with the 13th, (C.) except v. 6. M.—We know not the reason why David gave this second copy, omitting the name of Jehovah. Bert.—S. Aug. explains it of the dangers of the latter times. W.—It seems to speak of the return from captivity, v. 7. C.

VER. 6. God hath scattered the bones, &c. That is, God hath brought to nothing the strength of all those that seek to please men, to the prejudice of their duty to their Maker. Ch.—That. Heb. "who besiege thee. Thou hast confounded them, because," &c. Sept. seem to have read more correctly, as no one has been addressed before. Bert.

VER. 7. Glad. The Fathers explain this of Christ's redemption. The captives doubted not but that they should be speedily set at liberty, as the prophets had assured them. C.

PSAL. LIII. &c. VER. 2. Ziph lay to the south of Juda. H.—David was rescued from the most imminent danger, by an irruption of the Philistines. He then composed this canticle, expressing his sentiments in danger, and his gratitude to God. C.—It may also be used by any person in distress. W.—The Church orders it to be said by her ministers at Prime, that they may be protected from all their spiritual enemies. Bert.—The Fathers apply it to Jesus Christ, (S. Hil.) or to his persecuted members. S. Aug.

VER. 3. Name, which is a strong tower, (Prov. xviii. 10. C.) even thyself. Hence it is so criminal to take it in vain. Bert.—Judge. Ancient psalters have, "deliver." Saul and the Ziphians persecute me unjustly. I commit my cause to thee. H.—Defend me for the justice of my cause. W.

mighty have sought after my soul; and they have not set God before their eyes.

6 For behold God is my helper: and the Lord is the protector of my soul.

7 Turn back the evils upon my enemies: and cut them off in thy truth.

8 I will freely sacrifice to thee, and will give praise, O God, to thy name: because it is good:

9 For thou hast delivered me out of all trouble: and my eye hath looked down upon my enemies.

PSALM LIV.

EXAUDI DEUS.

A prayer of a just man under persecution from the wicked. It agrees to Christ persecuted by the Jews, and betrayed by Judas.

1 Unto the end, in verses, understanding for David.

2 HEAR, O God, my prayer, and despise not my supplication: 3 be attentive to me, and hear me.

I am grieved in my exercise; and am troubled, 4 at the voice of the enemy, and at the tribulation of the sinner.

For they have cast iniquities upon me: and in wrath they were troublesome to me.

5 My heart is troubled within me: and the fear of death is fallen upon me.

6 Fear and trembling are come upon me: and darkness hath covered me.

7 And I said: Who will give me wings like a dove, and I will fly and be at rest?

8 Lo, I have gone far off flying away; and I abode in the wilderness.

VER. 5. Strangers. Barbarous, (W.) enemies, though of the same tribe. C.—Hostis dicatur quem nunc peregrinum dicimus. Cic. Off. i.—The devil and our passions, as well as the world, are such to us. Bert.

VER. 6. Behold. He admires how God delivered him, though Saul seemed to have only one step more to take. Jesus Christ was secure amid the persecutions of the Jews, till he was pleased to deliver himself up. Jo. x. 18. C.

VER. 7. Truth. To fulfil thy promises. H.—He foretells their destruction.

VER. 8. Freely, without being commanded. W. M. Lev. iii. 1.—Jesus Christ was offered, because he would. Is. liii. 7. Jo. x. 17. S. Jer.—Good, so to do, (D.) or sweet in itself. Ps. li. 11. C.

VER. 9. Enemies, from the hill which divided the armies. I saw them retire, (H.) and in security beheld their chastisement. M.

PSAL. LIV. VER. 1. David. It alludes to some of his persecutions, particularly to that of Absalom, as well as to that of the Church, and of Jesus Christ. Bede explains it of Onias; who, being excluded from the high priesthood, retired into Egypt, and built the temple of Onion. 2 Mac. xiii. C.

VER. 3. Hear me. He repeats the same petition four times, (H.) to testify his fervour, and humility. Eccli. xxxv. 21.—Exercise, among the wicked, (S. Aug.) or while I consider the sufferings of Christ. Euseb.—David was perplexed what course to take, when he first heard of his son's revolt. Our Saviour was sorrowful unto death. Matt. xxvi. 37. C.—This life is a warfare. W.—Adversaria. Heb. sich, denote serious (IL) meditation. Gen. xxiv. 63. M.

VER. 4. Upon me. When a person has fallen into distress, the world is ever ready to attribute it to some fault. Absalom accused his father of neglecting to judge, &c. 2 K. xv. 2. The Jews calumniated and sought the death of Christ, whose agony in the garden is well described, (v. 5.) as well as the consternation of David, at the sight of such a general revolt, (C.) which almost overwhelmed him. W.

VER. 5. Troubled, like a woman in labour, (M.) as yachil implies, (C.) in Hiphel. M.

VER. 7. Dove, which flies swiftly. He now adored the judgments of God, which chastised him, as he had threatened; (2 K. xii. 11.) though, while innocent, he had rejected a similar proposal. Ps. x. 1. The event shewed, that he acted wisely in retiring beyond the Jordan. C.—O that I could fly, and in the simplicity of the dove, be removed from these afflictions! W.—As I could not go to heaven, I retired into the wilderness. M.

VER. 9. Storm. The first fury of the rebels, which is most dangerous, is thus specified. David was convinced, that his son's party would dwindle away, when he was informed that he did not pursue him, following the advice of Chusai. C.—Heb. "I would hasten my escape from the impetuous wind and tempest." But the Sept. may be equally correct. Bert.—God protected his weak servant in the greatest dangers. W.

VER. 10. Cast down. Heb. "swallow up," as the earth did Dathan. C.—Sept. "drown." H.—Tongues, as at Babel, that they may not know how to proceed. C.—Heb. "swallow up . . the torrent of their tongue." Bate.—Pallag, 9 I waited for him that hath saved me from pusillanimity of spirit, and a storm.

10 Cast down, O Lord, and divide their tongues; for I have seen iniquity and contradiction in the city.

11 Day and night shall iniquity surround it upon its walls: and in the midst thereof are labour, 12 and injustice.

And usury and deceit have not departed from its streets.

13 For if my enemy had reviled me, I would verily have borne with it.

And if he that hated me had spoken great things against me: I would perhaps have hidden myself from him.

14 But thou, a man of one mind, my guide, and my familiar:

15 Who didst take sweet meats together with me: in the house of God we walked with consent.

16 Let death come upon them, and let them go down alive into hell.

For there is wickedness in their dwellings: in the midst of them.

17 But I have cried to God: and the Lord will save me.

18 Evening and morning, and at noon, I will speak and declare: and he shall hear my voice.

19 He shall redeem my soul in peace from them that draw near to me: for among many they were with me.

20 God shall hear, and the Eternal shall humble them.

means also to "divide." Absalom was accordingly infatuated by David's friend. 2 K. xv. 31. and xvii. 7. M.—City of Hebron, or even of Jerusalem, which caused the king to leave no garrison in it. The city was still more abandoned in our Saviour's regard. C.—Contradiction. Their counsels agree not. They have their troubles, yet will not amend; but strive to oppress the poor. W.

VER. 13. From him. But how shall we guard against a traitor! C.—The injury received from a friend is most cutting. W.

VER. 14. Guide, the prime minister, (Bert.) and chief of the council. M.—Such was Achitophel, who had nevertheless been long (C.) secretly disaffected. See 2 K. xv. 12. and xvi. 23. He professed the same religion, and was trusted with the most important affairs, as Judas carried the purse. H.

VER. 15. Consent, or with expedition, as the Rabbins order people to go to the temple, though they must return slowly. All this designates Judas. C.—Dreadful lesson for all sacred ministers, who prove faithless! (Bert.) participating of the holy sacraments in the Catholic Church, (W.) and yet betraying themselves, and their master! Achitophel had probably to attend David in the temple, as Naaman did Benadad. 4 K. v. 18. H.

VER. 16. Let death, &c. This, and such like imprecations, which occur in the psalms, are delivered prophetically; that is, by way of foretelling the punishments which shall fall upon the wicked from divine justice, and approving the righteous ways of God: but not by way of ill-will, or uncharitable curses, which the law of God disallows. Ch.—David shewed even too much tenderness towards the rebels, in the opinion of Joab, &c. He would not hurt Saul. His predictions were verified; as Achitophel became a suicide, Absalom perished miserably, suspended between heaven and earth, as an object of horror to both, while many of his accomplices were either slain, or fell into precipices. 2 K. xvii. 23. and xviii. 8. H.—Hell, by a sudden death, like Antiochus, Core, &c. Num. xvi. 30. The just are already dead to this world. Bert.—Those who sin on purpose, descend, as it were, alive into hell. W.

VER. 18. Evening. The Hebrews then began the day. C. Gen. i. 5. H.—They had three times allotted for prayer, (Dan. vi. 10.) as the Church had afterwards. Const. Ap. vii. 25. C.—Evening song, matins, and the sacrifice of the mass, are the principal times for divine service. W.—David comprised all times, because his prayer was continual. Bert. C.

VER. 19. Among many, &c. That is, they that drew near to attack me, were many in company, all combining to fight against me. Ch.—Or, many also joined themselves to me with Joab, and the holy angels, (4 K. vi. 16.) though almost all Israel followed Absalom. 2 K. xv. 18. C.—In many things, schismatics agree with the Church; but their crime is the breaking of unity. S. Aug.

VER. 20. Change, or redemption for them, (Ps. xliii. 13. Euseb.) or they will not amend, (W.) nor cease to blaspheme God, and to calumniate me. C.—Eternal. Lit. "He who is before ages." H.

VER. 21. Repay. Heb. bishlomain, "in his retributions," or "against his peaceable ones." Houbigant too arbitrarily translates, "they have sent forth their hand against," &c. Bert.

For there is no change with them, and they have not feared God: 21 he hath stretched forth his hand to repay.

They have defiled his covenant, 22 they are divided by the wrath of his countenance, and his heart hath drawn near.

His words are smoother than oil, and the same are darts.

23 *Cast thy care upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee: he shall not suffer the just to waver for ever.

24 But thou, O God, shalt bring them down into the pit of destruction.

Bloody and deceitful men shall not live out half their days: but I will trust in thee, O Lord.

PSALM LV.

MISERERE MEI DEUS.

A prayer of David in danger and distress.

1 Unto the end, for a people that is removed at a distance from the sanctuary: for David, for an inscription of a title, (or pillar) when the Philistines held him in Geth.

2 HAVE mercy on me, O God, for man hath trodden me under foot: all the day long he hath afflicted me, fighting against me.

3 My enemies have trodden on me all the day long; for they are many that make war against me.

4 From the height of the day I shall fear: but I will trust in thee.

5 In God I will praise my words, in God I have put my trust: I will not fear what flesh can do against me.

a Matt. vi. 25. Luke xii. 22. 1 Pet. v. 7.

VER. 22. They are divided, &c. Dispersed, scattered, and brought to nothing, by the wrath of God, who looks with indignation on their wicked and deceitful ways. Ch.—They are separated from the good, (S. Jer.) slain by a look. 2 Thes. ii. 8.—Near, or fought, v. 19. C.—Some translate, “they have divided the butter, like words of his mouth.” But this is less accurate, and the same idea is conveyed in the next words. Bert.—Prot. “The words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart. His words were softer than oil, yet were they drawn swords.” H.—My enemy has violated every law, under the appearance of friendship. C.—Darts. Absalom kissed the men of Israel to delude them, (2 K. xv. 2.) and the traitor gave this sign to those who came to seize our Saviour. Matt. xxvi. 48. C.—The words of God are most excellent in themselves, but they seem hard to the incredulous. Thus the Capharnaïtes gave rise to the first heresy against the words of Christ, which S. Peter piously believed, though, as yet, he did not comprehend their meaning. Jo. vi. S. Aug. W.—His heart and words may thus be understood of God: but they more probably relate to any one of David’s numerous enemies, who is thus singled out. H.

VER. 23. Cast. The prophet had experienced the happy effect of this conduct. C.—In all troubles and doubts, we must have recourse to God. W. 1 Pet. v. 7.

VER. 24. Destruction; “into gehenna,” (Chal.) or “hell,” (S. Jer.) to which the judge sentences the reprobate, without promoting their crimes. S. Aug. C.—Days. It is rare that murderers and notorious malefactors escape punishment in this world; but in the next, they will surely be requited. Absalom perished in the flower of his age. Bert.—Achitophel, and many others, have been suddenly cut off. God sometimes permits such to reign for a time, to exercise his servants, or that they may repent. S. Aug.—The Scripture often threatens sinners in this manner. Job xxi. 21. Is. lxv. 20. C.—Their days are indeed spent, when they die. But if they had altered their conduct, they might have prolonged their life, (H.) according to the usual course of nature. W. M.

PSAL. LV. VER. 1. Geth. Before (Bert.) or after his escape to the cave of Odollam, (C.) he composed this psalm, to comfort his followers with the consideration of God’s protection. H.—See 1 K. xxii. and Ps. xv. The title is variously rendered. S. Jer. “to the victor for the dumb dove,” &c. Prot. “upon Jonath elem rechokim Michtam of David.” This is to elude the difficulty, and we might as well adhere to the Sept. who seem to have only added, “from the sanctuary.” The psalm may suit any one in distress, (Bert.) unable to attend the public service, (W.) or it may be understood of our Saviour’s passion. Bert.

VER. 2. Man. All combine against me. C.—The sins of every man oppressed Jesus Christ. Bert.—All who will live piously, must suffer many attacks. W.

6 All the day long they detested my words: all their thoughts were against me unto evil.

7 They will dwell and hide themselves: they will watch my heel.

As they have waited for my soul, 8 for nothing shalt thou save them: in thy anger thou shalt break the people in pieces.

O God, 9 I have declared to thee my life: thou hast set my tears in thy sight,

As also in thy promise. 10 Then shall my enemies be turned back.

In what day soever I shall call upon thee, behold I know thou art my God.

11 In God will I praise the word, in the Lord will I praise his speech. In God have I hoped, I will not fear what man can do to me.

12 In me, O God, are vows to thee, which I will pay, praises to thee.

13 Because thou hast delivered my soul from death, my feet from falling: that I may please in the sight of God, in the light of the living.

PSALM LVI.

MISERERE MEI DEUS.

The prophet prays in his affliction, and praises God for his delivery.

1 Unto the end, destroy not, for David, for an inscription of a title, when he fled from Saul into the cave.

[1 Kings xxiv.]

2 HAVE mercy on me, O God, have mercy on me: for my soul trusteth in thee.

And in the shadow of thy wings will I hope, until iniquity pass away.

3 I will cry to God, the most High; to God, who hath done good to me.

VER. 4. The height of the day. That is, even at noon day, when the sun is the highest, I am still in danger. Ch.—Heb. “many fight against me from an elevation, or from day-break.”—Fear. Many prefix a negation, which S. Jeron rejects, (ad Sun.) explaining this height of the divine majesty. C.—David felt the impressions of fear; but corrected them by his confidence in God. W.

VER. 5. My words. The words or promises God has made in my favour. Ch.—Praising God (H.) removed the dejection of David. Euseb.—Detested Prot. “wrest.” They put an evil construction upon what I say, (H.) and make me their laughing-stock. Ps. xxxvii. 13. C.—But I cease not to proclaim what God has declared in my favour, (H.) or what good I have been enabled to effect by his grace. My enemies may meet to devise my ruin, and to supplant me, yet all in vain. W.

VER. 8. For nothing shalt thou save them. That is, since they lie in wait to ruin my soul, thou shalt for no consideration favour or assist them, but execute thy justice upon them. Ch.

VER. 9. I have. Prot. “thou tellest my wanderings: put thou my tears into thy bottle. Are they not in thy book?” S. Jer. “thou hast numbered my most secret things: place my tears in thy sight,” &c. H.—Sept. render the sense clearer. Bert.—God has promised to relieve the distressed, who confided in him.

VER. 11. To me. This is almost a repetition of v. 5. C.—Elohim and Jehova are mentioned (H.) as “the power and eternity” of God gave David the greatest confidence.

VER. 12. To thee. Lit. “thy vows.” H.—Houbigant chooses rather to follow the Syriac, “with thee, O God, are my vows:” which is clearer, though our version may be well explained, “I will perform my vows to thee,” (Bert.) the sacrifice of praises, in this psalm. C.—I will endeavour to comply with my engagements and vows. W.

VER. 13. Living, in my own country, where I am no longer, as formerly during my banishment, in the region of the dead. C.—The Fathers explain this of Jesus Christ, or of eternal glory. Theod. C.—In the true faith and good works, I will strive to please God. W.

PSAL. LVI. VER. 1. Destroy not. Suffer me not to be destroyed, (Ch. M.) or I will not allow my men to destroy an implacable foe, (H.) as they entreat me to do. This conduct is worthy of eternal memory. W.—The words may also be an admonition to the reader, not to alter this piece. Apoc. xxii. 18. C.—Al tashcheth, (or thosséth. H.) is supposed to be an instrument, or a favourite song, such as that of Moses, (Deut. ix. 26.) which begins thus. But the point is uncertain. The same words occur, Ps. lviii. lix. (Bert.) and lxxiv. They are put in the mouth of Christ suffering, by S. Hilary, &c.—Cave of Odollam, or rather of Engaddi. C.

4 He hath sent from heaven, and delivered me: he hath made them a reproach that trod upon me.

God hath sent his mercy and his truth, 5 and he hath delivered my soul from the midst of the young lions. I slept troubled.

The sons of men, whose teeth are weapons and arrows, and their tongue a sharp sword.

6 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens, and thy glory above all the earth.

7 They prepared a snare for my feet; and they bowed down my soul.

They dug a pit before my face, and they are fallen into it.

8 My heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready: I will sing, and rehearse a psalm.

9 Arise, O my glory; arise, psaltery and harp: I will arise early.

10 I will give praise to thee, O Lord, among the people: I will sing a psalm to thee among the nations.

11 For thy mercy is magnified even to the heavens: and thy truth unto the clouds.

12 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: and thy glory above all the earth.

PSALM LVII.

SI VERE UTIQUE.

David reproveth the wicked, and foretelleth their punishment.

1 Unto the end, destroy not, for David, for an inscription of a title.

2 IF in very deed you speak justice: judge right things, ye sons of men.

3 For in your heart you work iniquity: your hands forge injustice in the earth.

VER. 2. In thee. This obliges God to take pity. Pa. xlii. 11.—Wings, as a chicken retires to the hen. Ruth ii. 12. Matt. xxiii. 37.

VER. 4. Sent his mercy, &c. (C.) above the power of man. W.—Reproach. Saul was forced to entreat David to preserve his family, as he had just spared his own life; which would, no doubt, mortify his pride, (1 K. xxiv. 18. 22. C.) and seem a reproach to him. W.

VER. 5. Lions. Poetry gives life to all things. It represents mercy and truth as God's messengers; and Saul as a young lion. He might have entered the cave with his men, and destroyed David: but Providence caused him to enter alone, so that David had an opportunity to cut off the hem of his garment, and to shew his clemency.—Sword. Thus were the Jews armed, to demand Christ's death. Euseb. C.—The persecutors use artificial weapons, and excite one another to fury. 1 K. xxii. 16. W.

VER. 7. Down. Heb. "my soul was bowed down," (Bert.) or "to bow down my soul." S. Jer. H.—Saul strove many ways to destroy his rival, sending him to fight the Philistines, who, nevertheless, proved the ruin of Saul. 1 K. xviii. 17. and xxxi. 1. W.

VER. 8. My. This and the following verses, from the 107th psalm. C.

VER. 9. Glory. Soul, tongue, or rather instruments of music, (C.) and spirit of prophecy. S. Athan.

VER. 10. Nations. The psalms are now recited (W.) in every language, and the wonders wrought by Christ are proclaimed. C.

VER. 11. Clouds. They are exceedingly great. H.—Christ has mounted to the highest heavens, and his apostles have preached (C.) his saving truths, which, like clouds, render the earth fruitful in good works. H.

VER. 12. Earth. It is just thy mercy should be extolled. M. v. 6.

PSAL. LVII. VER. 1. Title. This psalm is a sequel to the former, (W.) and refers to the malevolent speeches of Saul's courtiers, (1 K. xxiv. 10 and xxvi. 7. C.) and to the proceedings of the Jews against Christ. S. Jer.—It is an invective against hypocrites, (C.) and detractors. Bert.

VER. 2. Men. If you be consulted by Saul, and act as judges, do what is right. Condemn not a man unheard. C.—Few refuse to speak well. W.—Heb. also, "O assembly," act not hypocritically.

VER. 3. Heart. Hence proceed evil thoughts, &c. H.—Quicquid vis & non potes, factum Deus computat. S. Aug.—Forge, as you endeavour to preserve the appearance of rectitude. Heb. "weigh" in scales. C.—This double-dealing aggravates the fault. W.

VER. 4. Womb. Born in sin. H.—They have followed the same course through life, being always bent on wickedness. C.

VER. 5. Madness; or "poison," chamath. M.—Deaf asp. This is the most dangerous species. The ancients attempted to charm serpents. But these courtiers were deaf to every proof of David's innocence, (C. Disa.) and would receive no admonition, stopping their ears, like asps. W.—The prophet speaks

4 The wicked are alienated from the womb, they have gone astray from the womb: they have spoken false things.

5 Their madness is according to the likeness of a serpent: like the deaf asp that stoppeth her ears:

6 Which will not hear the voice of the charmers; nor of the wizard that charmeth wisely.

7 God shall break in pieces their teeth in their mouth: the Lord shall break the grinders of the lions.

8 They shall come to nothing, like water running down: he hath bent his bow till they be weakened.

9 Like wax that melteth they shall be taken away: fire hath fallen on them, and they shall not see the sun.

10 Before your thorns could know the brier; he swalloweth them up as alive, in his wrath.

11 The just shall rejoice when he shall see the revenge: he shall wash his hands in the blood of the sinner.

12 And man shall say: If indeed there be fruit to the just; there is indeed a God that judgeth them on the earth.

PSALM LVIII.

ERUPE ME.

A prayer to be delivered from the wicked, with confidence in God's help and protection. It agrees to Christ and his enemies, the Jews.

1 Unto the end, destroy not, for David, for an inscription of a title, when Saul sent and watched his house, to kill him. [1 Kings xix.]

2 DELIVER me from my enemies, O my God; and defend me from them that rise up against me.

3 Deliver me from them that work iniquity, and save me from bloody men.

conformably to the received opinion, (Bert.) without determining it to be true. M.

VER. 6. Wisely. "Cunningly." Many read, qui incantatur a sapiente. C.—He does not approve of the magical art. M.—Serpents may naturally be affected with music. The torpid snake by incantation bursts. Virg. Ec. viii. Bochart. v. 3. 385. Parkhurst, chober. H.

VER. 9. Wax. Heb. shabbelul, occurs no where else, and this signification is surely preferable to that of the Rabbins, "a snail." Prot. H.—Fire. Heb. "like the untimely birth of a woman, which has not seen the sun." Houbig. after S. Jerom.—Sept. may not have read th at the end of esh, "fire." But both versions imply, that the wicked shall perish, without resource (Bert.) or struggle. This is enforced by a multiplicity of examples. H.

VER. 10. Before your thorns, &c. That is, before your thorns grow up, so as to become strong briers, they shall be overtaken and consumed by divine justice, swallowing them up, as it were, alive in his wrath. Ch.—You shall be cut off when you least think of it. M. Pa. liv. 24. H.—David probably alludes to the proposal mentioned, (Jud. ix. 14) where the brier (rhannanus) invites all the trees to come under its shade. Before you, my followers, shall fall under the oppression of our cruel persecutors, they shall be suddenly destroyed. Bert.—"Before your pots can feel the thorns, he shall take them away, as with a whirlwind, both living, and in his wrath." Prot.—This version of Pagnin is rejected by Montanus, who nearly follows the Vulg. Sirothecem means, "your thorns, or pots." Eccles. vii. 7. H.

VER. 11. Shall wash his hands, &c. Shall applaud the justice of God, and take occasion, from the consideration of the punishment of the wicked, to wash and cleanse his hands from sin. Ch.—Hands. Heb. "feet," (though this is not certain. Pa. lxxiii. 4. Bert.) and all his body; the carnage shall be so great. The just approve of God's judgments, (C.) in or "over," est, to testify that he has no connexion with the wicked. Theod.—The just will purify himself still more at the sight of vengeance. This interpretation is good, but not so literal. Bert.

VER. 12. A God. Heb. Elohim shophetim. Both are in the plural, which has induced many to suppose that angels, &c. are meant; yet the plural is sometimes used, when speaking of the true God. Gen. xx. 13. Jos. xxiv. 19. C.—Houbigant translates, "gods," which he explains of the pastors of the Church, or "judges." The reward of virtue, and punishment of vice, are very important truths. Let us wait till the time of harvest, and all will be in its proper place. Bert.

PSALM LVIII. VER. 1. Watched. Heb. "they (the guards) watched." The psalm relates also to the resurrection of Christ, and vocation of the Gentiles, (Bert.) as well as to the reprobation, and future conversion of the Jews. It seems to be most applicable to the times of Esdras and Nehemiah; (2 Esd. iv. 1 and vi. 1.) one of whom may have composed it. C.—But this is only a conjecture

4 For behold they have caught my soul: the mighty have rushed in upon me:

5 Neither is it my iniquity, or my sin, O Lord; without iniquity have I ran, and directed my steps.

6 Rise up thou to meet me and behold: even thou, O Lord, the God of hosts, the God of Israel.

Attend to visit all the nations: have no mercy on all them that work iniquity.

7 They shall return at evening, and shall suffer hunger like dogs: and shall go round about the city.

8 Behold they shall speak with their mouth, and a sword is in their lips: for who, say they, hath heard us?

9 But thou, O Lord, shalt laugh at them: thou shalt bring all the nations to nothing.

10 I will keep my strength to thee: for thou art my protector: 11 my God, his mercy shall prevent me.

12 God shall let me see over my enemies: slay them not, lest at any time my people forget.

Scatter them by thy power; and bring them down, O Lord, my protector:

13 For the sin of their mouth, and the word of their lips: and let them be taken in their pride.

And for their cursing and lying, they shall be talked ture, (Bert.) and Saul's emissaries may be styled Gentiles, (M.) because they imitate their manners. II.—Saul sent repeatedly, and went himself to attack David. He gave him Michol with the same design. W.—But God turned her heart another way. H.

VER. 4. Caught. Heb. "laid snares for." Sept. "hunted." The enemy wished eagerly to take David, or Nehemias, (H. C.) and they seemed to have so surrounded the former, as to be sure of him. W.

VER. 5. I ran. Heb. "they," &c. But the Sept. would not have made such a mistake, (Bert.) and the Heb. appears to be incorrect, though we may understand "without iniquity in me, they have run." C.—I gave them no offence. W.—All this may be well explained of Jesus Christ, who alone could use these expressions with propriety, being without sin.

VER. 6. No mercy. Nehemias uses the like prophetic threats, 2 Esd. iv. 5. C.—Every sin must be punished, either by the penitent, or by an avenging God. The prophet supposes that his enemies died in penitence. S. Aug.—When the gospel was first preached, God visited the world with various afflictions, to make people enter into themselves. Euseb.—The prophet prays that God would visit all nations with peace, and punish obstinate persecutors of the Catholic Church. W.

VER. 7. Evening, when they came to take David. But, out of regard for Michol, they providentially waited till he had escaped, 2 K. xix. II.—Nehemias was obliged to watch continually, 2 Esd. iv. 11, 23. C.—The Jews will embrace the faith at the end of the world, (S. Aug.) or they will be destroyed (S. Hil.) or banished by Titus and Adrian (A. D. 137); the latter of whom forbade them even to look at Jerusalem from an eminence. They could not enter it in the time of Euseb. (Pa. xlviii.) and S. Jer. Soph. 1.—They have a hunger for God's word, of which they have lost the true sense. S. Athan.—Persecutors are never satiated, though they labour to destroy, all their lives. W.—They allow themselves no rest. M.

VER. 8. Lips. They seek my ruin, 2 Esd. iv. 2. &c.—Heard. Thus they deny Providence. Ps. (Heb.) x. 11. C.—This thought and the occasion of sin have produced much wickedness. "Whithersoever thou goest, thou art seen by Jesus Christ, who made, redeemed, and died for thee." S. Aug. Ser. 161.—A serious consideration of God's presence is the best preservative. Bert.—The wicked devise all sorts of cruelty, as if there were no God. W.

VER. 9. Laugh. Permitting them to become ridiculous. C.

VER. 10. My. Heb. "his," which seems incorrect. Chal. (C.) and S. Jerom agree with the Vulg. Houbigant would also substitute, "My strength, I will sing to thee," which affords a better sense, v. 17. Bert.—Yet our version is very plain; I will make all my powers serve thee, and acknowledge that all comes from thee. H.—Such was the admirable humility of Nehemias, who never assumed any glory to himself. C.—David and all just men entertain the same sentiments. We are here assured (H.) that the Church and some virtuous souls will persevere, by God's grace. W.

VER. 11. His mercy. Prot. "the God of my." Yet the text has "his;" i and v are easily confounded. The Keri here allows "my," which Pagnin translates. S. Jer. "the mercy of my God;" (H.) or "my God, my mercy." Ep. ad. Saz. C.—All comes to the same end. These words are most applicable to Jesus Christ. Bert.

VER. 12. Over. S. Jer. "my spies." H.—Forget. Let them suffer a long time, (M.) that their punishment may be a greater warning. The ancients read, "thy law," instead of people, and apply this to the Jews, (C.) who still preserve the law, and bear witness throughout the world that the prophecies were not a fabrication of Christians. H.—Their exemplary chastisement and continuance, of, 14 when they are consumed: when they are consumed by thy wrath, and they shall be no more.

And they shall know that God will rule Jacob, and all the ends of the earth.

15 They shall return at evening, and shall suffer hunger like dogs: and shall go round about the city.

16 They shall be scattered abroad to eat, and shall murmur, if they be not filled.

17 But I will sing thy strength; and will extol thy mercy in the morning.

For thou art become my support, and my refuge, in the day of my trouble.

18 Unto thee, O my helper, will I sing; for thou art God, my defence: my God, my mercy.

PSALM LIX.

DEUS REPULISTI NOS.

After many afflictions, the Church of Christ shall prevail.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed, for the inscription of a title, to David himself, for Doctrine, 2 when he set fire to Mesopotamia, of Syria and Sobal; and Joab returned, and slew of Edom, in the vale of the salt-pits, twelve thousand men.

3 O GOD, thou hast cast us off, and hast destroyed us; thou hast been angry, and hast had mercy on us.

may serve to caution all not to follow their example. Judai testes iniquitatis sue et veritatis nostre. S. Aug. Euseb.—"If all the Jews had been converted, we should have had only suspicious witnesses; and if all had been exterminated, we should have had none." God permits our spiritual adversaries to remain for our trial, (Tert.) that we may not forget ourselves in prosperity. W.—We may also translate Al, "O God, (as well as not) slay them, that they may attack my people no more;" (see 2 Esd. iv. 4.) for what reason could Nehemias have to beg that they might be spared? C.—God might have some. II.

VER. 13. For, is not expressed. Lit. "bring down . . . the sign," &c. Let not their haughty speeches take effect, or escape punishment. The imprecations of the Jews against themselves, (H.) and against Christ, have brought on their destruction. S. Aug.—Thus nothing need be supplied.—Of. Heb. "shall relate;" which has little sense. Laying aside the points, it may have the meaning of the Vulg. This passage can hardly be applicable to David's persecutors, though it might predict the disasters of Saul. It alludes more to the enemies of Christ, (Bert.) who called down his blood upon themselves, (Mat. xxvii. 25.) and most falsely accused Him. C.—Hence they are become the reproach of men, and are no longer a people. They behold the reign of Christ propagated throughout the world, (v. 16. II.) while they are wandering about and despised. They once would not serve; boasting that they were children of Abraham. Jo. viii. M.

VER. 14. Consumed. At the destruction of Jerusalem, or for opposing Nehemias, 2 Esd. vi. 16.—Earth. The Jews who were preordained to life, embraced the gospel. C.—How can those know, who are no more? Their condition will be worse than annihilation. They will exist in hell, though no more visible to us. Bert.—They will know the truth, when it is too late; and when they are on the point of plunging into the abyss. The measure of their crimes being full, they shall be accused and punished. W.

VER. 15. City. This is a sort of chorus, v. 7. S. Jer. and Prot. "Let them bark. H.—It insinuates, that the attacks of the enemies of Nehemias, (C.) David, and Christ, were unceasing. H.

VER. 16. Murmur. Heb. also "shall tarry all night." Prot. "grudge." II.—Finding no oil for their lamps, they will repent like Judas, and blaspheme in hell. W.

VER. 17. Morning. With earnestness, (H.) I will fulfil this duty (C.) at the resurrection, (W.) in the morning of a glorious immortality. M.

VER. 18. Helper. S. Jer. "my strength," virtutem meam tibi cantabo, v. 10. I will sing, that all I have comes from thy pure mercy. H.

PSALM LIX. &c. VER. 1. Changed. Pa. xlv. Title, Pa. xv. doctrine explaining what will be the progress of the Church. M.—It seems to have the same import as understanding, in other titles, but here is of little authority. Bert.—It has no connexion with the psalm, which seems to have been written before David had obtained the sovereignty over Israel, (Houbig. v. 8.) or it expresses the sentiments of the captives, (C.) and of Jesus Christ, and his Church. S. Aug.

VER. 2. Set fire. Heb. "fought against Syria of Mesopotamia, and Syria of Soba." S. Jer. 2 K. viii. 10. H.—Twelve. Abisai slew 12,000, perhaps on another occasion; (1 Par. xviii. 12.) so that this title does not contradict his story. M.

VER. 3. Off. Chastising thy people frequently under Moses, &c. Bert.—On us. Redeeming mankind, which thou hadst condemned, for the fault of Adam, and giving us a more abundant grace. Rom. v. 9. S. Hil.—Thou hast treated us like a good physician, (Deut. xxxii. 39. C.) chastising us for our sins, that we might improve in virtue. W.

4 Thou hast moved the earth, and hast troubled it: heal thou the breaches thereof, for it has been moved.

5 Thou hast shewn thy people hard things; thou hast made us drink the wine of sorrow.

6 Thou hast given a warning to them that fear thee: that they may flee from before the bow:

That thy beloved may be delivered. 7 Save me with thy right hand, and hear me.

8 God hath spoken in his holy place: I will rejoice, and I will divide Sichem; and will mete out the vale of tabernacles.

9 Galaad is mine, and Manasses is mine: and Ephraim is the strength of my head.

Juda is my king: 10 Moab is the pot of my hope.

Into Edom will I stretch out my shoe: to me the foreigners are made subject.

11 Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

12 Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go out with our armies?

13 Give us help from trouble: for vain is the salvation of man.

14 Through God we shall do mightily: and he shall bring to nothing them that afflict us.

PSALM LX.

EXAUDI DEUS.

A prayer for the coming of the kingdom of Christ, which shall have no end.

1 Unto the end, in hymns, for David.

VER. 4. Moved. He personifies the earth, which had fallen into the hands of the Chaldees, (C.) or had experienced various commotions under Saul, &c. (H.) which he denotes by the mention of an earthquake. M.

VER. 5. Sorrow. Heb. "muddy," such as is given to slaves or malefactors, (S. Matt. xxvii. 34.) mixed with myrrh, or venom. Lit. "wine of trembling," (C.) or soporiferous. S. Jer. H.—All these expressions give the idea of something disagreeable. Bert.—The people became penitent, or were astonished. M.

VER. 6. Warning, to amend, (W) the sign of the cross (C.) in baptism, (S. Jer.) or confirmation. Euseb.—It was customary to erect a pole, on which some signal was placed, in case of invasion. Is. v. 26. and xi. 12. &c. C.—Bow. Heb. kosoth, (H.) as S. Jer. &c. have read, though the present Heb. end with z, less correctly, and is explained, "because of the truth." C. Bert.

VER. 7. Save me. The king praying for all. M.—S. Aug. reads, me, (C.) though the Vulg. does not here express it. H.—Heb. "save thy right hand," the people, or man of thy, &c. Ps. lxxix. 18. C.—Hear me. Heb. "him." But the margin has, me. H.

VER. 8. Holy one, Jesus Christ, (Euseb.) the prophet, (M.) the sanctuary, (C.) or oracle. W.—He had promised that the captives should return in seventy years time. Jer. xxv. 11. and xxix. 10. C.—Sichem. (partibor Sichinam . . . melibor.) These two verbs are sometimes used for partiar and metiar, in ancient authors.—Tabernacles. Heb. "succoth." Bert. Gen. xxxiii. 17.—It may also signify the Arabs, who lived in tents. M.—David's dominion extended over these nations, (H.) and the captives at Babylon hoped to recover them, as the Machabees did. The kingdoms of Juda and Israel were no more divided, (Is. xi. 13. Jer. xxxi. 8.) to shew the unity of the Church.

VER. 9. Head. This tribe was at the head of the kingdom of Israel, but submitted to David, (H.) and afforded excellent soldiers and captains. C.—His temporal kingdom was extended by God, who will crown his elect. W.—King. Heb. "law-giver," alluding to Gen. xlix. 10. Sym. "my general." C.—The word king implies all this. H.—Juda always swayed the sceptre. Bert.—After the captivity, Zorobabel was at the head of the people. Jesus Christ sprung from this tribe, and is the true king of the people, whom he has redeemed, and put in possession of the land of promise. C.

VER. 10. The pot of my hope; or my watering pot. That is, a vessel for meager uses, by being reduced to serve me, even in the meanest employments. Ch. W.—Plautus (Mort. ii. scen. 1. 40.) says, Ego vos pro matula habeo, &c. Symmachus adopts the sense of the Sept. ἀσπερίας, as rete, in Syr. means "to trust," (Dan. iii. 28.) and "to wash," in Heb. It was customary to throw lots into a pot full of water, and that which came out last was most esteemed. To this custom the psalmist may allude, (C.) or he hoped that the fruitful region of Moab would supply him with food. It was subject to David, (2 K. viii. 2. H.) and to the Machabees, 1 Mac. v. 6.—Shoe, to be untied, or carried, as by the meanest slaves, (Matt. iii. 11.) or to take possession. Deut. xi. 24. Thus "Alexander threw a javelin, and danced on the shore of Asia, begging that those lands would not receive him unwillingly for king." Diod. Arrian. Justin.—David conquered Idumea, (2 K. viii. 14. H.) as Hyrcanus did afterwards. Joseph. xiii. 17. C.—Foreigners, alienigenæ, or, "Allophylî." S. Aug.—"Of another tribe." H.—So the Philistines are called, who had no kindred with the Israelites; whereas the Edomites, Moabites, &c. were originally of the same family. Ch.—Subject,

2 HEAR, O God, my supplication; be attentive to my prayer.

3 To thee have I cried from the ends of the earth; when my heart was in anguish, thou hast exalted me on a rock.

Thou hast conducted me; 4 for thou hast been my hope: a tower of strength against the face of the enemy.

5 In thy tabernacle I shall dwell for ever: I shall be protected under the covert of thy wings.

6 For thou, my God, hast heard my prayer: thou hast given an inheritance to them that fear thy name.

7 Thou wilt add days to the days of the king; his years even to generation and generation.

8 He abideth for ever in the sight of God: his mercy and truth who shall search?

9 So will I sing a psalm to thy name for ever and ever: that I may pay my vows from day to day.

PSALM LXI.

NONNE DEO.

The prophet encourageth himself and all others to trust in God, and serve him.

1 Unto the end, for Idithun, a psalm of David.

2 SHALL not my soul be subject to God? for from him is my salvation.

3 For he is my God and my Saviour: he is my protector, I shall be moved no more.

4 How long do you rush in upon a man? you all or "friends." Ps. cvii. 10. C.—Prot. "Philistia, triumph thou, because of me." Marg. insinuates this is spoken "by irony;" but (H.) Heb. properly means, "make an alliance with me;" or, Syr. "I will shout for joy over Palestine." This country was subdued by the Machabees, (1 Mac. iv. 15. C.) as it had been tributary to David. 2 K. viii. 2. Bert.—"I will make a league against the Philistines." Houbig.

VER. 11. City. The capital of the aforesaid countries, or Jerusalem; (C.) but more particularly Petra, (H.) the strongest place in Idumea. M. Abela. 3. Bert.—The Fathers understand the Church. Euseb.

VER. 12. Off? God punishes and rewards. W.—And wilt; or, "yet thou wilt not," &c. H.—Thou wilt not depend on our efforts for victory. Bellar. M.—How can we expect to make such conquests, being in so forlorn a condition, when thou dost not lead forth our armies, as formerly? All that man can do is vain; but thou wilt look down upon us, and through God we shall do mightily, v. 14. C.

PSALM LX. VER. 1. Hymns. This denotes either the female musicians, or the instruments. C.—David, under persecution, (Ferrand) the captains, (Ven Bede. C.) or any one in the Church of Christ, (S. Aug.) may adopt this psalm, (Bert.) to thank God. W.

VER. 3. Earth of Palestine, (Bert.) when David was at Mahanaim. Ferrand. 2 K. xvii. 22. H.—The countries beyond the Euphrates may be so styled. Pa. lxiv. 6.—Rock, by inspiring Cyrus to grant us liberty, (C.) or by sending Jesus Christ. Euseb.—The Church is firmly established; and, in all places, serves God. W.

VER. 5. Tabernacle. The words for ever seem to confine this to heaven, as the Fathers explain them, though they may also allude to a temporal protection (Bert.) in the temple. C.—Wings. Chal. "of thy deity." Chal. I will continue a member of thy Church here, and be happy for ever. M.

VER. 6. Inheritance. David had both a temporal, and an eternal one in view. Bert.—The captives express their gratitude for their deliverance. C.

VER. 7. King. They wish long life to the king, expecting that the predictions of the prophets insured to them temporal dominion. But when they saw Zorobabel possess no such splendour, they were naturally taught to extend their thoughts to the Messiah, of whom the Chal. and ancient Jews, as well as the Fathers, explain this passage. C.—Chal. "the days of the future world thou wilt add to the days of the king, the Messiah. His years shall be like the generations of this world, and the generations of the world to come." Eternity is clearly meant. If David speaks of himself, and of his successors on the throne for many ages, he must be considered as a figure of Christ, who is also designated. Bert.—The Church will continue to the end, and be triumphant throughout eternity. W.

VER. 8. Search? Who can comprehend what thou hast prepared for this king! He may allude to the promises made to David's family, (1's. lxxxviii. 30. 38. C.) which should reign for ever, by means of Christ. H.—Who can explain the mercy of God in redeeming us; and his fidelity in granting his promised rewards? W.

VER. 9. Day. A Levite speaks, having dedicated himself by vow to serve God continually in his temple, after his return from Babylon, (C.) or David expresses his resolution to testify his gratitude, by sacrifice. H.—I will sing psalms &c. in this life, and for ever. W.

kill, as if you were thrusting down a leaning wall, and a tottering fence.

5 But they have thought to cast away my price, I ran in thirst: they blessed with their mouth, but cursed with their heart.

6 But be thou, O my soul, subject to God: for from him is my patience.

7 For he is my God and my Saviour: he is my helper, I shall not be moved.

8 In God is my salvation and my glory: he is the God of my help, and my hope is in God.

9 Trust in him, all ye congregation of people: pour out your hearts before him: God is our helper for ever.

10 But vain are the sons of men, the sons of men are liars in the balances: that by vanity they may together deceive.

11 Trust not in iniquity, and covet not robberies: if riches abound, set not your heart upon them.

12 God hath spoken once, these two things have I heard, that power belongeth to God, 13 and mercy to thee, O Lord; for thou wilt render to every man according to his works.

PSALM LXII.

DEUS DEUS MEUS AD TE.

The prophet aspireth after God.

1 A psalm of David, when he was in the desert of Edom.

PSAL. LXI. &c. VER. 1. Idithun, to sing. W.—He was one of the chief musicians under David. 1 Par. xxv. 3. The psalm may be explained of David, persecuted by Absalom, (C.) of the Machabees, (Theod.) &c. or of Christ, and his Church. C.—S. Jer. considers it as a piece of excellent morality, (C.) and this may suffice, without referring it to any historical fact. Bert.

VER. 2. Subject. The just is resigned, though he feel like other men. David found a sort of resentment against the rebels, arising in his breast, which he presently repressed, by the thought of God's will. 2 K. xii. 11. C.—He fears nothing, because his soul is subject to God. W.—Heb. "silent." H.

VER. 4. Fence. This may refer to the persecutors, who resembled a leaning wall. Bert.—Is. xxx. 13. C.—Prot. "ye shall be slain all of you, as a bowing wall shall ye be," &c. He threatens them with speedy destruction, (H.) or represents to them the baseness of attacking a man ready to fall. C.—He informs them, that their attempts will be in vain, though they be very numerous, and he himself apparently so weak. W.

VER. 5. Price. Sept. S. Hilary, &c. "my honour." They wish to dethrone me, and to represent me as unfit to govern.—I ran. Sept. ἔδραμον, "they ran" likewise, as Heb. implies, and as the Gr. Fathers generally explain it. David thought proper to flee, that he might be at a distance from traitors, 2 K. xv. 14. His enemies sought his destruction. C.—They wished to deprive him of the reward of his labours; but he ran more earnestly.—Blessed. Flattery is very dangerous. W.

VER. 8. God. The multiplicity of titles shews the prophet's love. See Apoc. v. 12. S. Aug. Conf. i. 4. Bert.

VER. 9. All. Heb. "always, O people." Sept. seem to have read, adoth, for heth.—For ever. Here Selah is translated, (Bert.) though it be not in Sept. &c. David exhorts his followers to address themselves to God, with compunction and confidence. C.

VER. 10. Liars. They are so vain and light, that if they are put into the scales, they will be found to be of no weight; and to be mere lies, deceit, and vanity. Or, they are liars in their balances, by weighing things by false weights, and preferring the temporal before the eternal. Ch. Prov. xi. 1. and xx. 10.—They give false judgments; be not concerned; God is our protector. C.—God's servants strive to draw others to the practice of virtue. W.—All sinners (H.) will not outweigh vanity itself. M.

VER. 11. Them. Let the rich assist their needy brethren; and you, my followers, beware of enriching yourselves, by unjust rapine, during this civil war. C.—Raise your thoughts to something better. S. Aug.

VER. 12. Once, by the generation of his word, (S. Aug.) or when he promulgated the law. Ex. xx. 8. Bert.—God's word is invariable, (W. Job xxxiii. 14. M.) and will be put in execution. S. Amb. T.—This he has often inculcated. Vatab. Job xxxix. 35. Amos (i. 3.) uses three and four, in the same sense. C.

VER. 13. Works. We must therefore refrain from every injustice. H.—God spoke once by Moses, and again by his own Son. Both the Testaments confirm the certainty of rewards and punishments, (Bert.) as God is able and willing (W.) to execute his decrees. Luther, followed by the Dutch, translates, "as he merits;" to which expression, concerning the just, Amama objects. H.

PSAL. LXII. VER. 1. Edom, (Idumea.) H.—Several copies read Judea; which agrees with the Heb. &c. The Idumeans, after the captivity, occupied those deserts (C.) of Ziph, Haret, &c. (W.) where David had screened himself from the fury of Saul. This psalm may express his sentiments, (Theod. Munia.)

2 O GOD, my God, to thee do I watch at break of day.

For thee my soul hath thirsted; for thee my flesh, O how many ways!

3 In a desert land, and where there is no way, and no water: so in the sanctuary have I come before thee, to see thy power and thy glory.

4 For thy mercy is better than lives: thee my lips shall praise.

5 Thus will I bless thee all my life long: and in thy name I will lift up my hands.

6 Let my soul be filled as with marrow and fatness: and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips.

7 If I have remembered thee upon my bed, I will meditate on thee in the morning: 8 because thou hast been my helper.

And I will rejoice under the covert of thy wings: 9 my soul hath stuck close to thee: thy right hand hath received me.

10 But they have sought my soul in vain, they shall go into the lower parts of the earth.

11 They shall be delivered into the hands of the sword, they shall be the portions of foxes.

12 But the king shall rejoice in God, all they shall be praised that swear by him: because the mouth is stopped of them that speak wicked things.

* Matt. xvi. 27. Rom. ii. 8. 1 Cor. iii. 8. Gal. vi. 5.

or those of the captives, returning home, (C.) or it may agree with all those, who thirst after their heavenly country. Bert.—S. Jerom. explains it of the coming of Christ, and it was used in the morning service. S. Chrysa. Pa. exl. C.—Catholics, who are imprisoned for their faith, and cannot approach the tabernacle, may here find comfort. W.

VER. 2. Day. The manna dissolved with the sun beams, and God will be served with diligence.—Flesh. The sensations of my soul affect all my body. W.—Thirst is more insupportable than hunger; and the psalmist could not express his ardour better. C.—He loves God with all his strength, &c. H.—"The soul desires, but the end can be attained only by good works." Carnis laboribus pervenitur. S. Jer.—O how! Prot. "length for thee in a dry," &c. But come is no Heb. verb, and occurring no where else, is little understood by the Jews. It seems that come, "as," should be here, to correspond with the following so. "As my flesh thirsts in this, &c. so in the," &c. I shall find no less pleasure in attending thy worship, than a thirsty traveller does in finding water. C.—Theodotion agrees with the Sept. in considering this as a compound word παραλῶς, (C.) and we had best stick to the most ancient version. Bert.

VER. 3. Land. "O solitude," cries out S. Ephrem, "ladder of heaven, mother of compunction, . . . and piety, thou art the guardian of the eyes," &c.—Glory. The ark, (C.) or Jesus Christ, the desired of all nations. S. Jer. H.—I have attended thy worship in spirit, not being able to be present at Jerusalem. C. M. W.—Thus people, who cannot hear mass, ought to act. H.

VER. 4. Lives. For these must perish, while heaven remains for ever. S. Hil.—This consolation is preferable to any worldly prosperity. W.

VER. 5. Hands. Doing good works, as the Fathers explain it. This is the posture of people who pray, or take an oath. Tert. 1 Tim. ii. 8. C.—I will, &c. Comfort is proportioned to suffering for Christ. 2 Cor. i. W.

VER. 6. Fatness. With the most exquisite delights of the temple. Jer. xxxi. 14. C.—Thy grace will enable me to give thee due praise (W.) with joy. M.

VER. 7. Bed. I will think on thee both when I retire to rest, and when I get up. Bert.—Thou art my first beginning, and last end. H.—At all times I will meditate on thy mercies (C.) in bed, and much more, when I arise, (W.) as I shall not then be so much oppressed with drowsiness. M.

VER. 10. Earth. To seek me out, (Houbig.) or they shall perish. The Babylonians were exposed to many miseries under Cyrus, as the prophets assert, (Is. xiii. 1. Jer. xxv. 12.) though profane history be silent. C.—David foretells the destruction of his persecutors, either temporal or spiritual. W.—The devils may be styled foxes. Bert. S. Hil.—This may also be verified in the Jews, who persecuted Christ, and fell a prey to the Roman arms, &c. Euseb. C.—Saul perished in battle, and his body was exposed on a gibbet to wild beasts. 1 K. xxxi. W.

VER. 12. The king. David, (Bert. &c.) or Zorobabel, for whom the Jews had the highest regard, though he was not an independent monarch, nor wore a crown. Agg. ii. 24. Zac. iii. 8. It was customary to swear by the life of the king. 1 K. i. 26. and xx. 3. The Fathers understand Jesus Christ to be meant, and this is the true and primary sense; as Zorobabel was only a figure of Him, and never really possessed the throne, that the Jews might not think that the prophecies were fulfilled in his person.—By him. The king, (Du Pin. C.) or God. M. Boss. T.—Those who follow the true religion, (Deut. vi. 18. Is. xlv. 23. C.) and act accordingly (H.) shall be kings for ever. Apoc. Bert. 1 Pet. ii. (733)

PSALM LXIII.

EXAUDI DEUS ORATIONEM

A prayer in affliction, with confidence in God that he will bring to nought the machinations of persecutors.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

2 HEAR, O God, my prayer, when I make supplication to thee: deliver my soul from the fear of the enemy.

3 Thou hast protected me from the assembly of the malignant; from the multitude of the workers of iniquity.

4 For they have whetted their tongues like a sword; they have bent their bow a bitter thing, 5 to shoot in secret the undefiled.

6 They will shoot at him on a sudden, and will not fear: they are resolute in wickedness.

They have talked of hiding snares; they have said: Who shall see them?

7 They have searched after iniquities: they have failed in their search.

Man shall come to a deep heart: 8 and God shall be exalted.

The arrows of children are their wounds: 9 and their tongues against them are made weak.

All that saw them were troubled; 10 and every man was afraid.

And they declared the works of God: and understood his doings.

11 The just shall rejoice in the Lord, and shall hope in him; and all the upright in heart shall be praised.

9. H.—As David came to the throne, on the death of his rival, so was Christ's name exalted, after the Romans had destroyed the Jews. W.

PSAL LXIII. VER. 1. David, in distress. Euseb. &c.—It has no relation to any historical fact. But it expresses the sentiments of any just man, surrounded with danger. S. Hil.—Yet many apply it to Daniel, in the lions' den, (Muis.) to the captives, (C.) or to Jesus Christ and his Church. S. Aug. &c. H.

VER. 3. Malignant. I am encouraged to hope by past experience. W.

VER. 4. Thing, or discourse. This describes the poisonous insinuations of heretics, (Euseb.) or the calumnies of the Jews against Christ. Bert.

VER. 6. Them. The snares. H.—Houbigant prefers "us," with reason, (Bert.) after the Syr. Arab. Cassiod. &c. Yet the Heb. &c. retain them, which is very easily explained. H.—The most wicked desire to preserve the reputation of honesty, (C.) and flatter themselves that no mortal is conscious of their deceit, and that even Providence does not regard things below. Pa. x. H.

VER. 7. Search. Or, they have made the most diligent investigation, (Bert.) to no purpose. H.—Thus David and our Saviour were treated.—Heart. That is, crafty, subtle, deep projects and designs; which nevertheless shall not succeed; for God shall be exalted in bringing them to nought, by his wisdom and power. Ch.—Heb. "both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart is deep." Prot. H.—But, without the points, the Sept. is accurate. Bert.—The Jews, with all their deep machinations to prevent the belief of Christ's resurrection, bringing even sleeping witnesses, only made themselves ridiculous. S. Aug. H.—Achimophel was forced to give way, (2 K. xvii. W.) though he had been considered as an oracle. H.

VER. 8. The arrows of children are their wounds. That is, the wounds, stripes, or blows, they seek to inflict upon the just, are but like the weak efforts of children's arrows, which can do no execution; and their tongues, that is, their speeches against them, come to nothing. Ch.—Or, children themselves have wounded these crafty politicians, and exposed their folly. H.—Heb. is "very perplexed in the last three verses. Let us adhere to the Vulg. and Sept. who generally read more correctly than the present Hebrew." C. Bert.—Yet S. Jerom gives a very good sense. H.—Wounds. God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the strong, (W.) and he hath taken the wise in their craftiness. M.

VER. 10. Afraid, at the sight of God's judgments on the Babylonians, &c. C.

VER. 11. Praised. All will begin to esteem the chosen race. C.—Heb. "shall glory." The Jews and Christians (H.) shall esteem themselves honoured by the title of God's people. C.—They shall be praised for rightly serving God, (W.) and shall be rewarded by Him (H.) with universal applause. M.

PSAL LXIV. VER. 1. Of the captivity. That is, the people of the captivity of Babylon. This is not in the Hebrew, but is found in the ancient translation or the Septuagint. Ch.—From the word canticle. H.—It is of little authority. Jeremias and Ezechiel were never together. C. Bert.—Perhaps the former might have put this psalm of David into the hands of the people, when they were going to Babylon, and Ezechiel might have exhorted them to recite it at their return. H.—It seems to have been composed by David, in thanksgiving for rain; (Pa. xxviii. Muis.) or some of the Levites wrote it, after PSALM LXIV.

TE DECET.

God is to be praised in his Church, to which all nations shall be called.

1 To the end, a psalm of David. The canticle of Jeremias and Ezechiel to the people of the captivity, when they began to go out.

2 A HYMN, O God, becometh thee in Sion: and a vow shall be paid to thee in Jerusalem.

3 O hear my prayer: all flesh shall come to thee.

4 The words of the wicked have prevailed over us: and thou wilt pardon our transgressions.

5 Blessed is he whom thou hast chosen, and taken to thee: he shall dwell in thy courts.

We shall be filled with the good things of thy house; holy is thy temple, 6 wonderful in justice.

Hear us, O God, our Saviour, who art the hope of all the ends of the earth, and in the sea afar off.

7 Thou who preparest the mountains by thy strength, being girded with power: 8 who troublest the depth of the sea, the noise of its waves.

The Gentiles shall be troubled, 9 and they that dwell in the uttermost borders shall be afraid at thy signs: thou shalt make the outgoings of the morning and of the evening to be joyful.

10 Thou hast visited the earth, and hast plentifully watered it; thou hast many ways enriched it.

The river of God is filled with water; thou hast prepared their food: for so is its preparation.

11 Fill up plentifully the streams thereof, multiply its fruits; it shall spring up, and rejoice in its showers.

God had removed the scourge of drought, with which he had afflicted the people, in consequence of their neglecting to finish the temple. Agg. i. 4. Mal. iii. 9. C.—David predicts the return from captivity, (Bert.) and the vocation of the Gentiles, (S. Hil. &c. M.) which the prophets Jeremias, &c. had insinuated, by the coming of the nations from Babylon, so as to forsake idolatry. S. Aug. &c. W.

VER. 2. Hymn. Or Heb. "Praise is silent," (H.) "waiteth," (Prot.) or "silence is praise for thee, O God." Pagn. Favete linguis. Hor. Grot.—"We worship Him with pure silence." Porphy. Abst. iii. Zac. ii. 13. H.—In Jerusalem, is not in Heb. &c. though Houbigant thinks it was originally. Bert.—"Only the vows of ecclesiastical religion are useful." S. Hil.—Praises of those who are out of the Church, are not acceptable to God. W.

VER. 3. O. Heb. "hearer of prayer;" (C.) or "graciously hear my prayer, till all," &c. S. Jer. Houbig.—To thee. At the last judgment, or (C.) at the vocation of the Gentiles. Bert. M.

VER. 4. Transgressions. These are the words of the Christian converts, (Euseb.) or of the Jews, who acknowledge that they have been justly punished with drought, for neglecting the temple and first fruits, Agg. i. 4. Mal. iii. 9. C.—Heb. "thou wilt expiate our transgressions," which denotes Christ's satisfaction. Bert.—Though the wicked threaten, we fear nothing, as long as thou wilt pardon our offences. W.—These have been the occasion of our past sorrows. M.

VER. 5. To thee, by predestination.—House, adorned with exterior graces. S. Hil.—Happy the man, whom thou hast ordained, by faith and good works to eternal life! David speaks in the name of the elect. M.

VER. 6. Justice. Because there thou wilt fulfil thy promises, and requirest the greatest composure and attention. Eph. ii. 12. 22. Bert.—Nothing defiled can enter into heaven. Apoc. xxi. W.—Off. The Jews were dispersed into all countries, (Jer. xxxi. 8.) and all are called to the true faith. C.

VER. 7. Strength, or rain. The power (C.) and goodness of God, are described with regard to the captives, and converted nations, (Bert.) and the great works of the creation. W.

VER. 8. Troublest. Prot. "stillest the noise." H.—Troubled. The most obdurate are converted from all countries. W.

VER. 9. Joyful. People both of the east and west shall learn to fear thee; or thy chosen people shall dwell in peace, and attend the morning and evening service. Euseb. C.—Both morning and evening afford delight, as people may labour, or take some rest, according to their different wants.

VER. 10. River. Heb. "the division," or all the seas and fountains (Bert.) of consequence, (M.) particularly the Jordan, which overflows, like the Euphrates, about Pentecost. Jos. iii. 15. Jer. xii. 5. C.—Its, the earth's, after a plentiful rain. H.—God has wrought many wonders by water, and hath fed his people, (Ex. vii. 14. and xvi. 3. &c.) to prefigure the graces conferred in baptism, the holy Eucharist, &c. W.

VER. 11. Showers. This gives the sense, rather than the words of the Heb. Bert.—Pastors are still preserved to feed the faithful, and all the just receive the crown of justice, at the end of the life. 2 Tim. iv. W.

12 Thou shalt bless the crown of the year of thy goodness: and thy fields shall be filled with plenty.

13 The beautiful places of the wilderness shall grow fat: and the hills shall be girded about with joy.

14 The rams of the flocks are clothed, and the vales shall abound with corn: they shall shout; yea, they shall sing a hymn.

PSALM LXV.

JUBILATE DEO.

An invitation to praise God.

1 Unto the end, a canticle of a psalm of the resurrection.

Shout with joy to God, all the earth, 2 sing ye a psalm to his name; give glory to his praise.

3 Say unto God, How terrible are thy works, O Lord! in the multitude of thy strength, thy enemies shall lie to thee.

4 Let all the earth adore thee, and sing to thee: let it sing a psalm to thy name.

5 Come and see the works of God: who is terrible in his counsels over the sons of men.

6 Who turned the sea into dry land, in the river they shall pass on foot: there shall we rejoice in him.

7 Who by his power ruleth for ever: his eyes behold the nations; let not them that provoke him be exalted in themselves.

8 O bless our God, ye Gentiles; and make the voice of his praise to be heard.

9 Who hath set my soul to live: and hath not suffered my feet to be moved.

10 For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou hast tried us by fire, as silver is tried.

VER. 12. Crown. The crops shall succeed each other, and be abundant. Lev. xxvi. 5. 10. Amos ix. 13. This fertility was foretold, Agg. ii. 20. C.—“By thy blessing, the year shall roll along, and thy steps shall distil fatness.” S. Jer. H.

VER. 13. Wilderness. Or, of such places as were not ploughed. Little hay was collected, as cattle might almost always pasture.—Hills, covered with vine-trees, &c. Joel iii. 18. Job. xx. 17. C.—The most barren will bring forth fruit, and the perfect shall advance in merit. W.

VER. 14. Clothed, with fleeces, (H.) or rather, shall be surrounded with sheep. Heb. also, “the pastures shall be covered with sheep.” Houbigant would read e, for a, and translate, “the mountains shall be clothed with flocks.” But such changes require some proof, and the sense is the same. Bert.—All nature (M.) praises God in its own manner, when it answers the designs of God. Yet man is chiefly invited to sing. H.—The pastors, (W.) like rams, lead the way; but all the just, without exception, shall be happy in their celestial mansions, and with the utmost content, shall join in the hymns of Zion. H.

PSAL. LXV. VER. 1. Psalm. Cassiodorus, &c. add, “of David.” But it is thought, he was not the author of this and the following piece, as his name is not in the original. C.—This argument is, however, of small weight.—Resurrection. Heb. Origen’s Sept. &c. omit these words, (Bert. T. iii.) which seem to have been added by some Greek Christian, who thought he perceived some allusion to the resurrection of Christ. v. 9. The Fathers have well explained it in this sense, though they also apply it literally to the return of the captives, (Theod. C.) and to the general resurrection, the end of all the miseries of the elect, (Bellar.) as well as to the conversion of the Gentiles, (Geneb.) and the resurrection of a soul from the state of sin. H.

VER. 3. Lie. Prove faithless to thee, (Ps. xvii. 46. &c.) notwithstanding the evidence of thy wonders, and their deceitful professions. Thus the Samaritans pretended they wished to assist the Jews to build the temple; yet soon after obtained an order from court to hinder it. 1 Esd. iv. 1. and viii. 36. C.—Pharaoh frequently promised to let the people go, but as often broke his word. W.—They had been moved with servile fear. M.—The sight of God’s judgments upon the world was enough to inspire terror. W.

VER. 5. Men. Choosing some, and rejecting others, (S. Jer.) calling the Gentiles, while he casts off the Jews. S. Aug.

VER. 6. In him. God, (H.) Jesus, (Euseb.) or “on it,” the river Euphrates, which we shall pass over with as much ease, as our ancestors did the Red Sea. So the prophets frequently speak in a figurative sense. Is. xi. 16. and i. 3. and Zac. x. 10. and 4 Esd. xiii. 41. C.—As Josue led the Israelites across the river Jordan on dry land, (H.) so we shall extol thy wonders. W.—There, reflecting on these prodigies, both past and present, we shall rejoice. M.

VER. 7. Provokes him. The faithless Jews, or Gentiles; particularly those of Babylon; or those among God’s people, who neglected his service. Agg. iv. and 11 Thou hast brought us into a net, thou hast laid afflictions on our back: 12 thou hast set men over our heads.

We have passed through fire and water, and thou hast brought us out into a refreshment.

13 I will go into thy house with burnt-offerings: I will pay thee my vows, 14 which my lips have uttered, And my mouth hath spoken, when I was in trouble.

15 I will offer up to thee holocausts full of marrow, with burnt-offerings of rams: I will offer to thee bullocks with goats.

16 Come and hear, all ye that fear God: and I will tell you what great things he hath done for my soul.

17 I cried to him with my mouth: and I extolled him with my tongue.

18 If I have looked at iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me.

19 Therefore hath God heard me, and hath attended to the voice of my supplication.

20 Blessed be God, who hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

PSALM LXVI.

DEUS MISEREATUR.

A prayer for the propagation of the Church.

1 Unto the end, in hymns, a psalm of a canticle for David.

2 MAY God have mercy on us, and bless us: may he cause the light of his countenance to shine upon us, and may he have mercy on us.

3 That we may know thy way upon earth: thy salvation in all nations.

1 Esd. ix. &c. C.—These often gave way to murmuring, and are therefore exhorted not to be proud, lest they should be brought low.

VER. 8. Gentiles. By this invitation, he predicts their conversion.

VER. 9. Moved. The apostles were most courageous. Only those Jews returned, who had separated themselves from impure idols. 1 Esd. v. 21. The Church never fails. If some apostatize, others embrace the faith. W.

VER. 10. Tried. So Daniel was treated. Dan. iii. 21. The Babylonish captivity is compared to a furnace, as well as all severe trials of virtue. Prov. xvii. 3. Zac. xiii. C.

VER. 11. Back. Heb. “loins.” The captives had experienced the greatest miseries, as the martyrs of Christ have done since. C.—The Church is put to the most severe trials. W.—Yet God brings no one into the net of sin. This is solely the effect of man’s corruption. H.

VER. 12. Fire and water, which the Egyptians considered as the emblems of purity, (Horus. xli.) and which here denote the greatest tribulations. C.—The just still overcome by God’s grace, (W.) notwithstanding all the efforts of tyrants, who may be set over them. M.

VER. 14. Uttered. These were alone deemed obligatory by the Jews, (Lev. v. 4. C.) yet the more enlightened knew that God discerns the secrets of hearts, whence the force of a vow proceeds. H.

VER. 15. Marrow. Malachy (i. 13.) reproaches some for presenting lean victims. C.—Offer. Heb. chees, “will make.” Sept. use noisou, in the same sense, and are followed by the writers of the New Testament.—Do this, &c. Bert.—The best external victims of the old law are here specified. Yet even then the internal sacrifice was most pleasing. W.

VER. 16. My soul. Every Israelite ought to cherish the same sentiments. O.

VER. 17. Extolled, by meditation, (Muis.) or God has immediately granted my request. Theod.—Some Lat. Bibles read, “I have exulted under my tongue,” which my heart directs. W.

VER. 18. Heart. Being enslaved to any passion. H.—Iniquity and dissimulation hinder the effect of our prayers; and in some sense, it is true, that God does not hear sinners: (Jo. ix. 31. 2 Tim. ii. 9.) though He regards favourably such as wish to repent, like the publican. Lu. xviii. 14. C.—Whosoever would be heard, must repent of his sins. W.

PSAL. LXVI. VER. 1. For David, is not in Heb. nor in some copies of the Sept. C.—Yet the psalm expresses the sentiments of the royal prophet, (Bert.) or it is a sequel to the two former, thanking God for liberty, and for rain. The Fathers explain it of the coming of Jesus Christ, and the calling of the Gentiles, v. 5. It may have been sung when the first-fruits were brought to the temple. See Ps. lxxxiv. C.

VER. 2. Upon us, to grant our requests; or may the Messiah come. Heb. l. 3.—And may, &c. is in the Arab. and in most copies of the Sept. and Vulg. though it be omitted in Heb. &c. “and we shall live.” Ethiop. C.—Perhaps it

4 Let people confess to thee, O God: let all people give praise to thee.

5 Let the nations be glad and rejoice: for thou judgest the people with justice, and directest the nations upon earth.

6 Let the people, O God, confess to thee: let all the people give praise to thee:

7 The earth hath yielded her fruit.

May God, our God, bless us: 8 may God bless us: and all the ends of the earth fear him.

PSALM LXVII.

EXURGAT DEUS.

The glorious establishment of the Church of the New Testament, prefigured by the benefits bestowed on the people of Israel.

1 Unto the end, a psalm of a canticle for David himself.

2 LET God arise, and let his enemies be scattered: and let them that hate him flee from before his face.

3 As smoke vanisheth, so let them vanish away; as wax melteth before the fire, so let the wicked perish at the presence of God.

4 And let the just feast, and rejoice before God: and be delighted with gladness.

5 Sing ye to God, sing a psalm to his name: make a way for him who ascendeth upon the west: the Lord is his name.

Rejoice ye before him: but the wicked shall be troubled at his presence, 6 who is the father of orphans, and the judge of widows.

God in his holy place:

7 God who maketh men of one manner to dwell in a house:

Who bringeth out them that were bound in strength; in like manner them that provoke, that dwell in sepulchres.

8 O God, when thou didst go forth in the sight of thy people, when thou didst pass through the desert:

9 The earth was moved, and the heavens dropped at the presence of the God of Sinai, at the presence of the God of Israel.

10 Thou shalt set aside for thy inheritance a free rain, O God: and it was weakened, but thou hast made it perfect.

11 In it shall thy animals dwell; in thy sweetness, O God, thou hast provided for the poor.

12 The Lord shall give the word to them that preach good tidings with great power.

13 The king of powers is of the beloved, of the may be given to express the sense of Selah, which seems to have been a term of approbation. It does not alter the sense. Bert.—God first forgives sins, and then bestows his manifold graces. W.—This was the form of solemn blessing. Num. vi. 17. D.

VER. 3. Way. The true religion. M.—Salvation. Christ, who is the only way to be saved. Jo. xiv. 6. Matt. i. 21. C.—This way is new, leading to new heavens, &c. Heb. x. 20. and 2 Pet. iii. 13. Bert.

VER. 5. Earth. Thou art the Father and ruler of thy people. Let all submit to the sweet yoke of Christ. Zac. viii. 21.

VER. 7. Proet, after rain; or, in a spiritual sense, Jesus Christ, the root, or bud of Jesse, (Is. iv. 2. C.) born in Judea, (Bert.) of the holy Virgin. S. Jer.—God. The triple repetition of God's name, insinuates the blessed Trinity, (H. Fathers) and the prophet's earnestness. C.—The faith of the Trinity is to be preached throughout the world, (H.) for the salvation of nations. W.

VER. 8. Fear him. With holy fear and obedience. M.—The blessings which God bestows upon his servants, and their piety, will induce many to embrace the truth. H.

PSAL LXVII. VER. 1. Himself. This is the most difficult of all the psalms, (C.) crux ingeniorum. Muis.—The prodigies wrought by God in favour of his people, when they came out of Egypt, and conquered the land of Chanaan, are described by David in this triumphal canticle, which was sung when the ark was removed. Houbig.—He had also in view the greater prodigies, which should attend Jesus Christ, and the propagation of the gospel. The latter explanation is also literal, (Bert.) and is given by the Fathers, (C.) on the authority of S. Paul, v. 19. Ephes. iv. 8. H.

VER. 2. Arise. These words were used when the Israelites decamped, (Num. x. 35. C.) and in the exorcisms to expel devils, who are here styled enemies. S. Athan.—The Jews were confounded when Christ rose again. S. Aug.—The psalmist foretells the ruin of God's enemies, in the form of a prayer. W.

VER. 4. Feast. This was done when the ark was removed. 1 Par. xv. and xvi. 3. C.—But believers may now receive God himself. S. Amb. Ps. xxxix. Bert.

VER. 5. Who ascendeth upon the west. Super occasum. S. Gregory understands it of Christ, who after his going down, like the sun, in the west, by the passion and death, ascended more glorious, and carried all before him. S. Jerom renders it, who ascendeth, or cometh up, through the deserts; (Ch.) which some explain of the coming out of Egypt, others of the progress of the gospel, in a western direction. M.—Baharaboth, means also, "in the remotest heavens," (Mont. H.) or, "in delights," or "darkness," and all these senses may have been in the prophet's mind, as they are all beautiful. Bert.—Resist not God's inspirations. He triumphs over death, and is Lord of all. W.—Lord. Heb. "in Yah is his name." H.—The Word was with God. Jo. i.—But . . . presence. These words seem to have been in the copy of the Sept. and shew the contrast between the just and their oppressors, at the presence of the ark, and of the Messias, (Bert.) before whom the latter must tremble.

VER. 6. The Father, (pater). Heb. pater, "the Father . . . God." He delights in these titles, (H.) and though he dwelleth on high, he looketh on the ow. Ps. cxlii. 5. M.

VER. 7. Of one manner. That is, agreeing in faith, unanimous in love, and following the same manner of discipline. It is verified in the servants of God living together in his house, which is the Church. 1 Tim. iii. 15. Ch.—Heb. may signify, "He maketh those who were alone (steriles) to dwell in a house." Ps. cxlii. 9. He builds up their houses, and grants them children. Flamin. Exod. i. 21.—The Israelites under Pharaoh, (C.) saw their male issue destroyed, (H.) but God enabled them to multiply exceedingly. Exod. i. 12. C.—Yechidim (736) means "the solitary," (S. Jer.) and "the united," as the first Christians were. Bert. Acts ii. 44. H.—The Church preserves unity in faith, &c. S. Cyp. ep. 76. W.—Bound. The power and mercy of God appears, in his bringing out of their captivity, those that were strongly bound in their sins; and in restoring to his grace those whose behaviour had been most provoking: and who by their evil habits were not only dead, but buried in their sepulchres. Ch.—God's grace moves even the rebellious and negligent will of man, so that it willingly embraces the right path. W.—In strength. Houbig. "to walk freely." The Gentiles were, as it were, buried, before Christ delivered them, (Bert.) as he did those who were once incredulous in the days of Noe, (1 Pet. iii. 20. and iv. 6. S. Athan.) and God rescued the Israelites from servitude, notwithstanding their repeated provocations, both before and after this mercy. Some translate, (H.) Heb. "He delivers those who were bound in chains; but the rebels (Egyptians, or faithless Hebrews) have remained in the desert." C.—Their bodies have there become a prey to beasts, and to corruption. H.—God permitted the rebellious Egyptians to pursue his people. M.

VER. 9. Dropped. The earthquake and rain are not mentioned by Moses. But the prophets often supply omissions. Debora and Habacuc speak in the same lofty strains. Ex. xix. 16. Judg. v. 4. Hab. iii. 6. C.—Debora specifies some words, (H.) which seem to be here wanting, "the clouds also dropped water, the mountains melted" at, &c.—Of Sinai, or, "Sinai at," &c. M.—Heb. "this Sinai before God, (Judg. v. 5. Jehovah) the God of Israel." The old MS. 3. retains the word Jehovah at least six times, where it is not once printed, as that of Lambeth, 434, does here, &c. Kennicott.—S. Aug. and the ancient psalters read, A facie Domini; Mons Sinai, &c. C.—The mount itself seemed to melt amid thunder and rain. H.

VER. 10. A free rain. The manna, which rained plentifully from heaven, in favour of God's inheritance, that is, of his people Israel: which was weakened indeed under a variety of afflictions, but was made perfect by God; that is, was still supported by divine Providence, and brought on to the promised land. It agrees particularly to the Church of Christ, his true inheritance, which is plentifully watered with the free rain of heavenly grace; and through many infirmities, that is, crosses and tribulations, is made perfect, and fitted for eternal glory. Ch.—God came to redeem us, without any merit on our side. He chose the weak, but made them strong. W.—The cattle stood in great need of water, as the Hebrews did of manna. C.—He will render the promised land most fertile. Houbig.

VER. 11. In it, &c. That is, in this Church, which is thy fold, and thy inheritance, shall thy animals, thy sheep, dwell: where thou hast plentifully provided for them. Ch.—Those whom thou hast chosen shall enjoy this manna, or the blessed Sacrament. W.

VER. 12. To them that preach good tidings. Evangelizantibus. That is, to the preachers of the gospel; who, receiving the word from the Lord, shall with great power and efficacy, preach throughout the world the glad tidings of a Saviour, and of eternal salvation through him; (Ch.) with miracles following. Mark xvi. W. Luke xxi. 15. C.—Heb. seems to speak of females, who used to sing canticles of victory, like Mary and Debora, &c. But the feminine is used at the beginning of Ecclesiastes, though Solomon be meant, and here the Chaldee paraphrases, "God gave the words of the law to his people, by the meditation of Moses and Aaron, who published the word of God." This passage has a striking analogy with Ephes. iv. 11. &c. He gave some apostles . . . for the perfecting of the saints, &c. which S. Paul observes, just after quoting this psalm. Bert.

VER. 13. The king of powers. That is, the mighty King, the Lord of Hosts, is of the beloved, of the beloved; that is, on the side of Christ, his most beloved beloved; and the beauty of the house shall divide spoils.

14 If you sleep among the midst of lots; you shall be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and the hinder parts of her back with the paleness of gold.

15 When he that is in heaven appointeth kings over her, they shall be whited with snow in Selmon.

16 The mountain of God is a fat mountain.

A curdled mountain, a fat mountain. 17 Why suspect ye curdled mountains?

A mountain in which God is well pleased to dwell: for there the Lord shall dwell unto the end.

18 The chariot of God is attended by ten thousands; thousands of them that rejoice: the Lord is among them in Sinai, in the holy place.

19 Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive; thou hast received gifts in men.

Son: and his beautiful house, viz. the Church, in which God dwells for ever, shall by her spiritual conquests, divide the spoils of many nations. The Hebrew (as it now stands pointed) is thus rendered: The kings of armies have fled, they have fled, and she that dwells at home (or, the beauty of the house) shall divide the spoils. Ch.—Yet Sym. comes nearer to the Sept. and S. Jer. has in the same sense, Bert. “the kings of armies shall form leagues,” &c. The great King, is the Lord (v. 12.) of hosts, who shall enable many to publish his wonders. They are represented as women, to denote the particular Churches of Christ, which have risen on the ruins of idolatry, though they may also refer to the victories of the Israelites, under Debora, when mighty kings came to invade the country. Judg. v. and v. 19. 24. H.—The glory of that victory was given to her, and to Jahel, who slew Sisara. C.—Soon after the preaching of the gospel, the most potent monarchs (C.) submitted to its authority, and thus a glorious prey was rescued from the power of the devil. W.—Women sometimes promoted this great work. M.

VER. 14. *If you sleep among the midst of lots, (inter medios clericos, &c.) viz in such dangers and persecutions, as if your enemies were casting lots for your goods and persons: or in the midst of the lots (inter medios terminos, as S. Jerom renders it) that is, upon the very bounds or borders of the dominions of your enemies: you shall be secure, nevertheless, under the divine protection; and shall be enabled to fly away, like a dove, with glittering wings, and feathers shining like the palest and most precious gold; that is, with great increase of virtue, and glowing with the fervour of charity; (Ch.) or, “if... in the borders of the dove,” &c. the ensign of Babylon. Jer. xxv. 33.—When, &c. T.—The tribe of Juda may be denoted by the dove, as it seems to be in the canticles, because it continued faithful longer than the ten tribes; (Bert.) or these words may be addressed to the tribes of Ruben and Gad, which neglected to come to the aid of Debora, and thus melted away like snow, as Jacob had threatened the former; (Gen. xlix.) or rather, that we may not interrupt the harmony of this solemnity by reproaches, we may (C.) adhere to the Vulg. which renders, they shall be, &c. v. 15. H.—The former stain has been effaced by their subsequent good conduct. C.—While the pastors of the Church diligently propose the doctrines revealed in the two lots, or Testaments, to the prophets and apostles, the faith of the Church shines most conspicuously. The other explanations may be seen in Lorin. &c. M.*

VER. 15. Kings over her. That is, pastors and rulers over his Church, viz. the apostles, and their successors. Then by their ministry shall men be made whiter than the snow, which lies on the top of the high mountain Selmon, (Ch.) which is in the tribe of Ephraim, shaded with trees. Judg. ix. 48. W.—Discern it, may also mean, “judgeth,” (H.) or “divideth,” as S. Jerom translates; and may intimate, that when God shall have exterminated the kings, who attacked his chosen race, it should appear more glorious. H.—In the first year of Cyrus, who had been commissioned by God, with Darius the Mede, to punish Babylon, (Dan. v.) the Jews were liberated. T.

VER. 16. The mountain of God. The Church, which (Is. ii. 2.) is called, The mountain of the house of the Lord upon the top of mountains. It is here called a fat and a curdled mountain; that is to say, most fruitful, and enriched by the spiritual gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost. Ch.—Fat. Heb. “as the hill of Basha,” (Prot.) which was very fertile: the very name signifying “fat.” S. Jer. H.—The psalmist apostrophizes the mountains of Chanaan, which were very high, and those of Basan, where Og ruled; (C.) or he insinuates, that the latter could not vie with Sion, where the ark was now to be placed. Bert.

VER. 17. Why suspect ye curdled mountains? Why do you suppose or imagine there may be any other such curdled mountains? You are mistaken: the mountain thus favoured by God is but one; and this same he has chosen for his dwelling for ever. Ch.—They who are not of the Church, vainly imagine, that any other mountains are united, (W.) rich in grace, or beautiful. H.—Seeds do not agree among themselves, but only in opposing the Catholic Church. They have not the marks of truth, which are here given. The Church of God is compared to a mountain, visible to all; fat, with the graces of the Holy Ghost; united and firm, like cheese; the perpetual residence of God, who will never suffer her to fall into error. W.—Why then do you deign to look at such conventicles of pride and perdition, as if they could be the one holy Catholic and Apostolic Church? Heb. “why do ye contend, ye high mountains, against the mountain?” &c. S. Jer. H.—There are several other interpretations. But that of the Vulg. aspicimini, is the most followed, even by the Jews. Bert.

Yea, for those also that do not believe, the dwelling of the Lord God.

20 Blessed be the Lord day by day: the God of our salvation will make our journey prosperous to us.

21 Our God is the God of salvation: and of the Lord, of the Lord are the issues from death.

22 But God shall break the heads of his enemies: the hairy crown of them that walk on in their sins.

23 The Lord said: I will turn them from Basan, I will turn them into the depth of the sea.

24 That thy foot may be dipped in the blood of thy enemies: the tongue of thy dogs be red with the same.

25 They have seen thy goings, O God, the goings of my God: of my king who is in his sanctuary.

26 Princes went before joined with singers, in the midst of young damsels playing on timbrels.

27 In the churches bless ye God the Lord, from the fountains of Israel.

VER. 18. The chariot of God, descending to give his law on Mount Sinai; as also of Jesus Christ, his Son, ascending into heaven, to send from thence the Holy Ghost, to publish his new law, is attended with ten thousands, that is, with an innumerable multitude of joyful angels. Ch.—Lit. “with forty thousand.” Bert.—Innumerable hosts of Cherubim, (H.) seem to be the chariot of the most high. Dan. vii. W.—But here the Israelites, who came to conquer Chanaan, are meant. Deut. xxxiii. 2. Zac. xiv. 5. Hab. iii. 8. C.—The promulgation of the old and new law is contrasted. God is the author of the beauty of his Church. M.

VER. 19. Led captivity captive. Carrying away with thee to heaven those who before had been the captives of Satan; and receiving from God the Father gifts to be distributed to men; even to those who were before unbelievers. Ch.—Yea, even these were the spoils which Christ presented to his Father. H.—S. Paul quotes this text rather in a different manner, ascending on high, he led captivity captive; he gave gifts to men; as the Heb. lakach means, “to give and to receive.” Abenezra, Chal. Syr. &c. give it the former sense, with the apostle; S. Justin, (dial.) S. Hilary, and the ancient psalters of Rome and Chartres. Aug. approves of both readings. C.—So Samson said, “take this woman for a wife for me.” Judg. xiv. 3. The true God is here undoubtedly meant, and as S. Paul explains it of Christ, the Socinians, who admit the authority of the epistle to the Ephesians, ought to confess his divinity. Bert.—Those. Prot. “gifts for men, (Marg. “in the man,) yea, for the rebellious also, that the Lord God might dwell among them.” Yet the construction of the Heb. and Vulg. would insinuate as well, that these faithless people were now become true subjects, and were the gifts here presented to the Almighty. Christ came to save sinners. He gratuitously sought after them, and filled them with graces, that they might become a suitable present for God. H.—He received gifts to be distributed among his servants, and merited grace for the conversion of innumerable souls. At his ascension, he was accompanied by angels, and by the patriarchs, who had been retained in captivity. W.—The rebellious nations were forced to pay tribute, (Judg. iii. 15. C.) or to submit to Josue, David, &c. H.—God in the flesh, or in his holy mountain, the Christian Church. M.

VER. 20. To us. So the Israelites might be filled with confidence in the desert, (H.) or the people pray that God would favour the pious design of their king. C.—Heb. “God will carry us, (S. Jer.) or loadeth us with benefits.” Prot. H.

VER. 21. The issues from death. The Lord alone is master of the issues, by which we may escape from death. Ch.—He killeth and giveth life 1 K. ii. 6.

VER. 22. Sins. He will humble them, or will slay the proud. Pa. lxxii. 18. C.—Though Christ died to save man, He will condemn the obstinate. W.—Sinners take pride in what ought to fill them with confusion. S. Aug. D.

VER. 23. I will turn them from Basan, &c. I will cast out my enemies from their rich possessions, signified by Basan, a fruitful country; and I will drive them into the depth of the sea: and make such a slaughter of them, that the feet of my servants may be dyed in their blood, &c. Ch.—Into. Most translators from, and explain this of God's people. But it seems more naturally to refer to their enemies, and the prep. m, signifies in. Pa. xxxvi. 15. Bert.—I will treat them like Pharaoh. M.

VER. 24. Same. Streams of blood shall flow, as was the case when Moses overcame Og, &c. Num. xxi. 28. C.—The gospel was propagated without bloodshed, but no less effectually. At the last day, the just shall triumph over the reprobate. Bert.

VER. 25. Thy goings. Thy ways, thy proceedings, by which thou didst formerly take possession of the promised land in favour of thy people; and shalt afterwards of the whole world, which thou shalt subdue to thy Son. Ch.—Many have now become acquainted with what Christ has done for the salvation of mankind; but the faithful consider this with most attention, and view him seated on his throne above, as our Mediator, through whom alone others can have access. W.—Eusebius and S. Hilary suppose, that Christ appeared and spoke to the patriarchs and prophets of the Old Testament. C.

VER. 26. Princes. The apostles, the first converters of nations; attended by numbers of perfect souls, singing the divine praises, and virgins consecrated to God. Ch.—S. Paul exhorts the faithful to sing hymns. Ephes. v. 19. Bert.—Moses and Mary had sung a canticle, after the passage of the Red Sea. Ex. xv. M.

28 There is Benjamin a youth, in ecstasy of mind.
The princes of Juda are their leaders: the princes of Zabulon, the princes of Nephthali.

29 Command thy strength, O God: confirm, O God, what thou hast wrought in us.

30 From thy temple in Jerusalem, kings shall offer presents to thee.

31 Rebuke the wild beasts of the reeds, the congregation of bulls, with the kine of the people; who seek to exclude them who are tried with silver.

Scatter thou the nations that delight in wars: 32 ambassadors shall come out of Egypt: Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands to God.

33 Sing to God, ye kingdoms of the earth: sing ye to the Lord:

Sing ye to God, 34 who mounteth above the heaven of heavens, to the east.

Behold he will give to his voice the voice of power, 35 give ye glory to God, for Israel, his magnificence, and his power is in the clouds.

36 God is wonderful in his saints: the God of Israel is he who will give power and strength to his people. Blessed be God.

VER. 27. From the fountains of Israel. From whom both Christ and his apostles sprung. By Benjamin, the holy Fathers on this place understand S. Paul, who was of that tribe, named here a youth, because he was the last called to the apostleship. By the princes of Juda, Zabulon, and Nephthali, we may understand the other apostles, who were of the tribe of Juda; or of the tribes of Zabulon and Nephthali, where our Lord began to preach. Matt. iv. 13. &c. Ch.—The Jews were first invited. Acts i. W.—All the tribes were present at the translation of the ark. It is not known why these four alone are mentioned. Bert.

VER. 28. Mind. Through excessive joy. Heb. also, "containing (or ruling) them," S. Jer. H.—But this seems improper. Hence Prot. have, "with their will," though with is not in the original. Bert.—Rodem (Keri rode) "presided." Saul, indeed, had been the first king of Israel; but the throne afterwards continued in the tribe of Juda; and at the time of the conquest of Chanaan, as well as at the translation of the ark, Benjamin could not be considered as the chief. H.—We may therefore better follow the Sept. and Deschamps, who has sopore corripitur. Bert.—S. Paul was in an ecstasy, rapt to the third heaven. 2 Cor. xii. M.

VER. 29. Command thy strength. Give orders that thy strength may be always with us. Ch.—Display thy power from thy holy temple. H.—Send the Messias, grant perseverance to the just, and defend thy Church against all attacks. C.—As she commenced by God's power, so by the same she is continually preserved. W.—Heb. "Thy God hath commanded thy strength." Prot. or, "command thy God." Bert.

VER. 30. From Sym. For. Kings shall reverence the temple, which David foresaw would be shortly erected; or, "with greater magnificence, than in the temple of Jerusalem, kings shall offer gifts to thee," (Deschamps) which clearly refers to the Messias. Bert.—"As soon as thy temples shall be," &c. Under Solomon, many kings became tributary, and at the preaching of the gospel, emperors submitted to Christ. C.—They have contributed to adorn the Church, (Is. lx. and lxvi.) where God is praised with the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and the virtues of penance and prayer. M.

VER. 31. Rebuke the wild beasts of the reeds; or the wild beasts which lie hid in the reeds. That is, the devils, who hide themselves in order to surprise their prey. Or by wild beasts, are here understood persecutors, who, for all their attempts against the Church, are but as weak reeds, which cannot prevail against them, who are supported by the strength of the Almighty. The same are also called the congregation of bulls, (from their rage against the Church) who assembled together all their kine, that is, the people, their subjects, to exclude, if they can, from Christ and his inheritance, his constant confessors, who are like silver tried by fire. Ch.—Symmachus nearly agrees with this version: "Rebuke the wild beasts." Yet most render the Heb. in the singular, to denote the chief of the enemies, (H.) particularly the devil, who dwells with the vain and luxurious, (Belar.) being Behemoth, in Job xl. 16. (M.) and the old serpent, (H.) as he probably lay concealed, among the shrubs of Paradise, when he tempted our first parents. Bert.—It refers literally to the kings of Egypt, and of Ethiopia, who might be solicited to make war on David, by the Philistines. Pharo is often called a dragon, (Ezec. xxix. 3.) as his officers, or the princes "of Chus," may be styled bulls. They shall be forced to submit, v. 32. C.—To exclude. Heb. "trampling upon," (Bert.) or "boasting of their pieces of silver," (Mont.) which is so common among them. 3 K. x. 27. H.—The Egyptians even adorned their sandals with it. Clem. Ped. ii. 11.—The soldiers of Antiochus had mostly gold nails in their shoes. Val. Max. ix. 2. C.—Houbigant proposes some alterations, and translates, "Keep down the beast of the reed, the collection of the strong, as also the chariots of the people, which run quickly on silver wheels." All the versions tend to shew the fury and insolence of the enemy against God's people. Bert.—Tried. Prot. "till every one submit himself with pieces of silver." H.

PSALM LXVIII.

SALVUM ME FAC DEUS.

Christ, in his passion, declareth the greatness of his sufferings, and the malice of his persecutors, the Jews; and he foretelleth their reprobation.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed; for David.

2 SAVE me, O God: for the waters are come in even unto my soul.

3 I stick fast in the mire of the deep: and there is no sure standing.

I am come into the depth of the sea: and a tempest hath overwhelmed me.

4 I have laboured with crying; my jaws are become hoarse: my eyes have failed, whilst I hope in my God.

5 They are multiplied above the hairs of my head, who hate me without cause.

My enemies are grown strong, who have wrongfully persecuted me: then did I pay that which I took not away.

6 O God, thou knowest my foolishness; and my offences are not hidden from thee:

7 Let not them be ashamed for me, who look for thee, O Lord, the Lord of hosts.

VER. 32. Ambassadors shall come, &c. It is a prophecy of the conversion of the Gentiles, and by name of the Egyptians and Ethiopians, (Ch.) who were among the first converts. Is. xix. 9. Soph. iii. 10. Acts viii. 27.—Ambassadors. Heb. chashmannim occurs nowhere else. But it denotes some people in authority, and seems to have the same import as "the Asmonean."—Ethiopia, comprises the country on both sides of the Red Sea, as well as that below Egypt, and on the Araxes. This prediction was accomplished, when Solomon married the daughter of Pharo, and was visited by the queen of Saba. But it was more fully verified by the propagation of the gospel, (C.) when many in Egypt became monks and nuns. W.

VER. 33-34. Sing ye to God, is rejected by S. Jerom; but defended by S. Hil. &c. It seems proper to connect the former sentence after Salah, (Bert.) or may be added instead, to express applause. H.—East. From Mount Calvet which is on the east side of Jerusalem. Ch.—God fills all places. v. 5. Deut. xxxiii. 26. C.—Religion has gone westward, but will return to the east. Apoc. xvi. T.—Power. That is, he will make his voice to be a powerful voice; by calling from death to life, such as were dead in mortal sin: as at the last day he will, by the power of his voice, call all the dead from their graves. Ch.—He will come to judge with great majesty, (W.) and his thunder shall resound, as well as the last trumpet. 1 Cor. xv. 52.

VER. 35. For Israel. Altering the stops, we might translate "over Israel appears his magnificence;" (Bert.) agreeably to Heb. S. Aug. &c. C.

VER. 36. Saints, or sanctuary. Heb. lit. "thou art terrible, O God, from thy holy places." Mont.—Yet Pagnin retains "in his holy," &c. The tabernacle, or temple, (v. 30.) and the ark, were esteemed the bulwarks of Israel. There God was pleased to grant his people's requests more easily, to encourage public worship. H.—The sanctification of the faithful is a miracle of God. C.—They may justly be styled his sanctuaries.—People. Adorning his elect with immortality. M.

PSAL. LXVIII. VER. 1. Changed. A psalm for Christian converts, to remember the passion of Christ; (Ch.) whose sentiments this and the 21st psalm express in the most energetic language. Bert.—It may have been composed by a captive Levite, (C.) or David may allude to their sufferings at Babylon, or to his own, though he had those of the Messias principally in view. See Ps. xlv. H.

VER. 2. Save me from affliction. Lu. xxii. 42. Christ could not be lost. M.—Waters of afflictions and sorrows. My soul is sorrowful even unto death. Matt. xxvi. Ch. See Jo. iii. 6.

VER. 3. Standing, inderais, "subsistence;" there is no bottom. H.

VER. 4. Hoarse. This might be literally true, as Christ had suffered the greatest torments, and recited this and the 21st psalm on the cross; looking up towards heaven, so that his eyes were weakened, as well as by shedding many tears. Hops. Thus the blasphemy of heretics, who pretend that he gave way to despair, is refuted. Bert.—Christ was not presently delivered from tribulation: neither ought his followers to expect better treatment. W.

VER. 5. Cause. The captives had not injured Babylon, and Christ had even bestowed the greatest favours upon his enemies. He suffered for our sins. Ia. liii. 4. C.—Away. Christ in his passion made restitution of what he had not taken away, by suffering the punishment due to our sins, and so repairing the injury we had done to God. Ch.—The expression was proverbial. Jer. xxxi. 29. Lam. v. 7.—Many of the captives were very innocent. C.—But Christ was without sin; (W.) though made a curse and a sin-offering. Gal. iii. 13, and 3 Cor. v. 21. C.

VER. 6. My foolishness and my offences; which my enemies impute to me: or the follies and sins of men, which I have taken upon myself. Ch.—My cross is foolishness to the Gentiles, 1 Cor. i. 23. S. Aug.

VER. 7. For me. If I rise not again, my disciples will take me for a mere

Let them not be confounded on my account, who seek thee, O God of Israel.

8 Because for thy sake I have borne reproach; shame hath covered my face.

9 I am become a stranger to my brethren, and an alien to the sons of my mother.

10 *For the zeal of thy house hath eaten me up: and the reproaches of them that reproached thee are fallen upon me.

11 And I covered my soul in fasting: and it was made a reproach to me.

12 And I made hair-cloth my garment: and I became a bye-word to them.

13 They that sat in the gate spoke against me: and they that drank wine made me their song.

14 But as for me, my prayer is to thee, O Lord; for the time of thy good pleasure, O God.

In the multitude of thy mercy, hear me in the truth of thy salvation.

15 Draw me out of the mire, that I may not stick fast: deliver me from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters.

16 Let not the tempest of water drown me, nor the deep swallow me up: and let not the pit shut her mouth upon me.

17 Hear me, O Lord, for thy mercy is kind; look upon me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies.

* John ii. 17.—^b Rom. xv. 8.

man. If the captivity continue much longer, many will despair, v. 11. C.—Suffer not the weak to be scandalized in my passion. W.

VER. 8. Reproach. Because I would not adore idols. Christ undertook to expiate our offences, and to satisfy the justice of his Father. Rom. xv. 8. C.

VER. 9. Mother. This might be true with respect to some apostate Jews. But it was more fully applicable in Christ, who was betrayed by Judas, &c. C.—His own received him not. Jo. i. Bert.

VER. 10. Upon me. The disciples remembered that this had been written concerning Christ, who drove out the profaners of his temple, (Jo. ii. 17.) and will not be less severe on those who dishonour the Church by their scandalous lives, or by propagating erroneous opinions. C.—S. Paul (Rom. xv. 3.) doubted not but this passage was literally applicable to Christ, who has taught us to prefer the glory of God, and our neighbour's salvation, before our own temporal advantages. Bert.—Those who have less zeal, are not so much persecuted. W.

VER. 11. Covered. Retiring from society. Bert.—Sept. Rom. and Houbig. "I humbled." Heb. "I bewailed my soul in fasting." (Aquila) as if death were inevitable; and this practice was derided, as the fasts of the Church, (H) and mortification, (W.) are still by unbelievers. H.—The Jews seemed to scoff at the thirst of Christ, when they gave him vinegar; and the devil took occasion from his 40 days' fast to tempt him. Bert.

VER. 12. Hair-cloth. The sacred humanity, which being torn, let out the price of our redemption. S. Aug. M.—I mourned for my country, &c. C.—Christ was clothed in derision, with a soldier's straight purple garment. Bert.

VER. 13. Song. Both judges and common people (W.) derided me over their cups of shecar, (H.) or strong drink, and palm wine. Lam. iii. 14. C.—Thus the soldiers made Christ their jest, while they drank on the long night of his passion. Bert.

VER. 14. Pleasure. Which is seasonable, and appointed for pardon. Pa. xxxi. 6. and ci. 14.—Father, forgive them, &c. The term of the captivity is at hand. I seek no revenge; but commit my cause to thee. C.

VER. 15. Waters. Beneath which the Hebrews supposed hell was placed. Job xxvi. 5. S. Hil. v. 89.—He prays to be delivered from misery, (v. 2.) and for a glorious resurrection. C.—Christ could not be detained in limbo or in the grave. W.

VER. 19. Enemies. That they may insult no longer over me, (C.) being converted or covered with shame, (M.) that they do no more hurt. W.

VER. 20. Shame, (reverentiam.) S. Aug. &c. read verecundiam. C.—Christ was covered with all sorts of reproach. H. Euseb.

VER. 21. Misery. For which I ardently longed, as the Fathers explain it.—None. I expected that my brethren would at least condole with me: but I was deceived. Christ drank the bitter chalice to the dregs, and found no consolation even from his Father. C.

VER. 22. Food. Tert. reads "drink;" which agrees better with gall. Yet it might be mixed with food, (C.) with wine and myrrh, which were given to our Saviour, when he arrived at Calvary, as vinegar was offered to him on the cross. Matt. xxvii. 34. Jo. xix. 28. This was the last prophecy which regarded 18 And turn not away thy face from thy servant; for I am in trouble, hear me speedily.

19 Attend to my soul, and deliver it: save me be cause of my enemies.

20 Thou knowest my reproach, and my confusion, and my shame.

21 In thy sight are all they that afflict me: my heart hath expected reproach and misery.

And I looked for one that would grieve together with me, but there was none: and for one that would comfort me, and I found none.

22 *And they gave me gall for my food, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

23 *Let their table become as a snare before them, and a recompense, and a stumbling-block.

24 Let their eyes be darkened that they see not; and their back bend thou down always.

25 Pour out thy indignation upon them: and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them.

26 *Let their habitation be made desolate: and let there be none to dwell in their tabernacles.

27 Because they have persecuted him whom thou hast smitten; and they have added to the grief of my wounds.

28 Add thou iniquity upon their iniquity: and let them not come into thy justice.

29 Let them be blotted out of the book of the living; and with the just let them not be written.

* Matt. xxvii. 48.—^d Rom. xi. 9.—^e Acts i. 20.

our Saviour, while living; and was the last instance of the Jewish malice, by which they requited him for the thirst which he had for the salvation of mankind. S. Greg. Naz. &c. Bert.—Jeremias (viii. 14. and xxiii. 15. and Lam. iii. 15.) uses the same expressions, in a metaphorical sense, to describe the afflictions of the captives. C.

VER. 23. Let their table, &c. What here follows in the style of an imprecation, is a prophecy of the wretched state to which the Jews should be reduced, in punishment of their wilful obstinacy; (Ch.) or it may be a sentence pronounced on them by Jesus Christ. They are driven from their own country, and the sacred books (C.) being misunderstood, (M.) prove their ruin. Our Saviour and S. Paul confirm this prediction. The latter adheres to the Sept. (Rom. xi. 9.) though some would translate lishtomin, "for peace"—offerings, instead of recompenses, as it also means. Bert.—"Let their sacrifices become a scandal to them;" (Chal.) or rather, May their table, the symbol of friendship, be a snare for them, that they may be destroyed, or betrayed by their dearest friends. C.—The overthrow of the Jews, when they were assembled to eat the paschal lamb, is here foretold. W.

VER. 24. Always. The Babylonians were ordered by Cyrus to look upon the Persians as their masters. Xenoph. vii.—Nothing could more strikingly point out the present condition of the Jews than this passage. They are every where kept under, and see not the sense of the Scriptures, (C.) and the truth of Christ's doctrine; but are bent on worldly gain. W. 2 Cor. iii. M.

VER. 25. Thy wrathful. Lit. "the fury of thy anger." H.—The first term denotes expedition; the second, perseverance. Quickly destroy them, without redress. Theod. C.

VER. 26. Desolate. Babylon gave place to Susa, and "was reduced to a solitude by the vicinity of Seleucia." Pliny vi. 26. Isai. xlvii.—But the fall of Jerusalem was more sudden and memorable, within 40 years after the death of Christ. Pa. lviii. 7. C.—The Jews, and particularly the traitor, lost their country. Acts i. 20. Bert.—He (the traitor) indeed hath possessed a field of the reward of iniquity . . . and burst asunder. H.

VER. 27. Wounds. The enemy persecuted Christ even after his death, opening his side, spreading false reports, and guarding his tomb. C.—God ordained his death for the good of man: but they sought it out of malice. W.

VER. 28. Iniquity. The first term may denote the crime; and the second, the punishment. C.—Peccatum parva peccati est. S. Aug.—God permits people to fall; (W.) but he does not force them. H.—Let the Babylonians become victims of thy indignation: but save thy people. Very few of the Jews embraced the faith of Christ. C.

VER. 29. Living. Let them die. Grot.—If we understand the book of the predestinate to life eternal, and not merely to present and mutable justice, (T.) God never blots any out. But though they fall, he brings them to repentance. S. Aug. E. Bellarm.—The reprobation of the obstinate Babylonians (C.) and Jews, is predicted. H.—The latter were effaced from the book of the living of the Old Testament, and were never written in that of the just, belonging to the New. S. Jer.—At death, the unbelieving Jews (H.) shall not find their expiations well founded. W.—Only the faithful are truly just. M.

VER. 30. Up. The cross is now triumphant, (H.) an object of veneration (739)

30 But I am poor and sorrowful: thy salvation, O God, hath set me up.

31 I will praise the name of God with a canticle: and I will magnify him with praise.

32 And it shall please God better than a young calf, that bringeth forth horns and hoofs.

33 Let the poor see and rejoice: seek ye God, and your soul shall live.

34 For the Lord hath heard the poor: and hath not despised his prisoners.

35 Let the heavens and the earth praise him; the sea, and every thing that creepeth therein.

36 For God will save Sion, and the cities of Juda shall be built up.

And they shall dwell there, and acquire it by inheritance.

37 And the seed of his servants shall possess it: and they that love his name, shall dwell therein.

PSALM LXIX.

DEUS IN ADJUTORIUM.

A prayer in persecution.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David, to bring to remembrance that the Lord saved him.

2 O GOD, come to my assistance; O Lord, make haste to help me.

3 Let them be confounded and ashamed that seek my soul:

4 Let them be turned backward, and blush for shame that desire evils to me:

Let them be presently turned away, blushing for shame, that say to me: 'Tis well, 'tis well.

5 Let all that seek thee rejoice and be glad in thee; and let such as love thy salvation, say always: The Lord be magnified.

Bert.—Christ submitted to die upon it, and rose again. W.—He was exposed naked, and was truly a man of sorrows. M.

VER. 32. Hoofs. They were to be three years old. Kimebi.—So Virgil says, (Æn. ix.) Iam cornu petat & pedibus qui spargat arenam. Ec. iii. C.—Our prayers are therefore offered through our Lord Jesus Christ. Heb. xiii. 15. Bert.—Devout prayer is more acceptable than victims of the best description, though they were also good, (W.) and, ceteris paribus, of a higher dignity. H.

VER. 33. See, my deliverance, or thy just vengeance on the wicked. C.

VER. 34. Prisoners. Martyrs, (M.) and those who suffer for the faith, will be rewarded. W.

VER. 35. Therein, the fish. Our admiration of creatures causes us to praise God. S. Aug. S. Hil.

VER. 36. Sion. The Catholic Church. The cities of Juda, &c. her places of worship, which shall be established throughout the world. And there, viz. in this Church of Christ, shall his servants dwell, &c. Ch. W.—It matters not whether a person live in the Church of God, which is at Corinth, or at Philippi, provided he be a member of the Catholic Church. But those who adhere to separate congregations, and style themselves “the Church of England,” or “the Kirk of Scotland,” &c. cannot be written with the just, (v. 29.) nor have any part in this prediction. H.—It alludes to the restoration of the captives, (C.) or rather to the propagation of the gospel, (H.) of which the former was a figure, (Euseb. S. Aug.) as the Jews were never quietly settled again in their country, and were expelled by Titus; whereas the Church of Christ remains to the end of the world. Bert.

VER. 37. Therein. The succession of the Catholic Church is uninterrupted. W.—Those who adhere to Christ by faith, hope, and charity, will be saved. M.

PSAL. LXIX. VER. 1. Remembrance. This is all that occurs in Heb. or in many Greek copies, though the following words were perhaps extant in the copy of the Sept. or were added to complete the sentence. Several of the verses are found in Ps. xxxiv. and xxxix. and seem to have been used as a form of prayer in any danger. Bert.—David foresaw that Christ would pray for the safety of his natural and mystical body, and would be heard. M.—The following psalm is a sequel to this. C.

VER. 4. 'Tis well, 'tis well. Euge, euge. S. Jerom renders it, vah! vah! which is the voice of one insulting and deriding. Some understand it as a detestation of deceitful flatterers. Ch.—In the New Testament, Well done, denotes applause. S. Jer. in Ezech. vi.—These predictions relate to the murderers of the Messias. Bert.—In the 39th psalm, the Church prays for aid; and here David, persecuted by Absalom, or any of the just, lays before God his particular wants. W.

PSAL. LXX. VER. 1. Of the sons of Jonadab. The Rechabites, of whom (740)

6 But I am needy and poor; O God, help me.

Thou art my helper and my deliverer: O Lord, make no delay.

PSALM LXX.

IN TE DOMINE.

A prayer for perseverance.

1 A psalm for David. Of the sons of Jonadab, and the former captives.

IN thee, O Lord, I have hoped, let me never be put to confusion: 2 deliver me in thy justice, and rescue me.

Incline thy ear unto me, and save me.

3 Be thou unto me a God, a protector, and a place of strength: that thou mayst make me safe.

For thou art my firmament and my refuge.

4 Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the sinner, and out of the hand of the transgressor of the law, and of the unjust.

5 For thou art my patience, O Lord: my hope, O Lord, from my youth.

6 By thee have I been confirmed from the womb: from my mother's womb thou art my protector.

Of thee shall I continually sing: 7 I am become unto many as a wonder, but thou art a strong helper.

8 Let my mouth be filled with praise, that I may sing thy glory; thy greatness all the day long.

9 Cast me not off in the time of old age: when my strength shall fail, do not thou forsake me.

10 For my enemies have spoken against me; and they that watched my soul have consulted together,

11 Saying: God hath forsaken him: pursue and take him, for there is none to deliver him.

12 O God, be not thou far from me: O my God, make haste to help me.

see Jeremiah xxxv. By this addition of the seventy-two interpreters, we gather that this psalm was usually sung in the synagogue, in the person of the Rechabites, and of those who were first carried away into captivity. Ch.—This first captivity happened under Joakim, A. M. 3398, the second, under Jechonias, 3405, and the last, when the city was destroyed and Sedecias was taken, 3416. Usher.—The Rechabites entered Jerusalem a little before the first of these events, and set the people an example of obedience by submitting to Nabuchodonosor, as Jeremiah directed. Bellar. M.—S. Jerom considers their being confined within walls, as their first captivity. Ep. ad Paul. and ad Rust.—But there is nothing in this title in Heb. Euseb. &c. and several copies of the Sept. acknowledge the same; (C.) so that it is of no great authority. Bert.—The psalm contains the sentiments of the captives, (Theod.) or of David, persecuted by his son and in a more sublime sense, of Jesus Christ, complaining of treason and cruelty. C.—All the saints, under persecution, may adopt the same language. Bert.—Hoped. These three verses are almost exactly the same. Pa. xxx. Bias “being asked what was sweet to men, answered, hope.” Laert. 1.—Vain is the salvation of man. But hope confoundeth not. Ps. lix. 18. Rom. v. 5. C.

VER. 2. Justice. Or mercy. Ps. xxx. 1. I have not injured Absalom, &c. C.—God avengeth the injuries done to his servants. W.

VER. 3. Refuge. The parallel passage seems more complete (C.) in Hebrew, some letters of which may have been altered, since the time of the Sept. Yet the sense is nearly the same. Bert.—“Be thou my strong habitation, wherunto I may continually resort. Thou hast given commandment to save me; for thou art my rock and my fortress.” Prot. H.

VER. 4. Unjust. Achitophel and Absalom. C.

VER. 5. Patience. Confiding on thee, I lose not patience; (S. Aug. W.) or rather, (Amama) all my expectations are from thee. Pa. lxi. 6. C.

VER. 6. Art my. Heb. “hast taken me,” (H.) or “out the navel string.” Ezech. xv. 4. Thou hast acknowledged me for thy son, by taking me upon thy knee, as soon as I was born. Gen. i. 22. Ps. xxi. 11.

VER. 7. Wonder. My exaltation, (C.) and present misery, (W. M.) fill all with astonishment. H. Ia. viii. 18. and xi. 10.—God often made his prophets bear about the signs of his vengeance on others. Ia. xix. 20. C.—Christ was a sign, which shall be contradicted. Lu. ii. 34. H.—He was looked upon as a prodigy. Euseb. S. Aug.—Helper. He gives all the glory to God. C.—None can persevere without his grace. W.

VER. 9. Old age. Absalom rebelled when his father was grown old. C.—Against the dangers of our last conflict, (H.) Christ has instituted Extreme Unction. W.

VER. 10. Watched. My guards, (Ferrand) or rather my enemies. C.

VER. 11. Him. Thus the world commonly judges of those in distress. It was 13 Let them be confounded, and come to nothing, that detract my soul; let them be covered with confusion and shame that seek my hurt.

14 But I will always hope; and will add to all thy praise.

15 My mouth shall shew forth thy justice; thy salvation all the day long.

Because I have not known learning, 16 I will enter into the powers of the Lord: O Lord, I will be mindful of thy justice alone.

17 Thou hast taught me, O God, from my youth: and till now I will declare thy wonderful works.

18 And unto old age and grey hairs: O God, forsake me not,

Until I shew forth thy arm to all the generation that is to come:

Thy power, 19 and thy justice, O God, even to the highest great things thou hast done: O God, who is like to thee?

20 How great troubles hast thou shewn me, many and grievous: and turning, thou hast brought me to life, and hast brought me back again from the depths of the earth:

21 Thou hast multiplied thy magnificence; and, turning to me, thou hast comforted me.

22 For I will also confess to thee thy truth with the instruments of psaltery: O God, I will sing to thee with the harp, thou holy one of Israel.

23 My lips shall greatly rejoice, when I shall sing to thee; and my soul, which thou hast redeemed.

24 Yea, and my tongue shall meditate on thy justice all the day; when they shall be confounded, and put to shame, that seek evils to me.

PSALM LXXI.

DEUS JUDICIUM TUUM.

A prophecy of the coming of Christ, and of his kingdom: prefigured by Solomon and his happy reign.

1 A psalm on Solomon.

2 GIVE to the king thy judgment, O God: and to the king's son thy justice:

To judge thy people with justice, and thy poor with judgment.

3 Let the mountains receive peace for the people, and the hills justice.

4 He shall judge the poor of the people, and he shall save the children of the poor; and he shall humble the oppressor.

5 And he shall continue with the sun, and before the moon, throughout all generations.

6 He shall come down like rain upon the fleece; and as showers falling gently upon the earth.

known that David had sinned; but none could tell that God was now punishing him rather than putting his virtue to the trial. "Upbraid not the miserable," said Thales.

VER. 12. Detract. Heb. "are satans," or "adversaries," during my trial. The Fathers say these are predictions. Pa. xxxiv. 4. C.—David certainly wished to spare the chief of the rebels, and he most probably speaks of his spiritual enemies. Bert.

VER. 14. Praise. To perform good works, and to praise God, is the best way to advance in virtue. W.

VER. 15. Learning. As much as to say, I build not upon human learning, but only upon the power and justice of God. Ch. W.—I have not leisure to write a eulogium at present, as the word known intimates. Pa. xiii. 3. and lxxiii. 9. But I will do it hereafter, and record the praises which I now proclaim. Some would translate, "I know not the number" of thy mercies. Bert.—This sense is adopted by the Chal. Theod. &c. See Pa. xxxix. 6. Yet it seems more probable, that David acknowledges his inability to speak of God as he deserves, though he promises to do his best to shew the utmost respect. So Solomon confessed his ignorance, (Prov. xxx. 2.) and Socrates asserted, that all his knowledge consisted in the conviction of his complete ignorance. If this be true with respect to human science, how much more so is it, when we speak of God, (II.) and attempt to dive into the holy Scriptures! Genes.—David meditated on the law continually. Pa. i. 2. C.—Yet he admits, that he stands in need of a guide (H.) and must enter into the sanctuary, to penetrate such high mysteries. Pa. lxxii. 17. S. Aug. and Eusebius understand, that the letter of the Mosaic law is incapable of insuring salvation. C.—This text has been abused, to encourage ignorance, as Amama (p. 502.) complains with respect to the Prot. pulpits and colleges abroad. Knox gives a dreadful picture, of their universities in England. II.—"With the unlearned Anabaptists and fanatics, such may perhaps conclude, that they will thus more easily approach to God." (Tarnov.) and "may boast, that they have been instructed in the school of the holy Spirit," θεοδιδασκαλος, "when they boldly ascend the pulpit, and adduce texts from Scripture, it matters not whether right or wrong." Amama.—Is not this generally the case among those who broach new religions? H.—Sept. Vat. reads, παραπαιδείας, "mercantile affairs." But the Vulg. follows the edition of Aldus, &c. γρομμάριας. Bert.—A similar variation occurs, 1 Esd. viii. The former reading is adduced by the Fathers, and by Gelasius, (dist. 88.) who hence condemns clergymen engaging in merchandise, (Amama) as it was contrary to their calling: and formerly at least, very dangerous for any honest man. H.—David had not received a polite education, and he disapproved of Achitophel's worldly prudence. M.

VER. 17. Till now. Here the stop should be placed. Bert. C.—The verb may also be explained in the past time, "till now I have declared." Bert.

VER. 19. The great things. Thou hast even punished the rebel angels. M.

VER. 20. Me. Heb. "us." Yet Prot. &c. retain the singular, as the context requires. Bert.—Earth To which I seem to be consigned, (H.) being in the greatest distress. It may be understood of Christ's return from hell, and from the grave. Pa. lxxviii. 17. C.

VER. 21. Thy. Heb. and Syr. "my." Thou hast raised me to the highest honours. S. Aug. &c. read "thy justice." C.—Houbigant prefers the Vulg. Bert.

VER. 24. Meditate. Or, utter my most serious reflections. C.

PSAL. LXXI. VER. 1. Psalm. Some copies add, "of David." But the Heb. has only Lishlomo, "to Solomon;" (S. Jer. H.) or, composed by Solomon. The former sense is more generally adopted, (Bert.) though the Chal. and Eusebius look upon the latter as most plausible. David, however, seems to have written this last most beautiful piece, when he placed his son upon the throne; (3 K. i. 47.) and being transported with a divine enthusiasm, he described the reign of the Messiah, (C.) to whom alone many of the passages can be applied, (S. Aug. W.) as the Jews, Chal. Kimchi, &c. confess, though they will not allow Jesus to be the Christ, v. 5. 11. 17. C.

VER. 2. Son. Solomon, (Bert.) or Cyrus, (Pr. disc.) or the Messiah. Most blessed Trinity, enable the Son of man, or of David, to judge the world. W. Ia. x. 3. Jo. v. 22.—Judgment. Equity is the duty of governors, as obedience is that of subjects. Solomon acted with the greatest sagacity. 1 Par. xxii. 10. and xxix. 28. and 2 Par. i. 10. The psalmist inculcates the obligation of defending the rights of the poor, who are under God's protection. To him even judges and monarchs must give an account. Deut. i. 17. 2 Par. xix. 6.

VER. 3. Justice. These blessings shall be so common; (Pa. xxxv. 6. and Joel iii. 18.) or, let princes pursue the paths of justice and peace. Mic. vi. 1. Solomon was to enjoy a perpetual peace, (1 Par. xxii. 9.) as he was a figure of Jesus Christ, who has procured a more solid one for us. Eph. ii. 14. Jo. xiv. 27. Is. lii. 7. C.—Heb. has "by righteousness," as this is the source of true peace Rom. xiv. 17. These virtues are publicly enforced in the Church, as from a mountain. Is. ii. 2. Bert.—Christ, the rock, (H.) and his ministers, the hills, preach reconciliation. W.

VER. 4. Oppressor. Lit. "calumniator." Christ has chained down the devil the accuser of our brethren. Apoc. xii. 10. and xx. 2. M.—He hath taken away his spoils, (Jo. viii. 44.) and undertaken the defence of the humble. Is. xi. 4. Solomon was also the reverse of those wicked princes, who receive bribes, and neglect the poor. Is. i. 23. C.

VER. 5. Before. Or, in the presence of the moon, as the Heb. indicates, (Bert.) though S. Jerom translates, ultra, "beyond, or after." H.—Yea, Christ existed before all the creation, (Pa. cix. 3. C.) and these comparisons do not insinuate that he will ever cease to be. Theod.—The kingdom of David and Solomon is described in the same poetic language, (Pa. lxxxviii. 28. and 37. C.) as it will remain for ever in the hands of the Messiah. H.—Heb. makes a sudden address to the king, "they shall fear thee with the sun," which Houbigant dislikes. Some letters may have been changed, though the sense is not bad. Bert.—"They shall fear thee at the rising of the sun, and shall pray to thee by the light of the moon," Chal. both day and night. C.—Solomon, as a figure of Christ, was good for some time; but no king, except our Saviour, will reign for ever. W.—The mind of the prophet is now raised to behold him. M.

VER. 6. Fleece. Or, "new cut grass," as the original term also signifies. Yet the explanation given by the Vulg. seems preferable, (Bert.) as an allusion is made to what happened to Gideon, (Judg. vi. 37. Houbig.) prefiguring the miraculous conception of our Saviour. He shall call both the strayed sheep of the house of Israel, and the inhabitants of all the earth: as Solomon gave the greatest satisfaction to his people, during the early part of his reign, (H.) and spoke with the utmost eloquence. 3 K. iv. 34. C.—Some supply His justice, (v. 7.) or rather, "his word" shall come. Deut. xxxii. 2. C.—The incarnation was effected sweetly, and in silence. W.

VER. 7. Justice. Heb. "the just," who appear most under a good king, being animated by his example. H.—Away. Chal. "till those who adore the moon be exterminated." This idolatry pervaded almost all the east. Solomon's reign was very peaceable, 3 K. iv. 25. But this was only a feeble representation of the peace which Christ should bring. At his birth, the whole world was in 7 In his days shall justice spring up, and abundance of peace, till the moon be taken away.

8 And he shall rule from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth.

9 Before him the Ethiopians shall fall down; and his enemies shall lick the ground.

10 The kings of Tharsis and the islands shall offer presents: the kings of the Arabians and of Saba shall bring gifts;

11 And all kings of the earth shall adore him: all the nations shall serve him.

12 For he shall deliver the poor from the mighty: and the needy that had no helper.

13 He shall spare the poor and needy: and he shall save the souls of the poor.

14 He shall redeem their souls from usuries and iniquity: and their name shall be honourable in his sight.

15 And he shall live, and to him shall be given of the gold of Arabia, for him they shall always adore: they shall bless him all the day.

16 And there shall be a firmament on the earth on peace. Angels proclaimed it to all the earth. Lu. ii. 14. Is. ii. 4. C.—It is certain, that the internal peace of Solomon's reign did not continue to the end, (H.) much less till the moon should be taken away. Bert.

VER. 8. To sea. Solomon ruled from the Mediterranean, Red, and Indian Seas, to the Persian Gulph, and the Euphrates, having all Arabia tributary to him, (H.) and the countries as far as Syria; so that he enjoyed all that had been promised by God. Gen. xv. 18. Num. xxxiv. 3. and 2 Par. ix. 26. and 3 K. iv. 24.—The earth, denotes this kingdom. S. Jer. in Is. xlii. 4. But if we explain it of Christ, his Church has no limits. In spite of the corruption of the world, she still asserts her title of Catholic. C.—She is universal, both as to time and place, and always visible, v. 15. W.—Her divine head began to propagate this kingdom, after he had been baptized in the river Jordan, (Bert.) as the Fathers agree. This unlimited dominion was promised, (Ps. ii. 7. C.) and the prophet Zachary, (ix.) seems to quote this passage, when speaking of the Messiah alone; so that it is best to understand it in this sense, as the Sept. have done, by ἐκδοῦντος. Bert. Is. ix. 6.

VER. 9. Ethiopians. So S. Jerom, Aquila, &c. translate Tsiim, (H.) which denotes any nations living at a distance from commerce, (Bert.) or islanders, and those who are accustomed to sail. Is. xlii. 21. People on the continent, as well as those in islands, and ships, shall submit to Solomon, 3 K. x. 11.) as all shall yield to Christ, (C.) at least at the day of judgment.—Ground. Prostrating to adore him. Is. xlix. 23. Bert.—Thus the Persians approach their kings, (Val. Max. vii. 3.) as the Muscovites and Chinese do still. C.—The eunuch of the queen of Ethiopia was the first convert of those who did not live in the holy land. Acts viii. 27. M.

VER. 10. Tharsis. Bordering on "the sea," (Bert.) or in Cilicia, though we read not that Solomon ever claimed any authority there, or that the Mediterranean was under his control. He sent his fleet indeed to Tharsis; (3 K. x. 22.) but Arabia and Saba brought presents, or tribute to him. Under the name of islands, the Hebrews comprise all places, to which they had to go by water, as Asia Minor, &c. Is. lxvi. 19. C.—The three kings were the first who verified this prediction concerning our Saviour; and afterwards Constantine and other potentates embraced his religion. Among other islands, Britain, which is the greatest in Europe, was partly converted in the days of the apostles, (Theod. in Tim. &c.) and more under Eleutherius; though the English nation received the faith from S. Aug. and others, sent by Pope Gregory the Great, A. D. 596. W.—Saba. Heb. Seba. The preceding Arabia is sheba, (H.) and refers to some of those who peopled that country.—Gifts, or tribute, 1 Par. xviii. C.—If the former term, presents, (Heb. mincha, "a sacrifice of flour," &c. H.) be taken in the strict sense, the text cannot be applicable to any but the true God, the Messiah. Bert.—The wise men, who came from this country, adored and offered presents to Christ. Matt. ii. M.

VER. 11. Earth, is omitted in Heb. Rom. Sept. &c. so that this cannot regard Solomon, (Bert.) though he was revered by all the neighbouring kings. 3 K. x. 23. Christ alone is the universal king, (Apoc. xix. 16. and Phil. ii. 10. C.) to whom every knee shall bend, at least when all shall appear in judgment. Many kings shall submit before. Bert.

VER. 14. Usuries. Heb. toe, (H.) means "fraud and usury." Eternal torment is the usury which God exacts for murder, &c. (S. Aug.) or a transient pleasure. H.—From this Christ has redeemed us, (Bert.) as well as from iniquity. S. Aug.—Original sin is the capital, for which the devil claims usury. Bell.—Name. Heb. "blood." Sept. properly wrote duu, which has been changed for dyoua. The sense is not very different, as those who respect a person's name, are careful to defend him from death. Bert.—Heb. "their blood is precious." Psal. cxv. 15. and 1 K. xxvi. 21. Solomon repressed all injustice, so that usury was banished, and the poor was so much enriched, as not to be forced to borrow. C.—Yet, after his fall, he laid heavy burdens on his people. H.—How much has the name and blood of Christians cost! Yet we fear not to scandalize those (Bert.) for whom Christ died! The most beautiful qualification of all in power the tops of mountains, above Libanus shall the fruit thereof be exalted: and they of the city shall flourish like the grass of the earth.

17 Let his name be blessed for evermore: his name continueth before the sun.

And in him shall all the tribes of the earth be blessed: all nations shall magnify him.

18 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who alone doth wonderful things.

19 And blessed be the name of his majesty for ever; and the whole earth shall be filled with his majesty. So be it. So be it.

20 The praises of David, the son of Jesse, are ended.

PSALM LXXII.

QUAM BONUS ISRAEL DEUS.

The temptation of the weak upon seeing the prosperity of the wicked, is overcome by the consideration of the justice of God, who will quickly render to every one according to his works.

1 A psalm for Asaph.

HOW good is God to Israel, to them that are of a right heart!

is, to protect the poor, and to promote the work of God, for which he lends them his authority. H.

VER. 15. Arabia. Heb. sheba, v. 10. H.—This was accomplished by the wise men. Euseb.—For him, (de ipso.) They shall adopt the form of prayer which he has taught, (S. Aug.) or they shall adore him on his own account. Bert.—Through him we have access in one spirit to the Father. Eph. ii. 18. Rom. v. 1. People might pay a civil respect also to Solomon.—He shall live. The prolongation of the ruler's life is sometimes (H.) a blessing. Prov. xxviii. 2. The poor shall live, and pay the taxes cheerfully, praying for his prince, &c. C.—They shall adore God, and offer their vows for him, (H.) as subjects would do for Solomon, and the crowds did for Jesus Christ, crying out, Hosanna, &c. Matt. xxi. M.

VER. 16. A firmament on the earth, &c. This may be understood of the Church of Christ, ever firm and visible: and of the flourishing condition of its congregation. Ch.—The strength or staff of bread shall not fail. Ps. civ. 16. Is. iii. 1. C.—Prot. "there shall be a handful of corn in the," &c. H.—Thus moderns follow the Rabbins, who greatly exaggerate the abundance which will take place under the Messiah, as expecting that wheat will then grow as high as cedars. The country was indeed very luxuriant and populous in the reign of Solomon. But the fathers explain this of the Church, founded on Christ, the rock, and enriched with all virtues, (C.) and the most efficacious sacraments, particularly with the holy Eucharist, to which S. Jerom may allude: "there shall be memorable wheat," &c. H.—By these hyperbolical allegories, the abundance enjoyed in the Church was denoted. M.

VER. 17. Continueth. Prot. marg. "shall be as a son, to continue his father's name for ever." The Messiah is the eternal son of God. Heb. yinnin, (Ker.) might be rendered (H.) filiiabitur, (Mont.) if this word were Latin. The ancient Jews considered this as one of the titles of the Messiah. Chal. "before the sun was, his name was prepared." Bert.—This is the third time that the glory of Christ is pronounced eternal, v. 5 and 7. H.—He is for ever blessed: but we cannot think of Solomon, without remembering his almost incredible fall. C.—Blessed. This was spoken only of the Messiah, (Bert.) who is the cause of salvation to all the elect. None are saved who do not continue in Him, (M.) by faith and good works.

VER. 18. The God. Heb. repeats this word, (H.) as the Sept. of S. Jerom did. Ep. ad Sun. C.—Alone. Miracles can be wrought only by God's power. W.

VER. 19. So be it. Heb. "And amen." See Ps. xl. H.—This glory of God was David's most ardent wish. W.—It is suspected that the collector of the psalms added these two verses, (Muis.) as all the books end alike. C.

VER. 20. Are ended. By this it appears that this psalm, though placed here, was in order of time the last of those which David composed, (Ch.) as he died soon after. M.—The subject which he has here treated, (H.) concentrated all his thoughts and desires. Euseb.—"The prayers of David, son of Jesse, have been summed up." Theodot. and V. Edit. H.—It is probable that the collections of the psalms were made at different times; (Bert.) and though many were found after this second book was completed, it was not judged expedient to make any alteration. The Syr. and Arab. pass over this sentence entirely, (H.) which might be added by Esdras. W.—The following psalms have the name of Asaph, &c. in the titles. Flamin.—Yet it is certain that David composed some at least, which are placed after this. See Ps. cix. &c. H.—The true David ceased not to sing new canticles in his Church. S. Aug. W.

PSAL LXXII. VER. 1. Asaph. See Ps. xlix. We shall not undertake to decide whether he composed or only sung this psalm; (Bert.) or whether he lived under David or Josaphat, or rather during the captivity. Those who attribute all the psalms to David, get rid of many such inquiries: but they are involved in other difficulties, (C.) which are not insurmountable. H.—Hou Heb. "Surely," as if an answer was given to what had long troubled the author. Bert.—God is more excellent and beneficent (H.) than any tongue can express. W.

2 But my feet were almost moved; my steps had well nigh slipt.

3 Because I had zeal on occasion of the wicked, seeing the prosperity of sinners.

4 For there is no regard to their death, nor is there strength in their stripes.

5 They are not in the labour of men: neither shall they be scourged like other men.

6 Therefore pride hath held them fast: they are covered with their iniquity and their wickedness.

7 Their iniquity hath come forth, as it were, from fatness: they have passed into the affection of the heart.

8 They have thought and spoken wickedness: they have spoken iniquity on high.

9 They have set their mouth against heaven: and their tongue hath passed through the earth.

10 Therefore will my people return here: and full days shall be found in them.

11 And they said: How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Most High?

12 Behold these are sinners; and yet abounding in the world they have obtained riches.

13 And I said: Then have I in vain justified my heart, and washed my hands among the innocent.

VER. 2. Slipt. I had almost yielded to the temptation (M.) of denying Providence, (H.) and following the broad road. W.—Upon more mature reflection, (H.) I am perfectly convinced that God is not indifferent about those who serve him, though he may have treated Israel with severity. C.

VER. 3. Zeal. I was grieved, (M.) or even inclined to imitate the wicked; (see Matt. iii. 14. Ps. xxxvi. Jer. xii. and xxi. 7.) though the whole book is intended to clear up this difficulty respecting the treatment of the good and bad in this life.

VER. 4. Regard. They are not restrained by the thoughts of death, (H.) which they banish (W.) as much as possible. Prot. "There are no bands ("of pain") Munkst.) in," &c. H.—Stripes. They quickly remove their light afflictions. W—"And their haills are strong." S. Jer.—"Their strength is firm;" (Prot.) "fat" Marg. H.—Sept. follow another derivation, which is equally accurate. Bert.—The wicked die with content and ease, in an advanced age, falling off like ripe apples, without being torn violently away or bound. They look not on all sides to see if there be no escaping. M.—Having enjoyed all the luxuries of life unto satiety, they are resigned to die, little suspecting what will follow. H.—They are like victims fattened for slaughter. Prov. vii. 22. S. Aug.—A noted English deist had the assurance to say on his death-bed, and to have placed on his tomb-stone, Dubius, sed non improbus vixi: securus morior, haud perturbatus! H.

VER. 5. Other men, who follow a more virtuous course (W.) than themselves. Their prosperity encourages their pride, and they indulge in every excess. W.

VER. 7. Fatness. Abundance, and temporal prosperity, which have encouraged them in their iniquity; and made them give themselves up to their irregular affections. Ch.—This sense is better than the modern Heb. affords. Bert.—"Their eyes stand out with fatness." Prot. H.—Into. Heb. "the thoughts of the heart," or their utmost expectations; (H.) or "they have executed the devices of their heart;" which comes to the same. Bert.—They have done what mischief they could. W.

VER. 8. High. With impudence; (M.) boldly despising others, (W.) from their exalted station. Bert.—They even dare to contend with the Almighty. H.

VER. 9. Earth. Attacking men as well as God. Bert.

VER. 10. Return here; or hither. The weak among the servants of God will be apt often to return to this thought, and will be shocked when they consider the full days, that is, the long and prosperous life of the wicked; and will be tempted to make the reflections against Providence which are set down in the following verses. Ch.—Prot. "his people return hither, and waters of a full cup are wrung out for them." S. Jerom saw nothing of waters. "And who among them shall be found full?" He also reads my people (H.) better. It is difficult to understand the present Heb.: whereas the Sept. is plain; as they found me, days, instead of me, "and who," or "and waters." Bert.—We may explain this of the sentiments which the captives should entertain (C.) at their return. Theod.—Asaph, seeing the impiety of the Babylonians, concluded that they would surely be punished, and Israel, being converted, would be put again in possession of their delightful country. C.—The prosperity of the former will cause some to fall away, and their days will be full of misery, (W.) or they will ponder whole days on these things. Bert.

VER. 11. They. The weak, (W. Bert.) under this perplexity, or the wicked, said. C.

VER. 13. And I said, is added by the Sept. to connect the sentence. Bert.—Heb. "truly in vain."—Innocent. Keeping company with them, and avoiding evil. Ps. xxv. 6

VER. 14. Mornings. Every day, (M.) or it comes quickly upon me. H.

14 And I have been scourged all the day; and my chastisement hath been in the mornings.

15 If I said: I will speak thus; behold I should condemn the generation of thy children.

16 I studied that I might know this thing, it is a labour in my sight:

17 Until I go into the sanctuary of God, and understand concerning their last ends.

18 But indeed for deceits thou hast put it to them: when they were lifted up, thou hast cast them down.

19 How are they brought to desolation? they have suddenly ceased to be: they have perished by reason of their iniquity.

20 As the dream of them that awake, O Lord; so in thy city thou shalt bring their image to nothing.

21 For my heart hath been inflamed, and my reins have been changed: 22 and I am brought to nothing, and I knew not.

23 I am become as a beast before thee: and I am always with thee.

24 Thou hast held me by my right hand; and by thy will thou hast conducted me, and with glory thou hast received me.

25 For what have I in heaven? and besides thee what do I desire upon earth?

VER. 15. If I said, &c. That is, If I should indulge such thoughts as these. Ch.—I should. Heb. "the generation of thy children will say, that I have pervaricated." Pagn.—Or, "I should offend against thee," &c. Prot. H.—I should not be in unison with Abraham. S. Aug.—I seem to declare them reprobates, and thy providence unjust. C.—It was not thus that they thought and acted, when they were under trials; (H.) for God chastiseth every son whom he receiveth. W.—The psalmist begins thus to enter into himself, and to correct his mistake. Bert.

VER. 17. Sanctuary. The Church, which teaches all truth; or heaven, (M.) or the holy Scriptures, (Lyrar.) or rather the counsels of God, which were disclosed to him, (v. 24.) when he was sensible that the question was not to be answered satisfactorily by human reason. C.—The last judgment will explain all. H.—In this life, we cannot know the particular causes why the just are afflicted. W.—None but the high priest could enter the Mosiac sanctuary. C.—Religion alone, or the future world, can unfold these mysteries. There we shall learn, that the just require to be purified, and that the sinner's conversion is expected to be the fruit of his reprieve, and of his temporal felicity, (Bert.) to which he may perhaps have had some title, for the few good works which he may have done. H.

VER. 18. Thou hast put it to them. In punishment of their deceits, or for deceiving them, thou hast brought evils upon them in their last end, which in their prosperity they never apprehended. Ch.—Sept. &c. add, "thou hast placed evils." S. Amb. reads, "goods." C.—Dolos, seems to form part of both sentences, "for deceits thou hast put deceits." Bert.—With the perverse, thou wilt be perverted. Ps. xvii. 27. Prot. "surely thou didst set them in slippery places, thou calledst them down into destruction;" (H.) or, "when they were lifted up." Do the rich think, that their prosperity may be an effect of God's indignation? C.—We are here informed, in general, that evils are prepared to punish sins. W.—The wicked have risen by their crimes to such a slippery situation. M.

VER. 20. City. In heaven. C.—Heb. also, "when thou shalt awake," (Chal. Houbig. Bert.) and come to judge, after waiting a long time. C.—Image. The splendour of worldlings is a mere phantom. Death will shew its vanity. H.—Their felicity is only imaginary. W. Job xx. 8. Is. xxix. Ps. lxxv. 6. C.—Though the wicked may live to a great age, (v. 4. H.) yet all time is short. M.

VER. 21. Changed. S. Jer. "are like a fire smoking." I was indignant, (v. 3. H.) and almost consumed with afflictions, and heavy laden. But I depend on my protector. W.

VER. 22. Nothing. In point of knowledge. Heb. Bahar means, "a foolish man." Bert.—Know not, the solution of this difficulty, which thou hast explained. C.

VER. 23. With thee. I endeavoured to fathom these things by my weak reason; but thou wast graciously pleased to bear with me, (Euseb.) as I was always convinced, indeed, that thy conduct could not be unjust. I am willing to be led like a beast. C.—I still feared thee amid all my perplexities, and therefore thou hast delivered me from this temptation. Bert.—I am now filled with sentiments of my own past ignorance, and take thee for a guide. H.

VER. 24. By thy will. Heb. and Sept. "into thy council." Thou hast hindered me from yielding to my doubts, and hast revealed thy truths to me. C.—And. Heb. "afterwards."—Glory. Syr. and Houbig. supply thy glory. Bert.

VER. 25. Earth? I no longer envy the prosperity of the wicked, (C.) seeing that it is all a dream, and a snare, v. 18, 20. H.—Nothing can now give me content, but thyself. C.—This is all we should desire, both for soul and body, as our true inheritance. The wicked, on the contrary, use their free-will to offend God, who destroys, or sentences them to eternal fire. W.

26 For thee my flesh and my heart have fainted away: thou art the God of my heart, and the God that is my portion for ever.

27 For behold they that go far from thee shall perish: thou hast destroyed all them that are disloyal to thee.

28 But it is good for me to adhere to my God, to put my hope in the Lord God:

That I may declare all thy praises, in the gates of the daughter of Sion.

PSALM LXXIII.

UT QUID DEUS.

A prayer of the Church under grievous persecutions.

1 Understanding for Asaph.

O GOD, why hast thou cast us off unto the end? why is thy wrath enkindled against the sheep of thy pasture?

2 Remember thy congregation, which thou hast possessed from the beginning.

The sceptre of thy inheritance, which thou hast re-deemed: Mount Sion, in which thou hast dwelt.

3 Lift up thy hands against their pride unto the end; see what things the enemy hath done wickedly in the sanctuary.

a 4 Kings xxv. 9.

VER. 26. Away. I am ready to die for love, and gratitude. H.—I esteem not myself, if I am deprived of Thee. We must love God with a most chaste, and disinterested affection, if we desire to enjoy him, (Bert.) GOD ALONE. Boudon.

VER. 27. Disloyal. The adherence to any creature is resented by God, as a fornication. Bert.

VER. 28. Praises. Lit. "tidings." Predications. H.—The ancient psalters read laudes, praises.—In the gates, &c. was not in the most correct Sept. &c. being taken from Ps. ix. 15. C.

PSALM LXXIII. VER. 1. Understanding. Ps. xxxi. H.—We behold here the destruction of the tabernacle by the Philistines, (Grot.) or rather of the temple, by Nabuzardan, (4 K. xxv. 8. Jer. lii. 12.) though some understand the profanation by Epiphanes, or the final ruin by the Romans. In the latter destruction, the Jews were no longer God's inheritance, and he would never have inspired the prophet to pray for what would not be granted. C.—This psalm may be used by the just, under affliction; and why, He knew it, was on account of sin; but wishes to move God to mercy, and to put an end to the distress of his people. Bert.—In long persecutions, the weak begin to fear that God has abandoned them. W.—He acts externally as if He had. M.

VER. 2. Mount. S. Aug. reads montem, (C.) as the Heb. may also signify. "This Mount Sion, thou hast dwelt in it." Mont. H.—What injury has it done? C.—The more enlightened are fully persuaded, that God will still preserve his Church. W.

VER. 3. Hands. Heb. "feet," (Mont. H.) or "strokes," phemeec. Bert.—"The elevation of thy feet (thy foot-stool, or temple, C.) is destroyed unto the end," (S. Jer.) or "for victory," as Sym. renders netsach. The Chaldees have boasted of their victory over thee, and violated thy most holy places. H.—This is what fills me with grief. Bert.—But thou wilt punish them. The captives saw the overthrow of their empire. C.—God's former wonders give reason to hope, that he will not fail to assist his Church, which he delivered from the hand of Pharaoh, and by Christ's death, from the devil's power. W.

VER. 4. Made. Heb. "have roared," sending forth shouts of war, where thy praises alone ought to be heard. C.—Ensigns. They have fixed their colours for signs and trophies, both on the gates, and on the highest top of the temple; and they knew not, that is, they regarded not the sanctity of the place. This psalm manifestly foretells the time of the Maccabees, and the profanation of the temple by Antiochus; (Ch. 1 Mac. i. M.) or rather it seems to refer to the destruction under Nabuchodonosor; (Bert.) as under the former the temple was not burnt: (v. 7. C.) yet the doors were. 1 Mac. iv. M.—For signs. Lit. "yea, their signs," signa sua signa. H.

VER. 5. Going out. Sept. "coming in." Both designate the same gates, (H.) or the ends of roads and streets. Matt. xxii. M.—Top. The doors of the temple were very lofty. The idolatrous ensigns were fixed there, as on an eminence, to give notice of an invasion, (Is. xl. 12.) while the soldiers plundered all, before they set fire to the city and temple. 4 K. xxv. 9. C.—Prot. "a man was famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees." The text is very obscure, inasmuch that S. Jerom's version is unintelligible. Bert.—Yet it may signify, "they have placed their ensigns for a trophy, manifest upon the entrance aloft; their hatchets in a wood of trees; and now its sculptures together they have defaced with axe and hatchets, delatoris." Not content with these excesses, they at last set fire to the fabric, (H.) which was easily reduced to ashes, as there was so much wood about it, and in the very walls. C.—S. Chrysa. contemplates the like havoc, which is made by sin. Bert.—In false religions, some external show, festivals, and altars, are opposed to the true ones. W.

VER. 7. Name. That temple, which was the only one consecrated to thee. H.—All persecutors seek to destroy the places of the true worship. W.

4 And they that hate thee have made their boasts, in the midst of thy solemnity.

They have set up their ensigns for signs: 5 and they knew not both in the going out, and on the highest top.

As with axes in a wood of trees, 6 they have cut down at once the gates thereof: with axe and hatchet they have brought it down.

7 *They have set fire to thy sanctuary: they have defiled the dwelling-place of thy name on the earth.

8 They said in their heart, the whole kindred of them together: Let us abolish all the festival days of God from the land.

9 Our signs we have not seen, there is now no prophet: and he will know us no more.

10 How long, O God, shall the enemy reproach? is the adversary to provoke thy name for ever?

11 Why dost thou turn away thy hand: and thy right hand out of the midst of thy bosom for ever?

12 ^bBut God is our king before ages: he hath wrought salvation in the midst of the earth.

13 Thou, by thy strength, didst make the sea firm: thou didst crush the heads of the dragons in the waters.

^b Luke i. 68.

VER. 8. Together. And the infidel nations in that army. Ps. cxxxvi. 7. C.—Days. So the enemies of religion are always affected. The servants of God ought to be more zealous to preserve the remains of ancient piety. Prot. translates, synagogues, (H. Aquila, Sym.) which Sigonius asserts were hardly known in the days of the Maccabees, though they are clearly mentioned, (Est. iv. 16.) and must have existed at all times. Acts xv. 21. Matt. iv. 18. C.—Houbig. has "let all the congregations of God cease." Heb. lit. "they have burnt," (Bert.) or ended. C.—Yet S. Jer. thinks that the Sept. read with the VL edit. κατακαυσμεν, "let us burn," (Bert.) and Grabe has also substituted κ for π , as that brings the Sept. nearer to the sense of the Heb. (H.) and is supported by some copies, (C.) though it seems less accurate, if we speak of days. Bert. Mohed, denotes, "a set time, or meeting." Parkhurst.

VER. 9. Our. Some copies of the Sept. read "their," as if the enemy still spoke. But the people of God rather complain, that they are not so favoured with prodigies, as they had been formerly, and that the prophets did not publicly encourage them, (Bert.) or declare how long these miseries would continue; as the Heb. may intimate. C.—Prot. "neither is there among us any that knoweth how long." H.—Yet neglecting the points, our version is accurate, and any one, or God, may be understood, (Bert.) as taking no cognizance of his people. H.—It is natural for those in distress to exaggerate; for we know that many wonders were wrought, and that prophets were sent to instruct the captives. But they were not so common, nor the prophets so popular, or complaisant, as they could have wished: nor could they be so easily consulted at Babylon, Daniel being generally at Susa, or at court, and Ezekiel in higher Mesopotamia. C.—They could not appear at the head of the people, to harangue in their defence, like Aaron. Ex. vii. 1. Dan. iii. 38. Bert.—The weak, therefore, complain, that they have no prophet to console (W.) them with miracles. M.—But the more perfect answer, that God both hath and will relieve his people, v. 12. W.

VER. 11. Ever. Why dost thou delay to heap favours on us, and destruction on thy adversaries? We are most grieved at the injury done to thy name. C.

VER. 12. Ages. He is eternal, and hath long ago made choice of us. M.—Earth. Publicly rescuing his people from Egypt, (Kinchi) and shewing his power over all the earth. C.—The Fathers understand this of Jesus Christ, who died on Calvary, (C.) near Jerusalem, (H.) which some assert, is the middle of the earth, though others more properly attribute this situation to the promised land, which was nearly in the centre of the world, (Amama) then known to the Jews, as there were 60 degrees to the Ganges, and as many westward to the extremity of Spain. Kinchi places it in the midst of the seven climates, (in Ps. xvi. 3.) and many others have explained this literally, as if Jerusalem was really the central point of the world, (S. Jer. in Eze. v. 6. and cxxviii. 12. S. Hil. &c.) in which sense Josephus styles it the navel. C.—As the world is nearly round, any place may be said to be in the middle. Some have erroneously supposed, that Jerusalem was exactly under the line, (see de Locis. iii. in ven. Bede's works) though it be about the 32 deg. of N. lat. H.—Its situation was at least very commodious for having access to the different parts of the ancient world. S. Jer. in Eze. cxxviii. C.—The middle of the earth may here also relate to Egypt, where God formerly displayed his power, (Bert.) or to the wilderness, as the sequel seems to indicate. The latter formed a part of the promised land, (H.) which was pitched upon to be "the theatre of the true religion, and of the sufferings of Christ, as they were to be made known to all the world. T.

VER. 13. The sea firm. By making the waters of the Red Sea stand like firm walls, whilst Israel passed through; and destroying the Egyptians, called here dragons, from their cruelty, in the same waters, with their king; casting up their bodies on the shore, to be stript by the Ethiopians, inhabiting in those days the coast of Arabia. Ch.—Isaiah xxvii. 1. styles Pharaoh a dragon. See Job xl. 20 14 Thou hast broken the heads of the dragon: thou hast given him to be meat for the people of the Ethiopians.

15 Thou hast broken up the fountains and the torrents: thou hast dried up the Ethan rivers.

16 Thine is the day, and thine is the night: thou hast made the morning light and the sun.

17 Thou hast made all the borders of the earth: the summer and the spring were formed by thee.

18 Remember this, the enemy hath reproached the Lord: and a foolish people hath provoked thy name.

19 Deliver not up to beasts the souls that confess to thee: and forget not to the end the souls of thy poor.

20 Have regard to thy covenant: for they that are the obscure of the earth, have been filled with dwellings of iniquity.

21 Let not the humble be turned away with confusion: the poor and needy shall praise thy name.

22 Arise, O God, judge thy own cause: remember thy reproaches with which the foolish man hath reproached thee all the day.

23 Forget not the voices of thy enemies: the pride of them that hate thee ascendeth continually.

PSALM LXXIV.

CONFITEBIMUR TIBI.

There is a just judgment to come: therefore let the wicked take care.

1 Unto the end, corrupt not, a psalm of a canticle for Asaph.

C. Ezec. xxix. 3.—Leviathan denotes a whale, or crocodile, and was an emblem of the devil, and of all tyrants, particularly of antichrist. Bert.

VER. 14. Ethiopians. Or to enrich the Arabs. M.—Heb. Tsim, is understood of sailors, and “fishermen,” &c. Ps. lxxi. 9. Some nations of Ethiopia are said to be cannibals; but they were too distant from the Red Sea. The lehyophagi or Troglodytes on the western banks, might despoil the dead, (C.) and procure food, (H.) unless this be a description of a great fish, slain by the power of the Almighty, and really eaten. C.—Many explain these people, to mean wild beasts, which devoured the carcases. Euseb. Muis.

VER. 15. Ethan rivers. That is, rivers which run with strong streams This was verified in the Jordan. Josue iii. and in the Arnon. Num. xxi. 14. Ch.—Though the latter point is not so clear, God might divide the torrents, or rivers, at the station Ethan, as the Sept. here read. Bert.—Habacuc (iii. 8.) speaks of rivers. But in poetry, the plural is often used for the singular, and the passage of the Jordan may be meant. C.—God had frequently supplied water from the rock, and gave a passage on dry land, through that river. M. W.—Ethan means, “rapid,” as the Jordan does also. H.

VER. 16. Morning. Aurora. Heb. “the light,” which existed before the sun. Bert.—Yet most understand the moon, (C.) or, in general, “the luminaries.” S. Jer. H.

VER. 17. Spring. Heb. “and winter,” under which two the Jews comprised all the seasons, (Gen. viii. 22.) as the Africans and Danes are said to do still. C.—Yet choreph is used for youth, “the spring” of life. Job xxix. 4. Bert.

VER. 18. This. “Congregation.” Theod.—Sept. add, “thy creature.” Heb. is feminine. But it is used instead of our neuter. C.—Consider this insolent language; the enemy, &c. v. 22. H.

VER. 19. To thee. S. Jer. “the soul intrusted in thy law.” H.—Heb. has now torae, which is rendered, “thy turtle dove.” But the Sept. have read d, instead of r, better; (C.) and Houbigant rejects with disdain the present Heb. though that figurative expression would have the same meaning. Bert.

VER. 20. The obscure of the earth. Mean and ignoble wretches have been filled, that is, enriched, with houses of iniquity, that is, with our estates and possessions, which they have unjustly acquired. Ch.—Or the captives may thus complain, that they are forced to live among infidels, in constant danger of transgressing the law, (C.) while their children are brought up in sin, (Bert.) and ignorance. H.—Infidels are full of all sorts of iniquity, which they hide in their conscience. W.—Injustice is often the method of becoming rich. H.

VER. 21. Humble. Heb. “the contrite,” whether of Israel, or of any other nation. Is. lxvi. 2. Bert.—The rich and presumptuous think not of thanking God. M.

VER. 23. Enemies. Sept. and S. Aug. read, “servants,” and the ancient psalters, “suppliants,” (C.) which seems to be a mistake of transcribers, (Bert.) as it is contrary to the Heb. Chal. and Syr. C.—The sense of both would be good. Erasmus reads acra, quarentium, in his edit. of S. Jerom. H.—They blaspheme all holy things, and are hardened in wickedness. W.—Such are the times in which we live. 1 Tim. vi. 20. Bert.

PSAL. LXXIV. VER. 1. Corrupt not. 'Tis believed to have been the beginning of some ode or hymn, to the tune of which this psalm was to be sung. S. Aug. and other Fathers, take it to be an admonition of the Spirit of God, not to faint, or fail in our hope: but to persevere with constancy in good: because 2 WE will praise thee, O God: we will praise, and we will call upon thy name.

We will relate thy wondrous works: 3 when I shall take a time, I will judge justices.

4 The earth is melted, and all that dwell therein: I have established the pillars thereof.

5 I said to the wicked, Do not act wickedly: and to sinners: Lift not up the horn.

6 Lift not up your horn on high: speak not iniquity against God.

7 For neither from the east, nor from the west, nor from the desert hills: 8 for God is the judge.

One he putteth down, and another he lifteth up: 9 for in the hand of the Lord there is a cup of strong wine full of mixture.

And he hath poured it out from this to that: but the dregs thereof are not emptied: all the sinners of the earth shall drink.

10 But I will declare for ever: I will sing to the God of Jacob.

11 And I will break all the horns of sinners: but the horns of the just shall be exalted.

PSALM LXXV.

NOTUS IN JUDEA.

God is known in his Church: and exerts his power in protecting it. It alludes to the slaughter of the Assyrians, in the days of King Ezechias.

1 Unto the end, in praises, a psalm for Asaph: a canticle to the Assyrians.

God will not fail in his due time, to render to every man according to his works. Ch.—Sym. has, “concerning incorruption,” (H.) whence some have explained the psalm of the general resurrection. Euseb.—The Chaldee refers it to David, praying that the angel would cease to destroy, (2 K. xxiv.) while others suppose that he forbids Abisai to hurt Saul. 1 K. xxv. 9. S. Jer.—This and similar difficult terms might resemble the anthems of Church music. Geneb. Bert. Ps. lvi.—The psalm is a sequel to the former, (C.) or a moral instruction, given by the Son of God, (v. 3.) after the author had admonished us to attend, and place ourselves in his presence. It is not necessary to suppose that it is written in the form of a dialogue. Bert.

VER. 2. Praise. The repetition shews the certainty of the event. Christ and his apostles, who sit as judges, praise the ways of Providence. W.—Heb. is more obscure. C.

VER. 3. When I shall take a time. In proper times: particularly at the last day, when the earth shall melt away at the presence of the great judge: the same who originally laid the foundations of it, and, as it were, established its pillars. Ch. W.—This is God's answer to the long prayer of Asaph, in the preceding psalm, which is here concluded. C.—A time. Heb. Mohel, “congregation.” Sym.—When I shall have delivered my people. Theod.—Justices. With the utmost rigour I will punish Babylon. C.—No mere creature knows the time of the general judgment, as Christ, the sovereign judge, does. W.—Then the just themselves will tremble. H.

VER. 4. Melted. Sym. and Houbig. “is strengthened.” H.—After the last fire the earth shall remain, though changed in quality. W. 2 Pet. iii. 10.—God destroys and establishes kingdoms. C.

VER. 5. Wickedly. This is an epitome of Christian doctrine. W.—God had severely punished Nabuchodonosor, Baltassar, and the priests of Bel. Yet the people would not attend to these salutary admonitions.—Horn. By pride, (W.) which is the origin of all evil, (H.) and an offence pardoned by God with the greatest difficulty.

VER. 6. God. Heb. taavav means, “neck.” But the Sept. have not seen the a, and translate against God. Lit. “the rock,” which is one of his titles; (Bert.) this seems preferable to “speak not with a stiff neck;” (C.) or “with the old neck;” (S. Jer.) though this sense is not contemptible, as the sinner's wonted pride rises against God. H.

VER. 7. Hills. Heb. harim, may also be considered as the nom. case; “nor from the south are there heights” to which they may flee for succour. H.—Yet most of the ancients agree with us; though is there “refuge,” must then be supplied. Bert.—None would be able to screen the Babylonians. Jer. xxv. 15. 26.—Take the cup of the wine of his fury. The king of Seseac (Babylon) shall drink after them. H.—The cup is so great that all shall taste, and the last will have the most bitter portion. C.

VER. 9. Drink. The just themselves shall suffer something. But their part will be comparatively the clear wine, while sinners shall have the dregs. Many suppose that God holds in his hand two cups, which he mixes according to each one's deserts. So the Sept. Syr. S. Aug. &c. seem to intimate. Jupiter is thus represented with two barrels of goods and evils near his throne. Iliad xxiv.—But most interpreters suppose that only one chalice is here specified, filled with red wine, the sediment being reserved for sinners, though it was usually thrown away at feasts. Wine was mixed with water in those hot countries. C.

2 IN Judea God is known: his name is great in Israel.

3 And his place is in peace: and his abode in Sion.

4 There hath he broken the powers of bows, the shield, the sword and the battle.

5 Thou enlightenest wonderfully from the everlasting hills: 6 All the foolish of heart were troubled.

They have slept their sleep: and all the men of riches have found nothing in their hands.

7 At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, they have all slumbered that mounted on horseback.

8 Thou art terrible, and who shall resist thee? from that time thy wrath.

9 Thou hast caused judgment to be heard from heaven: the earth trembled and was still,

10 When God arose in judgment, to save all the meek of the earth.

11 For the thought of man shall give praise to thee: and the remainders of the thought shall keep holiday to thee.

—Yet here the mixture is of a different nature. H.—Fire, (Ps. x. 7. M.) gall, brimstone, &c. compose the bitter chalice of the damned, who will never arrive at the term of their inexpressible misery. In this life, sinners are frequently punished; but their sufferings do not end here. They shall experience a variety of torments in heat and cold. Job. xxiv. W. Apoc. xiv. 10. Ia. li. 17. Eze. xxiii. 34.

VER. 10. Declare. Sept. "rejoice;" as S. Aug. &c. read, contrary to the Heb. C.—Jacob. Christ did all for the glory of his Father. Bert.

VER. 11. Just. Zorobabel, (Theod.) the figure of the Messiah. The Jews were shortly after set at liberty by Cyrus, who was the scourge of their oppressors. C.—The virtuous, who use well their free-will, are thus rewarded. W.

PSAL LXXV. VER. 1. Assyrians. Sept. "against the Assyrian," Sennacherib, 4 K. xix. 35. H.—David composed this after his victory over the Ammonites, and Ezechias used it when he was delivered from the Assyrians. Grot. —This part of the title is of no great authority, as it is not found in Heb. &c. —Bert.—The psalm seems to speak of the victories of all the just; (M.) and instances one memorable example in the defeat of the Assyrians. W.—The Church triumphs over her persecutors. S. Aug.

VER. 2. Judea. Heb. "Juda." H.—This shews that the psalm was composed after the separation of the tribes, (C.) though not invincibly; as the names of Juda and Israel were used in David's time. H.—The divine worship was almost confined to the promised land till the birth of Christ; whose gospel has diffused light throughout the world. S. Aug. C. &c.—See Jer. ix. 23. Bert.—A Christian is the true Juda, or "Confessor." M.—God was known to some philosophers, but not by such special benefits. W.

VER. 3. Peace. Heb. Shalem.—Abode. Heb. "tent or hut," an expression which shews, how much the finest structure of the East was beneath God's majesty. C.—He suffered the rest of the world to follow their own inventions, and false gods, reserving Israel for his Church. W.

VER. 4. There. In that favoured country. The army of Sennacherib perished on its road to Pelusium. 4 K. xx.—Powers. Heb. "sparks," (C.) or "burning arrows." Mont. Ps. vii. 14. and cxix. 4. H.—All the opponents of the Church, or Sion, must perish. W.

VER. 5. Hills. Of Juda, which are styled eternal, on account of their stability. Dent. xxxiii. 15. Heb. seems to be incorrect. C.—"Thou art a light magnificently from, (H.) or more than, (Bert.) the mountains of the captivity." S. Jer.—Or, "of prey." Prot.—"Thou art more terrible . . . than the richest mountains." Theod.—Yet this comparison hardly suits in this place, (C.) and Houbigant prefers the Vulg. and Sept. who may have read terram, "before," or saraph, "of the seraph," (alluding to God's seat upon the ark) instead of tareph, "prey." Bert.—God grants victory to his people, and enlightens them with the true faith. W.

VER. 6. Troubled. Heb. "plundered," or "stupified." Bert.—The haughty and blasphemous Sennacherib, Rabaces, &c. were full of dismay, when the destroying angel slew 185,000 (C.) in the dead of the night.

"What dire astonishment, ye men

Of Madia, sunk you to despair!"—Hymn on War, p. 52. H. —Sleep in death. Jo. xvii. 19.—Of riches, with which they are possessed, as with a fever, (Seneca, ep. cxix.) and of which they dream. Ia. xxix. 8. C.—Yet the most opulent must die, and are foolish in clinging to riches, since they can carry nothing away. M.—Hands. Heb. "the men of the army have not found their hands." Bert.—They could not use their arms against a spirit. A.—Christ has enlightened the mountains, his apostles; and fools despise their instructions, as the Athenians did S. Paul's, being too much attached to the world. S. Aug. Bert.—Though they may be troubled, they will not open their eyes to be convinced. Hence, they have no oil of good works, when they awake in eternity. W.

VER. 7. Mounted. Heb. "the chariot and horse." C.—But the riders are meant. Bert.—Rabaces had boasted, that Ezechias could not find men to mount 2,000 horses, if he should give them to him. 4 K. xviii. 23. C.—But God eluded his vain boasting. H.—While he defends his people, their enemies seem to slumber. W.

12 Vow ye, and pay to the Lord your God: all you that are round about him bring presents.

To him that is terrible, 13 even to him who taketh away the spirit of princes: to the terrible with the kings of the earth.

PSALM LXXVI.

VOCE MEA.

The faithful have recourse to God in trouble of mind, with confidence in his mercy and power.

1 Unto the end, for Idithun, a psalm of Asaph.

2 I CRIED to the Lord with my voice; to God with my voice, and he gave ear to me.

3 In the day of my trouble I sought God, with my hands lifted up to him in the night: and I was not deceived.

My soul refused to be comforted: 4 I remembered God, and was delighted, and was exercised, and my spirit swooned away.

5 My eyes prevented the watches: I was troubled, and I spoke not.

VER. 8. And. Heb. "thou, and who shall subsist before thee in the moment of thy wrath?" Houbigant rejects the second thou. Bert.—From. From the time that thy wrath shall break out. Ch.—Ex tune, often relates to a distant period. We have long known the effects of thy indignation. C. Heb. x. 81. —At the first notice of thy will the enemy is dejected, and fears thy potent anger. W.

VER. 9. Heard. Some edit. of the Sept. read, "thou hast darted judgment." S. Aug.—Still. All were filled with astonishment, and Sennacherib was glad to escape in the most private manner. C.—Persecutors will all be terrified when the signs of judgment begin to appear in heaven, which are here represented as past, on account of their certainty. W.—The divine power will be again displayed. M.

VER. 10. God. After the signs of dissolution, the Son of God shall come to judge. Bert.—The earth is now full of bustle: but then all shall be silent. S. Aug.—Meek. Ezechias had given large sums to preserve peace. 4 K. xviii. 14. C.—Judgment will take place for the sake of the just. W.

VER. 11. To thee. The enemy shall repress his resentment, when he beholds the fall of Sennacherib. T.—The people who had been delivered, express their constant sentiments of gratitude. They revolve in mind the wonders of God, (H.) both in time and in eternity, and keep holidays in memory of such benefits. Bert.—Heb. "for the wrath of man shall confess to thee, thou shalt be girded with the remains of wrath." S. Jer.—The fury of the enemy shall only cause thy power to shine forth in his destruction. H.—Petavius unites both these ideas, in his beautiful Greek verses, though it must be confessed, this passage is very obscure, both in the original and versions. Bert.—Men shall meditate on these benefits, and praise God with gladness, being moved to make vows, even of things left to their discretion, which they must perform. W.

VER. 12. God. Victims of thanksgiving, as was customary after a victory. Pa. xxi. xxvi. xlix. xiv. He speaks to the people who had been spared, particularly to the priests, though it may be understood also of foreign nations, who complied with this invitation. 2 Par. xxxii. 22. C.—Vows, and their completion, ought not to be separated, even though the thing vowed may have been before a matter of choice, as virginity, &c. S. Aug. Bert.—What says Luther? H.

VER. 13. Away. Heb. "he will cut off," (Mont.) like grapes: which means rather to destroy, than to bereave of counsel. Is. xix. 13. This might be written after Sennacherib was slain. 4 K. xix. 37. C.—God is terrible, and will demand an account even of princes, respecting vows and other good works. Great discretion is therefore requisite. W.

PSAL LXXVI. VER. 1. Idithun. Heb. "upon Idithun," was not formerly in the text. S. Jer.—It may be the name of an instrument, (Bellar.) or tune, (Muis.) or this master of music and Asaph might sing alternately. There is nothing certain; (M.) though some would hence conclude, that Asaph was the author. The occasion of the psalm is also unknown, and may be applied to all the afflicted servants of God, (Bert.) or to the captives. C.

VER. 2. To God. These repetitions denote fervour, (C.) and that God alone must be the object of our desire. S. Aug.

VER. 3. Deceived, in my expectations, as I prayed with mind and body continually. W.—Good works are a strong recommendation. "They cry, though we be silent." Many have recourse to the great for assistance, and few to God. Yet in isto invenio omnia. S. Jer.—Heb. is variously translated, and may have been altered. "My hand fell in the night, and ceased not." Sym. and S. Jer. come near to the Vulg. C.—They have, "and does not cease," which would be the case, if the person were deceived or rejected. Bert.—Prot. "my sore ran," &c. H.—But this seems rather violent. C.—Comforted. By any worldly advantages. M.—Joy can come from God alone. Bert.

VER. 4. Delighted. Heb. "cried out," which many explain through sorrow. But the Sept. seem rather to take it in a different sense, as well as the swooning, which might proceed from ecstatic joy (Bert.) at the thought of God. The alternate sorrows and joys of the just are well described. They are seldom allowed to continue long in the same state. Prot. "I complained, and my spirit was overwhelmed. Selah." S. Jer. "I spoke within myself," exercising myself in 6 I thought upon the days of old: and I had in my mind the eternal years.

7 And I meditated in the night with my own heart: and I was exercised, and I swept my spirit.

8 Will God then cast off for ever? or will he never be more favourable again?

9 Or will he cut off his mercy for ever, from generation to generation?

10 Or will God forget to shew mercy? or will he in his anger shut up his mercies?

11 And I said, Now have I begun: this is the change of the right hand of the Most High.

12 I remembered the works of the Lord: for I will be mindful of thy wonders from the beginning.

13 And I will meditate on all thy works: and will be employed in thy inventions.

14 Thy way, O God, is in the holy place: who is the great God, like our God? 15 Thou art the God that dost wonders.

Thou hast made thy power known among the nations: 16 with thy arm thou hast redeemed thy people, the children of Jacob, and of Joseph.

17 The waters saw thee, O God, the waters saw thee: and they were afraid, and the depths were troubled.

18 Great was the noise of the waters: the clouds sent out a sound.

For thy arrows pass: 19 the voice of thy thunder in a wheel.

meditation. H.—I was sometimes in such distress, that nothing seemed capable of giving me any comfort. But I relied on God, and was in an ecstasy. W.

VER. 5. My eyes. Sept. Vnt. Arab. and S. Aug. read, "my enemies," but our Vulg. follows the edit. of Ald. and Comp. (Bert.) very frequently, which here agree better with the Heb. "I hindered my eyes from looking up;" (S. Jer. Sym.) or, "thou hast kept the watches of my eyes," (Aquila) hindering me from sleeping; (H.) so that I did not watch three hours only, like the sentinels, but all night. C.—The sudden address to God seems incorrect. Bert.—I rose before the usual time, yet did not utter my sentiments, (W.) being quite oppressed both with grief and joy. H.—I durst not speak, as I was convinced that thy judgments were right. M.

VER. 6. Of old. And the favours which had been heaped on the nation. C.—Years. Both past and future times; (H.) yea, eternity itself, the great occupation of life. S. Aug. Bert.

VER. 7. Heart. Sept. have read differently from the present. Bert.—Heb. "I recollected my canticle in the night, and communed with my own heart, and my spirit sought to the bottom;" or "I swept, (or directed, scopabam) my spirit," (S. Jer.) from all things unbecoming. Sept. Εκκαλλων. "I dig and harrowed" it by earnest meditation, to extract the weeds, and make it fit to receive the divine seed, (S. Jer. hic. and ep. ad Sun.) and to bring forth fruit; (H.) or I swept to discover the precious jewel (Bert.) of salvation. H.—Scopabam, is not deemed a good Latin word; but seems to be derived from scoria. "I consider or direct my aim;" though some think it means rather, "I swept." Is. xiv. 23. Hugo reads scopabam. C.—I diligently examined my conscience, (W.) and left nothing unturned, like the woman in the gospel who sought the goat. M.—Heb. gachapes, may also mean, "my spirit is set free," to say what might seem too bold, Will God, &c. C.

VER. 9. Ever. Heb. adds, "is his word ineffectual?" which the Vat. Sept. neglects, (Bert.) though gamar omer be thus rendered in other editions. "Has he completely fulfilled his word," which may be the true sense, consumabitur verbum. S. Jer. H.—"Will he execute this threat from generation?" &c. C.—God will never abandon his Church, (W.) though he may chastise his people. H.

VER. 10. Mercies? Turning the waters another way, (Muis. C.) or going against his natural inclination. Vincit illum misericordia sua. S. Jer.

VER. 11. Begun. By God's grace, I now perceive that my thoughts were wrong. W.—I see that we are chastised on account of our sins; (Theod.) but now I hope for better things. T. Geneb.—Heb. may have this (Bert.) and many other meanings. C.—Prot. "I said this is my infirmity. But I will remember the years of right," &c. De Dieu, "To pray, this is mine; to change the right hand, is of the most High." C.—All comfort and every good resolution must come from him. Chal'othi is derived from etl, by the Sept. and from chala, (H.) "he was sick," by others. Who will assert that the former are not the most ancient and learned interpreters? The sequel shews that the psalmist begins to entertain better hopes. Bert.—Now have I begun to follow wisdom, and to amend my life. S. Anthony advised all to make this resolution every morning. T.

VER. 12. Beginning. In favour of Israel, or rather of all the just from Abel. H.

VER. 13. Inventions. Prot. "doings," (H.) or the secrets of Providence, (C.) and his "affections." S. Aug.—The just find an interest in all his works, (Bert.) as they work together for their salvation. Rom. viii. 28. H.

Thy lightnings enlightened the world: the earth shook and trembled.

20 Thy way is in the sea, and thy paths in many waters: and thy footsteps shall not be known.

21 *Thou hast conducted thy people like sheep, by the hand of Moses and Aaron.

PSALM LXXVII.

ATTENDITE.

God's great benefits to the people of Israel, notwithstanding their ingratitude.

1 Understanding for Asaph.

ATTEND, O my people, to my law: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.

2 I will open my mouth in parables: I will utter propositions from the beginning.

3 How great things have we heard and known, and our fathers have told us.

4 They have not been hidden from their children, in another generation.

Declaring the praises of the Lord, and his powers, and his wonders which he hath done.

5 And he set up a testimony in Jacob; and made a law in Israel.

How great things he commanded our fathers, that they should make the same known to their children: 6 that another generation might know them.

The children that should be born, and should rise up, and declare them to their children.

* Exod. xiv. 29.

VER. 14. Holy "place," or person. S. Jer.—Thy ways are inscrutable, (Muis.) but always holy. Geneb.—Heb. "in sanctity." M.

VER. 16. Arm. Christ, (S. Jer.) or power. Deut. v. 15.—Joseph, who was in Egypt, while the rest of the family dwelt in Chanaan. Bert.

VER. 17. Afraid. S. Jer. "in labour." H.—Troubled. The dry land appearing, to let the Israelites pass. Bert. Ps. cxiii. 3.—S. Jerom and the Jews understand this of the storm of Sinai. But most people suppose that the catastrophe at the Red Sea is described, when Moses insinuates, that a dreadful tempest overwhelmed the Egyptians, as it is here specified. See Joseph. ii. 7. C.

VER. 18. Waters. S. Jer. "the clouds poured out waters," mayim, Sept. may have read hamim, "sounds," and omit clouds, which come again in this verse. Bert.

VER. 19. Wheel. Prot. H. Heb. "a whirlwind," (C.) or "wheel," (Pagn.) in the air. H.—The noise of thunder is something similar to a wheel, rattling on the pavement. H.—Salomoneus foolishly tried to imitate it with his chariot. Apoll. Bib. i.—Trembled. The preaching of the apostles was attended with success. H. Fathers. C.—Earthquakes were felt, and men were under a general alarm. M.

VER. 20. Known. The waters resumed their usual course. Heb. iii. 15. The wheels of the enemy might be discerned long after. C.

VER. 21. Hand. By the ministry (W.) of those, who acted in God's place, in the desert. H.

PSAL. LXXVII. VER. 1. Asaph. David composed this, to declare the rights of Juda to the throne, in preference to the tribe of Ephraim, (Lyran.) which had kept possession of the ark a long time; which was henceforth to be on Mount Sion. H.—It seems to relate to the times of Asa, who reunited several of the other tribes to his dominion, (2 Par. xv. 8. C.) and contains a moral instruction, delivered in the person of Christ, (v. 2. Euseb. Bert.) and submitted to the attentive consideration of the faithful. W.—Law. Given to Moses, (Bert.) and sanctioned by the divine authority. H.—The law, and the people were not David's, but God's, in whose name he speaks. S. Greg. in Jo. ii. W.

VER. 2. Propositions. Deep and mysterious sayings. By this it appears, that the historical facts of ancient times, commemorated in this psalm, were deep and mysterious; as being figures of great truths appertaining to the time of the New Testament. Ch.—S. Matthew, xiii. 35. hex things hidden from the foundation of the world. Heb. minni krdem, "from π old." S. Jer. "ancient riddles." H.—Mashal and chidloth, "parables and enigmas," frequently denote things very plain, but spoken in a sententious poetic style. Num. xxiii. 7. C.—The facts, &c. of the Old Testament, prefigured the mysteries of the New. W.

VER. 3. Fathers. Christ might thus speak as man, and he enforces tradition in the strongest terms. Bert.—Only some things were written. W.—The most ancient and universal mode of instruction, was by word of mouth. H.

VER. 5. Testimony. The tabernacle, (Euseb.) or the law which notifies his will. C. M.—He also thrice required the Israelites to perpetuate the memory of what he had done for them, by instructing their children. Deut. iv. 9. and vi. 7. and xi. 19. Both the written and the unwritten word must be carefully preserved. 2. Thess. ii. 14. God had freely chosen Abraham, and given him the law of circumcision; as he directed his posterity by the mouth of Moses. W.

VER. 7. That, &c. This was the end of all the laws and monuments of (747)

7 That they may put their hope in God, and may not forget the works of God: and may seek his commandments.

8 That they may not become like their fathers, a perverse and exasperating generation.

A generation that set not their heart aright: and whose spirit was not faithful to God.

9 The sons of Ephraim, who bend and shoot with the bow: they have turned back in the day of battle.

10 They kept not the covenant of God: and in his law they would not walk.

11 And they forgot his benefits, and his wonders that he hath shewn them.

12 Wonderful things did he do in the sight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of Taneos.

13 *He divided the sea and brought them through: and he made the waters to stand as in a vessel.

14 And he conducted them with a cloud by day: and all the night with a light of fire.

15 ^bHe struck the rock in the wilderness: and gave them to drink, as out of the great deep.

16 He brought forth water out of the rock: and made streams run down as rivers.

17 And they added yet more sin against him: they provoked the most High to wrath in the place without water.

18 And they tempted God in their hearts, by asking meat for their desires.

19 And they spoke ill of God: they said: Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?

20 Because he struck the rock, and the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed,

Can he also give bread, or provide a table for his people?

21 *Therefore, the Lord heard, and was angry: and a fire was kindled against Jacob, and wrath came up against Israel.

22 Because they believed not in God: and trusted not in his salvation:

23 And he had commanded the clouds from above, and had opened the doors of heaven.

24 ^dAnd had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them the bread of heaven.

25 *Man eat the bread of angels: he sent them provisions in abundance.

26 ^fHe removed the south wind from heaven: and by his power brought in the south-west wind.

27 And he rained upon them flesh as dust: and feathered fowls like as the sand of the sea.

28 And they fell in the midst of their camp, round about their pavilions.

29 So they did eat, and were filled exceedingly, and he gave them their desire: 30 they were not defrauded of that which they craved.

^gAs yet their meat was in their mouth: 31 and the wrath of God came upon them.

And he slew the fat ones amongst them, and he brought down the chosen men of Israel.

32 In all these things they sinned still: and they believed not for his wondrous works.

33 And their days were consumed in vanity, and their years in haste.

34 When he slew them, then they sought him; and they returned, and came to him early in the morning.

35 And they remembered that God was their helper: and the most high God their Redeemer.

religion, (C.) to increase our confidence, (W.) gratitude, and observance of our duty. H.

VER. 8. Fathers. Some were virtuous, like Moses, Josue, Samuel, &c. v. 8. and 5. Bert.—But the majority proved faithless. H.—To God. Or did not confide in him, or know that without God's grace, no good can be done. S. Aug. Bert.—Abraham instructed his house, (Gen. xviii.) and David his subjects, that they might avoid bad example. The same advice regards Christians. 1 Cor. x. W.

VER. 9. Battle. Many of this tribe were cut off by the men of Geth, (1 Par. vii. 21. Chal. Geier.) as they fought without God's command. Num. xiv. W.—They did not defend the ark against the Philistines, though they seemed more bound to do so than the rest, since it was brought from their city, Silo, and they also set the others a pattern of infidelity; (1 K. iv. Abenezra.) whence they are singled out likewise by Osce. Bert.—The famous victory of Abia against Jeroboam may be also designated. 2 Par. xiii. C.—This had not yet taken place, no more than (H.) their captivity, under Salmanazar, which is enigmatically foretold. After this reproach, the whole body of the Israelites is condemned. v. 10. Bert.

VER. 12. Taneos. Heb. Tsohan, (II.) which means, "spreading," either because the plagues spread from this capital, or because it was in a plain, (Bert.) or very extensive, (H.) on the eastern branch of the Nile, in the Delta. C.—Here Moses wrought his wonders. W.

VER. 13. Vessel. Lit. "bottle," like walls on either side.

VER. 14. By day. Lit. "of the day." H.—But this is the real import of the Greek. The same cloud (C.) was both luminous and obscure. When the light side was turned towards Israel, the Egyptians were in darkness. H.—The eternal Son of God guided this pillar, and the Israelites tempted him, (v. 18. and 1 Cor. x. Ex. xiii. 21. Bert.) forgetting their baptism or initiation in the service of God. H.

VER. 15. Deep. Water was so abundant, and followed them in streams. 1 Cor. x. 4. C.—The first miraculous grant of water was at Horeb, the second at Cades. v. 20. Bert.

VER. 18. Desires. Lit. "souls," as if they were dying for hunger, though they had plenty of manna. Num. xi. 4. C.

VER. 19. Ill. Heb. "against," (Num. xi. C.) still distrusting in God's power. M.

VER. 20. Bread. Including all sorts of food. W.—Table. Heb. "flesh." It is true we have water and manna, but we want something more solid and agreeable. C.

VER. 21. Angry. This is the sense of the Heb. Distulit means, "he deferred" (H.) to put his threats, (Bert.) or promises, in execution. M.—The destroyer punished those who gave way to murmuring. 1 Cor. x. Num. xi. 1. C.—Their incredulity was punished (W.) for nearly forty years, and all the guilty who were twenty years old at the first numbering, were cut off in the desert. H.

VER. 23. And. Or "though he had." Bert. has Mandavit. "He commanded," would be better rendered, this order being given before the complaints. God had supplied them abundantly with manna from the clouds, as from his granaries. C.—Therefore they ought to have trusted in his power and goodness. M.

VER. 25. Angels. Heb. also "of the strong ones." Aquila.—Such is the blessed Eucharist, of which manna was only a figure. Jo. vi. The angels prepared this food. C.—It was an effect of the divine bounty, not of the power of Moses. Jo. xi. 32. How it could be inferior (Bert.) to the bread which Christ would give, was a riddle to the Jews, as it must be still to all who do not admit the real presence. If both were figures, surely manna was better than common bread. H.

VER. 26. West wind. Lit. Africum, which blows "from Africa," in this direction, with respect to Jerusalem. H.—The same wind may be styled the south wind. Heb. Kadim, "strong, eastern," &c. Bert.—These quails came from the banks of the southern ocean, or from the Red Sea, as the Israelites were still in Arabia, when they were furnished with them a second time, (Num. xi. 31.) for a whole month, (C.) though there were about three million people. Bert.—God changed the wind, so as to bring them into the camp. Ex. xvi. W.—It was before blowing from the south-east. M.

VER. 31. Israel. S. Jerom applies this to those who receive unworthily particularly if they be priests. 1 Cor. xi. 29. C.—God selected the most guilty (Bert.) having allowed them to feast for a whole month. W.—Then he brought down by death, or "hindered," as it were, "by shackles," (Sept.) the most valiant. H.

VER. 32. Still. Notwithstanding this instance of God's severity, they fell shortly after into greater sins, and would have stoned Moses, &c. despairing of ever taking possession of the promised land, which highly displeased God, so that he swore, that none of the rebels should enter it. Many were also slain in the sedition of Core, (Num. xiii. 17.) and the rest did not live above thirty-eight years. C.—Thus about 600,000 perished, (W.) having done nothing worthy of praise. M.

VER. 34. Morning. Those who were spared pretended to repent. H.—Afflictions are the source of much good. But the Israelites are blamed for their

36 And they loved him with their mouth: and with their tongue they lied unto him:

37 But their heart was not right with him: nor were they counted faithful in his covenant.

38 But he is merciful, and will forgive their sins: and will not destroy them.

And many a time did he turn away his anger: and did not kindle all his wrath.

39 And he remembered that they are flesh: a wind that goeth and returneth not.

40 How often did they provoke him in the desert: and move him to wrath in the place without water?

41 And they turned back and tempted God: and grieved the holy one of Israel.

42 They remembered not his hand, in the day that he redeemed them from the hand of him that afflicted them:

43 How he wrought his signs in Egypt: and his wonders in the field of Taneos.

44 "And he turned their rivers into blood, and their showers that they might not drink.

45 "He sent among them divers sorts of flies, which devoured them: "and frogs, which destroyed them.

46 "And he gave up their fruits to the blast, and their labours to the locust.

47 "And he destroyed their vineyards with hail, and their mulberry trees with hoar-frost.

48 And he gave up their cattle to the hail, and their stock to the fire.

49 And he sent upon them the wrath of his indignation: indignation, and wrath, and trouble, which he sent by evil angels.

inconstancy and deceit. C.—They came with apparent earnestness (H.) to offer the morning sacrifice (W.) under affliction. M.

VER. 38. Their and them, is supplied also by Prot. H.—Heb. "he . . . will forgive sin," &c. This seems more beautiful. Bert.

VER. 39. Flesh. The inferior appetite wars against the spirit. Gal. v. 17. Matt. xxvi. 41. H.—Not, in the ordinary course. This does not contradict the faith of the resurrection, which is elsewhere clearly expressed. S. Jer. C.—Man may go astray, but cannot be converted by his own efforts. Prov. ii. 19. S. Aug. Bert.—God will never abandon the whole Church. The Jews here mark the middle of the psalter, and the 1263d verse, (W.) or the division of the book. H.

VER. 40. How often. It would be difficult to specify. God mentions ten times. Num. xiv. 22. W.

VER. 41. Grieved. Heb. "set bounds to," or "marked," holding up to scorn. Heb. vi. 6. Genebrard thinks we might translate, "crucified," hilthra, as this is the root of Thau, which formerly resembled a cross. C.—This would surely be one of the most striking enigmas. S. Jerom agrees with us. Bert.—"They pushed on," concitaverunt, as God's wrath must be greatly excited by setting limits to his power and goodness. H.

VER. 42. Not. How could they so soon forget these prodigies? We might ask, how came Adam to pay so little attention to God's command? How do many act contrary to their better knowledge? Upon occasion of this forgetfulness, the psalmist repeats many of the chief miracles recorded. Ex. vii. and xiii. Bert.

VER. 43. Signs. The turning the rod into a serpent. The rest of the signs were also plagues. W.

VER. 44. Showers. Heb. "floods." H.—Many have asserted that it does not rain in Egypt: but pretty heavy showers fall, even above Cairo, (Vansleb. C.) though seldom. W.

VER. 45. Flies. Cæromyiam. Many copies of the Sept. have kynomyiam, "the dog-fly," which S. Jerom, (C.) and S. Aug. properly correct. Bert. Ex. viii. 24.

VER. 46. Blast. Heb. also "the bruchus," (H.) a sort of locust, which does great damage in the East. C.—Chasil may signify both. Bert.—Ovid speaks of the blast:

Interea crescat scabræ rubiginis æpers. Fast. I.

VER. 47. Vineyards. Herodotus (i. 77.) says, the Egyptians use "ale, because they have no vines." But he is contradicted by Athenæus, &c.—Trees. Heb. shikmoth, is supposed to mean sycamore trees. C.

VER. 48. Fire. S. Jer. "who gave their pastures to the hail, and their cattle to the birds." Reshaphin is also rendered "coals," by Pagnin. It may denote the thunderbolts. H.

50 He made a way for a path to his anger: he spared not their souls from death, and their cattle he shut up in death.

51 "And he killed all the first-born in the land of Egypt: the first-fruits of all their labour in the tabernacles of Cham.

52 And he took away his own people as sheep: and guided them in the wilderness like a flock.

53 And he brought them out in hope, and they feared not: "and the sea overwhelmed their enemies.

54 And he brought them into the mountain of his sanctuary: the mountain which his right hand had purchased.

"And he cast out the Gentiles before them: and by lot divided to them their land by a line of distribution.

55 And he made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tabernacles.

56 Yet they tempted, and provoked the most high God: and they kept not his testimonies.

57 And they turned away, and kept not the covenant: even like their fathers, they were turned aside as a crooked bow.

58 They provoked him to anger on their hills: and moved him to jealousy with their graven things.

59 God heard, and despised them, and he reduced Israel exceedingly, as it were to nothing.

60 "And he put away the tabernacle of Silo, his tabernacle, where he dwelt among men.

61 And he delivered their strength into captivity: and their beauty into the hands of the enemy.

62 And he shut up his people under the sword: and he despised his inheritance.

Jer. vii. 12. and xxvi. 6.

VER. 49. Angels. Heb. "messengers of evils," (T.) as the Sept. may also signify the good angels. Amama.—He ordered Moses and Aaron to denounce his judgments, which he executed either by the devils, (Origen. W.) or by the blessed spirits. S. Amb. Ex. xii. 29. Wisd. xviii. 14.—Hence from the effect, (Bellar.) they may have the appellation of evil. Theod. C.—The other plagues are thus briefly mentioned. M. W.

VER. 51. Labour. "The first-born," (S. Jer. Gen. xlix. 3. Prov. v. 9.) and their best effects. C.—This was the tenth plague. Cham was father of Misraim, who peopled Egypt. W.

VER. 53. Not, after they saw the Egyptians destroyed, whom they had feared greatly before. In the desert they enjoyed rest, while their enemies were in the utmost confusion, (Bert.) having lost their king. H.

VER. 54. Mountain. Heb. "term." Opos, with the soft spirit, means a mountain. (Bert.) and the Vulg. has taken it in this sense in both places, as the Greek accents and spirits are not of greater antiquity or consequence than the Heb. vowel points. H.—The land of Chanaan was very different from that of Egypt, being full of mountains. Deut. iii. 26. Eze. xxxvi. 2. But Sion may be here meant.—Line. Thus were lands measured. Jos. xiii. 8. and xvii. 5. C.—God had made a particular choice of this hilly country for his people, (W.) and for the chief seat of religion. M.

VER. 57. The covenant, is omitted in many Greek and Latin copies, as well as in Heb. S. Jer. ad Sun.—Yet it is found in the Vatican edition, (C.) as well as in the Alex. houbirnaav. H.—Bow, which hits not the mark. It alludes to the faithless Israelites, (C.) particularly to Ephraim, ver. 9. Os. vii. 6. Jer. ix. 3. The bow of Jonathan was not such, 2 K. i. 22. C.—A bad bow misses the aim, or breaking, wounds the person who uses it. M.—These people hurt themselves by their treachery. W.

VER. 58. Hills. The high places, in which they imitated the pagans, and which brought on their ruin. Lev. xxvi. 30. With so much difficulty are people taught to serve God in spirit and truth. They foolishly imagined that they would be nearer the gods. Bert.—Things. Prot. "images." They have not forgotten to insert this word as usual, to make the ignorant believe that all images are forbidden! H.

VER. 59. Heard. So he did the crimes of Sodom. Gen. xviii. 20. C.—Reduced. Heb. "abhorred exceedingly several in Israel." H.—The people were not exterminated; but greatly reduced in the time of the judges. W.

VER. 60. Silo. Where it had remained about 350 years, (Bert.) before the ark was removed, never to be replaced there. H.—The tabernacle was afterwards at Nob, and at Gabaon; whence it was probably removed to the treasury of the temple, (C.) and was hidden by Jeremias, 2 Mac. i. Jos. xviii. 1. Bert.—God gave his oracles more particularly where the ark, (W.) or the tabernacle was found. H.

63 Fire consumed their young men: and their maidens were not lamented.

64 Their priests fell by the sword: and their widows did not mourn.

65 And the Lord was awaked as one out of sleep, and like a mighty man that hath been surfeited with wine.

66 And he smote his enemies on the hinder parts: he put them to an everlasting reproach.

67 And he rejected the tabernacle of Joseph: and chose not the tribe of Ephraim:

68 But he chose the tribe of Juda, Mount Sion, which he loved.

69 And he built his sanctuary as of unicorns, in the land which he founded for ever.

70 And he chose his servant, David, and took him from the flocks of sheep: he brought him from following the ewes great with young,

71 To feed Jacob, his servant, and Israel, his inheritance.

72 And he fed them in the innocence of his heart: and conducted them by the skilfulness of his hands.

VER. 61. Their. Heb. "his." Houb.—The ark was an earnest of God's protection, (H.) and the glory of Israel, 1 K. iv. 21.

VER. 62. Sword. So that they could not escape.—Despised. Heb. hithhabar, is rendered distulit by S. Jerom, (v. 21. 59. C.) or non distulit, "he did not delay" to punish, as Krisinus reads. H.

VER. 63. Fire of God's indignation, (M. W.) or of war.—Lamented. S. Jer. "its virgins no one bewailed." H.—He seems to have read evluu, with the Sept. Others translate, (Bert.) "did not mourn," though they were now deprived of the hopes of marrying, (C.) or "the virgins were not praised" in the canticles used at the marriage-feast, (Chal. &c.) non epithalamio celebratae sunt, (Mont.) or "married." Pagnin. H.—There was no time to bewail the death of the young men, or the captivity of the women. C.—Each one was too solicitous for his own safety. H.

VER. 64. Priests. Ophni and Phinees, (1 K. iv. 11. C.) the origin of this calamity, (H.) and the high priest himself broke his neck. W.—Mourn, plorantur, intimates rather that the people did not mourn for them. But the Heb. has this meaning also, florunt, (Mont.) sunt fletu. S. Jer. H.—The widow of Phinees died on hearing the sad news; and Eusebius seems to think that grief killed Ophni's widow likewise. C.

VER. 65. Surfeited. S. Jerom, Chal. &c. agree in this sense. But Heb. may admit another, not quite so harsh, (C.) "like a hero who shouts for (Mont.) or sings after wine;" (H.) διαλαδων ἑξ ἀνδρῶν, "rendered talkative by wine." Sym.—Gert allowed the Philistines to prosper for a time; but, at last, he covered them with reuining. H.—We must reflect that the Oriental languages are bolder in their expressions than ours, and that this is simply a comparison, not more astonishing than that used by our Saviour, when he says that he will come like a thief in the night. Bert.—If the Spirit of God had not consecrated such comparisons, no one durst have used them. S. Aug.—God rose to punish the infidels, and to preserve his Church. W.—The psalmist speaks of him as of a man avenged by wine, and filling all with confusion. M.

VER. 66. Parts. As they were fleeing, (Bert.) or with emerods. Chal. &c. C. 1 K. v. 10.

VER. 67. Ephraim. Who had been preferred before his elder brother, and yet proved the most inclined to idolatry, v. 9. H.—This tribe was deprived first of the ark, and then of the tabernacle, which were its greatest glory, and this strongly indicated the divine displeasure. C.

VER. 68. Sion. The ark was removed from Cariathiarim, in the tribe of Juda, to the house of Obadedom, for three months, and afterwards to the palace or tabernacle on Sion, (H.) which God had probably chosen for its fixed abode, towards the beginning of David's reign. C.

VER. 69. As of unicorns. That is, firm and strong, like the horn of the unicorn. This is one of the chief of the propositions of this psalm, fore-shewing the firm establishment of the one, true, and everlasting sanctuary of God, in his Church. Ch. M.—It was preserved before Christ, and will remain till the end of time. W.—The temple was not built by David: but the spot was consecrated for it, (2 K. xxiv.) and the ark was placed on Sion; which was the land which he had founded for ever for this purpose. Heb. ramim, means "unicorns, (Chal. S. Jer.) heights, (Mont.) palaces," (Pagn.) &c. Sanctificium et sanctuarium, have the same import. H.—In the land. Heb. "as the land." Sept. have read b for e, as well; (Bert.) and it is observable that Montanus translates the latter, though the former occur in the Heb. text below, edit. 1632: so easily may these letters be confounded! H.—The temple was to have the same stability as the earth, and was but one, like the horn of the unicorn, which is most solid and beautiful. C.—Yet this could not be understood of the material temple, which was the most magnificent structure in the world. It was fulfilled in the Church of Jesus Christ, who is also the true David, v. 72. H.—The crowning of David, who was his figure, was a great blessing to Israel. W.

PSALM LXXVIII.

DEUS VENERUNT GENTES.

The Church in time of persecution prayeth for relief. It seems to belong to the time of the Machabees.

1 A psalm for Asaph.

O GOD, the heathens are come into thy inheritance, they have defiled thy holy temple: they have made Jerusalem as a place to keep fruit.

2 They have given the dead bodies of thy servants to be meat for the fowls of the air: the flesh of thy saints for the beasts of the earth.

3 They have poured out their blood as water, round about Jerusalem, and there was none to bury them.

4 We are become a reproach to our neighbours; a scorn and derision to them that are round about us.

5 How long, O Lord, wilt thou be angry for ever: shall thy zeal be kindled like a fire?

6 *Pour out thy wrath upon the nations that have not known thee: and upon the kingdoms, that have not called upon thy name.

7 Because they have devoured Jacob; and have laid waste his place.

* Jer. x. 25.

VER. 70. Young. Heb. also, "giving milk." David was actually with his father's flocks, when he was sent for by Samuel. Saul was also engaged in the pursuits of a country life when he was chosen king: and it would indeed have been difficult to find people of another description among the Israelites, as all followed some business. Cressus observed that the first of his race (Gyges) obtained his liberty and the throne at the same time, as he had kept the flocks of the preceding king. Xenoph. vii.

VER. 72. Skilfulness. Lit. "intelligences." Plural words are used to express the greatness of the thing. David was very upright and intelligent. H.—This enhances the ingratitude of Ephraim, &c. who divided the kingdom. C.—Yet David had fallen into some grievous mistakes, so that this can only belong strictly to Jesus Christ, who is the good shepherd, without sin. Bert.—He has here detailed what may serve to illustrate the law and the gospel, and may fill us either with confidence or with alarm. H.—We are astonished at the repeated infidelities of the Israelites. But if three millions of Christians were placed in the same circumstances, would they behave better? Bert.

PSAL. LXXVIII. VER. 1. Asaph, who might live during the captivity. C.—If the ancient (H.) Asaph, or David, composed this psalm, it must be considered as a prediction of the ruin caused by Nabuchodonosor, or by Epiphanes. Bert. T. v.—The author of 1 Mac. (vii. 17.) accommodates it to the sufferings of those (C.) whom Alcimus destroyed; or rather the prophet had them also in view as well as Christian martyrs. H.—He cannot speak of the last ruin of Jerusalem, since it would have been improper to pray for its restoration. S. Aug.—Fruit. A mean village, (M.) as Isaias (i. 8.) had threatened. Heb. "a heap of stones," (S. Jer.) in the field. Mic. i. 6. Such was the condition of Jerusalem under Nabuchodonosor (C.) and Epiphanes. 1 Mac. i. Bert.—Catholics have been persecuted in every country, and forced to use mean houses for divine worship. W.

VER. 2. Saints. The Assideans, who were the most esteemed for piety, 1 Mac. ii. 42. In the worst of times, there were always some pious Israelites, and the generality of them were less wicked than their enemies, who exercised a horrid barbarity in refusing them burial, after destroying vast numbers, 2 Par. xxxvi. 17. C.—This was done at least under Epiphanes, 1 Mac. vii. 16. H.—Persecutors have hung the bodies of martyrs on poles to be the food of birds, (W.) as the missionary priests were treated in England not long ago. Heb. is here rather inaccurate, (H.) "to the wild beast of the earth itself;" (Mont.) lechaitho arets, being put forth leith, carts, (Houbig.) as Prot. themselves translate. H.

VER. 4. Us. The Idumeans, &c. are hence blamed by the prophets. Ezech. xxv. 12. Abd. x. C.—Christ and his disciples have been treated with scorn, (Bert.) being styled Galileans, Papias, &c. W.

VER. 5. Zeal, or jealousy, as God has the greatest affection for his people, and resents their infidelity as a kind of adultery. C.—Sin is the source of misery. W.

VER. 6. Name. Their ignorance was of course culpable. Bert.—This prayer is prophetic, (S. Aug.) or insinuates that those infidels were still more deserving of punishment. Bert.—By destroying Israel, the number of God's worshippers would be lessened. C.—Yet this consideration would not hinder God from chastising them; and it is not absolutely true that pagans are always more guilty. Those who know the will of their master, and do it not, shall suffer many stripes. Having the true faith, they may, however, (H.) be sooner converted. W.

VER. 7. They have devoured. So Pagnin ventured to translate the Heb. But Montanus substitutes the singular, though it be evidently incorrect, (H.) and contrary to all the ancient versions and the parallel passage, (Jer. x. 25.) as well as to MS. 3. Lambeth 435, &c. (Kennicott) v being lost at the end of acol. Houbig.—Place. Heb. also, "beauty," the ark or temple. C.

VER. 8. Former iniquities, which we and our fathers have committed. The Hebrews generally pray for the remission of their parent's faults. Lam. v. 7.

8 *Remember not our former iniquities: let thy mercies speedily prevent us, for we are become exceedingly poor.

9 Help us, O God, our Saviour: and for the glory of thy name, O Lord, deliver us: and forgive us our sins for thy name's sake:

10 Lest they should say among the Gentiles: Where is their God? And let him be made known among the nations before our eyes,

By the revenging the blood of thy servants, which hath been shed: 11 let the sighing of the prisoners come in before thee.

According to the greatness of thy arm, take possession of the children of them that have been put to death.

12 And render to our neighbours seven-fold in their bosom: the reproach wherewith they have reproached thee, O Lord

13 But we thy people, and the sheep of thy pasture, will give thanks to thee for ever.

We will shew forth thy praise unto generation and generation.

PSALM LXXIX.

QUI REGIS ISRAEL.

A prayer for the Church in tribulation, commemorating God's former favours.

1 Unto the end, for them that shall be changed, a testimony for Asaph, a psalm.

2 GIVE ear, O thou that rulest Israel: thou that leadest Joseph like a sheep.

Thou that sittest upon the Cherubim, shine forth 3 before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasses.

Stir up thy might, and come to save us.

4 Convert us, O God: and shew us thy face, and we shall be saved.

* Isai. lxi. 9.

Bar. iii. 5. Dan. ix. 5. C.—But here the penitents' own transgressions may be meant. Bert.—God is ready to pardon such. W.

VER. 9. Help. The necessity of grace, and the co-operation of free-will, are here plainly asserted. S. Aug.

VER. 10. Their God. Let him rescue his people. Cicero (pro Flacco) speaking of the Jewish nation, says, "How dear it was to the immortal gods, appears from its being overcome, enslaved," &c.—Shed. He speaks not of revenge; (C.) but in order that chastisement may open the eyes of the infidels, that they may be converted. Euseb.—Let none suspect that thou disregardest thy people. The event will evince the contrary. W.

VER. 11. Put. Chal. "consigned." C.—Protect the successors of the martyrs. W.

VER. 12. Bosom. Punish them severely (C.) in this world. S. Jer.—Many of the surrounding nations were subdued by Nabuchodonosor, five years after he had conquered the Jews. Joseph. x. 10. Jer. xlix. 7. &c.

PSAL. LXXIX. VER. 1. Testimony, or instruction, (C.) and proof of the psalmist's faith. H.—Psalm. Vat. Sept. S. Aug. &c. add, "for (or against) the Assyrian:" whence some have inferred that it relates to the captivity of Israel. But as Benjamin is also mentioned, it seems rather to speak of the captives of Babylon, (C.) or of all Jews and Christians in distress. Bert.—The faithful pray for the coming of the Messias, v. 2. 4. 18. H.—Fathers. C.

VER. 2. Joseph. He mentions these two as persons dear to God. All the tribes were equally led away captives, and the distinction of kingdoms was not regarded. C.—All Israel is denoted by Joseph, who composed two tribes, having the double portion; (W. M.) and ruling in Egypt. Bell.

VER. 3. Manasses. These three tribes followed the ark in the desert, (Num. ii. 18.) and might better see the majesty shining over it. W. C.—Let all be united once more in the divine service. Muis.—Savaria, and Jerusalem in part, were in the tribes of Ephraim and Benjamin, (M.) and Manasses occupied both sides of the Jordan. H.

VER. 4. Saved. This chorus occurs three (W.) or four times. C.—With God's grace, we shall be able to act virtuously. S. Jer.—Thou canst easily rescue us from our misery. Be pleased to send us the Messias, thy substantial image, 2 Cor. iv. 4. and Col. i. 15. If thou assist us, we may co-operate to obtain salvation. W.

VER. 6. Measure. Heb. shalish, "three-fold." S. Jer.—The capacity of this measure is not determined. It might be the seah, or the third part of an epha, which would be very abundant, speaking of tears; though small to contain the earth. Is. xl. 12. C.—Penitents must eat little. S. Jer.—Yet their sorrow

5 O Lord, God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry against the prayer of thy servant?

6 How long wilt thou feed us with the bread of tears: and give us for our drink tears in measure?

7 Thou hast made us to be a contradiction to our neighbours: and our enemies have scoffed at us.

8 O God of hosts, convert us: and shew thy face. and we shall be saved.

9 Thou hast brought a vineyard out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the Gentiles and planted it.

10 Thou wast the guide of its journey in its sight: thou plantedst the roots thereof, and it filled the land.

11 The shadow of it covered the hills: and the branches thereof the cedars of God.

12 It stretched forth its branches unto the sea, and its boughs unto the river.

13 Why hast thou broken down the hedge thereof; so that all they who pass by the way, do pluck it?

14 The boar out of the wood hath laid it waste: and a singular wild beast hath devoured it.

15 Turn again, O God of hosts, look down from heaven, and see, and visit this vineyard:

16 And perfect the same which thy right hand hath planted: and upon the Son of man whom thou hast confirmed for thyself.

17 Things set on fire and dug down, shall perish at the rebuke of thy countenance.

18 Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand: and upon the Son of man, whom thou hast confirmed for thyself.

19 And we depart not from thee, thou shalt quicken us: and we will call upon thy name.

20 O Lord God of hosts, convert us: and shew thy face, and we shall be saved.

must be moderated by hope. Euseb. See Ose. ix. 4. C.—God punishes so as not to destroy us. W.

VER. 7. At us. See Ps. lxxviii. 4. H.—Such was the condition of Jeremiah, xv. 10. C.—Heb. "have scoffed among themselves." Chal. and S. Jerom agree with us. Scorn is more difficult to bear than poverty. Hence to comfort himself, the psalmist repeats, O God, &c. Bert.

VER. 9. Vineyard. Thy Church and people. W. Is. v. 1. Ose. x. 1. Matt. xx. 2.

VER. 10. Sight. Heb. "Thou didst dig before it," (Mont.) making the ground ready. C.—The cloud went before the Israelites. W.—Land of promise. H.

VER. 11. God. The highest cedars were surpassed by the branches, or even by the smallest shoots (arbusta) of this vine. H.—Most powerful nations were forced to submit to David. Theod.—The Israelites were exceedingly multiplied, (W.) and enjoyed the fruits of the country. Mic. iv. 4. C.

VER. 12. River Euphrates, from the Mediterranean, Red, and Indian seas. H. Deut. xi. 24.

VER. 13. It! Thou hast withdrawn thy protection. The temple is destroyed, and all plunder with impunity, because thy vineyard has not rendered good fruit. Jer. ii. 21.

VER. 14. Singular. The wild boar, which does not go with other beasts. Nabuchodonosor is here designated, (C.) or Salmanasar, and all persecutors, (Bert.) particularly the devil, who goes about like a roaring lion, and stirs up his agents to disturb the world. Hence the enemy becomes more cruel than any wild beast. W.

VER. 16. And look down upon "the Messias," (Chal.) the true vine. Jo. xv. 1. Matt. xxi. 33. C.—Of man, is not in Heb. only, v. 13. H.—Some perfection was wanting to the Church of the Old Testament.

VER. 17. Things set on fire, &c. So this vineyard of thine, almost consumed already, must perish if thou continue thy rebukes. Ch.—Things, would imply that incensa is in the neuter plural. But this is not the case in Sept. or Heb. Bert.—S. Jerom has succensam, "Look down upon the vine or root, (17) burn up and without any branches. Let them perish at," &c. who have thus treated it. H.

VER. 18. The man of thy right hand. Christ, (Ch.) where he sits, (C.) being as man in the highest place of heaven. Matt. xxvi. 64. and xii. 32. H.—Who else could redeem Israel? C.—Zorobabel was only a figure of Him. H.—Christ's birth was miraculous, (M.) and he was appointed by the right hand of God to do great things; and, as man, is moved to take compassion on the distresses of his people. Bert.

VER. 19. From thee. This is our fixed determination for the future. H.—

PSALM LXXX.

EXULTATE DEO.

An invitation to a solemn praising of God.

1 Unto the end, for the wine-presses, a psalm for Asaph himself.

2 REJOICE to God our helper: sing aloud to the God of Jacob.

3 Take a psalm and bring hither the timbrel: the pleasant psaltery with the harp.

4 Blow up the trumpet on the new moon, on the noted day of your solemnity.

5 For it is a commandment in Israel, and a judgment to the God of Jacob.

6 *He ordained it for a testimony in Joseph, when he came out of the land of Egypt: he heard a tongue which he knew not.

7 He removed his back from the burdens: his hands had served in baskets.

8 Thou calledst upon me in affliction, and I delivered thee: I heard thee in the secret place of tempest: ^bI proved thee at the waters of contradiction.

9 Hear, O my people, and I will testify to thee: O Israel, if thou wilt hearken to me, 10 there shall be ^ano

^a Gen xli. 29.—^b Exod. xvii. 5.—^c Exod. xx. 3.

Will call. Heb. "Shall be called by thy name," (S. Jer. H.) thy people. Sym. C.—But the Vulg. is equally correct, invocabimus. Mont. Prot. H.

PSAL. LXXX. VER. 1. For the wine-presses, &c. torcularibus. It either signifies a musical instrument, or that this psalm was to be sung at the feast of the tabernacles after the gathering in of the vintage, (Ch.) or on the feast of trumpets, on the 1st of Tisri. Lev. xxiii. 24. Euseb. Pin. C. See Ps. viii.—From the grape some good wine is extracted, and the rest is thrown away: so in this psalm we find the just rejoice, while the wicked complain, during the persecutions of the Church. S. Aug.—Some Latin copies add, "on the 5th day of the week;" and Genebrard supposes that these additions are owing to the Jewish traditions, (C.) as they might sing this psalm on Thursday. H.—We need not attempt to ascribe this piece to any particular time, though some have thought that it regards the captives, the translation of the ark, or the vocation of the Gentiles, &c. C.—It is very beautiful. Bert.

VER. 4. New moon of Tisri. Lev. xxiii. 24.—Noted. Heb. "in the obscure, in the day of our solemnity." C.—Prot. "in the time appointed, on our solemn feast-day." Cose may denote "obscure or appointed;" (S. Jer.) "in the middle of the month;" (H.) which alludes to the feast of tabernacles, when the Jews dwelt under the shade of tents, made of branches. This was esteemed "the most holy and greatest" of their festivals. Joseph. viii. 2. Num. xxix. 12. Prov. vii. 20. C.—It may also be explained of the new moon of Tisri, (M.) when the people were admonished of the beginning of the civil year, or of the three great festivals to be then celebrated, perhaps (H.) in memory of the world's creation, at that season. Bert.—How carefully ought we not, therefore, to celebrate the Christian holidays, which are instituted to excite our gratitude for greater benefits! H.—The days of the new moons (Num. xxviii. 11.) were consecrated, to acknowledge God's constant providence; and that of Tisri in particular, (ib. C. xxix. 1.) to thank him for the preservation of Isaac. Gen. xxii. 18. W.—But the Lord's day reminds us not only of the world's creation, but also of its redemption, &c. Rom. iv. 25. Bert.

VER. 5. Jacob. It is a duty which we owe to God, in obedience to his command. Heb. may be, (II) "a decree for the princes (gods) of Jacob." C.—Prot. "a law of," &c.

VER. 6. Joseph. Who represents all the family of Israel, as he took care of it. C. Ps. lxxix. 2. W.—Not. The Israelites heard the voice of God at Sinai. (S. Jer. &c. C.) and for the last time, were forced to hear the insults of the Egyptians at their heels; (H.) whose language was barbarous to them, (Ps. exiii. 1. M.) and not well understood by all, as they had very little society together. Joseph spoke to his brethren by an interpreter. H.—Some explain this of Joseph himself, when he first came into Egypt, (Chal. Bos.) or of the Israelites, at their arrival there. Vat.—But this agrees not with the Vulg. or Heb. (H.) the latter of which is very confused and incorrect, though it be adopted (C.) by S. Jerom: "I heard a tongue which I knew not, I withdrew," &c. (II.) or, making a small alteration, "God hath established this festival in Joseph, when He appeared in the land of Egypt to rescue his people: then, said the Lord, I made him hear a language which he knew not, that I was the protector of my people, I will remove," &c. C.—The authors of the Pin. disc. take this liberty, which would make the sense pretty clear. But the Heb. means, "I heard," &c. Some not being able to understand this, have substituted, "He heard," with the German version. Bert.—The ancient Greek interpreters seem to have read the same, as no variation is noticed. C.—If, however, we must explain the Heb. of S. Jerom, we must suppose that, I knew not, means, I condemned, as it often does; and God certainly reprobated the harsh language of the Egyptian task-masters, and came to deliver his people from oppression. Ex. ii. 25. and iii. 8. and v. 14. H.

VER. 7. Baskets. Heb. "brazen." Mont.—"His hands shall pass from the new god in thee: neither shalt thou adore a strange god.

11 For I am the Lord, thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt: open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it.

12 But my people heard not my voice: and Israel hearkened not to me.

13 *So I let them go according to the desires of their heart: they shall walk in their own inventions.

14 *If my people had heard me: if Israel had walked in my ways:

15 I should soon have humbled their enemies, and laid my hand on them that troubled them.

16 The enemies of the Lord have lied to him: and their time shall be for ever.

17 And he fed them with the fat of wheat, and filled them with the honey out of the rock.

PSALM LXXXI.

DEUS STETIT.

An exhortation to judges and men in power.

I A psalm for Asaph.

GOD hath stood in the congregation of gods; and being in the midst of them he judgeth gods.

^d Acts xiv. 15.—^e Baruc. iii. 18.

pots. Prot.—Dud, means also, "a basket." H.—The Hebrews were thus forced to carry mortar, (M.) straw, &c. W.

VER. 8. In the secret place of tempest. Heb. of thunder. When thou soughtest to hide thyself from the tempest: or, when I came down to Mount Sinai, hiddens from the eyes in a storm of thunder; (Ch. Ex. xix. 16.) or when I afflicted Egypt, (ib. ix. 23.) and Pharaoh's army. Ps. lxxvi. 19.—Contradiction, at Mara, or rather at Cades, where Moses betrayed some distrust. Ex. xxiv. 25. and Num. xv. 12. C.—After so many benefits, they still contradicted God, and would not serve him. W.

VER. 9. Testify. Instruct, or call heaven to witness our covenant. C.—Man has free will, and may choose whether he will obey or not. W.

VER. 10. New God. Who must of course be false. II.—Heb. "strange." Ex. xx. 2. Jer. xxiii. 23. C.—An express law on this head was a great benefit, (W.) as most people had gone astray. H.

VER. 11. Fill it. I will grant all thy just requests, if thou be faithful. Euseb. C. W.—God uses the title of Jehovah, "the Eternal self-existent Being." Bert.

VER. 13. Inventions. Ancient psalters read, "wills." This is the greatest (C.) of God's judgments. Rom. i. 24. M.—He sometimes permits a person to go on, that he may be disgusted with sin. Ut saturati vitii vel sic agant penitentiam. S. Jer.—We ought all to dread this root of bitterness, (Heb. xii. 15.) which may cause us to resist God's grace, and to be abandoned by him, as the Israelites seemed to be, before their ruin came on. Bert.

VER. 15. Soon. Forisitan, "perhaps," (H.) does not here imply a doubt, (M.) but rather the ease and liberty (W.) with which God could have rescued his people (Heb.) "in a moment." C. Bert.

VER. 16. Enemies. The faithless Israelites, (C.) or infidel nations. Bos. &c.—Ever. Impenitent sinners shall suffer for ever. Ch.—The Jews will scarcely be converted at last. M.—For a long time God bore with their infidelities, and heaped favours upon them. H.

VER. 17. And. Or "though." This increases their ingratitude.—Filled. Heb. "I will fill thee;" which reading few admit. S. Jerom agrees with us. Bert.—Prot. (16.) "the haters of the Lord should have submitted (marg. lied) to him; but their time should have endured for ever. (17) He should have fed them, (v rather signifies "him," H.) also with the finest of wheat, and with honey out of the rock, should I have satisfied thee." This sudden change seems rather abrupt, though God may have spoken either in the first or third person, from v. 6. H.—Kac. He fed them in the desert with manna, and the water seemed most delicious, as they were thirsty; unless he speaks of real honey. M.—The promised land was very fruitful; but all this prefigured the favours which God bestows upon his servants, in the blessed Eucharist, 1 Cor. x. 4. C.—How many, like Judas, partake of them, and prove faithless! S. Aug.

PSAL. LXXXI. VER. 1. Asaph. Josephat gave the like instructions to his judges, 2 Par. xix. 6. Kimchi. C.—God rejected the Jews in the preceding psalm, and here the reason is assigned. Theodoret.—Congregation, or church of the Jews, who were gathered together like cattle, and sought after temporal advantages (S. Aug. in Ps. lxxii. 28.) alone. Catec. Trid. Symb.—This is not exactly true of all, (Heb. xi. 14.) though it might be of the people in general, who seldom raised their thoughts to spiritual delights. H.—Of gods. Heb. "of God," who presides in his own council, and gives authority to others. Amama.—Yet Syr. has, "the angels;" Chal. "the just;" Prot. "the mighty;" and Aquila, "the powerful ones." H.—Gods here are put for judges, who act in God's name. Deut. i. 17. Ex. xxii. 28. To decide affairs of consequence, the priests and other judges met in the temple; and the Romans did the like, each senator offering incense and wine to the god who was honoured in that place. Suet. in Aug. xxxv. C.—All magistrates ought to be equally careful in what they determine as if they heard God present giving them the following instructions. W.—

2 How long will you judge unjustly: and accept the persons of the wicked?

3 Judge for the needy and fatherless: do justice to the humble and the poor.

4 "Rescue the poor; and deliver the needy out of the hand of the sinner.

5 They have not known nor understood; they walk on in darkness: all the foundations of the earth shall be moved.

6 "I have said: You are gods, and all of you the sons of the most High.

7 But you like men shall die: and shall fall like one of the princes.

8 Arise, O God, judge thou the earth: for thou shalt inherit among all the nations.

PSALM LXXXII.

DEUS QUIS SIMILIS.

A prayer against the enemies of God's Church.

1 A canticle of a psalm for Asaph.

2 O GOD, who shall be like to thee? hold not thy peace, neither be thou still, O God;

3 For lo thy enemies have made a noise: and they that hate thee, have lifted up the head.

4 They have taken a malicious counsel against thy people, and have consulted against thy saints.

5 They have said: Come and let us destroy them, so that they be not a nation: and let the name of Israel be remembered no more.

6 For they have contrived with one consent: they have made covenant together against thee, 7 the tabernacles of the Edomites, and the Ismahelites:

* Prov. xxiv. 11.—b John x. 34.—c Judges vii. 22.

Judgeth gods, or "God, our Saviour, is judged." Houbig.—This bringeth on the reprobation of the Jews, v. 5. &c. Bert.

VER. 2. Wicked. Contrary to the law. Deut. i. 17. Lev. xix. 15.

VER. 3. Do justice. This is the sense of justify, "justify," as the poor must not be screened from justice, any more than the rich. H.—They are in greater danger of being neglected. Is. i. 23. Jer. v. 28. H.

VER. 5. Moved. The ignorance, inapplication, and injustice of those in power overturn the state, which is supported by justice. Prov. xiv. 34. They draw down God's curse upon the land, (S. Jer. C.) and expose it to all the miseries of anarchy. This regards pastors also. Bert.—By gross ignorance judges walk in darkness, and throw all into confusion.

VER. 6. Gods. The people look upon you as such, and treat you with respect. But entertain not sentiments of pride on that account. C.—If judges, even those whom God condemns, may be styled gods without blasphemy, how much more might Jesus Christ, who was holy and did the works of God? He uses this argument to make the fury of the people abate; but then he continues to prove that he was God in a very different and proper sense, inasmuch that the Jews, clearly perceiving his meaning, which Socinians would now mistake, took up stones to throw at him. Jo. x. 34. H.—If he had not been God, He would surely have told them plainly, as S. Paul did when people would have offered sacrifice to him, and as S. John Baptist confessed that he was not the Christ. The sons of Seth, priests, the just, and all the Israelites, were styled sons of God, as well as the angels and judges. Gen. vi. 2. Ps. xxviii. 1. Wisd. v. 5. Job i. 6. But no individual is called the Son, except Jesus Christ the true God. Bert.—This passage may be understood of all the faithful, (S. Aug.) particularly of bishops: and Constantine the Great was hence deterred from judging them (S. Greg. i. dec. Grat. p. 2. c. 11. q. 1.) or the clergy; (S. Melchisedes. c. 12. q. 1.) though this name seems inaccurate, as he died before (Glossa) the council of Nice. Amama restrains the text to men in power. H.—Their elevated station makes their ignorance and misconduct less excusable. M.

VER. 7. Men. Heb. Adam, or "like a man" (Mont. H.) of the meanest rank.—Princes. Among men, (C.) or like Lucifer, the first of the rebel angels. Euseb. S. Just. dial.—Most tyrants come to a miserable end. M.—At death, judges themselves are brought to the bar, and their case is then more terrible, as the mighty in guilt shall suffer more. Wisd. vi. W.—They are forced to taste of death; while Jesus Christ was master of it. Jo. x. 17. 28. This comparison evinces Christ's divinity. But Socinians blind themselves by looking at the sun, and attempting to fathom all by the weak light of reason. Bert.

VER. 8. Nations. Those whom thou hast appointed judges, prevaricate. Gen. xviii. 25. C.—Come, therefore, thyself, Lord Jesus, (Apoc. xxii. 20.) to whom all nations were promised for an inheritance. Bert. Ps. ii. 7.—His appearance at the last day is described in the 49th psalm; and most of the Fathers here discover a clear prediction of the conversion of the Gentiles. C.

PSAL. LXXXII. VER. 1. Asaph. This psalm alludes to the wars of David,

Moab, and the Agarenes, 8 Gebal, and Ammon and Amalec: the Philistines, with the inhabitants of Tyre.

9 Yea, and the Assyrian also is joined with them: they are come to the aid of the sons of Lot.

10 Do to them "as thou didst to Madian" and to Sisara: as to Jaban at the brook of Cisson.

11 Who perished at Endor: and became as dung for the earth.

12 "Make their princes like Oreb, and Zeb, and Zebbee, and Salmana.

All their princes, 13 who have said: Let us possess the sanctuary of God for an inheritance.

14 O my God, make them like a wheel; and as stubble before the wind.

15 As fire which burneth the wood: and as a flame burning mountains.

16 So shalt thou pursue them with thy tempest: and shalt trouble them in thy wrath.

17 Fill their faces with shame; and they shall seek thy name, O Lord.

18 Let them be ashamed and troubled for ever and ever: and let them be confounded and perish.

19 And let them know that the Lord is thy name: thou alone art the most High over all the earth.

PSALM LXXXIII.

QUAM DILECTA.

The soul aspireth after heaven: rejoicing, in the mean time, in being in the communion of God's Church upon the earth.

1 Unto the end, for the wine-presses, a psalm for the sons of Core.

* Judges iv. 15.—c Judges vii. 25.—f Judges viii. 21.

(2 K. viii. Bert.) against Ammon, (Bos.) or of the Jews returned from captivity, (2 Esd. iv. Ezec. xxxviii. Theod.) or of the Machabees; (1 Mac. v. and 2 Mac. x. Bell.) or rather of Josaphat. 2 Par. xx. Kimchi. Hammond. C.—All in danger are taught to have recourse to God. Bert.

VER. 2. To thee? Heb. "be not silent to thyself." Pagn.—But domi also implies "like;" (Bell.) and there would otherwise be a sort of tautology. Bert.—Christ on earth was like other men: but when he shall come to judgment, none will be comparable to Him. S. Aug.—Amama says this exposition is groundless: but others are of a contrary opinion. H.—The ancient Greek interpreters seem not to have varied from the Sept. though S. Jerom adopts the present Heb. "be not silent. Hold" &c. which may express the utmost fervour and want of protection. Thy own cause is now at stake: the enemy wishes to destroy religion. C.

VER. 3. Noise. Like the boisterous ocean. H.—Head To revolt. 4 K. iii. v. and 2 Par. xx.

VER. 4. Saints. Heb. "hidden ones;" (Prot. H.) the people under God's protection, (M. Bert.) or the treasures of the temple. C.

VER. 5. Nation. That there may be no more of this religion, or Catholica. W.—Israel delighted most in being styled the chosen nation of God. Bert.

VER. 7. Agarenes descended from Agar, though they took the name of Saracens, as if they had sprung from Sara, (W.) or they dwelt at Agra, otherwise called Petra, in Arabia; or on the east of Galaad, 1 Par. v. 10. C.

VER. 9. Assyrian, or "Assur," sprung from Dedan, (Gen. xxv. 3.) and dwelt near the Ammonites. C.—Come. Heb. "an arm to," &c. H.—All infidels conspire against Catholics, (W.) and are willing to forget their private quarrels. H.

VER. 10. Madian: 120,000 of whom were defeated by Gedeon with 300 men, (H. Judg. vii.) as Sisara was routed by Debora, at Cisson, and slain by Jahel ib. iv. C.

VER. 11. Endor. Near this place the Madianites fell upon one another.—All their princes of Madian, (C.) or treat all the princes of the people, who now attack us, like them. M.—Both senses are good. Bert.

VER. 15. Mountains. The prayer or prediction was not in vain. The enemies of Josaphat, (2 Par. xx. 11. 24. C.) and of David, &c. were destroyed. H.—The trees on the mountains, (M.) or the mountain itself, might burn like Etna and Vesuvius. Geneb.—The destruction of the wicked is thus described. W.

VER. 16. Tempest. During the night, a tempest probably arose, which threw the enemy into confusion, who supposing that the Israelites had broken into the camp, fell upon each other in the dark. C.—S. Paul reminds us of God's indignation, which Christians as well as Jews ought to dread. Heb. xii. 25. 29. Deut. iv. 24. Bert.

VER. 17. Name. This was the desire of the prophet; (S. Jer. C. Bert.) and for this end, God sends afflictions. The impenitent must perish for ever, v. 18. W.

VER. 19. Lord. He who is. Ex. iii. 14. and vi. 3. W.—The name of the Lord is Himself. Bert.

2 HOW lovely are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts!
3 my soul longeth and fainteth for the courts of the Lord.

My heart and my flesh have rejoiced in the living God.

4 For the sparrow hath found herself a house, and the turtle a nest for herself, where she may lay her young ones:

Thy altars, O Lord of hosts, my king and my God.

5 Blessed are they that dwell in thy house, O Lord: they shall praise thee for ever and ever.

6 Blessed is the man whose help is from thee: in his heart he hath disposed to ascend by steps, 7 in the vale of tears, in the place which he hath set.

8 For the lawgiver shall give a blessing, they shall go from virtue to virtue: the God of gods shall be seen in Sion.

9 O Lord, God of hosts, hear my prayer: give ear, O God of Jacob.

10 Behold, O God, our protector: and look on the face of thy Christ.

11 For better is one day in thy courts above thousands.

I have chosen to be an abject in the house of my God, rather than to dwell in the tabernacles of sinners.

PSAL. LXXXIII. VER. 1. Core. See Ps. viii. xli. and lxxx. H.—The Corites were musicians, as well as porters in the temple, 1 Par. xxvi. They here represent the faithful upon earth, (S. Aug. W.) who sigh after the heavenly Sion. David was animated with these sentiments, more than with the desire of revisiting Jerusalem, during the revolt of his son. Bert.—This psalm might have been written by him under the persecution of Saul, (Grot.) or it may refer to the captives. Theod. C.—Yet, at those times, the tabernacle was not subsisting on Sion, as it seems to have been when this beautiful piece was composed. Bert.—The Jews are said to recite it every night, in hopes of seeing Jerusalem rebuilt, and it might very well be used by all Israelites, when they went to celebrate the three great festivals. C.

VER. 3. Fainteth. The eager desire of heaven sometimes deprives people of external satisfaction, and the body partakes of the inward joy. W.—Living. The idols of Babylon have no life. Euseb.

VER. 4. Turtle. Moderns prefer to render “swallows,” without reason. Bochart.—Thy altars. They can rest in the ruins of the temple; (Kimchi. Muis.) but in that supposition, the altars were destroyed. H.—It seems rather that this is an exclamation, (Bert.) which the enraptured psalmist is unable to conclude, giving us to understand that he desired his asylum and place of rest to be near God's altars, (H.) with the angels above. Ia. vi. W.—The faithful soul seeks to dwell in heaven, and in the mean time keeps in the Catholic Church, laying up store of good works. For, out of it, whatever good pagans and heretics may seem to do, by feeding the hungry, &c. as these things are not laid in the nest, they will be trodden under foot, conculcabuntur. S. Aug. W.

VER. 6. In his heart, he hath disposed to ascend by steps, &c. ascensiones in corde suo disposuit. As by steps men ascended to the temple of God, situated on a hill; so the good Christian ascends towards the eternal temple by certain steps of virtue disposed or ordered within the heart. And this whilst he lives as yet in the body, in this vale of tears, the place which man hath set: that is, which he hath brought himself to: being cast out of paradise for his sin. Ch.—There is no standing still. “As the saint daily advances, so the sinner daily decreases.” S. Jer. C.—Heb. of these three following verses is variously rendered. The Sept. are the most ancient, and very exact. Bert.—Heart. “The more you love, the higher will you ascend.” S. Aug.—Heb. “the paths are in his heart. Passing in the vale of tears, they shall place (or deem) it a fountain. The teacher shall be clothed with benediction. They shall go from strength to strength: they shall appear before God in Sion.” S. Jer. H.—Three words occasion the difference: abri, “passing,” means also, “disposing.” Sept. have only used it as a singular, to agree with man, Main, “a fountain,” may have been read maun, “for the place.” Al, means, “the God,” and “to.” Bert.—Amama says the points are different. But we have often shewn the futility of that objection; which might regulate the versions of the Masorets, but could have no influence on those who lived many ages before their invention. They are neglected here by the authors of Prin. disc. “the God almighty shall appear again in Sion.” H.

VER. 7. Tears. Prot. “Baca.” Marg. “of mulberry-trees,” near Jerusalem. Judg. ii. 5. 1 K. v. 23. H.—It was perhaps used proverbially for any dry place. The Lord had promised to relieve the captives with water. Ia. xxxv. 5. &c. C.—Place. The temple or tabernacle, (H.) which the Lord hath appointed. C.

VER. 8. Blessing. Abundance of water, and other necessities, (2 Cor. ix. 6.) as well as (H.) spiritual graces, which help those who continue in the true Church to arrive at the vision of God. W.—Virtue, or “company,” in which manner the Israelites went to the temple. C.—God. And not merely the temple, &c. as here on earth. M.

VER. 10. Christ. Chal. “the Messiah,” (Bert.) through whom we address all (754)

12 For God loveth mercy and truth: the Lord will give grace and glory.

13 He will not deprive of good things them that walk in innocence: O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee.

PSALM LXXXIV.

BENEDIXISTI DOMINE.

The coming of Christ, to bring peace and salvation to man.

1 Unto the end, for the sons of Core, a psalm.

2 LORD, thou hast blessed thy land: thou hast turned away the captivity of Jacob.

3 Thou hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people: thou hast covered all their sins.

4 Thou hast mitigated all thy anger: thou hast turned away from the wrath of thy indignation.

5 Convert us, O God our Saviour: and turn off thy anger from us.

6 Wilt thou be angry with us for ever: or wilt thou extend thy wrath from generation to generation?

7 Thou wilt turn, O God, and bring us to life: and thy people shall rejoice in thee.

8 Shew us, O Lord, thy mercy; and grant us thy salvation.

9 I will hear what the Lord God will speak in me: for he will speak peace unto his people:

our petitions. W.—Protect thy people, (S. Jer.) and raise up the throne of David. C.

VER. 11. Thousands elsewhere, (C.) among sinners. He is so much affected, as to leave the sentence imperfect, v. 4. But the meaning is clear. Temporal must yield to eternal happiness. Eternity is all as one point: it has no division of time, which has a thousand parts. H.—Heaven is represented as a palace, (Bert.) in which the blessed enjoy perpetual felicity. H.—With respect to future rewards, one day in the Church is better than thousands out of it. W. v. 4.—Abject. Prot. “door-keeper.” Marg. “on the threshold.” H.—This was the office of the Corites, (C.) and they prefer it before the finest occupations among sinners. Heb. “the tents of wickedness.” H.—The poorest condition in the Catholic Church, is better than the highest dignities which the wicked can bestow. W.—Indeed poverty, and attention to God's service, is the most secure road to heaven, and gives even present content to those who are actuated by the divine spirit. H.

VER. 12. Truth. He is merciful, and always performs what he has promised: (M.) whereas sinners are noted for cruelty and deceit. Heb. “the Lord God is a sun and shield.” H.—This sense is very good. But Theodotion agrees with the Sept. who must have read differently, unless they have substituted the thing signified for the figure. Bert.—Glory, in the next word, (W.) or even in this. He will restore us to happiness, and cause even our persecutors to esteem us C.—Donator est indulgentie, debitor coronæ. . . promittendo. S. Aug.

VER. 13. Innocence. After the remission of sin. W.

PSAL. LXXXIV. VER. 1. Psalm. It resembles the 66th, and seems to have been sung when the first-fruits were brought to the temple. Most people explain it of the captives delivered, (Theod. Du Pin) and of Christ's redemption. Euseb. S. Aug. C.—David foresaw the afflictions and captivity of his people; and was aware of the miseries of mankind, to be removed by the Messiah alone. Bert.

VER. 2. Blessed. Heb. “taken into favour,” or “hast rendered fruitful.” Judea. C.—God had bestowed many benefits upon his people, rescuing them from the Egyptian bondage, and not punishing them as much as they deserved. W.—Others explain it of the captivity at Babylon, or under the devil. M.—David speaks of the former event by the prophetic spirit, and the latter misfortune was always deplorable, and to be terminated only by the Messiah. Bert.—The redemption of man was prefigured by the liberation of the Jews. D.

VER. 5. Convert. Bring back the remnant of thy people, dispersed through the world. Only a few returned under Cyrus; the rest came back by degrees, principally during the reigns of Hystaspes and Alexander the Great. C. Diss.—While we continue unconverted, we are objects of God's wrath. Bert. Lam. v. 21.—Our Saviour. Sept. “of our salvations.” S. Jer. “our Jesus.” H.—Saviour of mankind, mitigate thy wrath against us. W.

VER. 6. Ever. The Pythagoreans settled their differences before sunset. Plut.—“Cherish not, mortals, an immortal wrath.” Arist. Rhet. ii. 21. H.—As long, O God, as we see not our brethren restored, we shall think that thou art not perfectly reconciled to us. C.

VER. 7. Turn, conversus. The ancient psalters read convertens. “Converting, O God, thou wilt bring us to life,” free us from captivity, and redeem us from sin by Jesus Christ, the conqueror of death. C.—Before their conversion sinners lie dead in guilt. W.—O God, thou wilt again restore us to life. D.

VER. 8. Salvation. By Cyrus, or rather by the Messiah, whose time drew near. C.

VER. 9. Hear. Hitherto the prophet had been distracted by the thought of his people's misery. S. Aug.—In me, is not expressed in Heb.—Heart. Some of the ancients add, “to him.” C.—The Sept. seem to have had a copy different

And unto his saints: and unto them that are converted to the heart.

10 Surely his salvation is near to them that fear him: that glory may dwell in our land.

11 Mercy and truth have met each other: justice and peace have kissed.

12 Truth is sprung out of the earth: and justice hath looked down from heaven.

13 For the Lord will give goodness: and our earth shall yield her fruit.

14 Justice shall walk before him: and shall set his steps in the way.

PSALM LXXXV.

INCLINA DOMINE.

A prayer for God's grace to assist us to the end.

1 A prayer for David himself.

INCLINE thy ear, O Lord, and hear me: for I am needy and poor.

2 Preserve my soul, for I am holy: save thy servant, O my God, that trusteth in thee.

3 Have mercy on me, O Lord, for I have cried to thee all the day. 4 Give joy to the soul of thy servant; for to thee, O Lord, I have lifted up my soul.

5 *For thou, O Lord, art sweet and mild: and plentiful in mercy to all that call upon thee.

6 Give ear, O Lord, to my prayer: and attend to the voice of my petition.

7 I have called upon thee in the day of my trouble: because thou hast heard me.

* Joel ii. 18.

from the present Heb. "But let them not turn again to folly;" (Prot. H.) though the sense is much the same. They may have read lobom lie, "their heart to God," (Bert.) or lobale, (C.) "the heart, Sela;" instead of lecisla, "to folly." H. —Those Israelites who had given way to idolatry, were little inclined to return to their own country, at the invitation of Cyrus. Though Christ came to save all, only men of good will obtained his peace. Lu. ii. 4. Jo. i. 5. C.—There is no peace for the wicked. Is. xlviii. 22. Phil. iv. 9.—Bert. The redemption of the world was here revealed. W. M.

VER. 10. Land. After the captivity, Judea flourished by degrees. But the glory of the second temple consisted in the presence of the Messiah. Agg. ii. 8. C.—Those who were moved with godly fear, embraced the gospel, in order to be saved, while many rejected it through their own fault. W.

VER. 11. Kissed. Or, "embraced," like friends, as the ancient psalters read. The people practised these virtues after the captivity, and more particularly in the Church of Christ. C.—At the time appointed, He reconciled sinners to his Father, having satisfied his justice, (Bert.) and displayed his own mercy. M.—Thus justice is strictly observed, and peace made between God and man. W.—The justice of the Father and the mercy of the Son kiss each other. D. H.

VER. 12. Earth. Good men preserve a clear conscience. W.—Virtues of every description (M.) are become common among God's people, (C.) particularly Christians, though our Saviour may here be styled justice. M.—He was born of a pure virgin. S. Jer. Lyran.—Jam redit et virgo; redeunt saturnia regna. Virg. Ec. iv. H.

VER. 13. Fruit. By imitation, (C.) "we may give birth to Jesus Christ," says S. Jerom. God bestows grace, and so men yield fruit. W.

VER. 14. Him. The holy Baptist shall prepare the way of the Lord. Lyr. Muir.—Heb "each one's justice," &c. Sym.—After the captivity religion shall reign. If we wish to enter heaven, we must follow virtue. C.

PSAL LXXXV. VER. 1. David. He might compose this psalm under any affliction, though prayer is always necessary (Bert.) for any person. W.—Others apply it to Ezechias, (Theodore) the captives, or the Church. C.—Jesus Christ prays during his passion, and foretells his resurrection, and the vocation of the Gentiles. S. Aug.—Needy. Heb. "mild or afflicted." Humility is requisite to pray well, as those who think themselves rich, ask not with fervour. C.—God "inclines his ear if thou dost not lift up thy neck." S. Aug.

VER. 2. I am holy. I am by my office and profession dedicated to thy service, (Ch.) as a Levite, (C.) or a member of the true Church. H.—He may also speak in the person of Christ, who prays for us and in us. D.—Syr. and Arab. read, "thou art good." C.—Our necessities, firm purposes of leading a virtuous life, and confidence in God, move him to shew mercy. W.

VER. 4. Soul. I ardently desire to serve in thy temple. Jer. xxii. 27. A holy importunity, (Lu. xviii. 2. Tert. Apol. 39. C.) and fervour in prayer, (H.) with perseverance, attention, and a sense of God's infinite perfections, are requisite. W.

VER. 7. Heard me. This gives me confidence that thou wilt do it again. H.—Thou art not like senseless idols. C.

8 There is none among the gods like unto thee, O Lord; and there is none according to thy works.

9 All the nations thou hast made shall come and adore before thee, O Lord: and they shall glorify thy name.

10 For thou art great and dost wonderful things: thou art God alone.

11 Conduct me, O Lord, in thy way, and I will walk in thy truth: let my heart rejoice, that it may fear thy name.

12 I will praise thee, O Lord, my God, with my whole heart, and I will glorify thy name for ever:

13 For thy mercy is great towards me: and thou hast delivered my soul out of the lower hell.

14 O God, the wicked are risen up against me, and the assembly of the mighty have sought my soul: and they have not set thee before their eyes.

15 And thou, O Lord, art a God of compassion, and merciful, patient, and of much mercy, and true.

16 O look upon me, and have mercy on me: give thy command to thy servant, and save the son of thy handmaid.

17 Shew me a token for good: that they who hate me, may see, and be confounded, because thou, O Lord, hast helped me and hast comforted me.

PSALM LXXXVI.

FUNDAMENTA EJUS.

The glory of the Church of Christ.

1 For the sons of Core, a psalm of a canticle.

VER. 8. Gods, which have been set up by men; or among angels, &c. (C.) capable of working miracles by an independent power. H.

VER. 9. Name. This was partly verified after the captivity, and fully when the gospel was preached. C.—The Gentiles came by faith, and glorified God by good works. Matt. v. 17. W.

VER. 10. Alone. Sept. Vat. Arab. &c. add, "the great." C. Acts xvii. 24.

VER. 11. Truth. Let me see the justice of thy conduct in suffering the wicked to prosper, (Ps. lxxii. 17.) or let me invariably observe thy holy law, which alone can give me true content.—Rejoice. Heb. as we read at present, "likewise fear," (C.) "unite," (Mont.) or "let my heart be one," solitary, disengaged from all, unicum, (S. Jer.) "to fear," &c. C.—This sense is very good. But yached, means also rejoice. Bert.—Our joy must be mixed with fear. D.

VER. 13. Hell of the damned, (W.) according to the Fathers: or out of captivity and dangers. Bert.—If it be understood of Christ, it must refer to limbo. Bell. M.—It seems equivalent to the lower pit. Pa. lxxxvii. 7. H.—The Jews admit seven regions in hell, (Geneb.) and our theologians four: 1. Of the damned; 2. of unbaptized infants; 3. of purgatory; and 4. of the saints in Abraham's bosom. S. Aug. only mentions the first and last here: but he speaks clearly of purgatory in other places. De Gen. con. Manch. ii. 17. in Pa. vi. C.—David was rescued from the most imminent dangers, and Christ came out of limbo, (Pa. xv. 10. D.) by his own power. H.

VER. 14. Eyes. The Babylonians oppress us most unjustly. C.

VER. 15. True. This title is also applied to Christ, who, of course, is God; since every man is liable to mistake. Rom. iii. 4. Apoc. xix. 1. God authorized Moses and the prophets to address Him, as the psalmist does. Ex. xxxiv. 6. Joel ii. 13. Bert.

VER. 16. Command. Heb. "strength," (H.) to resist the enemy. M.—Order me as thou pleasest: I am entirely devoted to thee from my very birth. Ps. cxv. 16. Restore the throne of David. C.—The prophets frequently thus turn to the Church, the kingdom of the Messiah, who was born of the handmaid of the Lord. W.

VER. 17. Good. Mark me for thy slave, (C.) which will be the highest honour. H.—Give me such a sign as the angel did when he was going to destroy the first-born of Egypt. S. Athan.—By some prodigy convince our oppressors that there is a God. C. Bert.—The resurrection, prefigured by Jonas, was the great proof of Christ and his Church; and this serves either for the conversion or for the condemnation of mankind. See S. Aug. W.

Quod precor eveniet, sunt certa oracula vatum,

Nam Deus optanti prospera signa dedit.—Ovid. 2. de Ponto 1.

—Comforted. S. Cyprian was in sorrow while suffering, but was comforted when crowned. "All the martyrs, with Christ, pray for us." S. Aug. D.

PSALM LXXXVI. VER. 1. Mountains. So far the Jews extend the title, supposing that the subject of this canticle was concerning Sion, Moria, &c. Others think that, thereof, refers to a part of the psalm which has been lost, (C.) or to the temple or city which occupied the prophet's thoughts; or it is sufficiently explained by the word Sion, which follows, as the relative sometimes comes first. D. See Prov. xiv. 3.—This psalm might be composed (Bert.) by

THE foundations thereof are in the holy mountains:
2 The Lord loveth the gates of Sion above all the tabernacles of Jacob.

3 Glorious things are said of thee, O city of God.

4 I will be mindful of Rahab and of Babylon knowing me.

Behold the foreigners, and Tyre, and the people of the Ethiopians, these were there.

5 Shall not Sion say: This man and that man is born in her? and the Highest himself hath founded her.

6 The Lord shall tell in his writings of peoples and of princes, of them that have been in her.

7 The dwelling in thee is as it were of all rejoicing.

PSALM LXXXVII.

DOMINE DEUS SALUTIS.

A prayer of one under grievous affliction: it agrees to Christ in his passion, and alludes to his death and burial.

1 A canticle of a psalm for the sons of Core: unto the end, for Maheleth, to answer, understanding of Eman, the Ezrahite.

some of the Corites, during, or after the captivity, when Jerusalem received strangers within her walls, as a figure of the Christian Church; (Is. ii. 2. Zac. viii. 20. C.) or David (Bert.) might write it when he had removed the ark to Sion, which was to be the seat of the true religion. Ferrand.—Mountains. The apostles and prophets; (Eph. ii. 20. Ch.) on which the Church is founded. H.—The city was styled holy, from the temple built on Moria. Several other mountains were included within its walls. C.

VER. 2. Jacob. Jerusalem belonged to some of his children. Hence the psalmist clearly speaks of something better, even of the Church of Christ, (Bert.) which God has chosen for his spouse, having abandoned the synagogue, (Apoc. xxi. 9. C.) which was only intended to be a pedagogue. H.

VER. 4. Rahab. Egypt, &c. To this Sion, which is the Church of God, many shall resort from all nations. Ch.—Christ gives his apostles command to preach to all. Matt. xxviii. Lu. xxiv. 27. W.—Some have supposed that Rahab, who received the spies, is here put, to signify the Chanaanites. But her name is written Reb; and the word before us is Rahab, (H.) signifying "pride," (M.) or Egypt; particularly the Delta, which is still called Rib. C.—Me. I will receive into my Church not only the Jews, but also the most abandoned nations. H.—Foreigners. Philistines. Ps. lxxxii. 8. M.—Wera. Heb. "this man was born there." H.—In Christ there is no distinction of nations. Rom. x. 12. The Jews will never shew us the completion of this prophecy any where but in the Church. C.—It is spoken of as past, to denote the certainty of the event. W.

VER. 5. Shall not Sion say, &c. The meaning is, that Sion, viz. the Church, shall not only be able to commemorate this or that particular person of renown born in her, but also to glory in great multitudes of people and princes, of her communion; who have been foretold in the writings of the prophets, and registered in the writings of the apostles. Ch.—We might also translate, "shall it not be said of Sion?" W.—Some may have read dicetur, instead of dicet. "Shall not a man say to Sion, yes, a man is born in her?" H.—Sept. have, "mother," μητηρ, which S. Jerom says should be μητι, shall not. Other nations may have produced some great men. But Sion has given birth to the Man God, who was brought into the world in its vicinity, and preached and rose again there. Bert.—She has had many heroes, and has been founded by the Highest. M.—Christ, both God and man, is the builder of his Church, and people, in admiration, recount how many great personages have embraced her communion. W.—The baptist, a man sent by God, announced the Messias; who, according to his humanity, was born of a virgin, among the people of Sion; while, by his divine nature, He was the most High. Carthus. Bell. See Anama.—Sion, or Jerusalem, shall be the mother of an infinite multitude, (Is. xlix. 18.) the metropolis of Judea. Sept. Arab. &c. read, "mother," in this sense. People deemed it an honour to be born there. C.—Christ "became man for our sakes, being God before us. How do we know this? The Lord has told us in the writings of peoples." S. Aug. D.

VER. 6. Writings. He alone can number the inhabitants: or He will enrol all nations as citizens of Sion. C.—The New Testament explains the vocation of the Gentiles, and the incarnation of Christ. Bert.—The Scriptures are the books of all mankind, as well as of princes. All are equally interested in their contents, and ought to become acquainted with them. H.—"The Lord has numbered, writing down peoples: He was born in it for ever." S. Jer.—This refers to Jesus Christ, whose birth is also specified in the preceding verse, (Bert.) as ennobling Sion, far more than that of Homer, Alexander, or Caesar could do any of the pagan cities, Egypt, &c. v. 4. H.—The mystery of the incarnation will shine forth at the last day, as well as the glory of the elect. But these things are already consigned in part to all nations, in the writings of the apostles, (Bert.) and 'n ecclesiastical history. M.—Princes, is not here in Heb. Bert.

VER. 7. The dwelling, &c. Heb. "the singers, like people dancing, (for joy) all my fountains are in thee." S. Jerom reads, "strong ones," and (H.) others, "my thoughts," instead of "fountains;" which shews that they have read differently. Vesharim, may signify and princes, taken from the line above, though of this we ought to have some proofs from MSS. &c. Bert.—The authority of the Sept. may perhaps suffice, (H.) as they have read more correctly mauni,

2 LORD, the God of my salvation: I have cried in the day, and in the night before thee.

3 Let my prayer come in before thee: incline thy ear to my petition.

4 For my soul is filled with evils: and my life hath drawn nigh to hell.

5 I am counted among them that go down to the pit: I am become as a man without help, 6 free among the dead.

Like the slain sleeping in the sepulchres, whom thou rememberest no more: and they are cast off from thy hand.

7 They have laid me in the lower pit: in the dark places, and in the shadow of death.

8 Thy wrath is strong over me: and all thy waves thou hast brought in upon me.

9 Thou hast put away my acquaintance far from me: they have set me an abomination to themselves.

I was delivered up, and came not forth: 10 my eyes languished through poverty.

"habitation," rather than mahyanai, as we have at present. Bert.—If we adopt this sense, (H.) the fountains may denote the nations which shall spring from Sion. Ps. lxvii. 27. Hammond.—All the inhabitants shall be filled with joy in the heavenly Jerusalem. Apoc. xvii. 15. C.—This short, but difficult psalm, allegorically describes the mystery of Christ, and of the Church. Bert.—Catholics may taste pure delights, having peace of conscience, &c. But the blessed enjoy the most perfect content in the Church triumphant. W. M.

PSALM LXXXVII. VER. 1. Maheleth. A musical instrument, or chorus of musicians, to answer one another, (Ch.) in doleful music. W.—See Ps. xli. and lii. M.—Heb. may imply, "on infirmity, (Mont.) or sorrow," from ele. Bert.—The subject is very mournful, and relates to the captives, and to Christ's suffering. C.—Understanding. Or a psalm of instruction, composed by Eman, the Ezrahite, or by David, in his name. Ch.—We read of Eman, a descendant of Juda by Zara, (1 Par. ii. 8. C.) and if he composed this piece, as the Jews and Lightfoot improbably suppose, it must be the most ancient (C.) writing extant. H.—There was a son of Joel, and a seer of king David, of the same name. 1 Par. vi. 38. and xxv. 1. But they are not styled Ezrahites. This person was probably the brother of Ethan, the Ezrahite, who might be young under David, and a man of consummate wisdom under his successor. 3 K. iv. 31. The psalm may express the sentiments of David, or of any other under tribulation, as well as those of Jesus Christ, (Bert.) who speaks herein, (Houbigant) and who expects that we should answer him by an imitation of his virtues. S. Aug. W.—The Ezrahite. Heb. haezrachti. H.—Sept. &c. read incorrectly, "Israelite," (C.) and some copies have "Aitham," or Ethan, as in the following psalm, instead of Eman. H.

VER. 2. Thea. The psalm 21st is nearly similar to this. My prayer is continual. C.

VER. 3. Prayer. It is represented as a person prostrated before God. Homer (Iliad ix.) says, that "supplications are the daughters of Jupiter, lame . . . with the eyes downcast, and following after injuries," which admirably shews the conditions requisite for prayer. C.

VER. 4. Hell. The grave, or captivity. C.—Our Saviour said, My soul is sorrowful unto death. David, Jeremias, or the captives, were not reduced to this extremity. Bert.

VER. 5. Pit. Like a slave confined every night in prison. Ex. xii. 29.

VER. 6. Free. Heb. also "separated" from society. 4 K. xv. 5. and 2 Par. xxvi. 21. C.—Christ, after enduring the greatest miseries was still free. He could resign his life, and take it up again. Jo. x. 18. H.—The Fathers adopt this explanation, which is very striking. C.—Hand. Thou actest as if thou hadst forgotten the corpse in the dust, till the time of the resurrection. S. Aug. Bert.—In the mean while, those who formerly made such a noise in the world, are effaced from the book of life, or from God's register. He is often represented as a great monarch, keeping an account of his troops. C.—He cannot forget any of his creatures, (Bert.) though he may not restore them to life as yet. M.—Christ possessed infinite power among the dead, (W.) who are free from the cares of this world. M.

VER. 7. They. Heb. "thou hast."—Shadows. Heb. "in the depths," seem to have read a, v, and m, in those two places, which are now wanting. Houbig.—The Chal. has, the shadow of death, as well as the Vulg. All this regards Jesus Christ, though it may be applied to any in distress. Bert.—The wicked endeavour to kill the soul by sin, as well as the body. W.—Great difficulties entangle the psalmist; Christ descends into hell. M.

VER. 8. Waves. Of afflictions. Christ bore our iniquities. H.

VER. 9. Delivered up, to prison. Bert.—The disciples abandoned our Saviour, S. Peter, with a curse, denied that he ever knew him, (Mar. xiv. 71. H.) and Judas betrayed him. It is not so easy to explain this of the captives in general though it might refer to the psalmist. C.—At Babylon, the Israelites were not imprisoned, but left to multiply. Jer. xxix. 5. Bert.

VER. 10. Poverty. Or "affliction." Sym.—To thee, for aid, (Ps. xxvii. 2.) or to implore pardon for sinners. Thus Jesus prayed for us on the cross, (C.) with his hands stretched out ready to receive the penitent. H.—Sept. have read rupaim ikimu for ropaim ikimu, "shall the dead arise!" Amama.

All the day I cried to thee, O Lord: I stretched out my hands to thee.

11 Wilt thou shew wonders to the dead? or shall physicians raise to life, and give praise to thee?

12 Shall any one in the sepulchre declare thy mercy: and thy truth in destruction?

13 Shall thy wonders be known in the dark; and thy justice in the land of forgetfulness?

14 But I, O Lord, have cried to thee: and in the morning my prayers shall prevent thee.

15 Lord, why castest thou off my prayer: why turnest thou away thy face from me?

16 I am poor, and in labours from my youth: and being exalted, have been humbled and troubled.

17 Thy wrath hath come upon me: and thy terrors have troubled me.

18 They have come round about me like water all the day: they have compassed me about together.

19 Friend and neighbour thou hast put far from me: and my acquaintance, because of misery.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

MISERICORDIAS DOMINI.

The perpetuity of the Church of Christ, in consequence of the promises of God: which notwithstanding, God permits her to suffer sometimes most grievous afflictions.

1 Of understanding, for Ethan, the Ezrahite.

2 THE mercies of the Lord I will sing for ever.

I will shew forth thy truth with my mouth to generation and generation.

3 For thou hast said: Mercy shall be built up for

VER. 11. Physicians. S. Jer. "will the giants rise again?" H.—These were heroes of great renown. C.—But they were consigned to hell, whence there was no redemption. Job. xxv. 5. Prov. ix.—The author insinuates that if the true adorers be cut off, God's external glory will be diminished. H.—This argument is often pressed. Is. xxxviii. Pa. cxlii.—Rephaim (H.) designates physicians, as well as giants. Gen. i. 2. and 2 Par. xvii. 12. The Talmud sentences "the best of them to hell." Amama.—Their power does not extend to the dead. Bert.—The psalmist prays to be preserved from death, not expecting to be raised again miraculously. W.—Yet Christ contemplates his future glorious resurrection. H.

VER. 13. Of, &c. Sept. "forgotten land." Securos latentes & longa oblivio solant. An. vi. C.—When dead, I shall not be able to sound forth thy praises before men: much less shall those do it, who are confined to the regions of darkness. W.

VER. 15. Prayer. Some copies of the Sept. read "soul," with the Heb. &c. C.—Why dost thou neglect to grant my request, which I urge with all the earnestness of my soul? H.—This may relate to Jesus in the garden. C.—His prayer prevents, or is presented early, (M.) and with the truest fervour to the Lord, who moves us to pray. H.

VER. 16. Exalted. On the cross, or arrived at the years of manhood, (Bert. W.) I have experienced the greatest contradictions. David was brought up in poverty, like our Saviour, and the exaltation of both was attended with great trials. Bert.—The life of Christ was a continual martyrdom. M.—He had all his sufferings in view from his first conception.

VER. 17. Troubled me. The enemy has laid waste the country. This agrees with Christ in his agony. C.—Unhappy the sinner, upon whom the wrath of God remains, (Jo. iii. 36.) and does not merely come; lit. pass. transierunt. Bert.

VER. 19. Misery. Heb. "darkness." Thou hast permitted my friends to abandon me, and hast exposed me to disgrace. C.—They were afraid lest they might be involved in my calamities, (M.) if they appeared in my defence, (H.) or seemed to know me. D.

PSAL. LXXXVIII. VER. 1. Ezrahite. Sept. &c. "Israhite," as in the former psalm. The Jews think that Ethan and Eman lived during the Egyptian bondage. But this psalm was rather composed by one of the captives at Babylon who bewails the destruction of the kingdom of Juda, under Sedecias. After he had detailed the promises of God, (v. 39. C.) David might write it in the person (H.) of Ethan, or Idithun. 1 Par. xxv. and 3 K. iv. 81. W.—Most of the Fathers explain it of Christ's kingdom. See Ps. cxxxi. 11. Jer. xxxiii. 17. C.—The sceptre or administration of affairs was to continue in the tribe of Juda till his coming, as it really did, though kings were not always at the head of the people. Bert.

VER. 2. The. Sept. and Houbig. "Thy mercies, Lord."—Truth. Notwithstanding our distress, I know thou wilt perform thy promises. C.

VER. 3. For thou. Heb. "I." Yet S. Jerom agrees with the Sept. (Bert.) though he is quoted by Calmet as conformable with Aquila, &c. Dixi.—Heaven and earth shall pass away sooner than God's word. H.—If we do not see how his promises are accomplished we must confess our ignorance, or throw the ever in the heavens: thy truth shall be prepared in them.

4 I have made a covenant with my elect: "I have sworn to David my servant: 5 Thy seed will I settle for ever.

And I will build up thy throne unto generation and generation.

6 The heavens shall confess thy wonders, O Lord: and thy truth in the church of the saints.

7 For who in the clouds can be compared to the Lord: or who among the sons of God shall be like to God?

8 God, who is glorified in the assembly of the saints: great and terrible above all them that are about him.

9 O Lord God of hosts, who is like to thee? thou art mighty, O Lord, and thy truth is round about thee.

10 Thou rulest the power of the sea: and appeasest the motion of the waves thereof.

11 Thou hast humbled the proud one, as one that is slain: with the arm of thy strength thou hast scattered thy enemies.

12 ^bThine are the heavens, and thine is the earth: the world and the fulness thereof thou hast founded:

13 the north and the sea thou hast created.

Thabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name:

14 thy arm is with might.

Let thy hand be strengthened, and thy right hand be exalted: 15 justice and judgment are the preparation of thy throne.

^a 2 Kings vii. 12.—^b Gen. i. 2.

blame on the sins of the nation: but never call in question the divine mercy. C.—Truth. I will perform what I have promised to thee. M.—The apostles, represented by the heavens, have, by their preaching, established the Church for ever. W.—In them, is not in the Sept. S. Aug. &c. C.—Houbigant would remove Dixisti, "for thou," &c. to v. 4. H.

VER. 4. Elect. Abraham, and the whole body of the people to whom the Messias had been promised. David was assured that he should spring from his family, v. 52. C.

VER. 5. Generation. David's posterity occupied the throne for a long time, (H.) and subsisted till the coming of Christ; so that if any conqueror of that family had then appeared, the Jews would not have hesitated to admit, that this prediction was fulfilled. It is their misfortune to understand the text in this sense, whereas God spoke of the spiritual kingdom of his Son, which is to be perpetual. They can never answer the argument which the Fathers urged in the 4th century, and which has attained fresh strength from the longer duration of misery under which the royal family of David has been depressed. It is plain, that it has enjoyed no power from many ages, and as God's word is invariable, He could not have promised an everlasting earthly dominion. Bert.—The temporal kingdom of David decayed at the captivity, and is now wholly destroyed. But Christ was of this family, and established the Church, his spiritual kingdom, which shall continue unto the end. W.—His ministers exercise a power, which is founded on truth and justice. See 2 K. vii. 9. C.

VER. 6. Saints. These alone, (H.) the heavens or angels, worthily proclaim thy praises. H.—Preachers announce the same in the Church, (S. Aug.) "the communion of saints," as none are found out of her society. H.

VER. 7. Sons. Angels (C.) to God the Son. None is like him. S. Jer.—Lucifer fell by aiming at it. I will be like to the Most High. Is. xiv. 14.

VER. 8. About. God eclipses every created beauty. H.—The angels themselves tremble before him. C.

VER. 9. Truth. He often praises this attribute, as if to excuse himself for asking, why God had debased the throne of David? C.—God cannot be divested of this perfection. D.

VER. 10. Power. Heb. "pride." Thou canst raise a storm, or restore a calm. C.

VER. 11. Proud one. Heb. Rahab, Egypt or Pharo, Pa. lxxxvi. 4. Is. li. 9. C. He alludes to the plagues inflicted on the Egyptians, &c. W.

VER. 13. Sea. Heb. "the right," (C.) which here denotes the south, (Ps. cvi. 3. M.) as Hermon may do the east, (D.) with reference to Thabor, which lies to the west, though this seems unusual. C. Bert.—The north, &c. more probably refers to the limits of the promised land, from Libanus to the Indian or Mediterranean sea; and from Hermon, on the north-eastern part, to Thabor, on the west. H.—These two mountains were particularly fertile, and seemed to rejoice. Bert.—They "shall praise thy name," ἐμφησυσουσιν. Syn. H.

VER. 14. Might. Others can make no resistance with all their armies.

VER. 15. Preparation. Heb. "basis."—Face. Like guards. M.—He extols the mercy, and still more the fidelity of God. C.—Whether he punish, or reward, all tends to promote his glory, and is perfectly just. W.

Mercy and truth shall go before thy face: 16 blessed is the people that knoweth jubilation.

They shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance: 17 and in thy name they shall rejoice all the day, and in thy justice they shall be exalted.

18 For thou art the glory of their strength: and in thy good pleasure shall our horn be exalted.

19 For our protection is of the Lord, and of our king the holy one of Israel.

20 Then thou spakest in a vision to thy saints, and saidst: I have laid help upon one that is mighty, and have exalted one chosen out of my people.

21 *I have found David, my servant: with my holy oil I have anointed him.

22 For my hand shall help him: and my arm shall strengthen him.

23 The enemy shall have no advantage over him: nor the son of iniquity have power to hurt him.

24 And I will cut down his enemies before his face; and them that hate him I will put to flight.

25 And my truth and my mercy shall be with him: and in my name shall his horn be exalted.

26 And I will set his hand in the sea; and his right hand in the rivers.

27 He shall cry out to me: Thou art my Father: my God, and the support of my salvation.

28 And I will make him my first-born, high above the kings of the earth.

29 I will keep my mercy for him for ever: and my covenant faithful to him.

* 1 Kings xvi. 1. and 12. Acts xiii. 22.

VER. 16. Jubilation. Heb. "how to sound the trumpet," which was the office of priests. They marched near the ark, as it were under the eyes of God. C.—Those who consider, and adore the ways of Providence, are blessed, (W.) and secure. M.

VER. 18. Horn. Power and kingdom. W.—He speaks like a virtuous Levite, who acknowledges that all good came from the Lord. H.—He cannot speak of temporal blessings alone. Bert.

VER. 19. Israel. The Lord our king, (1 K. viii. 7.) will protect us, (H.) or He will defend our King David, and his posterity, as he then promised to him, v. 5. 20. These verses may be thus connected, as the psalmist had been led to praise the wonderful works of God, and now returns to his promises. Bert.

VER. 20. Then, may relate to a distant time, when God chose Israel. M.—Saints. Heb. "merciful ones." Samuel, or Nathan, Sept. Arab. &c. have "sons." The rest read "saints." S. Jer.—People. As Moses had written. Deut. xvii. 15. C.—This regards David, as a figure of the Messias, (Lu. i. 32. Ezec. xxiv. 23. Bert.) in whom it was more fully verified, 2 K. v. Acts xiii. 22. W.

VER. 21. Oil. Sept. Vat. has, "mercy," and is followed by S. Jerom in Ezec. lv. 3. C.—But is a mistake, idea being put for David. Bert.

VER. 23. Him. The Jews contributed to the glory of Christ, and the redemption of mankind. The enemies of David fell before his feet. C.

VER. 26. Rivers. Of his kingdom there shall be no end. Lu. i. 33. Zac. ix. 10. H.—Every nation shall adore him. David extended his conquests over all Arabia, and from the Pelusium to the Euphrates. C.—In this sense, the text may be applied to him, though it belongs more to Christ. M.

VER. 27. Father. We never find that David used this title; (D.) but Christ did frequently, inasmuch that the Jews were convinced, that he claimed the divine nature: though, as man, he called God his support. Bert. Is. lxiii. 16.

VER. 28. First-born. Or favourite. Ex. iv. 22. and Jer. xxxi. 9. What king could be preferred to David for piety, riches, &c.? Yet he was only a feeble type of our Saviour, who surpasses all kings, as much as the reality does a shadow. C. Col. i. 15. Rom. viii. 29. Apoc. i. 5. Bert.—High. Heb. helyon, which is one of the titles of God, and belongs to Christ, (H.) who is King of kings, and heir of all. Heb. i. M.

VER. 30. Heaven. This can only be verified in Christ, who rules over all, and gives power to his Church unto the end. The family of David has been confounded with the rest of the nation for near 2,000 years. C.—The temporal dominion of those princes has ceased in Jechonias, (D.) like that of other monarchs; so that God had in view a different throne, (Bert. v. 5.) and the Messias, who would render the kingdom of David perpetual, (M.) in a spiritual sense. H.

VER. 31. And if. God foresaw the prevarications of the Israelites and Christians: But he speaks this to shew their free-will, and that he would treat them as children, (Bert.) and not with the utmost severity, (C.) unless they proved obstinate. 2 K. vii. 14. H.—Some shall always continue faithful, and shall be glorified, while the bad shall be cast away. S. Aug.—Christ will never lose his Church. W.

30 And I will make his seed to endure for evermore: and his throne as the days of heaven:

31 And if his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments:

32 If they profane my justices; and keep not my commandments:

33 I will visit their iniquities with a rod: and their sins with stripes.

34 But my mercy I will not take away from him: nor will I suffer my truth to fail.

35 Neither will I profane my covenant: and the words that proceed from my mouth I will not make void.

36 Once have I sworn by my holiness: I will not lie unto David: 37 his seed shall endure for ever.

38 *And his throne as the sun before me: and as the moon perfect for ever, and a faithful witness in heaven.

39 But thou hast rejected and despised: thou hast been angry with thy anointed.

40 Thou hast overthrown the covenant of thy servant: thou hast profaned his sanctuary on the earth.

41 Thou hast broken down all his hedges; thou hast made his strength fear.

42 All that pass by the way have robbed him: he is become a reproach to his neighbours.

43 Thou hast set up the right hand of them that oppress him: thou hast made all his enemies to rejoice.

44 Thou hast turned away the help of his sword: and hast not assisted him in battle.

* 2 Kings vii. 16.

VER. 34. From him. David. Many ancient psalters read, "from them." C.—God, by degrees, punished the Jews, by depriving them of their kings; though the family of David was preserved, and some share of power remained till Christ's coming. Bert.

VER. 36. Holiness. Or by myself, having nothing greater. Heb. vi. 18. C.—I will not. Lit. "if I lie," which is a Heb. idiom, (Bert.) implying as much, W.—I have sworn irrecoverably, once for all. M.

VER. 38. Witness. Which may refer to the throne, or to the sun, (C.) or to the rainbow. Bert. D.—As long as the stars subsist, so long shall his throne be established. C.—The Church shines like the sun, and is easily known. Bert.—God, (Euseb.) or Christ, attests the promises. S. Jer. Is. lv. 4. Apoc. i. 5.—The rainbow was assigned as a memorial, that the world should no more be drowned. Gen. ix. The other covenants made by God have no less stability. H.—Christian souls may shine in virtue, like the sun, or full moon, (W.) particularly (H.) after the resurrection, when they will be perfect, and not liable to change. S. Aug.

VER. 39. Rejected. In all kingdoms, there are some interruptions, and God did not fail in his promises. He still maintained the sceptre in Juda, though not with the same splendour at all times. Bert.—Angry. Or Lit. "hast deferred." Distulisti. H.—The Israelites ardently wished for the coming of the Messias. The psalmist here contrasts the present forlorn condition of the people with the preceding promises; as 1 bewails the fate of Sedecias, who was slain at a distance from home. Distulisti. See Ps. lxxvii. 21. and lxiii. C.—Thou hast been angry with thy Christ, (king Sedecias) and even with our Redeemer, in some sense, (C.) as He was treated thus, in consequence of the sins of mankind Euseb. &c.—The promises were not fulfilled in David, that we may look farther. Solomon seemed to answer all his expectations. But he fell, and God had not him but Christ in view. The kingdom and sacrifices of the Jews are no more. Christ was not taken from them, but deferred. Some Jews and many Gentiles believed in him, v. 47. &c. S. Aug. W.—Anointed. Thou hast despised us, and delayed the coming of the Messias. We cannot accuse the psalmist of impatience, as a late commentator has done, his words being dictated by the Holy Ghost. He expostulates with love and confidence, (Bert.) and comforts himself with the thought, that the coming of the Messias is only delayed. W.

VER. 40. Overthrown the covenant, &c. All this seems to relate to the time of the captivity of Babylon, in which, for the sins of the people and their princes, God seemed to have set aside for a while the covenant he had made with David. Ch.—Yet he did not in effect, v. 39. H.—Sanctuary. The temple, (Theod.) or according to the Heb. "the diadem," by which the king was "set apart" from the common people, and rendered sacred. Ps. cxxxi. 18. Bert.—The psalmist speaks in the person of the weak, who complained, (W.) that the kingdom was a prey to invaders, and the Church oppressed by infidels. W. T.

VER. 41. Fear. All his forts can afford no refuge. The country is like an abandoned vineyard. The Assyrians and Chaldees have ruined it, and the neighbouring nations of Samaria and Edom take possession of it. C.—Thou 45 Thou hast made his purification to cease: and thou hast cast his throne down to the ground.

46 Thou hast shortened the days of his time: thou hast covered him with confusion.

47 How long, O Lord, turnest thou away unto the end? shall thy anger burn like fire?

48 Remember what my substance is: for hast thou made all the children of men in vain?

49 Who is the man that shall live, and not see death: that shall deliver his soul from the hand of hell?

50 Lord, where are thy ancient mercies, according to what thou didst swear to David in thy truth?

51 Be mindful, O Lord, of the reproach of thy servants (which I have held in my bosom) of many nations:

52 Wherewith thy enemies have reproached, O Lord; wherewith they have reproached the change of thy anointed.

53 Blessed be the Lord for evermore. So be it, so be it.

PSALM LXXXIX.

DOMINE REFUGIUM.

A prayer for the mercy of God; recounting the shortness and miseries of the days of man.

1 A prayer of Moses, the man of God.

a 2 Kings vii. 11.

leadest on their armies, and renderest our efforts useless. M.—This conduct of God proceeded from mercy. This severe chastisement awakened his people, who after the captivity were more tractable. Chal. Bert. C.

VER. 45. Cease. The priests are absent; and he cannot be purified in the temple.—Purification may here denote the royal ornaments. Pagn. C. M.

VER. 46. Time. Heb. &c. "youth." S. Jer. H.—Joachim was only seventeen years old when he came to the throne, which he occupied three months. Amama.—The four last kings of Juda reigned but a short while, and most of them came to an untimely end. Instead of χρῆνον, the Rom. Sept. S. Aug. &c. read σπῆνον, "of his throne," or reign. C.—The Vulg. seems more natural, as the throne of David had subsisted above 400 years, so that it was not overturned in "its youth," or commencement, though the number of ages, promised to it, seemed now to be abridged. Bert.

VER. 47. How long. Here the third part, or the prayer of the psalmist, begins. C.—Away. Another interrogation might then commence, "shall it be unto the end?" H.—In this prayer he foretells that God will regard our weakness, and preserve his Church. W.

VER. 48. Remember what. Heb. ani, "I." As this seems odd, Houbigant substitutes, adni, "Lord." Bert.—Substance is. That Christ will assume our nature, (S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xvii. 9. 11.) or "how long I shall live." Mont.—Even the world "passes" like a shadow. 1 Cor. vii. Amama.—"Be mindful of me from the depth: else why hast thou in vain created the sons of men?" S. Jer. H.—In vain. To spend thy days in misery? or rather, "are not all created subject to vanity?" If thou do not succor us, we shall presently perish, and who will glorify thy name on earth? Ps. cxliii. 4. C.—Will thy providence take no care of us? Bert.—If the Messiah come not, we cannot be saved, and we shall appear to have been created in vain. M.

VER. 50. David. He was a man according to thy own heart, and thy promises to him were absolute. Ethan speaks not of the other kings, or of the people, who might have justly irritated the Lord. He excuses their failings, by the consideration of their mortal and frail nature, v. 49. C.

VER. 51. Nations. Who continually insult us, and blaspheme thy name. H.—This fills me with the most poignant grief. C.—Which, &c. Aquila and S. Jer. "For I have carried in my bosom all the iniquities of peoples." If we should read kul, "voice," for col, "all," which seems useless before rabim, "many," (II.) we might translate, "I bore in my bosom the discourse of many peoples." C.

VER. 52. Wherewith. Or "because," quod. H.—Change. Heb. also, "the supplanting or retardment." Why does not your Messiah come? How are your kings fallen! though God had promised them an eternal kingdom! Boast no more of his power or veracity. This impious language disturbs me. C.—They deride the ignominious life of the Messiah. Euseb.—Seleucias had "exchanged" the promised crown for iron, which was a cutting reproach. Bert.—Christ appeared to have left his people. W.—Infidels objected, that David's piety was ill requited by God, and that the anointed had made a bad exchange; ἀντάλλαγμα. Matt. xvi. 26. M.

VER. 53. So be it. Some suppose, that these words were added by the collector of the psalms into five books. C.—Here the third ends. H.—The psalmist loses not hope, under adversity. Bert.—He begins and finishes with God's praises. C.—We beg that all may praise thee, O Lord. W.—This is the only reply which he makes to the sarcasms of infidels, being convinced of God's providence. C.

PSAL. LXXXIX. VER. 1. God. This characterizes the Jewish legislator.

L ORD, thou hast been our refuge from generation to generation.

2 Before the mountains were made, or the earth and the world were formed; from eternity and to eternity thou art God.

3 Turn not man away to be brought low: and thou hast said: Be converted, O ye sons of men.

4 For a thousand years in thy sight are as yesterday which is past.

And as a watch in the night, 5 things that are counted nothing, shall their years be.

6 In the morning man shall grow up like grass, in the morning he shall flourish and pass away: in the evening he shall fall, grow dry and wither.

7 For in thy wrath we have fainted away: and are troubled in thy indignation.

8 Thou hast set our iniquities before thy eyes: our life in the light of thy countenance.

9 For all our days are spent; and in thy wrath we have fainted away.

Our years shall be considered as a spider: 10 the days of our years in them are threescore and ten years.

But if in the strong they be fourscore years: and what is more of them, is labour and sorrow.

b Eccli. xviii. 8.

Bert. Deut. xxxiii. 1. D.—David composed it in his name, (M.) or it bears some analogy with his writings. S. Jerom maintains, that he was the author of the nine following psalms, (C.) which have no title in Heb. T.—But S. Aug. thinks they would then have formed a part of the pentateuch. C.—The life of man was longer in the days of Moses than seventy or eighty years. Bell. v. 10.—Moses cannot be the author of the 94th and 95th psalms. W.—In the xcvi. 6. Samuel is mentioned, and it is not necessary to have recourse to the prophetic spirit. One of the descendants of Moses, during the captivity, may have been the author, (C.) or David may have predicted that event. H.

VER. 2. Formed. Heb. "brought forth." Job xxxviii. 8. C.—Here Origen improperly concluded the sentence. S. Jer. Ep. ad Cypr.—God, is not in Sept. Syr. or ancient Latin psalters. C.—At signifies both God, and not, and seems to be twice explained in the Vulg. as Heb. omits not, v. 3. H.—The sentence would be very striking, if God were left out, as it is done by Houbigant. The eternity of matter is refuted by this text. Bert. W.—God's eternity is contrasted with man's short life. C.—New gods must of course be false. M.—Plato asserted, that "the creator of all must be unbegotten and eternal." Plut. Conviv. viii.

VER. 3. Turn not man away, &c. Suffer him not quite to perish from thee, since thou art pleased to call upon him to be converted to thee. Ch.—God wills not the death of the sinner. W.—Give him grace not to yield to his base passions. S. Aug.—Heb. "thou humblest man," (H.) that he may enter into himself. C.

VER. 4. For, &c. This thought naturally tends to convert the sinner.—Watch. Consisting of three hours, (Bert.) which were of unequal length, according to the seasons. C.—A thousand years seem not so long to God. H.—What then must be the short life of man? See Job. vii. 8. C.—None ever lived one thousand years. Yet what would that be, compared with eternity? W.

VER. 5. Their years be. Heb. "thou striketh, (C.) or inundatest them: they are a dream." But our version is accurate. Bert.

VER. 6. Fall. Heb. "it is cut down and dries." The heat of the climate caused the flowers to decay very soon. Is. xl. 6. Man's youth touches on old age. C.—The present moment is all we can call our own. Bert.—"A young man may die soon: an old man cannot live long," says an English proverb. W.

VER. 8. Life. Lit. "age." Thou clearly discernest all our proceedings. H.—Man is condemned for Adam's sin. The Israelites who were fit for arms, and gave way to murmuring, were sentenced to die in the desert. He may allude to this event. Bert.—Heb. may signify also, "our hidden things," or "youth," (C.) or "mistakes," (Houbig.) or "negligences." S. Jer.—From these we should always pray to be delivered. Ps. xxiv. 7. H.—Sin occasions the shortness of life, (W.) as man was created to be immortal. H.—Before the deluge, men lived indeed longer. M.

VER. 9. As a spider. As frail and weak as a spider's web; and miserable withal, whilst, like a spider, we spend our bowels in weaving webs to catch flies. Ch.—Meditabuntur is here used in a passive sense. T.—Heb. "we have spent our years like one speaking a word." S. Jer.—When he has done, the sound is no more: so their memory has perished with a sound. Ps. ix. 8. H.—Heb. Chal. &c. do not mention the spider: Yet it seems to have been originally in the text, as it is recognised by the Syr. Sept. and the other Greek interpreters, and makes the sense more complete. C.—The transcribers might more easily omit than the Sept. &c. could insert this word. Bert.

VER. 10. In them. Years, (C.) "in the world." Chal. "altogether." Sym. years. This was the usual term of man's life in David's time, (H.) and about the captivity, when this was written. Many lived above one hundred years when

For mildness is come upon us : and we shall be corrected.

11 Who knoweth the power of thy anger, and for thy fear 12 can number thy wrath?

So make thy right hand known : and men learned in heart in wisdom.

13 Return, O Lord, how long ? and be intreated in favour of thy servants.

14 We are filled in the morning with thy mercy : and we have rejoiced, and are delighted all our days.

15 We have rejoiced for the days in which thou hast humbled us : for the years in which we have seen evils.

16 Look upon thy servants and upon their works : and direct their children.

17 And let the brightness of the Lord, our God, be upon us : and direct thou the works of our hands over us ; yea, the work of our hands do thou direct.

PSALM XC.

QUI HABITAT.

The just is secure under the protection of God.

1 The praise of a canticle for David.

HE that dwelleth in the aid of the Most High, shall abide under the protection of the God of Heaven.

Moses wrote. C.—Yet this proves nothing, as there are still instances of equal longevity, though it is true, that people in general seldom live above seventy, or eighty, or if they do, their days are a burden to them. The same might be the case under Moses. He probably here alludes to those warriors, who were cut off in the wilderness, few of whom would survive 80. Bert.—The author of Ecclesiasticus, (xviii. 8.) gives one hundred, for the utmost limits of life. The pagan sages speak in the same style as the psalmist. C.—Strong. Sept. “in dominion.” But here it means in a vigorous constitution. Bell.—Princes live no longer than others. Heb. and Vulg. may be “the prime, or most of them,” as even a great part of the time before seventy, as well as after, (H.) is usually spent in misery. Gen. xlvii. 9. C.—Mildness. God’s mildness corrects us : in as much as he deals kindly with us, in shortening the days of this miserable life ; and so weaning our affections from all its transitory enjoyments, and teaching us true wisdom. Ch.—Heb. “we pass quickly and fly away, (S. Jer.) like birds of passage, (C.) or “it is cut down soon,” (Mont.) “in silence,” (Drusius) tacitisque senescimus annis. H.—S. Jerom wonders, that the Sept. should have translated as they have done : But they are followed by Theodotion, and the Sept. edit. who may have had different copies, equally good. Bert.—Corrected (corripimur) or “hurried away.” Geneb.—But this is not the sense of the Sept. Amama.—“We grow tired.” Houbig.—It is a mercy of God to shorten men’s lives, (M.) as many would sin more, if they had a probability of continuing upon earth. W.

VER. 11. Anger! God must punish actual sin severely, since he thus condemns mankind on account of original sin. W.

VER. 12. Thy right hand. Your Messias, to liberate and instruct us. S. Aug.—“Make us know how to number our days thus, and we shall come to thee with a wise heart.” S. Jer. Eccli. vii. 10. H.—Sept. have read inimoc for yamenu, “our days.” Amama.—Make us truly wise, (Sa.) or acquainted with teachers of truth. Bellar. M.

VER. 14. We are. Heb. “Fill us.” Mont.—But the psalmist feels interiorly, that his petition has been granted. Bert.—The prospect of a glorious immortality fills us with hope in proportion to our sufferings for the truth. W.

VER. 17. Yea, the work. Each in particular. Sept. Rom. &c. omit this sentence, which Houbigant improperly deems useless. Bert.—Charity must direct all. S. Aug. W.

PSAL. XC. VER. 1. David. Sept. add, “it has no title in Heb.” and hence the Jews refer it to the preceding author, with S. Jer. &c. But this rule is very uncertain. C. Bert.—Some suppose that Moses composed it when he led the Israelites out of Egypt, or in the wilderness ; while others think that it is the work of David under some imminent danger. The Fathers apply it to Jesus Christ. Yet it may be considered simply as a moral instruction, (C.) superior in elegance to any Greek or Latin poem. Muis.—Ad. Heb. “secret place.” Of heaven. Is not in Heb. shaddai, which means, (H.) “the almighty self sufficient, or destroying God.” C.—We must keep close to God by mental prayer, if we would enjoy the divine protection. S. Greg. Mor. vii. 7. Bert.

VER. 3. Delivered me. Heb. and Sept. “shall deliver thee.” Yet the Alex. copy has me. H.—The psalmist addresses his own soul. Bert.—Word, verbo : sometimes find “sword,” printed by mistake. Heb. dabar, signifies “word, thing, pestilence, &c.” H.—The devil employs human respect to draw many into his nets. S. Aug. Bert.—Neither subtle craft, nor the cruelty of tyrants will disturb those who trust in Providence. W.

VER. 4. With. Sept. “upon.” S. Aug. “between,” as the Lord carried Israel. Dent. xxxii. 11. C.—Heb. “he will cover thee with his feathers,” (H.) like an eagle. M.

VER. 5. Shield. God’s fidelity, or word, affords the best protection. Prov. xxx. 5. C.—Having the spirit of faith, a man is secure. But he whose heart is hardened, (Bert.) is covered with the buckler of God’s affliction, (Lam. iii. 64. H.) abuses every thing, and seems bewitched with self-love. Gal. i. Bert.—

2 He shall say to the Lord : Thou art my protector and my refuge : my God, in him will I trust.

3 For he hath delivered me from the snare of the hunters : and from the sharp word.

4 He will overshadow thee with his shoulders : and under his wings thou shalt trust.

5 His truth shall compass thee with a shield : thou shalt not be afraid of the terror of the night.

6 Of the arrow that flieth in the day, of the business that walketh about in the dark : of invasion, or of the noon-day devil.

7 A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand : but it shall not come nigh to thee.

8 But thou shalt consider with thy eyes : and shalt see the reward of the wicked.

9 Because thou, O Lord, art my hope : thou hast made the Most High thy refuge.

10 There shall no evil come to thee : nor shall the scourge come near thy dwelling.

11 *For he hath given his angels charge over thee : to keep thee in all thy ways.

* Matt. iv. 29. Luke iv. 10.

Night. Devils, spectres, &c. (Cant. iii. 7. C.) and treacherous insinuations, that people are not bound to confess the truth, in time of danger. W.

VER. 6. Day. Neither open attacks, nor unforeseen accidents prevail. C.—Business. Heb. dabar, “thing,” v. 8. “the pestilence.” S. Jer. H.—The Hebrews suppose, that one angel presides over death in the daytime, and another during the night ; or that various demons send maladies at these different times.—Invasion. Sept. and old Italic, have, “ruin.”—S. Jer. after Aquila, “from the bite of him who rageth, δαριλγερως, at noon. Ketob, (H.) according to an ancient tradition of the Jews, denotes one of the bolder devils, who attacks in open day, and seeks no aid from nocturnal craft. Geneb. The psalmist may allude to those popular notions, (Theod. S. Jer.) which were prevalent among the pagans. Theocrit. Idyl. i. Lucan iii. C.—Thou shalt fear no danger of the day or night, (Bellar.) nor any which disturbs the life of man. Scutiger, ep. i. p. 95.—This author mistakes, when he supposes that Ketob is rendered devil. Amama.—He might also ask how the Chal. Aquila, and Symmachus came to discover, that the devil is here mentioned, as well as the Sept. ? Bert.—These seem to have read ussod, “and the devil,” instead of issud, “from destruction which ravages,” (Amama) vantabil. Mont. H.—But allowing that the Sept. &c. are accurate, what is meant by this devil ? S. Peter seems to explain the idea, when he exhorts us to sobriety. 1 Pet. v. 8. Bert.—Violent temptations of sloth, (S. Athan.) or impurity, (Theod.) or the persecutions against the faithful, may be meant. Four different sorts of attacks seem to be designated. 1. Such as assault the ignorant with the fears of the night, tempting them to secure their temporal estates, while they think not of eternal woe impending. 2. Others are attacked with the arrow in the day, and threatened with death, which they know they ought rather to endure, than abandon their faith. 3. The business, &c. intimates some grievous but latent temptation, as when the faithful are persuaded to take some unlawful oath. 4. But the greatest and most manifest attack, is styled, invasion, &c. when persecutors assail those who adhere to the true faith with a succession of torments, and subtle arguments, which have been the occasion of the fall of many, who had resisted the former attacks. Yet none of these yield, but by their own fault, trusting in themselves, and not in God. S. Aug. W.—Noon day. Grotius explains this of the heat of the sun, which is very dangerous to travellers in Palestine. C.

VER. 7. Full. Or “attack, . . . but shall not come nigh to thee.” Euseb. C.—How great soever may be the number of thy adversaries, they shall not be able to do thee any harm. They shall fall at thy feet, and their dart shall not reach thee. H.—More forsake God in prosperity, than under adversity. W.

VER. 9. Because. Saying, Thou, &c. W. v. 1. C.—High. Heb. helyon is a title of God, (C.) not the adjective to refuge, (Bert.) as Chal. Aquila, &c. have taken it. “Thou hast placed thy dwelling most high.” So that there, &c. v. 10. It is evident that the following promises relate not to the Lord, (C.) but to the just man. Prot. “because thou hast made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the most high thy habitation.” This transposition is not authorized by the text. Z.

VER. 10. Scourge. Aquila has Αφθ, “the leprosy,” (C.) or any stroke of distress. H.—What the saints have suffered were not real evils, and they will be amply rewarded in heaven. They never complain, having God with them, (C. v. 15. H.) and his holy angels. M.

VER. 11. Angels. Many seem to be assigned to the just, to whom S. Hil. &c. would restrain this privilege. But it is more generally believed, that each person has an angel guardian. This was the opinion even of the pagans. Porphy. Ap. ii. S. Clem. Strom. v. C.—To keep. Instead of this, the tempter substituted and, (Matt. iv. 6.) finding it would not answer his purpose, (H.) and shewed that the question was about walking, and not about precipitating oneself. S. Bern. ser. xv. p. 90.—To attempt such unusual courses, is the way of Lucifer, (W.) and tempting God, as our Saviour replied. Bert.—From the fact 12 In their hands they shall bear thee up: lest thou dash thy foot against a stone.

13 Thou shalt walk upon the asp and the basilisk: and thou shalt trample under foot the lion and the dragon.

14 Because he hath hoped in me, I will deliver him: I will protect him, because he hath known my name.

15 He shall cry to me, and I will hear him: I am with him in tribulation, I will deliver him, and I will glorify him.

16 I will fill him with length of days; and I will shew him my salvation.

PSALM XCI.

BONUM EST CONFITERI.

God is to be praised for his wondrous works.

1 A psalm of a canticle on the sabbath-day.

2 IT is good to give praise to the Lord: and to sing to thy name, O Most High.

3 To shew forth thy mercy in the morning, and thy truth in the night.

4 Upon an instrument of ten strings, upon the psalter: with a canticle, upon the harp.

5 For thou hast given me, O Lord, a delight in thy doings: and in the works of thy hands I shall rejoice.

6 O Lord, how great are thy works! thy thoughts are exceedingly deep.

7 The senseless man shall not know: nor will the fool understand these things.

of lies, heretics have learnt how to curtail and misapply the holy Scriptures. H.—God has highly favoured man, by intrusting him to the care of these sublime ministers of his court, (S. Bern.) and surely it is lawful for us to implore their assistance, as we may apply to our fellow-creatures for redress in our temporal necessities. To refuse to do so, on the plea that we expect all immediately from God, would be going contrary to his appointment. Else why has God given them for our guardians, since He could have done all without them? In vain is it objected, that this invocation is a religious worship. It may be so styled, because they are blessed, and help us to obtain salvation. But we only honour in them the gifts of God. Bert.—They protect us by his ordinance, (W.) and the very form of praying, shews in what light we regard them. Who durst say to God, pray for us? M.

VER. 12. Stone. He alludes to nurses. C.—All these expressions are metaphorical, to shew the assistance given by angels, to remove the obstacles which impede our progress towards heaven. H.

VER. 13. Asp. Which kills in eight hours time at farthest, making the blood congeal.—Basilisk. "The little king" of serpents. What is related of it seems fabulous. Pliny viii. 21. Solin xxx. C.—Yet there might be some species known by this name, possessing fascinating qualities like the rattle-snake. Bert.—The sight of it alone could not destroy a man; otherwise how could any account of it have been given? Heb. asael means a lion in Job, (Bert.) and phathen, "an asp," (C.) or basilisk. Bochart.—Dragon. Crocodile. C.—The most noxious animals, both of sea and land, shall prove quite harmless to the true servants of God, when he intends to prove the truth of his religion, as he did in the cases of Daniel, and of the disciples of Christ. Mar. xvi. If they be suffered to kill the saints here, it is in order that they may be glorified in heaven, ver. 15. H.—The devil is styled an asp, &c. Bert.—He sometimes attacks the Church, by craft, and at other times by open violence. But she remains secure, (S. Aug.) and her children can only be preserved by continuing in her bosom. To know which is the true Church; "see, says S. Greg. (Mor. xx. 29.) which are the most recent sects." Bert.—Methodists may now wrest this honour from the rest of Protestants. H.

VER. 14. Because. God speaks the rest. W.—Ennon. In practice. C.

VER. 15. Tribulation. The just are not exempt from it.—Glorify him, with eternal salvation.

VER. 16. Days. Eternity alone can satisfy the heart.—Salvation. Or Jesus, who promised to manifest himself. Jo. xiv. 21. 25. Bert.—Abraham saw him star off; Simeon at hand. Jo. viii. 56. Lu. ii. 30. God insures the just a long life in this world, and an eternal one in the next. C.—That life is long enough which ends in happiness. H.

PSAL. XCI. VER. 1. Day. The Jews say, that Adam sung this at his creation, (Chal.) or that it refers to the reign of the Messias, which shall last one thousand years after this world is ended. Kimchi.—Others think it is a thanksgiving after the defeat of Sennacherib, (Ven. Bede.) or Absalom. Ferrand.—It might be sung by the sons of Moses, who expected to be shortly delivered from Babylon, (C.) or by the people on the sabbath, (Bert.) though many of the Fathers think, that this word denotes "the repose of the life to come." The occasion or author of this psalm cannot be clearly ascertained. C.—When we enjoy rest from labour, we ought particularly to praise God's works. W.

VER. 2. Praise. Lit. "to confess," (H.) as we must be free from sin before

8 When the wicked shall spring up as grass: and all the workers of iniquity shall appear:

That they may perish for ever and ever: 9 but thou, O Lord, art Most High for evermore.

10 For behold thy enemies, O Lord, for behold thy enemies shall perish: and all the workers of iniquity shall be scattered.

11 But my horn shall be exalted like that of the unicorn: and my old age in plentiful mercy.

12 My eye also hath looked down upon my enemies: and my ear shall hear of the downfall of the malignant that rise up against me.

13 The just shall flourish like the palm-tree: he shall grow up like the cedar of Libanus.

14 They that are planted in the house of the Lord, shall flourish in the courts of the house of our God.

15 They shall still increase in a fruitful old age: and shall be well treated, 16 that they may shew,

That the Lord, our God, is righteous, and there is no iniquity in him.

PSALM XCII.

DOMINUS REGNAVIT.

The glory and stability of the kingdom; that is, of the Church of Christ.

Praise in the way of a canticle, for David himself, on the day before the sabbath, when the earth was founded.

we can worthily proclaim God's praises. Euseb. S. Jer.—But here to confess means to praise, (C.) or give thanks. W.

VER. 8. Night. Of adversity, and at all times, (Bert.) as well as in prosperity. W.—Morning and evening prayer must not be neglected. H.—These times were particularly pointed out. Ps. liv. 18.

VER. 4. Strings, upon. Heb. "on the nasor, and on the nabel, on the higaion with the cinnor." Yet the ten stringed instrument seems to have been the same with the psalter, or nobel. H.—Bellarmine thinks and is redundant, and was not in the copies of the Sept. or it is only explanatory, as we know that the psalter had ten strings. Ps. xxxii. 2. and cxliii. 9. M.—The matter is of small consequence. Bert.—Eusebius seems to insinuate, that instruments were not used in the Church in his time. C.—The observance of the commandments, and mortification, signified by the harp, are requisite. W.

VER. 5. Rejoice. Admiring thy providence, (C.) or the Messias. "What are all things compared with thee, O Lord!" S. Aug. Conf. x. 4.

VER. 6. Deep. We cannot easily explain thy ways, (M.) in exalting some, and depressing thy people. C. Rom. xi. 33.

VER. 7. Things. Pretended sages hence take occasion to blaspheme whatsoever things they know not. Jude 10. The wise adore God in silence, (H.) and confess, that the misery of the just here proves a future life, while the wicked prosper, to be more tormented. Euseb.—Carnal men, who think only of present things, see not this. M.

VER. 8. Appear. Heb. "flourish." Still they are but as grass, (H.) short-lived, and of small utility. The just resembles the palm-tree, v. 13. C.

VER. 10. Enemies. The Babylonians, (C.) or all the wicked at the last day. Bert.—This shews God's power, and insures the exaltation of the just. M.

VER. 11. Mercy. Heb. and some copies of the Sept. have "oil," an emblem of mercy. Prov. xxi. 20.—Bert. "I shall be anointed with fresh oil."—Prot. "My old age shall be like a verdant olive." Houbig. Sym.—Those who have a good conscience, expect final happiness. W.

VER. 12. Me. I shall live to hear of the vengeance which God will take. Ps. cxi. 9. C.—The just pray for sinners here; but must approve of God's judgment. Bert.

VER. 13. Palm-tree. Sept. φαιφ, means also a "Phœnician, or the Phœnix" bird, of which the ancients have said so much, Job xxix. 18. (C.) and of which Tertullian, (de Res. xiii.) and S. Ambrose, (de fid. Res.) seem to understand this passage. Amama.—But it must be explained in the sense of the Vulg. as the Heb. Tamar evinceth. This tree, and the cedar, were the most famous in those countries; the former for its fruit, and the latter for buildings and duration. The palm-tree will shoot forth again, after it has been cut down or burnt, (Pliny xiii. 14.) so the just will rise up from oppression. C.

VER. 14. Courts. In the Church triumphant, as well as in the militant. W.—The piety of the faithful induces strangers to embrace the truth. Bert.

VER. 15. Well treated. Or affected. W.—Bene patientes, εὐδαίμονες, "flourishing," (Grot.) tranquil, (S. Aug.) or in a prosperous condition. Bert.—Erasmus, to shew the utility of consulting the originals, informs us, what a multiplicity of authors he consulted in vain, to know the import of this word. Amama.—"They shall be fat and covered with leaves," (S. Jer.) alluding to the aforesaid comparison.

VER. 16. In him. The general judgment will set this in the clearest light. At present, the ways of Providence may be mysterious, v. 6. H.

1 THE Lord hath reigned, he is clothed with beauty: the Lord is clothed with strength, and hath girded himself.

For he hath established the world which shall not be moved.

2 Thy throne is prepared from of old: thou art from everlasting.

3 The floods have lifted up, O Lord, the floods have lifted up their voice.

The floods have lifted up their waves, 4 with the noise of many waters.

Wonderful are the surges of the sea: wonderful is the Lord on high.

5 Thy testimonies are become exceedingly credible: holiness becometh thy house, O Lord, unto length of days.

PSALM XCIII.

DEUS ULTIONUM.

God shall judge and punish the oppressors of his people.

A psalm for David himself, on the fourth day of the week.

1 THE Lord is the God, to whom revenge belongeth: the God of revenge hath acted freely.

2 Lift up thyself, thou that judgest the earth, render a reward to the proud.

3 How long shall sinners, O Lord, how long shall sinners glory?

4 Shall they utter, and speak iniquity: shall all speak who work injustice?

5 Thy people, O Lord, they have brought low: and they have afflicted thy inheritance.

PSAL. XCIII. VER. 1. Founded. Sept. "inhabited." This title occurs not in Heb. (Theodoret) nor are the copies of the Sept. uniform, which shews that it is a later insertion, intimating perhaps, that it was sung on Friday, when the works of the creation were completed, (Bert.) and the world redeemed. W.—It seems to refer to the translation of the ark, (Muis. 1 Par. xvi. 30.) and the establishment of the Church, the house of God, though the universe may be so styled, (Bert.) or it speaks of the return from captivity, (Ven. Bede) as well as the preceding and following psalms.—Himself. As if to perform some great work, the liberation of his people from the captivity of Babylon, and of the devil, (C.) or to create the world. Bert.—Established. "Weighed." Houbig.—Moved, or disturbed in the order established by him. H.—This does not prove that the earth moves not on its own axis daily, and round the sun every year. Bert.—The Church shall not fail, (M.) which Christ has redeemed by his own blood, and with great power. In it He reigns, and will draw all to himself. Jo. xii. 31. W.

VER. 2. Of old. Lit. "that time," ex tunc, (W.) alluding to some distant period. Is. xvi. 13. C.—God's throne is established over creatures, as soon as they exist. H.—Yet he is eternal, (M.) as Christ is likewise. At his ascension, He placed his sacred humanity on the throne. C.—His kingdom, the Church, continues for ever. W.

VER. 3. Floods. The apostles, (Euseb. S. Aug.) or persecutors. W.—Waves. This sentence is not in the Rom. Sept. &c. C.—But it is in the Alex. and Aldine edit. Storms and tides fill all with awe and astonishment. C.—The motion of waters, when they were first confined to their channels, and the persecutions of the Church, and rebellions against God, are described. M.

VER. 4. On high. In heaven, more to be admired than all the phenomena of nature, and more powerful than all the vast armies of the Babylonians. Is. xl. 15. C.—The conversion of many nations, (Apoc. xvii. 5.) is the work and glory of God, (H.) and his preserving the Church in the midst of the most violent attacks, shews his power. W.

VER. 5. Credible. S. Jer. "faithful."—Prot. "very sure." H.—A person must shut his eyes not to see the prophecies fulfilled concerning Christ and his Church. Euseb.—The majesty of God should strike us with a holy fear, and teach us to observe his commandments, and to behave with the utmost respect in his house, (C.) which is the whole world, or the society of the faithful. Bert.—Articles of faith are perfectly credible to those whose hearts are moved by grace, (W.) though they cannot be understood. H.—All the members of the Church should carefully approve themselves to God, who is her spouse, (W.) and protector, (M.) to the end of the world. W.—Days. Since thy power and fidelity are so great, suffer not thy temple to be any longer in ruins, or profaned. C.

PSAL. XCIII. VER. 1. Himself. This intimates, that he was inspired to write.—Week. Wednesday, on which day Judas sold our Saviour, and his punishment is here foretold. W.—"The title is not in Heb." and has been added since the times of the Sept. Theod.—It refers to the persecutions of David, (Jana.) or to the captives, (C.) or it contains an important instruction on Providence, and on the judgment which Christ will pronounce. Bert.—Freely. Heb.

6 They have slain the widow and the stranger: and they have murdered the fatherless.

7 And they have said: The Lord shall not see: neither shall the God of Jacob understand.

8 Understand, ye senseless among the people: and you fools, be wise at last.

9 He that planteth the ear, shall he not hear? or he that formed the eye, doth he not consider?

10 He that chastiseth nations, shall he not rebuke: he that teacheth man knowledge?

11 The Lord knoweth the thoughts of men, that they are vain.

12 Blessed is the man whom thou shalt instruct, O Lord: and shalt teach him out of thy law.

13 That thou mayst give him rest from the evil days: till a pit be dug for the wicked.

14 For the Lord will not cast off his people: neither will he forsake his own inheritance.

15 Until justice be turned into judgment: and they that are near it, are all the upright in heart.

16 Who shall rise up for me against the evil doers? or who shall stand with me against the workers of iniquity?

17 Unless the Lord had been my helper: my soul had almost dwelt in hell.

18 If I said: My foot is moved: thy mercy, O Lord, assisted me.

19 According to the multitude of my sorrows in my heart, thy comforts have given joy to my soul.

20 Doth the seat of iniquity stick to thee, who framest labour in commandment?

"Lord God of vengeance, God of vengeance, shine forth." H.—This agrees better with the sequel. To appear or act freely have the same meaning. Bert.—God executes judgment publicly, and without restraint. M.—To Him revenge belongs. Deut. xxxii. 35. Rom. xii. 20. Nah. ii. H.—It is time to punish the haughty Babylon. C.—God more usually takes the title of merciful. But he is equally just, and will respect no dignity or power, but the merits of each one. W.

VER. 6. Fatherless. Sept. places this after widow, and have here the stranger, or "proselyte," (H.) including those who were circumcised, or had only renounced idolatry.—Jeremias and Ezechiël describe the cruelty of the Chaldees. C.—Similar acts of impious rage are but too visible in all ages. H.

VER. 7. Of Jacob. A wretched people in captivity. This is spoken insultingly, he knows not, or cannot hinder, their distress. Ps. xlii. 1. and lxxii. 6. C.—The insolence and cruelty of infidels are reprobated.

VER. 8. Fools. Who talk in this manner, (H.) whether you really believe, that God is thus ignorant and inactive; or you only act as if you did. Bert.—There are but few of the former description. But very many, even among Christians, act as if they admitted no Providence. W.

VER. 9. Consider? He does not say, "hath he not eyes?" lest any might attribute members to God. S. Jer.

"In evil works, mankind thou mayst deceive,

Thy hidden thoughts the gods above perceive." Theognis

Οὐ λῆσις δὲ θεοὺς δοθεὶ λογισμένους.

—Thales being asked, if the actions of men were unknown to the gods, replied, "not even their thoughts." Val. Max. vii. 2. H.—It seems those whom the psalmist attacks, denied the interference of God in human affairs, though they allowed that he created all. H.—Hence he justly stigmatizes them as fools, and inconsistent. Bert.—It is impossible that God should be ignorant of our actions, since he knows our most secret thoughts. W.

VER. 13. Rest from the evil days. That thou mayst mitigate the sorrows to which he is exposed, during the short and evil days of his mortality; (Ch.) or mayst protect him, while the wicked are overwhelmed. C.—The pious bear afflictions with greater resignation, (M.) meditating on the law and the holy Scriptures, where the ways of Providence are justified.

VER. 15. Until justice be turned into judgment, &c. By being put in execution: which will be agreeable to all the upright in heart. Ch.—They will be round the tribunal, and sit as judges with Christ. Heb. ei had, "For to," may have been originally ad ei, "Until." H.—This does not imply that the just will not be protected afterwards. Cyrus was a figure of the Messias, and all his counsellors, or the Jews, attached themselves to him, when he punished the Babylonians. Is. xli. 2. and liii. 11. C.—The Church will never be rejected by a just God, whose judgments must take place, and be pleasing to the righteous. W.

VER. 17. Almost. Or shortly, as the Heb. means, (Bert.) "within very little." W.—Hell. Heb. "silence," which is often put for the grave. 1 K. ii. 9. C.

VER. 18. Me. I was no sooner in danger, than I was relieved. C.—Feeding and complaining of my misery, I obtained thy aid. W.

21 They will hunt after the soul of the just, and will condemn innocent blood.

22 But the Lord is my refuge: and my God the help of my hope.

23 And he will render them their iniquity: and in their malice he will destroy them: the Lord, our God, will destroy them.

PSALM XCIV.

VENITE EXULTEMUS.

An invitation to adore and serve God, and to hear his voice.

Praise of a canticle for David himself.

1 COME, let us praise the Lord with joy: let us joyfully sing to God our Saviour.

2 Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving: and make a joyful noise to him with psalms.

3 For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all gods.

4 For in his hand are all the ends of the earth: and the heights of the mountains are his.

5 For the sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land.

VER. 19. Sorrows. Heb. "afflicting thoughts." Bert.—Soul. Our future joy will bear proportion with the sufferings which we endure for the sake of justice, 1 Cor. xi. 13. and 2 Cor. i. 3. H.

VER. 20. Doth the seat of iniquity stick to thee? &c. That is, wilt thou, O God, who art always just, admit of the seat of iniquity; that is, of injustice, or unjust judges, to have any partnership with thee? Thou, who framest, or makest labour in commandment; that is, thou who obligest us to labour with all diligence to keep thy commandments; (Ch.) as faith alone is not sufficient, (W.) and who art pleased that we should find therein some difficulty or repugnance of nature, that we may be the more entitled to consolation, v. 19. H.—Commandment, or "instruction." S. Aug. observes, that the sufferings of this life are for our instruction, to admonish us of future punishments and rewards. This idea is very luminous. Bert.—Christ was first to suffer, and so to enter into his glory. Lu. xxiv. 26. H.—Nemo dormiens coronatur. S. Jer.—Yet the yoke of Christ is really sweet. The devil tempts us to look upon it as insupportable. S. Bern.—Framet, fingit.—Sept. S. Aug. &c. Fingit, which may refer to the seat, or to unjust judges, who tyrannize over others, as the Babylonians did, (C.) and as the Jews conspired against the soul of the just. "Should the tribunal of perversity have any commerce with thee, which, under the name of law, forms impious machinations?" Houbigant.

VER. 22. Help. Heb. "rock." Bert.—Sufferings force us to have recourse to God, whom few remember in the days of prosperity. S. Aug.

VER. 23. Will destroy them. Heb. yatsmithem, occurs twice, to denote the certainty of the event, though the Sept. &c. omit the repetition. H.—Cyrus overturned the cruel empire of Babylon. C.—The wicked at the last day shall seek to hide themselves, and will for ever be removed from the sight of the just, ἀφανισί τρώδς. We may say of each of them, it had been better if he had never been born. Matt. xxvi. 24. H.—The retribution of the good and bad is eternal. W.

PSAL. XCIV. VER. 1. Himself, as David wrote it by inspiration. W.—Sept. Comp. "It is without a title in Heb." S. Paul (Heb. iv. 7.) quotes it as the work of David. But this is only done incidentally, and it may have been written by the descendants of Moses, (Ps. lxxix. C.) as the apostle only says, in David, (H.) referring to the psalter, though the common opinion attributed to him. C.—This opinion, it must be owned, requires hereby great authority, (H.) as an inspired writer could not mistake; and Calmet himself, on the epistle to the Heb. doubts not but as the drift of the apostle requires, he attributed this psalm to David. Bert. T. vi.—It might be used in the removal of the ark (Muis.) and contains an exhortation to the Jews to return to the service of God, under king Josias, (Theod.) or after the captivity, (C.) or at the preaching of the gospel. Euseb.—The Church adopts the version of the Roman psalter in her office books, as they were corrected by S. Pius V. and this psalm was considered as a hymn at the beginning of matins, though the Vulg. is retained in other parts. C.—The variations are not material. H.—But this shews that the Church does not condemn every deviation from the Vulgate. Bell. Diss.—Saviour. S. Jer. "to the rock, our Jesus." H.—He who created us, has also been our Saviour. W.

VER. 2. Come. Earlier than usual, (M.) before the day be far spent; precipitemus, to shew our diligence in prayer, (H.) and to obtain God's favour, as Aman was first at the palace of Assuerus. Est. vi. 4.—This sentence has probably determined the Church to place it at the beginning of matins. C.—Let not others get before us in performing this duty. H.—We cannot prevent God's grace by any good works, since without it we can do nothing (W.) as we ought. Con. Trid.—Thanksgiving. S. Jer. lit. "in confession." H.—The same word, ἔκδοσις, is used for sacramental confession; (Bert.) and this, or at least contrition, (H.) ought to go before our expressions of praise. Eccl. xv. 9. Theod. S. Jer.—The prophet exhorts us both to lament and to praise. S. Aug. Bert.—Psalms and music. W.

VER. 3. Gods. Sept. Comp. "the earth." But the best editions agree with us, and God must be acknowledged superior to all angels, &c. Some copies of the Sept. S. Aug. &c. add, "for the Lord will not cast off his people," (C.) which seems to be taken from Ps. xciii. 14. Bert.

6 Come, let us adore and fall down: and weep before the Lord that made us.

7 For he is the Lord, our God: and we are the people of his pasture and the sheep of his hand.

8 "To-day if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

9 As in the provocation, according to the day of temptation in the wilderness: where your fathers tempted me, they proved me, and saw my works.

10 "Forty years long was I offended with that generation, and I said: These always err in heart.

11 And these men have not known my ways: "so I swore in my wrath that they shall not enter into my rest."

PSALM XCV.

CANTATE DOMINO.

An exhortation to praise God for the coming of Christ and his kingdom.

1 A canticle for David himself, when the house was built after the captivity.

• Heb. iii. 7. and iv. 7.—• Num. xiv. 34.—• Heb. iv. 3.

VER. 4. Ends. Heb. "depths."—Are his. This is grandeur, that "he holds," as in the Rom. psalter. Bert. Ia. xl. 15. and xiv. 18.—Virgil (Geor. 4.) says:—

—Down, namque ire per omnes

Terrasque et tractusque maris, cælumque profundum.

VER. 5. Formed. Like a potter, plasmaverunt, (S. Jer. C.) or "have laid the foundations of the dry land." S. Aug. Brev. Rom. II.

VER. 6. And weep. Heb. also, "bend the knee;" though this sense would seem less proper, after he had mentioned prostration. Tears of contrition and tenderness may accompany our canticles. Bert.—Kneeling in prayer is a posture pleasing to God. Phil. ii. W.

VER. 7. The Lord is not in the Heb. or Sept. Bert.—The people. Rom. Psal. and Syriac, "his people, and the sheep of his pasture," taken from Ps. xcix. 3. C.—God is the only shepherd, who creates his sheep. Bert.—He feedeth us, and it is most just that we should adore him. W.

VER. 8. To-day. S. Paul beautifully illustrates this passage, Heb. iv. H.—He follows not the present Heb. punctuation, which would join half this verse with the preceding.—His. God speaks of the Messiah according to the apostle, who intimates that to-day comprises all the life of man. Heb. xxxvii. 13. Bert.—Harden not. Man is the author of his own obduracy, (Theod.) which God only permits. S. Aug. C.—We have free will, and may resist God's grace, as we may also consent to it, and thus co-operate to our first justification. Trid. Ses. vi. 5. W.—The captives (C.) and first Christians were exhorted not to imitate the depravity of the ancient Jews. H.—Though a man may have frequently resisted the Holy Ghost, he may still repent. W.

VER. 9. Provocation, (irritations.) Rom. Brev. exacerbatione. Heb. meribā, "contradiction," (S. Jer. H.) at Raphidim; (Ex. xvii. 7.) unless this be styled temptation, (Massa) and the former provocation was that at Cades. Num. xx. 13. C.—The Israelites murmured frequently. But that rebellion which took place at the return of the spies, and which causes God to swear that the guilty should never enter the land of promise, seems to be chiefly meant. Num. xiv. Bert.—They murmured on account of the desire of water and flesh-meat, though they were abundantly supplied with manna, which answered every purpose. Thus some require to communicate under both kinds, as if one did not contain as much as both. W.—Proved me; to know by experience if I were so powerful as to work miracles; and I condescended to gratify them, (C.) or I have done it already. M.

VER. 10. Offended. Heb. and Sept. "disgusted." Rom. Psal. S. Aug. &c. "I was very near to;" (C.) ready to punish, and eye-witness of their infidelity. S. Paul reads ὑποστήθια, infensus fui, "I was against, or disgusted with," and seems to refer the forty years to the Jews, who saw God's works. H.—But there is a variation in the Greek copies, as some omit, For which cause; and Heb. iii. 10. and v. 17, intimates, that the indignation of God was roused for forty years, at intervals, as often as the people rebelled. Bert.—The apostle also plainly shews, that this psalm was written long after that period, and consequently not by Moses, as the Jews would now assert. He limiteth a certain day, saying in David: To-day, after so long a time, &c. Heb. iv. 7. W.—Always. Heb. "a people of those who err in the heart are they." Mont. II.

VER. 11. So. Psal. Rom. and Milan, "to whom." Both occur in S. Paul, and answer the Heb. asher, (Bert.) quibus. S. Jer.—Not. Lit. "if they shall." The Israelites were excluded from a settled abode in Chanaan, on account of their repeated transgressions, particularly at Cades; (Num. xiv.) and Christians, who do not continue faithful to the law of Jesus Christ, can never expect to enter heaven. Heb. iii. and iv. W.—David made the like observation to his subjects; and clearly speaks of the heavenly repose to which the virtuous alone are entitled. H.—S. Paul takes great pains to inculcate this truth, and shews that the return from captivity could not answer the import of the promises made by David in God's name. Bert. H.

PSAL. XCV. VER. 1. When the house was built, &c. Alluding to that time, and then ordered to be sung; but principally relating to the building of the SING ye to the Lord a new canticle: sing to the Lord, all the earth.

2 Sing ye to the Lord and bless his name: shew forth his salvation from day to day.

3 Declare his glory among the Gentiles: his wonders among all people.

4 For the Lord is great, and exceedingly to be praised: he is to be feared above all gods.

5 For all the gods of the Gentiles are devils: but the Lord made the heavens.

6 Praise and beauty are before him: holiness and majesty in his sanctuary.

7 Bring ye to the Lord, O ye kindreds of the Gentiles, bring ye to the Lord glory and honour: 8 bring to the Lord glory unto his name.

Bring up sacrifices, and come unto his courts: 9 adore ye the Lord in his holy court.

Let all the earth be moved at his presence. 10 Say ye among the Gentiles, the Lord hath reigned.

For he hath corrected the world, which shall not be moved: he will judge the people with justice.

11 Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad, let the sea be moved, and the fulness thereof: 12 the fields and all things that are in them shall be joyful.

Church of Christ, after our redemption from the captivity of satan. Ch.—Captivity. The greater canticle of David, (1 Par. xvi.) was probably divided, on that occasion, (C.) into three. This forms the second part, from v. 23; as the psalm civ. to v. 16, does the first. The three last verses of David's canticle, (v. 34.) occur Ps. cv. 1. 47. But in reality, there are so many variations, that it seems most probable, (H.) that he revised that work, and left us the three psalms in their present form. This perhaps relates to the establishment of the Church, though it might be also sung at the return from Babylon. Bert.—Modern Jews understand it of their future re-union under the Messias. Kinchi. C.—The rebuilding of the temple is foretold, as a figure of man's redemption. W.—New canticle. As the blessed do, (Apoc. v. 9. and xv. 4.) and those who receive the Messias. Is. xlii. 10. Bert.—Love sings the new canticle. S. Aug.—Earth. And not Judea alone, v. 7. Bert.

VER. 2. Lord . . his name. As v. 7. and 8. The plural and singular denote the Trinity. W.—Shew forth. Sept. "evangelize," bene nuntiate. S. Aug.—"Tell the glad tidings" of salvation incessantly. This preaching shall continue for ever. H.

VER. 5. Devils. Heb. elilim, "diminutive gods, (H.) nothings, (C.) vain things." Mont. 1 Par.—We have idols, as Prot. read here. These were in fact, either devils, or vain imaginations of men. S. Paul says, we know that an idol is nothing in the world. 1 Cor. viii. 4. They cannot claim self-existence, and if the true God were not to support those creatures, the sum, &c. which have been the objects of adoration, they would presently cease to be. H.—This most plausible species of idolatry is therefore refuted, since the Lord made the heavens. C.—The Creator alone can be considered as God; the devils prompt the people to adore other things. W.—It would appear but a small praise for the Lord to be feared above all gods, (H.) if they were "nothing." Hence the Sept. have used the word devils, to signify, that these potent, but maleficent beings, which the pagans adored, were infinitely beneath God, and worse than nothing. Bert.

VER. 6. Before him. At his disposal; whereas the idols can bestow nothing. C.—Sanctuary, or "sanctification." W. 1 Par. in his place. H.

VER. 7. Kindreds; patria, or families, as it is expressed. 1 Par. xvi. H.

VER. 8. Sacrifices. Heb. Mincha, "the oblation" of flour, &c. (H.) which denotes the blessed Eucharist, and the spiritual sacrifices of prayer, &c. M.—Victims shall cease, but the pure oblation shall continue among the Gentiles. Mal. i. 11. Bert.—Courts. This shews that their conversion is predicted, since they could not otherwise come thither. C.

VER. 9. Moved. Heb. "in labour," (Is. xxvi. 17. Theod. C.) or "fear ye before him all the earth." Houbig.—In Par. the sentences are in a different order. H.

VER. 10. Reigned. S. Bernard says, "the kingdom of Jesus is in the wood." D.—S. Justin (dial.) accuses the Jews of retrenching ἀπὸ τοῦ ξύλου, "from the wood," which all the Latin Fathers, except S. Jerom, acknowledge in their copies. That ancient author, being born among the Samaritans, could hardly be so ignorant of the Hebrew text, and his antagonist does not attempt to refute the charge; so that it seems probable, that they were in the original, (Bert.) and since erased by the Jews, from the Sept. who added them, (W.) by the spirit of prophecy. Tournemine.—But how came Christians to permit this to be done in their Heb. Greek, and Latin copies? The words in question may have been, therefore, a marginal gloss, which had crept into the text. Faber, Justiniani, &c.—They do not occur in the parallel passage, (1 Par.) nor in the Vulg. though they be retained in the Rom. breviary. C.—Lindan objects this perfidy of the Jews to the Reformers, not reflecting, that he thus condemns the Vulg. Genebrard is of opinion, that "the Sept. were inspired to add these words, which some half-learned

Then shall all the trees of the woods rejoice 13 before the face of the Lord, because he cometh: because he cometh to judge the earth.

He shall judge the world with justice, and the people with his truth.

PSALM XCVI.

DOMINUS REGNAVIT.

All are invited to rejoice at the glorious coming and reign of Christ.

1 For the same David, when his land was restored again to him.

THE Lord hath reigned, let the earth rejoice: let many islands be glad.

2 Clouds and darkness are round about him: justice and judgment are the establishment of his throne.

3 A fire shall go before him, and shall burn his enemies round about.

4 His lightnings have shone forth to the world: the earth saw and trembled.

5 The mountains melted like wax at the presence of the Lord: at the presence of the Lord all the earth.

6 The heavens declared his justice: and all people saw his glory.

7 *Let them be all confounded that adore graven things, and that glory in their idols.

* Exod. xx. 4. Lev. xxvi. 1. Deut. v. 8.

critics have thought proper to expunge with an impiety which is now but too common." The Popes have not, however, thought that the cross stood in need of this support. Amama.—The Chaldee and Syriac, as well as all the copies of the Sept. extant, and the Arab. and Ethiop. versions taken from it, and all the Greek interpreters and Fathers, (except S. Justin) with S. Jerom, both in his versions from the Heb. and Sept. omit these words, which are found in the Rom. Gothic, and other psalters. Origen's Hexapla seem to have most enabled the Greeks to discern the interpolation, which the Latins retained longer, not having such easy access to that work. Whatever may be the decision on this important matter, it is certain that the reign of Christ was propagated from the wood, in a wonderful manner, as he there began to draw all to himself, and the prophet seems evidently to allude to the times when Christ proclaimed, the kingdom of God is at hand, and when the conversion of the Gentiles, and the institution of the blessed Eucharist (v. 8.) would fill all the world with rapture. H.—The positive testimony of S. Justin, and the Italic version used by the Latin Fathers, (Bert.) Tertullian, S. Aug. &c. (W.) seems of more weight to prove the authenticity of the words, than the simple omission in the copies of Origen, and S. Jerom, &c. to evince the contrary. Bert.—Corrected. Evil morals and idolatry, (M.) rather than the physical order of the globe. Ps. xcii. 1. Bert.—Heb. "he hath bananced," (Houbig.) or established. H.—The Christian faith shall not be abolished, (M.) or corrected. H.—"Faith is not to be reformed." Tert.—Justice. Ancient psalters add, "and the Gentiles in his wrath." v. 13. Ps. xcvi. 8.

VER. 11. Fulness. Its raging billows, (C.) fishes, (M.) those who live upon the water. H.—Let all testify their joy. Every thing is animated by the psalmist. C.

VER. 13. Judge. Or "rule," as he invites all to rejoice. C.—But this will be done by all nature, when God shall punish the wicked. H.—He now judges by his ministers, and will pass sentence at the last day. W.—This ver. is added, instead of the three last in 1 Par. xvi. which occur in Ps. cv. H.

PSAL. XCVI. VER. I. Same. Hwic. The title is the same as usual in the Sept. M.—It occurs not in Heb. The psalm may refer to David's establishment on the throne, after the death of Saul, or Absalom, or to the return from captivity, and to the first and second coming of Christ. C.—This last seems to be the most literal sense. Bert.—To him. Christ's body on the third day, and many souls were restored to life.—Islands. We have great reason to rejoice in being educated in the true faith, and we may hope that the Catholic religion will once more flourish in these isles. W.—The Son of man shall have dominion over all. Dan. vii. 14. His Church is persecuted, as the waves beat against an island. Euseb. C.

VER. 2. Clouds. We could not bear the blaze of the divine majesty. Ps. xvii. 12. Christ veiled himself in our human nature, (Theod.) in the womb of the blessed Virgin. S. Jer. C.—God gave the law with terror; and so he will come to judge with integrity. W.

VER. 3. A fire. Preceding the last judgment. 2 Pet. iii. 12. Dan. vii. 10. Wisd. v. 22. M.

VER. 5. All. Which is conformable to the Heb. &c. though the Vulg. terra, means, "all the earth" melted. H.

VER. 6. Heavens. Apostles. Ps. xviii. The judge appears publicly. C.

VER. 7. Idols. Heb. Elilim. Ps. xcv. 5. H.—Angels. Heb. Elohim, means also, all who have power. Chal. "idols." S. Paul, (Heb. i. 6.) quotes this in the third person; Let all the angels, (C.) or rather he alludes to the Sept. (Deut. xxxii. 43.) which clearly speaks of the Messias, and may therefore have been altered in the Heb. text, which S. Jerom translated. The psalmist expresses the same idea as Moses had done. Bert.—Both those who adore idols of their own imagination, and their graven things, are condemned. W.

* Adore him, all you his angels: 8 Sion heard, and was glad.

And the daughters of Juda rejoiced, because of thy judgments, O Lord.

9 For thou art the most high Lord over all the earth: thou art exalted exceedingly above all gods.

10 ^b You that love the Lord, hate evil: the Lord preserveth the souls of his saints, he will deliver them out of the hand of the sinner.

11 Light is risen to the just, and joy to the right of heart.

12 Rejoice, ye just, in the Lord: and give praise to the remembrance of his holiness.

PSALM XCVII.

CANTATE DOMINO.

All are again invited to praise the Lord, for the victories of Christ.

1 A psalm for David himself.

SING ye to the Lord a new canticle: because he hath done wonderfu. things.

His right hand hath wrought for him salvation, and his arm is holy.

2 *The Lord hath made known his salvation: he hath revealed his justice in the sight of the Gentiles.

3 He hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel.

All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

4 Sing joyfully to God, all the earth: make melody, rejoice and sing.

5 Sing praise to the Lord on the harp, on the harp, and with the voice of a psalm: 6 with long trumpets, and sound of cornet.

Make a joyful noise before the Lord our king: 7 let the sea be moved and the fulness thereof: the world and them that dwell therein.

8 The rivers shall clap their hands, the mountains

* Heb. i. 6.—^b Amos v. 15. Rom. xvii. 9.

VER. 9. Gods. Princes or angels, elohim, v. 7. H.

VER. 11. Light. Prosperity. The Babylonians are punished. C.

VER. 12. Holiness. Or sanctuary. Praise for ever his adorable name, (C.) since he is holiness itself, and sanctifies others. W.

PSAL. XCVII. VER. 1. David. His name occurs not in Heb. though the psalm is worthy of him. Bert.—It may refer to the return from captivity, as a figure of the world's redemption.—Things. In rescuing his people from slavery, and in the incarnation. C.—For him. Or alone. M.—Christ raised himself by his own power. C. Ia. lxii. 5.—He redeemed mankind for his own glory, sibi. Bert.

VER. 2. Salvation. Cyrus, or the Messiah, whose gospel is preached every where, (C.) and who has saved the world. W.

VER. 3. Israel. The prophets foretold the liberation of the Jews, and of mankind. The blessed Virgin seems to allude to this passage, Lu. i. 55. C.—Some Jews were converted. Rom. xi. W.

VER. 6. Cornet. This was a crooked horn; the trumpets were of metal. Num. x. 2. C.

VER. 8. Hands. These strong oriental expressions hardly suit our language. C.—They contain a metaphor, and denote the inhabitants of the world, (H.) or those rivers, which spring from Jesus Christ, and mountains, which are raised to heaven by his grace, to praise the Redeemer. S. Aug.—Then the just are exhorted to lift up their heads. M.

PSAL. XCVIII. VER. 1. Himself. There is no title in Heb. Hence many have attributed it to Moses, with the preceding psalms. But the name of Samuel destroys this pretension, and most people suppose that David wrote it at the removal of the ark. C.—Others refer it to the return from captivity, (Theod.) or to the dedication of the second temple, (C.) and the reign of the Messiah. Bert.—Angry. Though many enemies rage, and the whole earth be stirred up to oppose the reign of Christ, he shall still prevail. Ch. Ps. ii.—His will shall be done, (W.) for He sitteth on the Cherubim. H.—Ferrand infers from this expression, that the psalm cannot regard the times after the captivity, as the ark existed no more. But this is not clear; and, at any rate, this idea might still be retained, as God is represented on a chariot drawn by Cherubim. Eze. x. 1. Dan. iii. 55. C.

VER. 4. Loveth judgment. Requireth discretion. Ch.—Heb. "the king's strength loveth judgment." He does nothing unjustly, as the enemy is forced shall rejoice together 9 at the presence of the Lord: because he cometh to judge the earth.

He shall judge the world with justice, and the people with equity.

PSALM XCVIII.

DOMINUS REGNAVIT.

The reign of the Lord in Sion: that is, of Christ in his Church.

1 A psalm for David himself.

THE Lord hath reigned, let the people be angry: He that sitteth on the Cherubim: let the earth be moved.

2 The Lord is great in Sion, and high above all people.

3 Let them give praise to thy great name: for it is terrible and holy: 4 and the king's honour loveth judgment.

Thou hast prepared directions: thou hast done judgment and justice in Jacob.

5 Exalt ye the Lord, our God, and adore his footstool: for it is holy.

6 Moses and Aaron among his priests: and Samuel among them that call upon his name.

They called upon the Lord, and he heard them: 7 he spoke to them in the pillar of the cloud.

They kept his testimonies, and the commandment which he gave them.

8 Thou didst hear them, O Lord, our God: thou wast a merciful God to them, and taking vengeance on all their inventions.

9 Exalt ye the Lord, our God, and adore at his holy mountain: for the Lord, our God, is holy.

PSALM XCIX.

JUBILATE DEO.

All are invited to rejoice in God, the Creator of all.

1 A psalm of praise.

* Isai. lii. 10. and lxiii. 8. Luke iii. 6.

to confess. C.—This is the highest glory of a king. Theod.—God requires that we should honour him, by correcting our faults. S. Aug.—Directions. Most right and just laws to direct men. Ch.—Jacob. There God principally instructed mankind, and punished the perverse. Other nations he seemed to have left to themselves. H.

VER. 5. Adore his foot-stool. The ark of the covenant was called, in the Old Testament, God's foot-stool: over which he was understood to sit, on his propitiatory, or mercy-seat, as on a throne, between the wings of the Cherubim, in the sanctuary: to which the children of Israel paid a great veneration. But as this psalm evidently relates to Christ, and the New Testament, where the ark has no place, the holy Fathers understand this text of the worship paid by the Church to the body and blood of Christ in the sacred mysteries; in as much as the humanity of Christ is, as it were, the foot-stool of the divinity. So S. Ambrose, l. 3. de Spiritu Sancto, c. 12. and S. Augustin upon this psalm. Ch.—The last-mentioned holy Doctor inculcates the obligation of adoring Jesus Christ in the blessed Eucharist, and refutes the Capharnaïtes, &c. Jo. vi. W.—The Jews adored God, shewing a relative honour, by prostrating themselves before the ark, in the same manner as Catholics do before holy images. Bert.—It is. Sept. and some psalters, "he is holy." C.—Heb. is ambiguous. Bert.—"I discover how I may adore the foot-stool, . . . without impiety. Christ took flesh of Mary, . . . and gave it us to eat for our salvation. But none eats that flesh, till he have first adored it." S. Aug.

VER. 6. Moses and Aaron among his priests. By this it is evident, that Moses also was a priest, and indeed the chief priest, in as much as he consecrated Aaron, and offered sacrifice for him. Lev. viii. So that his pre-eminence over Aaron makes nothing for lay church headship. Ch. W.—Samuel is only mentioned as a Levite. See 1 K. xxv. 1. C.

VER. 7. Cloud. As he did to Samuel in the night. Bert.—Them. By their example, the psalmist insinuates, that priests in the new law shall pray for the people. W.

VER. 8. All their inventions. That is, all the enterprizes of their enemies against them, as in the case of Core, Dathan, and Abiron. Ch.—Num. xvi. W. Syr. "injuries." The failings of these great men were punished in mercy. C.—Thou hast made them harmless in all their works. Houbig.

VER. 9. Mountain. On Sion, or in the Catholic Church. Bert.—"Those who do not adore on this mountain, are not heard unto eternal life." S. Aug.

2 SING joyfully to God, all the earth: serve ye the Lord with gladness.

Come in before his presence with exceedingly great joy.

3 Know ye that the Lord, he is God: he made us, and not we ourselves.

We are his people and the sheep of his pasture.

4 Go ye into his gates with praise, into his courts with hymns: and give glory to him.

Praise ye his name: 5 for the Lord is sweet, his mercy endureth for ever, and his truth to generation and generation.

PSALM C.

MISERICORDIAM & JUDICIUM.

The prophet exhorteth all, by his example, to follow mercy and justice.

1 A psalm for David himself.

MERCY and judgment I will sing to thee, O Lord: I will sing, 2 and I will understand in the unspotted way, when thou shalt come to me.

I walked in the innocence of my heart, in the midst of my house.

3 I did not set before my eyes any unjust thing: I hated the workers of iniquities.

4 The perverse heart did not cleave to me: and the malignant, that turned aside from me, I would not know.

5 The man that in private detracted his neighbour, him did I persecute.

With him that had a proud eye, and an unsatiable heart, I would not eat.

PSAL. XCIX. VER. 1. Praise. Theodoret reads, "A psalm of David for confession, without a title in Heb." But now that text and the Sept. agree with us. The psalm refers to the same events as the preceding. C.

VER. 2. Earth. Both Jews and Gentiles, (W.) converted to the faith of Christ. H.—Gladness. God loves a cheerful giver. M.—He hears our prayers in all places. Yet appoints the temple more peculiarly for that duty. W.

VER. 3. Not. S. Jerom seems to have read lu for lo, and translates, "and we are his," which Houbigant follows. But the Vulg. gives a very necessary instruction, as some might perhaps forget that God preserves their life every instant, (Bert.) and some have foolishly imagined, that the collection of things might give existence, or be eternal. Bert.

VER. 5. Truth. This is commonly joined with mercy. C.—God faithfully executes what he has promised (W.) for the liberation of his people, and the conversion of the Gentiles. C.

PSAL. C. VER. 1. Himself. He describes the conduct which he was resolved to follow in ruling, (C.) or alludes to the pious king Josias. Theod. 4 K. xxii. The sentiments are not confined to rulers alone, (Bert.) though this psalm might be styled, "the mirror of princes." Muia.—Mercy and judgment. The chief qualifications of a king. C.—Whether I am treated with clemency or with rigour, I will praise thee. Chal.—No one should presume, since there is judgment, nor despair, since mercy goes before. S. Jer. S. Aug.—I will sing, and I will understand. Piety is one of the best means to acquire the intelligence of these heavenly hymns, and of the whole scripture. H.—We might translate the Heb. (C.) and Vulg. Mercy and judgment I will sing, to thee, Lord, will I sing psalms. H.

VER. 2. I will understand, &c. That is, I will apply my mind, I will do my endeavour, to know and to follow the perfect way of thy commandments: not trusting in my own strength, but relying on thy coming to me by thy grace. Ch.—I will watch over my conduct.—When thou. So S. Jer. and Houbigant read, though Sept. have "when wilt thou come to me?" Bert.—He is impatient of having the ark: but is well apprized that God will not dwell in a polluted soul, or in a wicked city: therefore he promises to remove such obstacles.—I walked. Or "will walk." All the other verbs should be in the future; (C.) though that is of no consequence. Bert.—David had studied to regulate his interior and his family before, as much as he did afterwards. H.—His fall was most likely (Bert.) subsequent to this event. 1 K. vi. 11. H.—He acknowledges that he had done what he here mentions, by God's assistance. W.

VER. 3. Thing. Or Heb. "word of Belial." I will neither suffer an evil word or action to pass without reproof. C.

VER. 4. Know. I looked upon them with such contempt, (Euseb.) or I highly disapproved of their conduct, (S. Aug.) and would have no society with them. C.—David was, in a manner, forced to tolerate Joab; but he shewed sufficiently his displeasure, and ordered his successor to punish him, as soon as it could be done with safety to the state. M.

VER. 5. Persecute. Or abhor (W.) with a perfect hatred. We must shew our displeasure if we hear detraction, (H.) that we may not partake in the crime. S. Jer.—The court is most likely to be infected with this vice, as people are con-

6 My eyes were upon the faithful of the earth, to sit with me: the man that walked in the perfect way, he served me.

7 He that worketh pride shall not dwell in the midst of my house: he that speaketh unjust things did not prosper before my eyes.

8 In the morning I put to death all the wicked of the land: that I might cut off all the workers of iniquity from the city of the Lord.

PSALM CI.

DOMINE EXAUDI.

A prayer for one in affliction: the fifth penitential psalm.

1 The prayer of the poor man, when he was anxious, and poured out his supplication before the Lord.

2 HEAR, O Lord, my prayer: and let my cry come to thee.

3 Turn not away thy face from me: in the day when I am in trouble, incline thy ear to me.

In what day soever I shall call upon thee, hear me speedily.

4 For my days are vanished like smoke: and my bones are grown dry like fuel for the fire.

5 I am smitten as grass, and my heart is withered: because I forgot to eat my bread.

6 Through the voice of my groaning, my bone hath cleaved to my flesh.

7 I am become like to a pelican of the wilderness: I am like to a night-raven in the house.

8 I have watched, and am become as a sparrow, all alone on the house top.

tinually endeavouring to supplant their rivals. C.—Secret thoughts of resentment must be stilled in their birth. Euseb.—Heart. Heb. "wide heart," which is sometimes taken in a good sense. 3 K. iv. 29. But here it denotes the ambitious and misers. Prov. xxviii. 25. C.

VER. 6. Faithful. A prince cannot do every thing himself. But he ought to make choice of the most virtuous and skilful ministers. C.

VER. 7. Prosper. Heb. "shall not be pleasing," (S. Jer. H.) or "maintain himself." C.

VER. 8. Morning. Without delay, (W. Jer. xxi. 12. H.) and with a mind composed. S. Isid. Pelus i. ep. 821.—The Jews explain this of the judgment of zeal, by which a person might kill a notorious criminal, without any trial, (C.) in imitation of Phinees and Mathathias. 1 Mac. ii. 24. H.—God alone will punish all malefactors at the last day. S. Aug.—The Fathers admonish us to resist temptations at the beginning. C.

Principiis obsta; sero medicina paratur

Cum mala per longas convaluerunt moras.—Ovid.

PSAL. CI. VER. 1. Poor. Heb. "afflicted." This may refer to some of the captives, who were returning, (v. 14. C.) or to Jesus Christ, (S. Aug.) to whom S. Paul applies v. 26. 28. and whose redemption was prefigured by the former event. C.—David might have both in view. H.—Yet most believe that the psalm was written by Daniel, or Jeremias, &c. C.—It may have two literal senses, like many others. Bert.

VER. 2. Cry. Fervent petition, though only in the heart. Ex. xiv. 15.

VER. 3. Turn not. We first abandon God, but must humbly beg for grace. W.

VER. 4. Fire. Cremium denotes any combustible matter. Colum. xii. 19.

S. Jer. C.—While in mortal sin, our best actions, alms, &c. avail nothing. 1 Cor. xiii. W.

VER. 5. Bread. Through excessive sorrow, (H.) I am fainting in captivity. C.—The human race is relieved by the bread of life, the holy Eucharist. S. Aug. Bert.—Sinners have no relish for spiritual food. W.

VER. 6. Flesh, or "skin." S. Jer.—The necessary moisture is consumed. Euseb. W.

VER. 7. A pelican, &c. I am become, through grief, like birds that affect solitude and darkness. Ch.—Kaath comes from a root that signifies to vomit, (H.) as this bird lives chiefly on shell-fish, which it swallows, and when the heat of its stomach has caused the shells to open, it throws them up again, and eats the fish. Bochart. Parkhurst in ka. H.—It seems to be the onocratalus, which resembles the heron. What many of the ancients have related concerning its giving life again to its young, by its blood, &c. must be accounted fabulous. The Fathers have not expressed these facts as certain, (C.) though they have beautifully accommodated them to the tenderness and grace, which Christ has shewn to lost man. See Euseb. S. Aug. H.—Raven. Owl, or rather another species of pelican, so called from having a bag under its chap, "to inclose" fish, &c. Parkhurst in ose.—With its prey it retires to solitary places. So the distressed love solitude and silence. H.

VER. 8. Sparrow. Heb. Tsippor means any "quick moving" bird, &c. (Idem.) and as the sparrow is not a solitary bird, it may here signify the owl. Bochart.

9 All the day long my enemies reproached me: and they that praised me, did swear against me.

10 For I did eat ashes like bread, and mingled my drink with weeping.

11 Because of thy anger and indignation: for having lifted me up, thou hast thrown me down.

12 My days have declined like a shadow, and I am withered like grass.

13 But thou, O Lord, endurest for ever: and thy memorial to all generations.

14 Thou shalt arise and have mercy on Sion: for it is time to have mercy on it, for the time is come.

15 For the stones thereof have pleased thy servants: and they shall have pity on the earth thereof.

16 And the Gentiles shall fear thy name, O Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory.

17 For the Lord hath built up Sion: and he shall be seen in his glory.

18 He hath had regard to the prayer of the humble: and he hath not despised their petition.

19 Let these things be written unto another generation: and the people that shall be created, shall praise the Lord:

20 Because he hath looked forth from his high sanctuary: from heaven the Lord hath looked upon the earth.

21 That he might hear the groans of them that are in fetters: that he might release the children of the slain:

22 That they may declare the name of the Lord in Sion: and his praise in Jerusalem.

23 When the people assembled together, and kings to serve the Lord.

24 He answered him in the way of his strength: Declare unto me the fewness of my days.

* Exod. xxxiv. 6. Num. xiv. 8.

C.—But these etymological reasons are not very certain, nor important. H.—We may adhere to the Sept as many interpreters do. Bert.—The sparrow having lost its mate, mourns in or near its nest. W.

VER. 9. Against me. To kill me, (Acts xxiii. 12.) or to prove my guilt. C.—They are my sworn enemies, (W.) who formerly seemed my friends. H.

VER. 10. For. Or “therefore.” Weeping. These figurative expressions denote excessive grief. Ps. lxxix. 6. C.—Meat and drink gave me no more satisfaction than ashes. W.—Rolling on the ground, through grief, my food was spoiled. M.

VER. 13. Memorial. Thou wilt be remembered by us with gratitude for all eternity, (H.) or wilt thou punish for ever such short-lived creatures? C.—S. Paul understands this of Jesus Christ, (Heb. i. 11. Bert.) or he rather refers to v. 26. H.—The hope of the Messias gives me comfort. W.

VER. 14. Come. Pointed out; (Jer. xxix. 10. C.) or David wishes to repair the ravages caused by Absalom, or foretells the return from captivity, (H.) and the grace granted to the Church, and to every faithful soul. W.

VER. 15. Thereof. They had a great regard for the very soil. 4 K. v. 17. C.—Heb. “dust,” as it was then uncultivated. Bert.—Esdras, &c. repaired the ruins of Sion, as Christ and his apostles established the Church. M.

VER. 16. Glory. The conversion of nations is often predicted as about to take place after the captivity; yet not so fully, till the time of Christ. C.—His glory is so manifest, that all kings know it, although they be not converted. W.

VER. 17. Seen. Dwelling with us. Jo. 1. H.—Jerusalem had attained its ancient splendour before the coming of the Messias. C.

VER. 18. Humble. Patriarchs, priests, and all true penitents. W.

VER. 19. Generation. Lit. “in another,” by the subsequent writers of the Old and New Testaments. H.—Let all posterity become acquainted with this psalm, and know under what obligations we have been to the Lord.—Created. The Jews after the captivity, and, in a higher sense, (C.) Christians, the new creature. 2 Cor. v. 17. C. W.—This interpretation seems much the better, as kings and nations were converted only by the Messias, and his apostles. Bert.

VER. 22. That. The faithful in the Church endeavour to serve Christ. W.

VER. 23. Kings. This did not take place till the gospel was preached, (C.) though some kings offered sacrifice before, yet without being converted. See Zach. ii. 10. H.

VER. 24. He answered him in the way of his strength. That is, the people mentioned in the foregoing verse, or the penitent, in whose person this psalm is delivered, answered the Lord in the way of his strength: that is, according to the best of his power and strength; inquiring after the fewness of his days: to know

25 Call me not away in the midst of my days: thy years are unto generation and generation.

26 In the beginning, O Lord, thou foundedst the earth: and the heavens are the works of thy hands.

27 They shall perish, but thou remainest: and all of them shall grow old like a garment:

And as a vesture thou shalt change them, and they shall be changed. 28 But thou art always the self-same, and thy years shall not fail.

29 The children of thy servants shall continue: and their seed shall be directed for ever.

PSALM CII.

BENEDIC ANIMA.

Thanksgiving to God for his mercies.

1 For David himself.

BLESS the Lord, O my soul: and let all that is within me bless his holy name.

2 Bless the Lord, O my soul, and never forget all he hath done for thee.

3 Who forgiveth all thy iniquities: who healeth all thy diseases.

4 Who redeemeth thy life from destruction: who crowneth thee with mercy and compassion.

5 Who satisfieth thy desire with good things: thy youth shall be renewed like the eagle's.

6 The Lord doth mercies, and judgment for all that suffer wrong.

7 He hath made his ways known to Moses: his wills to the children of Israel.

8 *The Lord is compassionate and merciful: long suffering and plenteous in mercy.

9 He will not always be angry: nor will he threaten for ever.

10 He hath not dealt with us according to our sins: nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

11 For according to the height of the heaven above

if he should live long enough to see the happy restoration of Sion, &c. Ch.—The sense of the Vulg. is as good as that of the present Heb. “he hath weakened (afflicted. Mont.) my strength, in the way; He hath shortened my days. I said, my God, make me not depart in the midst,” &c.—The captives, or those who were set free, address God, though the psalmist himself may express what prayers he had poured forth in his bonds. C.—The variation of the Sept. and Heb. originates in the points; and the text has, his force, very properly, though the Jews would substitute “my.” Bert.—The stability of the Church is hence proved by S. Aug. H.

VER. 25. Days. Allow me time to grow in virtue. W. If I be cut off in my youth, I may not be prepared. M.

VER. 27. Perish. Or be changed in their qualities, (W.) as well as all other things, like a garment. This does not convey the idea of annihilation; and the Fathers are divided on this subject. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Apoc. xxi. 23. C.

VER. 28. Fail. This regards Christ, (Heb. i.) who has established his Church, (C.) to be perpetual (W.) in this world, (H.) and triumphant in eternity, ver. 29. C.—The psalm must therefore be understood literally of Him; unless it may have two senses, which those to whom S. Paul wrote must have known, otherwise it would not prove Christ's divinity. The Socinians are greatly puzzled how to evade this argument. Bert.

PSAL. CII. VER. 1. Himself. All agree that David wrote this psalm as a model of resignation. The occasion is not known. Bert.—It may express the sentiments of the captives, (C.) or of converts to Christianity, (Euseb.) and is written with inimitable sweetness.

VER. 3. Diseases. He had described captivity as an illness. Ps. ci. C.—God graciously forgives sin, and removes bad habits. He preserves us from falling, and grants us the victory, with all our reasonable requests. W.

VER. 5. Eagle's. Which get fresh feathers every year, like other birds. Is. xl. 31. C.—The eagle retains its vigour for a long time, (H.) though many fabulous accounts have been given of its renovation. Bert.—The new birth in baptism, (Theod.) or by faith, (Euseb.) or the resurrection of Christ are thus insinuated, (S. Leo, ser. 1.) as well as (H.) our resurrection and state of grace. The one is necessarily connected with the other, and both senses are good. W.

VER. 6. Mercies. Heb. “Justice” in protecting the innocent.

VER. 9. Ever. He executes his threats, but soon pardons us. C.—Heb. “he will not plead always, nor watch to surprise us for ever;” (C.) or “retain” his anger. Bert.—He is inclined to pity us, and only inflicts a temporal punishment on the penitent, as Christ has paid their ransom. W.

the earth: he hath strengthened his mercy towards them that fear him.

12 As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our iniquities from us.

13 As a father hath compassion on his children, so hath the Lord compassion on them that fear him: 14 for he knoweth our frame.

He remembereth that we are dust: 15 man's days are as grass, as the flower of the field so shall he flourish.

16 For the spirit shall pass in him, and he shall not be: and he shall know his place no more.

17 But the mercy of the Lord is from eternity and unto eternity upon them that fear him:

And his justice unto children's children, 18 to such as keep his covenant,

And are mindful of his commandments to do them.

19 The Lord hath prepared his throne in heaven: and his kingdom shall rule over all.

20 Bless the Lord, all ye his angels: you that are mighty in strength, and execute his word, hearkening to the voice of his orders.

21 Bless the Lord, all ye his hosts: you ministers of his that do his will.

22 Bless the Lord, all his works: in every place of his dominion, O my soul, bless thou the Lord.

PSALM CIII.

BENEDIC ANIMA.

God is to be praised for his mighty works, and wonderful providence.

1 For David himself.

BLESS the Lord, O my soul: O Lord my God, thou art exceedingly great.

VER. 10. Iniquities. Which deserved eternal reprobation.

VER. 11. Earth. There is no proportion between God's mercy and our crimes. C.—Sins are perfectly washed away, (W.) and not barely covered, as the east cannot be the west. Bert.—Sin remitted "sets for ever." S. Aug.

VER. 14. He remembereth. Rom. Sept. and psalter, &c. "Remember." Other copies agree with us. C.—God compassionates the frailty of those who fear him. Origen falsely inferred from v. 9. that the devils and the damned would one day be saved. But this is contrary to Scripture. v. 17. Matt. xxv. Apoc. xx. &c. W.

VER. 16. In him. Or "over it;" the flower. Or the spirit of God's indignation will overwhelm him. The soul of man departs, and cannot naturally be reunited with the body, though it greatly desire that union. C.—The longest life is but like the duration of a flower, (Is. xl. 6. H.) and the splendour of the noblest families is no better in the sight of God. S. Aug.

VER. 17. Justice. In protecting the oppressed, (C.) and rendering to every one according to his deserts abundantly. H.—God never punishes more than a person's crimes have merited. Ex. xx. 5. and xxxiv. 6. C.

VER. 19. All. When Christ shall sit in judgment, (Bert.) and the wicked be suffered no longer to disturb the order of things, and the joy of the elect. H.

VER. 20. His angels. You who have executed the orders of God for our delivery, help us to return him thanks. C.—Hearkening. Lit. "to hear," (H.) or that all may learn to obey God's mandates when they perceive how carefully the angels put them in execution. Bert.

VER. 21. Hosts. Sun, &c. which never deviate from their regular course.

VER. 22. Soul. In vain should we behold all nature praising God, if we neglected that duty. Bert.—All the works of the Most High praise him, being under his dominion. W.

PSAL. CIII. VER. 1. Himself. Sept. Comp. adds, "a psalm on the creation," (H.) as this is the subject; but there is no title in the original. Bert. The psalm contains "a divine and natural philosophy," (Euseb.) respecting the creation and providence. Plato has written something similar in his Timæus, (C.) though this comparison is indecent. Bert.—The imitation is no disparagement, however, to this divine word, and we may surely notice the concord between the inspired and profane writers. H.—This psalm seems to be a continuation of the preceding one. C.—Great. Lit. "magnified," in the same sense as we say, hallowed be thy name, praying that God may be honoured by all his creatures; (H.) though He cannot increase in holiness, &c. S. Aug.—We become acquainted with his greatness, by considering his works. C.—Praise. Lit. "confession," (H.) Heb. "glory." C.—Thou art entitled to all praise. W.

VER. 2. Light. In this manner he always appeared. 1 Tim. vi. 16. Ex. iii. 2. C.—Christ only once assumed such a glorious form at his transfiguration, (768)

Thou hast put on praise and beauty: 2 and art clothed with light as with a garment.

Who stretchest out the heaven like a pavilion: 3 who coverest the higher rooms thereof with water.

Who makest the clouds thy chariot: who walkest upon the wings of the winds.

4 * Who makest thy angels spirits: and thy ministers a burning fire.

5 Who hast founded the earth upon its own bases: it shall not be moved for ever and ever.

6 The deep, like a garment, is its clothing: above the mountains shall the waters stand.

7 At thy rebuke they shall flee: at the voice of thy thunder they shall fear.

8 The mountains ascend, and the plains descend into the place which thou hast founded for them.

9 Thou hast set a bound which they shall not pass over: neither shall they return to cover the earth.

10 Thou sendest forth springs in the vales: between the midst of the hills the waters shall pass.

11 All the beasts of the field shall drink: the wild asses shall expect in their thirst.

12 Over them the birds of the air shall dwell: from the midst of the rocks they shall give forth their voices.

13 Thou waterest the hills from thy upper rooms: the earth shall be filled with the fruit of thy works:

14 Bringing forth grass for cattle, and herb for the service of men.

That thou mayst bring bread out of the earth 15 and that wine may cheer the heart of man.

That he may make the face cheerful with oil: and that bread may strengthen man's heart.

* Heb. i. 7.

because he came to instruct our mind and heart. Bert.—Stretchest. Heb. and Sept. have the verbs in the third person, till v. 6. as the Vulg. has here extendens. But S. Jerom. and others agree with us, though S. Paul quotes according to the Heb. v. 4. H.—Pavilion. The idea of the heavens resting like a tent upon the earth was very prevalent. Job ix. 8. Is. xl. 22.

VER. 3. Water. The Fathers are not agreed about the nature or situation of these waters. Some take them to be angels. S. Jer. Gen. i. 7.—Others suppose that the waters in the clouds, (C.) or the crystalline substance in the region of the stars are designated. W.—These waters are represented as the roof of God's palace. Euseb.—Winds. With surprising velocity, his providence being every where. Theod.—The psalmist accommodates himself to our capacity, to shew that God does all with the utmost ease. W.

VER. 4. Fire. The elements execute his will, (C.) or rather, as the apostle, and Chal. &c. intimate, the angels do this (Bert.) with zeal and activity, (Heb. 1. 7. H.) and ease. W.—Some would attribute to the angels some sort of light bodies, and Grotius attempted to revive this opinion, which never could prevail over the contrary one, which is universally received. C.

VER. 5. Ever. The established order shall subsist, though the earth may move. Ps. ci. 27. Bert.—It is fixed by its own gravity in the centre. W.

VER. 6. The deep. Heb. "thou hast covered it with the abyss." This proves that there was no pre-existent matter, otherwise God would not have begun with plunging his work in the abyss, and in confusion. But he chose to bring this beautiful world out of a state of disorder in the space of six days, as Moses and the psalmist relate. Bert.—At first, all was created, covered with the waters. Gen. i.

VER. 7. Fear. Heb. "retire precipitately" to their beds, at thy command, (H.) on the third day. C.—Some think that a storm or the deluge are here described, (S. Chrys.) which is less probable. Bert. C.—The waters would naturally cover the earth; but are confined to their proper channels by God. W.

VER. 8. 9. The . . descend. This should be within a parenthesis, (Bert.) as the sequel speaks of the waters. H.—Earth. This seemed miraculous to those who supposed that the earth was flat. S. Amb. Hex. iii. 22. Job. vii. 12. Amos v. 8. C.—Providence points out the place for every thing. H.—

Jussit et extendi campos, &c. Ovid, Met. i. —God derogated from this law, which he had appointed for the waters, when he brought them again to overwhelm the guilty earth. H.

VER. 10. Pass. to supply the wants of all creatures. Springs and rain afford the necessary moisture.

VER. 11. Expect, waiting for one another, as all cannot drink at the fountains at the same time. The Chal. has the same idea, though the Heb. is explained, "shall break" (Houbig. "shall satisfy") their thirst. Bert.

VER. 13. Rooms, with rain, v. 3. C.—Earth, or its inhabitants. T.

16 The trees of the field shall be filled, and the cedars of Libanus which he hath planted: 17 there the sparrows shall make their nests.

The highest of them is the house of the heron. 18 The high hills are a refuge for the harts, the rock for the irchins.

19 He hath made the moon for seasons: the sun knoweth his going down.

20 Thou hast appointed darkness, and it is night: in it shall all the beasts of the woods go about.

21 The young lions roaring after their prey, and seeking their meat from God.

22 The sun ariseth, and they are gathered together: and they shall lie down in their dens.

23 Man shall go forth to his work, and to his labour until the evening.

24 How great are thy works, O Lord! thou hast made all things in wisdom; the earth is filled with thy riches.

25 So is this great sea, which stretcheth wide its arms: there are creeping things without number.

Creatures little and great. 26 There the ships shall go.

This sea-dragon which thou hast formed to play therein. 27 All expect of thee that thou give them food in season.

28 What thou givest to them they shall gather up: when thou openest thy hand, they shall all be filled with good.

29 But if thou turnest away thy face, they shall be troubled: thou shalt take away their breath, and they shall fail, and shall return to their dust.

30 Thou shalt send forth thy spirit, and they shall be created: and thou shalt renew the face of the earth.

* Infra cxiv. 2.—† 1 Par. xvi. 8. Isai. xli. 2.

VER. 14. Service. Cattle, or beasts of burden, are thus fed for man's service, though he may also eat legumes, &c. C.—Bring. God gives the increase. 1 Cor. iii. 7. H.

VER. 15. Oil. This was an article of food, (Bert.) and deemed almost as requisite for anointing the body, as bread and wine to support nature. Pliny xiv. 22. Hence it was prohibited in days of fasting. C.—These three things are put for all sorts of food. W.

VER. 16. Field. Heb. "of Jehova." Houbigant would substitute ssodi, "field," (H.) as this name of God is never used to denote "high" trees, &c. Bert.—God provides for the wants of all the creation, even of those things which seem less necessary to us. C.

VER. 17. Sparrows, or "birds" (Ps. ci. 8. H.) in general. Bert.—Highest; or, lit. "the tribe of the heron is their leader," (H.) first making their nests. Sept. seem to have read better than the present Heb. "the stork, the fir-trees are its house." Bert.

VER. 18. Irchins. S. Aug. reads also, "hares." These desert places are not useless. C.

VER. 19. Seasons and festivals, which it points out: mohadim. H.—During the night wild beasts seek their prey, as men and cattle may labour in the daytime. The sun, &c. were made for man's use, (C.) and not to be adored. Euseb.—These bodies move with the same regularity as if they had intelligence. Heracleot.

VER. 21. God, like all other creatures. Ps. cxliv. 15. and cxlvi. 9. C.

VER. 24. Riches. Lit. "possession." H.—Heb. "The fulness of the earth is thy possession." Sept. and ancient psal. "creature;" arichos. The other interpreters read arichos, (C.) which the Vulg. adopts. H.—The world derided Jesus Christ, the wisdom of God, and Creator of all. S. Aug.

VER. 25. Arms. Man acts thus to denote something very extensive. H.—The sea is frequently put for the same purpose. Job xl. 9. Lam. ii. 13. Arms is omitted in the Sept. and the ancient psalters.—Creep. vig. Fishes, (Gen. i. 20. C.) and all animals without feet (W.) in the waters. H.—Nothing multiplies so fast as fishes. Arist. Anim. ix. 17. W.

VER. 26. Go. The sea, which seems to be placed as a barrier, tends, by means of navigation, to the general convenience of nations. C.—Dragon. Leviathan, a huge fish, (Job xl. 20. W.) which Bochart takes to be the crocodile; though that monster is found rather in rivers. Bert.—It designates here all whales, and other great fishes which play in the sea without experiencing any fear like mortals. Some translate "to play with it," (C.) as aviv cannot agree with thalassa. Bert.—The prodigious size of these fishes costs God nothing. C.—The whole creation is but a plaything for him, ludens in orbe terrarum. Prov. viii. 31. H.—Some Jews impiously pretend that God plays three hours a day

31 May the glory of the Lord endure for ever: the Lord shall rejoice in his works.

32 He looketh upon the earth, and maketh it tremble: he toucheth the mountains, and they smoke

33 *I will sing to the Lord as long as I live: I will sing praise to my God while I have my being.

34 Let my speech be acceptable to him: but I will take delight in the Lord.

35 Let sinners be consumed out of the earth, and the unjust, so that they be no more: O my soul, bless thou the Lord.

PSALM CIV.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

A thanksgiving to God, for his benefits to his people Israel.

Alleluia.

GIVE ^bglory to the Lord, and call upon his name: declare his deeds among the Gentiles.

2 Sing to him, yea sing praises to him: relate all his wondrous works.

3 Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord.

4 Seek ye the Lord, and be strengthened: seek his face evermore.

5 Remember his marvellous works, which he hath done; his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth.

6 O ye seed of Abraham, his servant; ye sons of Jacob, his chosen.

7 He is the Lord our God: his judgments are in all the earth.

8 He hath remembered his covenant for ever: the word which he commanded to a thousand generations:

9 *Which he made to Abraham; and his oath to Isaac:

with the leviathan, and that he only created two; one of which he killed to make a feast for the elect, and the other causes the tides, by turning itself, &c. See 4 Esdras, written at least in the second century. S. Jer. Muis. C.—Though this monster be too strong for man, it cannot defend itself out of water; (W.) and even in its own element man gains the victory by his skill. H.

VER. 23. All, is not in Heb. Sept. C.—But the sense is the same. H.

VER. 30. Thy. Chal. adds, "holy;" and the Fathers explain it of a spiritual renovation, or of the resurrection of the body. Bert.—Animals are still preserved by Providence. Euseb. C.

VER. 31. Works. Seeing that they are good. Gen. i. 31. May all continue to answer the end for which they were created. C.

VER. 32. Smoke. Exod. xix. 18. and xx. 18. God is terrible as well as clement. C.

VER. 35. No more. So S. Paul pronounced sentence on those who did not love the Lord Jesus, (1 Cor. xvi. 22.) yet without any animosity. Bert.—The saints thus pray for the conversion of all, (S. Athan.) or express their approbation of God's sentence against the damned. W.

PSAL. CIV. VER. 1. Alleluia. This word occurs at the end of the preceding psalm in Heb. and means, "Praise ye the Lord," though it is also used as an exclamation of joy; for which reason it is left untranslated. See Apoc. xx. 8. Aug. ep. ad Casulan. C.—It implies that we must praise God with all our power; and Catholic writers retain this (W.) and similar words in the original. H.—The first 15 verses of this psalm nearly agree with that which was composed by David, when the ark was to be removed from the house of Obededom. 1 Par. xvi. 8. 22. H.—But the last part seems to have been added by him, or by another afterwards, with some small alterations. Bert.—It was perhaps adapted to the dedication of the second temple, with the two following psalms. C.—Gentiles. Their conversion is thus insinuated. C.—The apostles preached to all. Euseb.—How much more ought we now to celebrate the mysteries of Christ! W.

VER. 3. Glory. 2 Cor. x. 17. Euseb.—Lit. "be praised," (H.) knowing to what an honor you have been raised, (Deut. xxx. 7. Jer. ix. 23.) and live accordingly.

VER. 4. Evermore. Be assiduous to obtain his favour, and present yourselves in his holy temple as often as you are able. C.

VER. 6. His servant. Or "servants." Sept. Vulg. is ambiguous. Heb. declares for servant here; but, his chosen, is certainly plural, and refers to all the people, and 1 Par. xvi. 13. we read, seed of Israel, his servants. H.

VER. 8. Generations. Or from the call of Abraham. But this was to be understood if the Israelites continued faithful, (Deut. xxviii.) or the promise regards the spiritual children of Abraham, who are blessed for ever, (Bert.) and continue to the end of the world. H.

VER. 11. Lot. Lit. "line," with which land was measured. C.—The de-

10 And he appointed the same to Jacob for a law: and to Israel, for an everlasting testament:

11 Saying: To thee will I give the land of Chanaan, the lot of your inheritance.

12 When they were but a small number: yea very few, and sojourners therein:

13 And they passed from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people.

14 He suffered no man to hurt them: and he re-proved kings for their sakes.

15 *Touch ye not my anointed: and do no evil to my prophets.

16 And he called a famine upon the land: and he broke in pieces all the support of bread.

17 He sent a man before them: ^bJoseph, who was sold for a slave.

18 *They humbled his feet in fetters: the iron pierced his soul, 19 until his word came.

The word of the Lord inflamed him. 20 ^aThe king sent, and he released him: the ruler of the people, and he set him at liberty.

21 He made him master of his house, and ruler of all his possession.

22 That he might instruct his princes as himself, and teach his ancients wisdom.

23 *And Israel went into Egypt: and Jacob was a sojourner in the land of Cham.

24 ^aAnd he increased his people exceedingly: and strengthened them over their enemies.

25 He turned their heart to hate his people: and to deal deceitfully with his servants.

scendants of the patriarchs would never have lost this inheritance, if they had observed the law. The promise was therefore conditional; though it was absolute, in as much as all were to be blessed in their seed: as they had begun to be, when Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus.

VER. 12. Very few. Heb. "as it were reduced to nothing," to avoid a tautology. Bert.—But this version is not necessary. H.—Jacob at this time was not married, (Bert.) and his parents had no part of the land. This manifests the power of God, and the faith of the patriarchs, (C.) who doubted not but that he would realize what he had promised. H.

VER. 13. People. This seemed to be a fresh obstacle to their possession of Chanaan. C.

VER. 15. Prophets. The word anointed is thus explained, as the patriarchs were not kings over any but their own families, though they were equal in riches to many kings. They foresaw future events, and offered sacrifice to God, as priests, in which sense also they may be styled anointed. No visible unction, but the divine appointment, might be requisite. God protected them in a wonderful manner, and selected them for his peculiar people. C. Heb. xi. 8.

VER. 16. And. The psalmist continues to mention the favours of God, till the Israelites entered the promised land, which the author of 1 Par. xvi. passes over. H.—Bread. In time of famine, people are not strengthened with their food. Euseb. Ezec. iv. 16. and v. 16.—God permitted, (W.) or caused the famine to rage.

VER. 17. He sent. Drawing good from the malice of Joseph's brethren, (H.) in which he had no hand. Bert.—Who could have thought that this event would have tended to Joseph's exaltation, and to the safety of his father's house?

VER. 18. Fetters. Heb. cebel, (H.) "a chain, or the stocks." The meaning is not ascertained. C.—Soul. Lu. ii. 35. He was in great distress, (H.) and in danger of perishing. Theod.

VER. 19. His word. By which he foretold his own glory, or what should befall the king's two officers, which brought him into notice. Gen. xxxvii. 9. and xl. 22. His word, may also refer to God's decree. C.—Inflamed him. He received the gift of prophecy, (H.) and being inflamed with the love of God, resisted the solicitations of Putiphar's wife.

VER. 22. Instruct. Heb. "bind" by precepts or chains, (Bert.) as he had all power.—Wisdom. Joseph was considered as the oracle of Egypt, and the prime minister. C.—We cannot doubt but he would strive to undeceive the people with regard to many superstitions. Theod. S. Aug.

VER. 23. Cham. Who resided there, and was worshipped under the name of Jupiter Ammon. Bochart, Phaleg. iv. 1. C.—Misraim was his son, and peopled the land. Gen. x. 13. W.

VER. 24. Exceedingly. In 215 years, 600,000 warriors sprung from seventy people, (C.) or from seventy-five, as Sept. and S. Stephen read, comprising eight wives, Jacob, and sixty-six of his descendants. Seventy might naturally produce (770)

26 ^aHe sent Moses, his servant: Aaron, the man whom he had chosen.

27 ^bHe gave them power to shew his signs, and his wonders in the land of Cham.

28 ^cHe sent darkness, and made it obscure: and grieved not his words.

29 ^dHe turned their waters into blood, and destroyed their fish.

30 ^eTheir land brought forth frogs, in the inner chambers of their kings.

31 ^fHe spoke, and there came divers sorts of flies, and cinifes in all their coasts.

32 He gave them hail for rain: a burning fire in their land.

33 And he destroyed their vineyards and their fig-trees: and he broke in pieces the trees of their coasts.

34 ^gHe spoke, and the locust came, and the bruchus, of which there was no number:

35 And they devoured all the grass in their land, and consumed all the fruit of their ground.

36 ^hAnd he slew all the first-born in their land: the first-fruits of all their labour.

37 ⁱAnd he brought them out with silver and gold: and there was not among their tribes one that was feeble.

38 Egypt was glad when they departed: for the fear of them lay upon them.

39 ^jHe spread a cloud for their protection, and fire to give them light in the night.

40 ^kThey asked, and the quail came: and he filled them with the bread of heaven.

two million and a half in such a space of time. But the Hebrews had been cruelly oppressed. God's blessing enabled them to increase as they did. Bert.

VER. 25. He turned their heart, &c. Not that God (who is never the author of sin) moved the Egyptians to hate and persecute his people; but that the Egyptians took occasion of hating and envying them, from the sight of the benefits which God bestowed upon them. Ch. S. Aug.—He permitted the malice of the Egyptians, (Theod.) and employed them to chastise his people, who had adored idols. Euseb. Acts vii. 43. Felix, Prot. &c. translate the Heb. "their heart was turned." Bert.—The perversity of the Egyptians came from themselves, though it was turned to a good account. W.

VER. 27. He gave. Heb. "they placed in them the words of their signs." C. Houbig.—But the Chal. and S. Jerom are conformable to the Sept. Bert.

VER. 28. Grieved not his words. That is, he was not wanting to fulfil his words: or he did not grieve Moses and Aaron, the carriers of his words: or he did not grieve his words, that is, his sons, the children of Israel, who enjoyed light whilst the Egyptians were oppressed with darkness. Ch.—He performed what he had threatened without reluctance. W.—We may also translate, "he added no threat (H.) before this ninth plague was inflicted." Heb. "and they did not irritate (or transgress) his word." The envoys of God were obedient to him. The copies of the Sept. are not uniform; (C.) some omit the negation, which would give a very good sense; though it must be allowed to be inaccurate, unless the Heb. be read with an interrogation, "did they not resist his word?" alluding to the Egyptians. Bert.—Almost all the ancients have the plural exacerbaverunt, except S. Jerom, in his commentary. C.

VER. 29. Blood. In reality, so that the fishes were killed. S. Athan.

VER. 30. Land. Including the rivers. Ex. vii. 1. and viii. 3.—Kings, or noblemen. Bert.

VER. 31. Flies. This was revealed to David, or known by tradition, as it is not recorded by Moses. W.—Some copies of the Sept. have, "the dog-fly," cinifes (Ex. viii. 16.) gnata, (H.) which are very common and tormenting in Egypt. The Jews understand lice. Joseph and the Chal. C.

VER. 32. Rain. Which falls in Egypt, though less frequently. C. Wisd. xvi. 17.

VER. 34. Bruchus. An insect of the locust kind, (Ch.) or a worm which spoils corn, &c. W.

VER. 36. Labour. This explains the first part of the verse. Gen. xlix. 3. Pa. lxxvii. 51. H.—The fifth and sixth plagues are not specified. W.

VER. 37. Gold. Which the Egyptians gave to get quit of them, (Ex. xi. 1.) and that with joy, (v. 38.) though they might at first only intend to lend. S. Aug. Bert.—Feeble. This refutes the notion which the enemies of the Jews had propagated, saying that they were banished on account of the leprosy. They felt none of the inconveniences which fell on the Egyptians, and God removed every obstacle which might retard their flight. C.—According to the course of nature, out of two million and a half, 150 people die daily. Bert.

41 *He opened the rock, and waters flowed: rivers ran down in the dry land.

42 ^bBecause he remembered his holy word, which he had spoken to his servant, Abraham.

43 And he brought forth his people with joy, and his chosen with gladness.

44 And he gave them the lands of the Gentiles: and they possessed the labours of the people:

45 That they might observe his justifications, and seek after his law.

PSALM CV.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

A confession of the manifold sins and ingratitude of the Israelites.

Alleluia.

GIVE *glory to the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 ^dWho shall declare the powers of the Lord? who shall set forth all his praises?

3 Blessed are they that keep judgment, and do justice at all times.

4 Remember us, O Lord, in the favour of thy people: visit us with thy salvation.

5 That we may see the good of thy chosen, that we may rejoice in the joy of thy nation: that thou mayst be praised with thy inheritance.

6 *We have sinned with our fathers: we have acted unjustly, we have wrought iniquity.

7 Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt: they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies:

And they provoked to wrath, going up to the sea, even the Red Sea.

VER. 40. Asked. Chal. and ancient psalters add, "for meat." Heb. "he (Moses, or all the people) asked, and the quail came," at Sin. Ex. xvi. 13.

VER. 41. Rivers. The waters from the rock were so abundant. C. Ex. xvii. 6. Bert.

VER. 44. People. Whose crimes have deserved death. Num. xxxiii. 51. Deut. vii. 5. C.

VER. 45. His justifications. That is, his commandments: which here, and in many other places of the Scripture, are called justifications, because the keeping of them make men just. The Protestants render it by the word statutes, in favour of their doctrine, which does not allow good works to justify. Ch.—The design of God in granting Chanaan to the Israelites, was to encourage them to preserve the true religion. C.

PSAL. CV. VER. 1. Alleluia. The word is repeated in some copies. S. Jer.—But Heb. has only one at the end of the preceding psalm: of which this appears to be a sequel. As in the former, God's favours were specified, so here the ingratitude of his people is acknowledged. C.—It may refer to the Jews during, (Euseb. Vatab.) or after the captivity, (C.) and to all in the state of sin. S. Jer. Bert.—The 47th and 48th verses agree with the three last, which were sung at the translation of the ark. 1 Par. xvi. 34. H.—Hence that canticle now makes a part of our Ps. civ. xcv. and cv. with various alterations made by the prophet. Bert.—Give glory. Lit. "confess" (H.) your sins, to obtain mercy, (S. Chrys.) or rather praise God, (Theod.) who is the source of all good. W.—This was the usual prayer of the Israelites, in ceremonies of thanksgiving. 2 Par. v. 13. C.

VER. 2. Powers. See Eccl. xliii. 29. No one can sufficiently praise God's power or mercy. Bert.

VER. 3. Times. He only who perseveres to the end shall be crowned. Matt. xxiv. 13. Ezec. xxxiii. H.—Such as these can alone worthily sound forth God's praises, (Bert.) being so happy as to preserve their innocence, or at least to repent. W.

VER. 4. Us. Heb. "me." But Aquila, Syr. &c. agree with the Sept. Some of the Jews were already returned, and pray for the liberation of their brethren. C.—The Fathers explain it of Christian converts. S. Chrys.—People. According to thy gracious promises, that we may enjoy the blessings of thy elect. W.

VER. 6. Sinned. Here commences the confession of sins. The just man first acquiesces himself. Prov. xviii. 17. C.—The same prayer is repeated, Judith vii. 19. and Dan. ix. 5. as it might be applicable to the captives. Bert.—We have injured ourselves, our neighbours, and our God. W.

VER. 12. Words. And Moses his servant. Ex. xiv. 81. and xv. 1.

VER. 13. Counsel. Three days after the passage of the sea, God laid injunctions upon them at Mara, which they would not observe. Ex. xv. 22. C.—They coveted unnecessary things. W.

VER. 14. Desire. Or they greedily sought for flesh meat, (H.) at Sin, or Pharan. Ex. xvi. 13. Num. xi. 31. Chronological order is not observed. C.

VER. 15. Rulness. Or disgust; πλεμνία. Sept. probably read zore, (as Num. xi. 20.) instead of razon. Heb. "leanness," (C.) which is a natural consequence of immoderate repletion. H.

VER. 16. Holy one. By his function (W.) of priest. Core wished to take his place, as the rest did to supplant Moses in the civil government. Num. xvi. C.

VER. 17. Abiron. With Core, though his children were preserved. C.—God presently resented the injury done to his ministers. Euseb.

VER. 18. Wicked. Two hundred and fifty accomplices, (Num. xv. 25. C.) and fourteen thousand seven hundred murderers. M.

VER. 19. Graven. Heb. "molten." The image must first be graven. Bert. Ex. xxxii. 3.

VER. 20. Grass. This enhances their folly. God is often styled the glory of his people. C.—Osee (x. 5.) contemptuously calls the golden calf, the glory of Samaria. H.—This idolatry was truly blameable, (Rom. i. 23.) and not the veneration paid by Catholics to the images of Christ, &c. W.—Those who pretend that the Hebrews meant to adore the true God, and not the idol Apis, are here clearly refuted; they forgot God, &c. Acts vii. 40. Bert.

VER. 23. Breach. Like a valiant captain, (C.) or pastor. H.—God complains of those who neglected this duty. Ezec. xiii. 5. and xxii. 30. The psalmist alluded to the conduct of Moses, after the people had adored the calf, (Ex. xxxii. 10.) or when they had joined with Core. Num. xvi. 44. C.—The intercession of the saints is useful, (S. 30 ^bThen Phinees stood up, and pacified him: and the slaughter ceased.

31 And it was reputed to him unto justice, to generation and generation for evermore.

32 °They provoked him also at the waters of contradiction: and Moses was afflicted for their sakes: 33 because they exasperated his spirit.

And he distinguished with his lips. 34 They did not destroy the nations, of which the Lord spoke unto them.

35 And they were mingled among the heathens, and learned their works: 36 and served their idols, and it became a stumbling-block to them.

37 And they sacrificed their sons, and their daughters, to devils.

38 And they shed innocent blood: the blood of their sons and of their daughters, which they sacrificed to the idols of Chanaan.

And the land was polluted with blood, 39 and was defiled with their works: and they went aside after their own inventions.

* Num. xiv. 32.—^b Num. xxv. 7.

VER. 24. Word. Which Moses, Josue, &c. announced. Num. xiii. and xii. 29. C.

VER. 26 Over them. Swearing (C.) to destroy them, (H. Eze. xx. 23.) and scatter them, as they now experienced. Lev. xxvi. 31. and Deut. xxviii. 56. 64.

VER. 28. Dead idols, without life, (Ch.) particularly Adonis (C.) whose death is bewailed by the poets, &c. H.—Idols kill their votaries. W.

VER. 29. Multiplied. All who had murmured perished, or this may relate to the 24,000. Num. xxv. 9. C.—Eze. xx. 23. S. Paul (1 Cor. x. 8.) speaks of those 23,000 slain by the Levites. The Heb. which has only 3,000 must be incorrect. Temporal chastisements were intended to prefigure those which are eternal, as the Jews knew that such rewards and punishments were to be considered (Matt. xiv. 16. Bert.) as the spiritual sense of the law. Grot. Jur. ii. 20, 39.

VER. 31. Evermore. Phinees thus by his pious zeal, merited (W.) God's favour, and the high priesthood (Num. xxv. 13. C.) for his posterity, for 900 years, though the latter promise seems to have been conditional. Bert.

VER. 33. He distinguished with his lips. Moses, by occasion of the people's rebellion and incredulity, was guilty of distinguishing with his lips; when, instead of speaking to the rock, as God had commanded, he said to the people, with a certain hesitation in his faith, Hear ye rebellious and incredulous: Can we from this rock bring out water for you? Num. xx. 10. Ch.—For thus doubting of God's will, he was temporarily punished. Deut. i. 37. W.—The death of his sister, and the ingratitude and rebellion of the people disturbed him. Theod. See Is. lxiii. 10. Houbigant follows the Arab, "he delayed or hesitated." Yebatte means, "he spoke rashly." Some refer this, (Bert.) to God. "He reproached... that they," &c. (M.) which is not necessary, (Bert.) or he sentenced Moses to die. Kimchi.

VER. 34. Them. Commanding no idolatrous government to be left in the land, nor any Chanaanite to be permitted to live, who should make opposition. The law of extermination must probably be thus restricted. The Jews neglected these ordinances, and hence became so often infected with idolatry, (Bert.) even to the end of the republic, when many still adored the sun. Joseph. Bel. ii. 8. Ex. xxiii. 32. Jos. xiii. 13.

VER. 38. Chanaan. These unnatural sacrifices were perhaps practised under the judges, or at least under the kings. W.—Some pretend that the children were only made to pass over or between fires. But this is refuted by facts. Lev. xviii. 21. and 4 K. xvi. 3. Jer. vii. 30.—*Polluted. 40 And the Lord was exceedingly angry with his people: and he abhorred his inheritance.

41 And he delivered them into the hands of the nations: and they that hated them had dominion over them.

42 And their enemies afflicted them: and they were humbled under their hands: 43 many times did he deliver them.

But they provoked him with their counsel: and they were brought low by their iniquities.

44 And he saw when they were in tribulation: and he heard their prayer.

45 ^dAnd he was mindful of his covenant: and repented according to the multitude of his mercies.

46 And he gave them unto mercies, in the sight of all those that had made them captives.

47 Save us, O Lord, our God: and gather us from among the nations:

That we may give thanks to thy holy name, and may glory in thy praise.

48 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting: and let all the people say: So be it, so be it.

VER. 39. And was. Heb. "and they were defiled." S. Jer.—Inventions. Idols of their imaginations, (H.) and lusts. C.

VER. 45. Repented. Ceased to punish, (Euseb.) when the people repented. S. Jer.—God then regarded them in mercy, having given them grace to repent. W.

VER. 46. Mercies. He inspired their enemies with pity for them. Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes shewed them favour. Pa. lxxxiii. 12. C.

VER. 47. Save. These verses, which may be well recited in times of schism, (W.) occur, 1 Par. xvi. being probably inserted by Esdras, or some other prophet. But here they are in their proper place, as many of the Israelites are still in captivity. C.—Yet as this is only a system, we may rather suppose, that David wrote this conclusion. He had to encounter various nations, who might have made captives; and he may beg that all may be united in the same faith, and avoid the society of the wicked. Bert.

VER. 48. So be it. The second Amen occurs not in Heb. But Alleluia is placed instead, which the Vulg. makes the title of the next psalm. H.—This conclusion of the fourth book seems to be added by the collector. Ps. xl. C.—Yet this is uncertain. H.

PSAL. CVI. VER. 1. Alleluia. S. Aug. repeats this word. But it occurs in the Heb. &c. at the end of the preceding psalm, of which this is a continuation, shewing how God pardoned his people, and delivered them from captivity, (C.) and mankind from sin. H. Fathers. Bert.—Glory. Lit. "confess" your sins, that you may praise God, (Pa. cv. H.) and adore his mercy and providence. W.

VER. 2. Countries. The Jews from Babylon, and all who were redeemed by Christ. C.—He was promised immediately after the fall. W.

VER. 3. Sea. Heb. miyam, for which we should read minim "the right," denoting the south. C.—But the sea, or ocean, is properly used in the same sense. 5 They were hungry and thirsty: their soul fainted in them.

6 And they cried to the Lord in their tribulation: and he delivered them out of their distresses.

13 Then they cried to the Lord in their affliction: and he delivered them out of their distresses.

14 And he brought them out of darkness, and the shadow of death: and broke their bonds in sunder.

20 He sent his word, and healed them: and delivered them from their destructions.

21 Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of men.

22 And let them sacrifice the sacrifice of praise: and declare his works with joy.

VER. 8. Mercies. We are unworthy to open our mouths. This chorus is repented, (v. 15. 21. 31.) by the people, after the Levites had sung the intermediate sentences. C.—The v. 6. 13. 19. are of the same nature, and refer to different sorts of calamities. Bert.—All the benefits of God, proceeding from his mercy, and not from man's deserts, praise him. W.

VER. 10. Darkness. This second allegory represents the condition of the captives, and of mankind, before Christ's coming. C.—The former enjoyed some liberty. Jer. xix. 5.—But the latter were most miserable, (Matt. ix. 15. Luc. iv. 18.) and of these the words are most naturally explained. Bert.

VER. 11. Exasperated. Heb. "changed, or frustrated." This is the source of all misery, (C.) as calamities are commonly inflicted on account of sin. W.

VER. 12. Labours. There were slaves of various descriptions: some were confined to hard labour, and chained down at night. C.

VER. 14. Bonds. Of their passions. See S. Aug. Conf. viii. 11. H.

VER. 17. Iniquity. Making them alter their conduct. Heb. seems less correct: "they are foolish on account of their way, and they," &c. Illness is sent to punish sin. Job xxxiii. 19. Matt. ix. 2. Jo. v. 14. C.

VER. 20. Word. Jesus Christ, according to the prophetic sense, adopted by the Fathers, (S. Athan. or S. &c.) though it literally implies, that at God's command the sick were healed. Matt. viii. 7.—This allegory again represents the state of captivity. C.

VER. 22. Praise. Instead of victims. Ps. xxvi. &c.

24 These have seen the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep.

25 He said the word, and there arose a storm of wind: and the waves thereof were lifted up.

26 They mount up to the heavens, and they go down to the depths: their soul pined away with evils.

27 They were troubled, and reeled like a drunken man: and all their wisdom was swallowed up.

28 And they cried to the Lord in their affliction: and he brought them out of their distresses.

29 And he turned the storm into a breeze: and its waves were still.

30 And they rejoiced because they were still: and he brought them to the haven which they wished for.

31 Let the mercies of the Lord give glory to him: and his wonderful works to the children of men.

32 And let them exalt him in the church of the people: and praise him in the chair of the ancients.

33 He hath turned rivers into a wilderness: and the sources of waters into dry ground:

34 A fruitful land into barrenness, for the wickedness of them that dwell therein.

35 He hath turned a wilderness into pools of waters, and a dry land into water-springs.

36 And he hath placed there the hungry: and they made a city for their habitation.

37 And they sowed fields, and planted vineyards: and they yielded fruit of birth.

38 And he blessed them, and they were multiplied exceedingly: and their cattle he suffered not to decrease.

39 Then they were brought to be few: and they were afflicted through the trouble of evils and sorrow.

40 Contempt was poured forth upon their princes: and he caused them to wander where there was no passing, and out of the way.

41 And he helped the poor out of poverty: and made him families like a flock of sheep.

VER. 40. Princes. Jehonias was humbled, (H.) and exalted, with Daniel, &c. 4 K. xxv. 27. Others explain it of Nabuchodonosor and Baltasar, who were reduced to the state of ignominy and death. C.—The Jews experienced the greatest miseries at the last siege of Jerusalem. Bert.

PSALM CVII.

PARATUM COR MEUM.

The prophet praiseth God for benefits received.

1 A canticle of a psalm for David himself.

2 MY heart is ready, O God, my heart is ready: I will sing, and will give praise, with my glory.

3 Arise, my glory; arise, psaltery and harp: I will arise in the morning early.

4 I will praise thee, O Lord, among the people: and I will sing unto thee among the nations.

5 For thy mercy is great above the heavens: and thy truth even unto the clouds.

6 Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens, and thy glory over all the earth: 7 that thy beloved may be delivered.

Save with thy right hand, and hear me. 8 God hath spoken in his holiness:

I will rejoice, and I will divide Sichem: and I will mete out the vale of tabernacles.

9 Galaad is mine, and Manasses is mine: and Ephraim the protection of my head.

Juda is my king: 10 Moab the pot of my hope.

Over Edom I will stretch out my shoe: the aliens are become my friends.

11 Who will bring me into the strong city? who will lead me into Edom?

12 Wilt not thou, O God, who hast cast us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our armies?

13 O grant us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man.

14 Through God we shall do mightily: and he will bring our enemies to nothing.

VER. 42. Mouth. The psalmist saw Babylon before its ruin, (C.) at least in spirit. God's judgments strengthen virtue, and repress the wicked. H. The propagation of the gospel put to silence the oracles of the pagans. Bert.

VER. 43. Lord. This is the part of wisdom, and deserves our serious consideration, (H.) as Osee (xiv. 10.) and our Saviour admonish. Matt. xi. 15. and xiii. 9. Mar. iv. 9. &c.

PSAL. CVII. VER. 1. Himself. By repeating here what occurs in Ps. lvi. and lix. David teaches us to excite our fervour by such sentiments as have formerly made an impression upon us. Bert.—He spoke before of his own victories: now he considers those of Christ, and of his Church, (Geneb.) as well as the state of the captives. Theod. C.

VER. 2. My heart, &c. Is not repeated in Heb. But it is, Ps. lvi. 8.

VER. 3. Arise, my glory. Is found also in this psalm, though not here in Heb. &c. S. Jerom (ad Sun.) thinks some copyist has inserted it. C.—But it seems to be here in its proper place. Bert.

VER. 4. Nations. David made various conquests, which prefigured those of Christ, to whom the rest of the psalm belongs. S. Aug. W.

VER. 7. That. See Ps. lix. 7. W.

VER. 8. Holiness. Or holy one, sancto: (H.) meaning Jeremias xxv. 11. who foretold the end of the captivity, (C.) or David himself, and the Messias, his son, in whom he will rejoice. H.

PSAL. CVIII. VER. 1. David. S. Peter attributes it to him, and gives us the key to this psalm, by applying (v. 8.) to the traitor Judas. Acts i. 16. 20. Bert. T. vii.—Our Saviour seems to allude to it, when he styles Judas, the son of perdition. Jo. xvii. 8. It may also have a reference to Doeg, or Achitophel, who were his forerunners. Ven. Bede thinks it was composed by the Machabees, against apostates. The Church used it in the deposition of bishops, and against the usurpers of ecclesiastical goods: (Grot.) and, in times of ignorance, some thought hereby to discover thieves. The style is very vehement, (C.) containing the sentence pronounced by the sovereign judge against the reprobate. H.

VER. 2. Praise. Heb. "God of my praise," (C.) whom I always adore, under every dispensation of Providence. H.—Yet the original may agree with the Vulg. and Christ desires to be glorified, (Jo. xii. 23. and xvii. 5. Bert.) and styles his passion, his praise. Theod.—David appeals to God's judgment. C.—Man. The Pharisees, &c. endeavoured to entangle Christ. Matt. xxii. W.—Saul's courtiers strove, by calumnies, to excite his rage against David. C.

VER. 3. Cause. Or provocation. H.—So Catiline gratuito potius malus quam crudelis erat. Sallust.—The sanctity of Jesus Christ could not be overwhelmed, or hidden, (H.) even with the torrent of abuse thrown upon him.

VER. 4. Detracted. Heb. and Sept. "calumniated," as v. 20. and 29. C.—Prayer. Jesus Christ prayed for his enemies, (Lu. xxiii. 34. Flam.) and did (774)

PSALM CVIII.

DEUS LAUDEM MEAM.

David, in the person of Christ, prayeth against his persecutors; more especially the traitor Judas; foretelling and approving his just punishment for his obstinacy in sin and final impenitence.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

2 O GOD, be not thou silent in my praise: for the mouth of the wicked and the mouth of the deceitful man is opened against me.

3 They have spoken against me with deceitful tongues; and they have compassed me about with words of hatred; and have fought against me without cause.

4 Instead of making me a return of love, they detracted me: but I gave myself to prayer.

5 And they repaid me evil for good: and hatred for my love.

6 Set thou the sinner over him: and may the devil stand at his right hand.

7 When he is judged, may he go out condemned; and may his prayer be turned to sin.

8 May his days be few: and his bishopric let another take.

9 May his children be fatherless, and his wife a widow.

10 Let his children be carried about vagabonds, and beg; and let them be cast out of their dwellings.

11 May the usurer search all his substance: and let strangers plunder his labours.

12 May there be none to help him; nor any one to pity his fatherless offspring.

13 May his posterity be cut off; in one generation may his name be blotted out.

14 May the iniquity of his fathers be remembered

many good works for the benefit of all. Jo. x. 32. Acts x. 38. David had also signified himself in the defence of his country, and yet was banished. He shews that he was animated with the perfect spirit of the gospel, though the law permitted retaliation. Ex. xxi. 24. C.

VER. 6. Set thou the sinner over him, &c. Give to the devil, that arch-sinner, power over him: let him enter into him, and possess him. The imprecations, contained in the thirty verses of this psalm, are opposed to the thirty pieces of silver for which Judas betrayed our Lord: and are to be taken as prophetic denunciations of the evils that should befall the traitor, and his accomplices, the Jews; and not properly as curses. Ch.—The devil entered into Judas, (Jo. xiii. 2. C.) who hung himself in despair. W.—The Jews were abandoned over to cruel masters, as Doeg and Achitophel presently perished. Ps. li. 5. It was customary at trials, for a satan, or "adversary," to be stationed at the right hand of the accused. Zac. iii. 1. C.

VER. 7. Prayer. Or may his supplication to judges for pardon irritate them, (C.) and let it not move God to mercy any more than a sin. M.—God rejects such prayers as are destitute of the proper conditions, as he did those of Antiochus, (S. Aug. C.) and they are a fresh sin. Bert.—Yet the prayer of a sinner is not so, when he acts sincerely. H.

VER. 8. Bishopric. Επισκοπή, "inspection or pre-eminence" of any kind. Judas lost his spiritual office, and the Jews all dominion in a very short time. S. Peter quotes this passage, and only the Socinians will assert that he does not adhere to the literal sense. Bert.—The apostleship (W.) was given to S. Matthias. C.—The priesthood of Aaron was forced to give place to that of Melchisedech. M.

VER. 9. Widow. Judas was married, (S. Aug.) and stole for his family; (J. yran.) though as the Scripture is silent, S. Chrys. believes the contrary. M.—The synagogue being rejected, the Jews are in a manner orphans. C.—The posterity of persecutors prosper not long. W.—All sorts of imprecations are used that some may fall upon the guilty. Geneb. M.

VER. 10. Out. Heb. "seek." S. Jer. "be sought after," which implies that they are rejected. Houbig.—The being reduced to beg, is terrible to one who has been brought up in a better manner.—Dwellings. Sept. (M.) and S. Jer. "ruins." The Jews were forbidden to weep over the ruins of Jerusalem, and are become vagabonds. C.

VER. 11. Usurer. The Romans forced the miserable Jews to pay taxes, and Domitian banished them from Rome, to live in a wood, where their furniture was only a basket and some hay, and their wives came to beg.

in the sight of the Lord: and let not the sin of his mother be blotted out.

15 May they be before the Lord continually, and let the memory of them perish from the earth: 16 because he remembered not to shew mercy.

17 But persecuted the poor man and the beggar; and the broken in heart, to put him to death.

18 And he loved cursing, and it shall come unto him: and he would not have blessing, and it shall be far from him.

And he put on cursing, like a garment: and it went in like water into his entrails, and like oil in his bones.

19 May it be unto him like a garment which covereth him; and like a girdle with which he is girded continually.

20 This is the work of them who detract me before the Lord; and who speak evils against my soul.

21 But thou, O Lord, do with me for thy name's sake: because thy mercy is sweet.

Do thou deliver me, 22 for I am poor and needy, and my heart is troubled within me.

23 I am taken away like the shadow when it declineth: and I am shaken off as locusts.

24 My knees are weakened through fasting: and my flesh is changed for oil.

25 And I am become a reproach to them: they saw me, and they shook their heads.

VER. 13. In one. Heb. "another." Let none remember them. The ruin of Jerusalem took place within forty years time. C.—Arch-heretics are not long followed: their disciples make fresh discoveries. W.

VER. 14. Out. As children derive great advantages from the piety of their parents, so they also feel the punishment of their crimes, when they imitate them. Deut. xiv. 16. Free xviii. 20. If they share in the afflictions of their family, and are free from sin, this must be considered as a trial, and they will be amply rewarded in a future world. God is the arbiter of the life and death of all. External miseries may afflict both the just and sinners; but the motive for their being sent is very different. The Jews prayed, Let his blood be upon us, and upon our children; (Matt. xxvii. 25.) and they became chargeable with all the crimes of their ancestors. Matt. xxvii. 25. C.

VER. 15. The. Iniquities, (H.) or may the sinners be "against the Lord," and He against them. Lev. xxvi. 21. C.

VER. 16. Mercy. Therefore he, the chief, and each of his adherents, can expect to find no mercy. Jam. ii. 13. H.—By the most crying injustice, the Jews put to death, the man of sorrows, (C.) who had been pleased to assume our nature, and had not where to lay his head. Lu. ix. 50. M.

VER. 18. Bones. This strikingly describes the malediction of a person who has swallowed iniquity like water. Job. xv. 16. Prov. iv. 17. The Jews had spoken ill of Christ, and of his disciples. Matt. xxvii. 25. Jo. ix. 17. C.—Let all who delight in cursing, attend to this sentence. W.—They like those things, which bring on both temporal and eternal misery. M.

VER. 20. Work. They effect their own ruin. H.—The Jews pretended to act for the glory of God, being influenced with a zeal without knowledge. Some translate, "let such be the recompense;" which is not amiss. Bert.

VER. 21. With me. Many ancient psalters supply, "thy mercy," with the Arab. C.—Grace must always accompany our endeavours. 1 Cor. xv. 10. Bert.

VER. 22. Within me. In the garden. Christ did penance for sin all his life. He wept over Jerusalem. Lu. xix. 41. H.

VER. 23. Locusts. David was forced to wander about. Christ continually sought after the lost sheep, (C.) and was hurried to different tribunals. M.—S. Jerom applies this to the Jews, and S. Aug. to Christians under persecution. C.

VER. 24. For oil, propter oleum. The meaning is, my flesh is changed, being perfectly emaciated, and dried up, as having lost all its oil, or fatness. Ch.—Or, "on account of the privation of perfumes," (Bert.) which the Jews looked upon as necessary. David and Jesus Christ were exposed to many inconveniences.

VER. 25. Heads, and saying, Vah, &c. (Matt. xxvii. 40.) as Semei insulted David, (2 K. xvi. 5. C.) though he is not said to have shaken his head, for which reason the prophecy may rather relate solely to Christ. Bert.—"To pay our ransom, he was crucified; to be crucified, he was despised; and to be despised, he appeared in a state of abjection." S. Aug.—These three steps were requisite, as the Jews would never have dared to lay hands on him, if he had appeared in glory. Bert.

VER. 27. It. My suffering, (Bert.) or deliverance. C.—Jesus Christ prays for a glorious resurrection, and that his enemies may be covered with all possible confusion. W.

VER. 29. Cloak. Διὰ δὲ, means the outward robe. Heb. mehil. H. Gal. ii. 13.—"The cross of Jesus Christ shall be the glory of believers, and the confusion of infidels." S. Leo. ser. xviii. de pas.—A salutary and inward shame may 27 And let them know that this is thy hand: and that thou, O Lord, hast done it.

28 They will curse, and thou wilt bless: let them that rise up against me be confounded: but thy servant shall rejoice.

29 Let them that detract me be clothed with shame. and let them be covered with their confusion as with a double cloak.

30 I will give great thanks to the Lord with my mouth; and in the midst of many I will praise him.

31 Because he hath stood at the right hand of the poor, to save my soul from persecutors.

PSALM CIX.

DIXIT DOMINUS.

Christ's exaltation, and everlasting priesthood.

1 A psalm for David.

THE Lord said to my Lord: Sit thou at my right hand:

^bUntil I make thy enemies thy footstool.

2 The Lord will send forth the sceptre of thy power out of Sion: rule thou in the midst of thy enemies.

3 With thee is the principality in the day of thy strength; in the brightness of the saints: from the womb before the day-star I begot thee.

* Matt. xxii. 44.—^b 1 Cor. xv. 25. Heb. i. 13. and x. 18.

be of great advantage. H.—Christ prays that his enemies may feel such a sorrow, and be converted. S. Jer.—"He speaks not against, but in favour of, the Jews." S. Aug. C.

VER. 30. Many. In the Catholic Church, (H.) till the end of the world. C.

VER. 31. My. Heb. "his soul from the judges," Pilate and the Jews, (C.) particularly the Sanhedrim. How many still continue to persecute Christ, and do not tremble! Bert.

PSAL. CIX. VER. 1. David. It is of faith that he wrote this psalm on the Messias. The Jews, in our Saviour's time, were convinced of it, (Matt. xxvi. 42.) so that their posterity (Bert.) in vain attempts to explain it of Abraham, David, Solomon, Ezechias, or Zorobabel. S. Chrys.—Even some of them candidly own that it can relate to no other, (Thalmod.) and Christians are universally of this belief. C.—The Lord. Heb. Ichova, (H.) the Father. M.—To my Lord. Heb. Ladoni, (H.) the Son incarnate, (M.) Lord of all, though the son of David. W.—Who else could be David's superior? as Christ argues. H.—The title Abnan is given to God, (v. 5. &c. C.) as my is never united with the ineffable name—Haud. In equal power (Bert.) as God, and in the highest dignity as man, after the ascension. C.—This thought should encourage us to suffer patiently, (Gal. iii. 1.) as Christ was to suffer, and thus to enter into his glory. The saints did not strive to divide him. But we would suffer nothing, and yet be glorified at the hour of our death! Bert.—Until. This word does not always mark the term of a thing. When all shall be subdued, then Christ will continue to sit with greater majesty, (1 Cor. xv. 25. C.) for ever. W. Heb. x. 13.—Footstool. As was customary with conquerors. Jos. x. 24.

VER. 2. Sion. Whence the empire of Christ extended over all the earth. Is. ii. 3. Lu. xxiv. 47. C.—In spite of opposition, he reigns in the Church, and will one day make all submit. Bert.—On Whitsunday the new law was promulgated, to continue unto the end of time. W.

VER. 3. Principality. Christ says, All power is given to me. Matt. xxviii. and this he will display (H.) in the day of judgment. S. Chrys.—Apex is used in this sense by Xenophon, &c. (C.) as principium is by Suetonius, (in Aug.) yet it may also signify, This is the "origin, or source of thy authority, from the womb," &c. S. Chrys. Bert.—The consubstantiality of the Son is hence manifest, and this ensures every perfection. H.—The Father and the Son are both principals. S. Jer.—Christ was in the beginning, (Jo. i.) and the very beginning. His eternal birth is here mentioned, though some have explained it of his temporal nativity, which took place before the rising of the day-star. C.—This, however, would seem a trivial circumstance, (Bert.) whereas the birth of Christ before the whole creation is of great consequence.—Saints. Or "holy places," sanctorum. Heb. "In the beauties (behadra. H.) S. Jer. has read berri, in the mountains (C.) of holiness, (Mont.) or of the sanctuary." Christ will come to judge, surrounded by his angels, (C.) and saints. H. S. Aug.—I begot thee. This expresses the sense more clearly (H.) than the Heb. tibi ros emissio (Heb. tal.) nativitatis tue. S. Jerom's version must be deemed inaccurate, and the Heb. points, (Bert.) which render the modern versions so very different from ours, may be safely rejected. H. See Muis. Geneb. C.—Robertson mentions fourteen different translations of this text, and many more might be given. H.—But ours is clear, and beautiful. C.—Prot. "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness, from (Marg. more than) the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth." H.—Thy offspring shall be 4 The Lord hath sworn, and he will not repent: *Thou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

5 The Lord at thy right hand hath broken kings in the day of his wrath.

6 He shall judge among nations, he shall fill ruins: he shall crush the heads in the land of many.

7 He shall drink of the torrent in the way: therefore shall he lift up the head.

PSALM CX.

CONFITEBOR TIBI DOMINE.

God is to be praised for his graces, and benefits to his Church.

Alleluia.

I WILL praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart; in the counsel of the just, and in the congregation.

2 Great are the works of the Lord: sought out according to all his wills.

3 His work is praise and magnificence: and his justice continueth for ever and ever.

* John xii. 34. Heb. v. 6. and vii. 17.

very numerous, (Is. xlviii. 1. and xlv. 8.) and people shall willingly join thy banners, or rather come to offer victims in the sanctuary. C.—The eternal birth of Christ, (Mic. v. 2.) from his father's substance, establishes his principality, so that he rises triumphant, &c. W.—The present Heb. text seems to be purposely rendered obscure, or unintelligible by the Jews, both in this verse, and in the following. D.

VER. 4. Repent. Not that He can ever do so, or give way to error: but the sacred writer expresses himself thus, to give us the greatest security. C.—The order. Heb. dibrathi, "my order," Melchisedech. The i has been perhaps designedly inserted, to render the argumentation in the epistle to the Hebrews of no weight, "as the force of this text sinks into just nothing." Kennicott.—Prot. and Pagnin here abandon the Heb. But Montanus corrects the latter, and substitutes "upon my word," which is more honest, as he deemed the Heb. text unerring, though here it be not so unquestionably, as the Almighty would thus address Melchisedech, unless that title be here given to Christ. S. Jerom takes no notice of my, no more than the apostle, &c. H.—This instance "may perhaps put all serious Christians upon deliberating—whether they should any longer maintain the absolute integrity of the present Heb. text." See Ps. xv. 10. Kennicott, Dis. i. p. 219.—Melchisedech. Christ is declared king and priest for ever, (W.) like Melchisedech, who united in his person both dignities, and presided not over a particular people, nor stood in need of any stated place. His succession is not recorded, and his sacrifice consisted of bread and wine; in all which respects he differed from the Levitical priests, and prefigured Christ, who is immolated under the same species throughout the world. Mal. i. 11. M.—We read in Scripture of three orders of priesthood; 1st, of kings, 2d, of the first-born, and 3d, of Aaron. Melchisedech, in quality of king, exercised the priestly office, as both functions were formerly united; and hence the word Cohen signifies both a temporal and spiritual prince. This light of nations ensured to his order a perpetual duration, while that of Aaron was to have an end. Thus Christ offered to his Father from all eternity the sacrifice of his obedience, and future sufferings; and in time, he presented that of his own life, which he continues to offer in the Catholic Church, (C.) by priests who are only his ministers. 1 Cor. iv. W.—The apostle does not specify the oblation of bread and wine, as it was unnecessary, the sacrifice of Christ on the cross having put an end to the sacrifices of the old law, which could only be offered by the children of Aaron, from whom he did not spring. This was enough for his purpose. But as Melchisedech offered bread and wine, Christ must also have done the same, to be of his order. S. Cyprian, and the other Fathers, with great unanimity observe, that the sacrifice of Melchisedech was a figure of that of Jesus Christ, in bread and wine; and of course (Bert.) our sacred mysteries must contain the substance. H.—By their application, Christ still pacifies his Father in behalf of sinners: so that the effects of his priesthood do not cease, as those of all the priests in the Old Testament did by their death. W.

VER. 5. The Lord. He speaks to God the Father concerning the Messiah, (M.) or God assisted the sacred humanity. S. Chrys.—In the Godhead the persons are equal. The Father is at the right of the Son, as He is at his Father's. v. i. S. Aug. C.—Yet it seems more probable, that the discourse is addressed to the first person. Bert.

VER. 6. Ruins. Heb. and Sept. "with dead bodies," (C.) or he will fill up the places of the fallen angels. Jans.—Implevit valles. S. Jer.—Christ was placed for the fall and for the resurrection of many.—Of many. Heb. "the head in an extensive territory." We might render the Vulg. "he shall crush the heads of many in the land." H.—Rebellious kings, with their populous kingdoms shall be destroyed. W.—The power of the devil, and of all his agents, shall be crushed, though they may fill the greatest part of the world, (H.) in terra quam multi occupant. Bert.

VER. 7. Way. By the torrent Cedron, the passion of Christ is insinuated. Houbig.—During life, he and his faithful servants shall be exposed to many sufferings, for which they will be amply rewarded. W. Phil. ii. 9.—A torrent often denotes affliction. Ps. xvii. 5. Is. xxx. 28. Yet here it may signify, that 4 He hath made a remembrance of his wonderful works, being a merciful and gracious Lord: 5 he hath given food to them that fear him.

He will be mindful for ever of his covenant: 6 he will shew forth to his people the power of his works

7 that he may give them the inheritance of the Gentiles: the works of his hands are truth and judgment.

8 All his commandments are faithful: confirmed for ever and ever, made in truth and equity.

9 He hath sent redemption to his people: he hath commanded his covenant for ever.

Holy and terrible is his name: 10 the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom.

A good understanding to all that do it: his praise continueth for ever and ever.

PSALM CXI.

BEATUS VIR.

The good man is happy.

Alleluia, of the returning of Aggæus and Zacharias.

* Prov. i. 7. and ix. 17. Eccli. i. 16.

Christ will supply every thing requisite to establish his Church. To find water for an army was of the greatest consequence. Jer. xxxi. 9. Ps. lxxvii. 20. and 4 K. iii. 9. C.—Like a valiant conqueror, Christ seeks for no delicacies. Muia. C.—Those who come nearest to this divine pattern, will obtain the highest place in heaven. Bert.

PSALM CX. VER. 1. Alleluia. This psalm consists of praise, and is alphabetical, (Bert.) the sixteen first letters being found at the head of each hemistic, to v. 8; and in the 9th and 10th, we find the six last Heb. letters, which is also the case in the following psalm. H.—In some Latin copies, we also find the same title in both, as they may relate to the captives. C.—The Church thanks God for the institution of the blessed Eucharist, &c. S. Aug. Euseb.—Praise. Lit. "confess to." H.—Congregation. Where there are few or many together, (C.) in private for my own sake, and in public for edification. W.

VER. 2. Sought out. Exquisite, or designed for our benefit. He saw that all was good, (Gen. i. 31.) though He could have made them better. C.

VER. 3. Is praise. Or worthy of praise, and magnificent. W.

VER. 4. Remembrance. He has delivered us from captivity, as he did our ancestors from the Egyptian bondage. Is. lxiii. 11. C.

VER. 5. Food. Manna in the desert, and what is necessary for us who were in distress in Babylon. Ps. cvi. 5. In the spiritual sense, (C.) He has given us Jesus Christ, (S. Aug.) or the holy Eucharist. W.—S. Chrysostom understands the word of God, (C.) which profits those only who fear the Lord, (Bert.) and serve him with love. H.—Covenant. God has not acted contrary to the covenant with Abraham, in proposing the gospel, which was all along foretold, as S. Paul shews. Bert.—He will for ever protect his Church, and shew forth the powerful operation of his death, and of all his mysteries. W.

VER. 7. Gentiles. Under Josue, or rather in the days of the gospel. Bert. 1 Pet. i. 3.—Judgment. He will perform his promises, and chastise the guilty. C.

VER. 8. Equity. Here we have the conditions of a just law. Bert.—Those who keep God's commandments are justified. W.

VER. 9. Redemption. Under Moses, Cyrus, and Jesus Christ, of whose redemption the former were figures. C.—Christ redeemed man, in order that he might be able to observe the law. W.—Terrible. Holy to the just, and terrible to sinners. S. Jer.—Most are lost by too much security. S. Chrys. hom. xiv. —The Hebrews treat the name of God with a respect, which might appear superstitious, (C.) as they will not blot it out, or lean upon the book where it is written, &c. Schikard, Jus. ii. Theor. v. 6.—The Turks have nearly the same regard for the Koran, which should make Christians ashamed of their irreverence and want of faith.

VER. 10. Fear. Heb. "is the chief part of wisdom." Jan.—This fear intimates the virtue of religion, to which the Israelites gave the preference over prudence, &c. Joseph. con. App. 2.—Thus distinguished them from other nations. Deut. iv. 8. C.—Fear is the beginning, charity the end of wisdom. Euseb.—Beginning with fear, we ascend to true wisdom, which are the first and last of the gifts of the Holy Ghost. W.—Do it. Act conformably to this fear. H.—Speculative wisdom is good, but not sufficient. Rom. xi. 13. S. Chrys. &c. —Many read ea, "those things," with the Heb. while the Sept. have eam, this wisdom. But Houbigant adheres to the Vulg. Bert.—Isa. God's, (S. Chrys.) though some would refer ejus to intellectus. Bert.—He shall be praised for ever who has been so well informed as to adopt the fear or wisdom of the Lord for his guide. H.

PSAL. CXI. VER. 1. Of the returning, &c. This is in the Greek and Latin, but not in the Hebrew. It signifies, that this psalm was proper to be sung at the time of the return of the people from their captivity: to inculcate to them, how happy they might be, if they would be constant in the service of God. Ch.—Yet all Greek copies have not this title, (H.) but only Alleluia, with the Heb. Syr. &c.—It might be composed by Aggæus, &c. as it relates to the captivity, (v. 4.) and to the overthrow of Babylon, (v. 10. C.) or David might thus describe the happiness of the virtuous, (Bert.) and give the captives to understand, that sin was the source of all temporal as well as spiritual miseries. W.

BLESSED is the man that feareth the Lord: he shall delight exceedingly in his commandments.

2 His seed shall be mighty upon earth: the generation of the righteous shall be blessed.

3 Glory and wealth shall be in his house: and his justice remaineth for ever and ever.

4 To the righteous a light is risen up in darkness: he is merciful, and compassionate and just.

5 Acceptable is the man that sheweth mercy and lendeth: he shall order his words with judgment: 6 because he shall not be moved for ever.

7 The just shall be in everlasting remembrance: he shall not fear the evil hearing.

His heart is ready to hope in the Lord: 8 his heart is strengthened, he shall not be moved until he look over his enemies.

9 He hath distributed, he hath given to the poor: his justice remaineth for ever and ever: his horn shall be exalted in glory.

10 The wicked shall see, and shall be angry, he shall gnash with his teeth, and pine away: the desire of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM CXII.

LAUDATE PUERI.

God is to be praised, for his regard to the poor and humble.

Alleluia.

PRAISE the Lord, ye children: praise ye the name of the Lord.

2 Blessed be the name of the Lord, from henceforth now and for ever.

—Delight. We must love God for his own sake. S. Chrys.—Those who sincerely fear God, will take great delight in keeping his commandments. W.

VER. 2. Earth. Temporal rewards were proposed to the carnal Jews; but the more enlightened knew what was to be most desired. They sought after the riches, mentioned by the apostle. 1 Cor. i. 5. 1 Tim. vi. 18. C.—The just and their seed shall prosper, (W.) at least in the next world. H.

VER. 3. Justice. Or mercy shall be for ever remembered by men, and rewarded by God. C.

VER. 4. Darkness. Christ appeared when the world was most corrupt. S. Aug.—God rescued his people from captivity.—He is. S. Aug. and S. Chrys. add, "The Lord God is," &c. in which sense this is commonly explained, (C.) though it may also refer to the just man. H.

VER. 5. Acceptable. Lit. "joyful" Χρηρός, "beneficent." H.—Give, and it shall be given to you. M.—Judgment. And by liberal alms, prepared for the great accounting day. S. Chrys.—He will say nothing indiscreetly, nor throw pearls before swine; (Matt. vii. 6. S. Jer.) neither will he condemn others rashly, (C.) but give prudent advice to the afflicted. W.

VER. 7. Hearing. Though detraction may assail him, he shall not fear, (C.) since God is the judge. H.—He shall have no cause to apprehend being condemned, (S. Jer.) nor be disturbed about "news," because his goods are in a place of safety, (S. Chrys. &c.) where thieves cannot steal. H.

VER. 8. Until. Not that he will be disturbed afterwards, (Ps. cix. l. C.) when his enemies shall be punished. H.—The captives saw the fall of Babylon. C.

VER. 9. Poor. We must know whom we ought to relieve. Though we may be allowed to retain what is necessary, (2 Cor. viii. 13. and ix. 11.) yet the saints have often very laudably stripped themselves, to clothe others, abandoning perishable goods, that they might obtain heaven. C.—Justice. Works of mercy are so called, because they concur to man's justification. W.—Horn. Power, &c. Cyrus, and the best of his successors, honoured the Jews. C.—The liberality of the just towards the indigent, is far more glorious than that which prompts the vain to give shew, &c. S. Chrys.—The praise of the latter is presently at an end. Bert.

VER. 10. The wicked. The devil, enraged to see the converts to Christianity, (S. Athan.) or the Jews, (S. Chrys.) instigated by him. H.—All the damned shall repine at the happiness of the elect, (S. Aug.) as the Babylonians did, when they beheld the prosperity of those who had been captives. C.

PSALM CXII. VER. 1. Alleluia. The Jews style this, and the five following psalms, "the great Alleluia," which they sing after eating the paschal lamb. Eusebius adds, "a psalm of Aggeus and Zacharias," as it seems to speak of the captives, who return thanks for their deliverance; (Is. xlv. 6. &c. C.) or David has left this model of thanksgiving for all. Bert.—Children. Heb. "slaves." M.—The Greek and Latin may signify both. H.—He addresses the Levites, who were addicted to God's service, or the new converts, who were become docile like little children, (1 Pet. ii. 2. Pa. viii. 3. C.) and in a word, (H.) all God's servants. W.

VER. 3. Same. All the day long, (C.) or rather in all places. Muis. Mal. i. 10. S. Chrys.

3 *From the rising of the sun, unto the going down of the same, the name of the Lord is worthy of praise.

4 The Lord is high above all nations: and his glory above the heavens.

5 Who is as the Lord, our God, who dwelleth on high: 6 and looketh down on the low things in heaven and in earth?

7 Raising up the needy from the earth, and lifting up the poor out of the dunghill:

8 That he may place him with princes, with the princes of his people.

9 Who maketh a barren woman to dwell in a house, the joyful mother of children.

PSALM CXIII.

IN EXITU ISRAEL.

God hath shewn his power in delivering his people: idols are vain. (The Hebrews divide this into two psalms.)

Alleluia.

WHEN Israel went out of Egypt,^b the house of Jacob from a barbarous people:

2 Judea was made his sanctuary, Israel his dominion.

3 The sea saw and fled: Jordan was turned back.

4 The mountains skipped like rams, and the hills like the lambs of the flock.

5 What ailed thee, O thou sea, that thou didst flee: and thou, O Jordan, that thou wast turned back?

6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams, and ye hills, like lambs of the flock?

7 At the presence of the Lord the earth was moved, at the presence of the God of Jacob:

* Malac. i. 11.—^b Exod. xiii. 8.

VER. 6. Earth. Providence watches over all. Ps. cxxxvii. 6. H.—With respect to God, even those who are in heaven are low. W.

VER. 7. Poor. Jesus Christ and his servants, as well as Joseph, Mardochei, &c. 1 K. ii. 8. Lu. i. 51. C.

VER. 9. Children. Anna and Elizabeth, who were naturally barren, were blessed with what they so eagerly desired, by the divine power. H.—It may be understood of the Gentile world, after it had embraced the faith, (S. Jer. Gal. iv. 17. S. Chrys.) or of the captives, (Is. lvi. 1. and xlix. 21. Ps. lxxvii. 7. C.) though Isaias may also refer to the Church. H.—Joseph was wonderfully advanced in glory, and Sara, Rebecca, &c. were made fruitful.

PSALM CXIII. VER. 1. Alleluia. This word is placed at the end of the preceding psalm in Heb. though it seems to have been there originally, (H.) as v. 2 we find his, with reference to "the Lord," who has not been otherwise mentioned before. Houbig.—The psalm may be joined with the former to v. 9, when the Heb. begins a fresh one, relating to the captives, with the two which follow. C.—The division is of no great importance, (Bert.) and we cannot easily decide whether it be here necessary. H.—The Heb. copies have not been always uniform, no more than the Greek in this place. C.—Barbarous. Cruel, (Bert.) or which spoke a language unknown to them. Sym. and Aquila.—Barbarus his ego sum, quia non intelligor ulli. Ovid de Pont. 1 Cor. xiv. 11.—The Greeks styled all others barbarians, (Fest.) as the Egyptians did. Herod. ii.—Joseph at first did not understand the language of the latter, (Ps. lxxx. 6.) and spoke to his brethren by an interpreter. Gen. xlii. 23. Lopez, denotes one who speaks an unknown tongue, which Chal. expresses by the word borbra, "a stranger, or desert." C.—Infidels, and those who persecute the true religion, are styled barbarous, though otherwise the Egyptians were very polite and learned. W.

VER. 2. Judea. Heb. "Juda," though the sense of the Vulg. is very good, (Bert.) as that country which had been so abandoned, became holy, when God's people dwelt there. S. Chrys.—After the departure from Egypt, the Israelites were more known as God's inheritance, over whom he reigned. W. Ex. xix. 6.—Hence He complains, when they asked for a king, (1 K. viii. 7.) though the throne is still called the Lord's. 1 Par. xxix. 23. The distinction of Juda and Israel insinuates that the kingdom had been divided. C.—But this had taken place for a time, after the death of Saul. H.

VER. 3. Saw. He speaks in a poetical manner. All creatures obey God's will. W.

VER. 4. Skipped. Through joy, exultaverunt, (H.) or rather through fear, v. 7. C.—There was an earthquake, not specified by Moses; or the psalmist speaks of what took place at Ar, (Num. xxi. 15. W.) unless he alludes to the waters of the Jordan, rising up like mountains. M.

VER. 3. Waters. They are mentioned twice, as referring to different miracles. Ex. xvii. 6. and Num. xx. 8. Inanimate things are introduced, giving this reply; or the psalmist gives it himself. Bert.—He uses the figure prosopopeia, as if senseless things could understand. W.

VER. 9. or 1. Not. Some Jews here commence the 115th psalm. H.—But S. Augustin shews, that this part is well connected with the preceding, the true

8 Who turned the rock into pools of waters, and the stony hill into fountains of waters.

1 Not to us, O Lord, not to us: but to thy name give glory.

2 For thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake, lest the Gentiles should say: Where is their God?

3 But our God is in heaven: he hath done all things whatsoever he would.

4 *The idols of the Gentiles are silver, and gold, the works of the hands of men.

5 ^bThey have mouths, and speak not: they have eyes, and see not.

6 They have ears, and hear not: they have noses, and smell not.

7 They have hands, and feel not: they have feet, and walk not: neither shall they cry out through their throat.

8 Let them that make them become like unto them: and all such as trust in them.

9 The house of Israel hath hoped in the Lord: he is their helper, and their protector.

10 The house of Aaron hath hoped in the Lord: he is their helper, and their protector.

11 They that fear the Lord have hoped in the Lord: he is their helper, and their protector.

12 The Lord hath been mindful of us, and hath blessed us.

He hath blessed the house of Israel: he hath blessed the house of Aaron.

* Infra cxxxiv. 15.—^b Wis. xv. 15.

God being known by his works, while idols are senseless, and therefore can have no pretensions to divine worship. W.—It seems that the psalmist would not break off so abruptly, without praising God for his wondrous works, and the Fathers are silent about the present division of the Heb. (Bert.) though Eusebius and S. Athanasius had occasion to examine the text, as some Gr. copies ended here, and others at v. 12, the idols, &c.—Glory. We claim no share in these miracles; or we confess our unworthiness, but do thou deliver us. C.—Thou hast done these wonders to fulfil thy gracious promises, and to prevent blasphemy. W.

VER. 3. Heaven. Sept. add, "and on earth," which S. Augustin joins with the following words, he, &c. We cannot indeed point God out, as we might do idols. But then what sort of gods are they? C.—Viler than insects. Theod.

VER. 4. Men. All Catholics agree, that idolatry is the "giving of divine honour to any creature." S. Justin, (con. Gent.) S. Aug. in the ten first books of the City of God, and other Fathers, refute all the species of idolatry. The Platonists adored the angels, or devils, intelligentias separatas. Others worshipped dead or living men renowned for their achievements, like Jupiter and Hercules; while some paid the same sovereign respect to animals, or even to inanimate things, both in themselves and in their images. The psalmist here derides the most gross species of idols, which are made by men, and are incapable of any vital action, being thus beneath the very beasts. Yet some were so absurd as to confide in them, (v. 16. W. or S. H.) and thereby neglected the light of reason, becoming slaves of the devils, who were either the objects of adoration, as in the compacts made by sorcerers, or at least seduced mankind to pay such worship to creatures. Hence all the gods of the Gentiles are styled devils. Ps. xcv. 5. W.—How unjustly do heretics apply these words to the holy images used in the Church! though they must know (H.) that Catholics do not consider them as gods, no more than the saints and angels, whom they reverence only as the friends of God: treating their pictures with a relative honour, and endeavouring thus to excite themselves to the pursuit of virtue, by the memory of what they have done. Bert.

VER. 7. Throat. Rom. and Milan Psal. add, neither is there any breath in their mouths, which occurs, (Ps. cxxxiv. 17.) instead of this sentence. H.—Juvenal (Sat. 13.) laughs at the silence of Jupiter's statue. C.

VER. 8. Let. Zeal prompts him to make this imprecation, (C.) or prophecy. Heb. they "are or shall be." The pagans (H.) could not well find fault with this wish, (M.) as it would be a great honour to resemble real gods. Yet none of their staturaries would be willing to become such statues, or be charged with the wicked conduct of Jupiter, &c. S. Chrys. Bert.—The psalmist justly conforms his will to God's decree; and still would rejoice if he should give the idolaters grace to repent. W.

VER. 9. The house, is not now in Heb. But it occurs in the parallel passage, (Ps. cxxxiv.) where the imperative is used, as the Heb. is here pointed. C.—"Israel trusts . . . house of Aaron, trust ye in the Lord," (Mont.) which is much (778)

13 He hath blessed all that fear the Lord, both little and great.

14 May the Lord add blessings upon you: upon you, and upon your children.

15 Blessed be you of the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

16 The heaven of heaven is the Lord's: but the earth he has given to the children of men.

17 *The dead shall not praise thee, O Lord: nor any of them that go down to hell.

18 But we that live bless the Lord: from this time now and for ever.

PSALM CXIV.

DILEXI.

The prayer of a just man in affliction, with a lively confidence in God.

Alleluia.

I HAVE loved, because the Lord will hear the voice of my prayer.

2 Because he hath inclined his ear unto me: and in my days I will call upon him.

3 The sorrows of death have compassed me: and the perils of hell have found me.

I met with trouble and sorrow: 4 and I called upon the name of the Lord.

O Lord, deliver my soul. 5 The Lord is merciful and just, and our God sheweth mercy.

6 The Lord is the keeper of little ones: I was humbled, and he delivered me.

7 Turn, O my soul, into thy rest: For the Lord hath been bountiful to thee.

c Baruc. ii. 17.

in favour of this text, though S. Jerom, &c. agree with the Sept. C.—Houbigant rejects the Heb. reading, and the house of Israel occurs, v. 12. Bert.—All the people, the priests, and converts from paganism, are invited to praise the Lord. S. Chrys. Acta ii. 5. and x. 2. and xiii. 16. C.—The Church always comprised two distinct orders, the clergy and the laity. M.

VER. 12. Hath. Heb. "will be," which seems better. Let him bless us. C.—Both versions are true. Bert. Eph. i. 3.

VER. 16. Of heaven. Or the highest heaven, in which God displays his glory, though he fill every place. H.—His benefits to man claim a return of gratitude, and we are not dispensed from shewing our adoration, as deists would hence unreasonably infer. Bert.—Worldly men say this in their hearts, abandoning their pretensions to heaven. W.

VER. 17. The dead. People who are thus affected, give no praise to God, when they die, but descend into hell. W.—Criminals are therefore said to be dead, while the saints only sleep. S. Chrys.—Hell. Heb. "silence," or the tomb, (Bert.) where none can sound forth God's praises, (H.) though the soul in a state of separation may adore him. Bert. See Ps. vi. 6. and xxix. 10.

VER. 18. Live. In the state of justice, and aspiring to God's kingdom. While we use this world only as the means to ascend thither, we shall praise him for evermore. W.

PSAL CXIV. VER. 1. Alleluia occurs in Heb. at the end of the foregoing psalm, (H.) with which this and the following have an intimate connexion, alluding to the liberation of the captives. Hammond discovers some Chaldeisms, which confirms the supposition that it was composed about that time. C.—Yet this does not deter Muis, &c. from ascribing the psalm to David, reigning in peace, (H.) though others think he alludes to some of his persecutions, and it certainly appears to be of the same nature with the 55th, which was written after his escape from Achis. C.—The sentiments of our Saviour, or of his Church under persecution, (S. Aug.) or those of a saint entering into glory, are here expressed. S. Jerom.—The faithful sigh after their heavenly country. Bert.—Christ speaks here as in the 21st psalm. Houbigant.—Prayer. He always hears me, which prompts me to love. W.—Because. Heb. et may be rendered "therefore," as in the next psalm, v. 1. Lu. vii. 47. C.

VER. 2. Days. All my life. W.—Faith, hope, and charity, (S. Aug.) as well as gratitude, are here commended. Bert.—Love and confidence are necessary conditions of prayer; and increase the more it is employed. C.

VER. 3. Sorrows. Heb. "bands."—Perils. Heb. "the straitness of the grave, (C.) the fortifications of hell." S. Jer. H.—I am like one buried after the manner of the Egyptians, who bound up the dead, and laid them in small holes cut out of a rock. David uses similar expressions to denote the dangers to which he had been exposed, 1 K. xxi. 12. Ps. xvii. 6. C.—They may be applicable to all the just. Bert.—When I offended, death and hell, which are due to sin, threatened me unawares; affliction opened my eyes, and I thereupon prayed to thee. W.

VER. 6. Little ones. In their mother's womb, and infancy. S. Chrys.—Heb.

8 For he hath delivered my soul from death: my eyes from tears, my feet from falling.

9 I will please the Lord in the land of the living.

PSALM CXV.

CREDIDI.

This, in the Hebrew, is joined with the foregoing psalm, and continues to express the faith and gratitude of the psalmist.

Alleluia.

10 I HAVE ^abelieved, therefore have I spoken: but I have been humbled exceedingly.

11 I said in my excess: ^bEvery man is a liar.

12 What shall I render to the Lord, for all the things that he hath rendered to me?

13 I will take the chalice of salvation; and I will call upon the name of the Lord.

14 I will pay my vows to the Lord, before all his people: 15 precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

16 O Lord, for I am thy servant: I am thy servant, and the son of thy handmaid.

Thou hast broken my bonds: 17 I will sacrifice to thee the sacrifice of praise, and I will call upon the name of the Lord.

18 I will pay my vows to the Lord in the sight of

^a 2 Cor. iv. 18.—^b Rom. iii. 4.

"the simple." Bert.—He delights to protect those who have no dependence on any other. C.—Humbled. Or afflicted, (W.) and "brought low." S. Jer.

VER. 7. Rest. The peace of the soul, which must precede eternal happiness. —Bountiful to. Heb. "rewarded." The Chaldee termination i, occurs twice in this verse, whence some would prove that it was written after the captivity. This argument is weak, as such things have been observed in the books which were certainly written before. It would only follow, that Esdras might make such alterations, (Bert.) or they may be attributed to some negligent transcriber. H.

VER. 8. He. Heb. "thou hast." Yet S. Jerom and the Chal. read like the Vulg. Bert.

VER. 9. Living. In Judea, which is opposed to Babylon, the region of tears and of death, v. 8. Ps. lv. 13. In a spiritual sense, the Fathers understand heaven, where the blessed cannot forfeit their felicity. C.—I will strive to please God among the faithful, who live in grace and glory. W.—Christ here promises the propagation of the gospel. Houbig. 2 Cor. v. 8. Bert.

PSAL. CXV. VER. 10. Alleluia is not in Heb. There seems no necessity to join this psalm with the preceding, as the subject is not so much alike as that of many others, which are distinct pieces. S. Paul quotes two passages in their literal sense, (Bert.) as applicable to all who thirst after a future life. It may relate also (H.) to the captives returning, (S. Chrys. C.) to Ezechias, (Ven. Bede) or to the Maccabees. Theodoret.—Exceedingly. We must not be deterred from professing our faith by any danger. S. Aug. 2 Cor. iv. 13.—I never ceased to publish that I trusted entirely in thy promises, that we should be delivered (C.) in due time. H.—I believed that God would help me, and, as I ought to do, make profession of my faith, under the greatest tribulations. W.—With the mouth confession is made unto salvation. H.—I confess that there is a future world, (v. 9) though I do not see it, but remain in distress. M.

VER. 11. Excess. Sept. "ecstasy." Enlightened from above. If he had spoken thus by his own spirit, any one might have replied, that no dependance could be placed in what he said. We are all liable to mistake. S. Jer.—Many explain it of David's "flight" before Absalom. Heb. "in my precipitation," (C.) or "astonishment." S. Jer.—Liar. Weak and inconstant of his own corrupt nature, (H.) though not always guilty of lying. C.—S. Paul contrasts this natural weakness with the veracity of God, (Bert.) and the preaching of his apostles. Rom. iii. 4. and 2 Cor. i. 17. H.—In the midst of my afflictions, I professed that all man's help is vain, and I had recourse to God. W.

VER. 12. To me. I have deserved chastisement; how, therefore, shall I express my gratitude for God's innumerable benefits? W.

VER. 13. Chalice. I will submit to any afflictions, (S. Aug.) seeing they procure such an ample reward. I will unite my sufferings with those of Jesus Christ, (H.) and accept the great benefit of his blood, shed for mankind. W.—Chaldee seems to have had this in view, calicem redemptionis levabo mundo venturo, and Houbigant explains it of Christ, who prayed that the chalice might be taken from him, (Bert.) but presently resigned himself to God's will. It may also (H.) imply, the cup of thanksgiving, which was used in pacific sacrifices. Ps. xxi. 27. Our Saviour followed this custom, when he instituted the blessed Eucharist, as (C.) the Jews do on solemn occasions. Leo. iii. 7. and ix. 2. The pagans had something very similar. Homer speaks of the "free bowl, or cup of liberty," (Iliad 2.) and Athenæus (i. 23. and ii. 2. and xv. 5.) of "the cup of Jupiter, the Saviour," in which, after tasting a little wine, water was mingled, with invocations of Jupiter, and all drank what they pleased. C.—The custom of drinking healths might originate in the same jovial humour. H.

VER. 14. Pay. Heb. adds, 'now or surely' Bert.—Vows. Voluntarily, all his people: 19 in the courts of the house of the Lord, in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem.

PSALM CXVI.

LAUDATE DOMINUM.

All nations are called upon to praise God for his mercy and truth.

Alleluia.

O PRAISE^c the Lord, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people.

2 For his mercy is confirmed upon us: ^dand the truth of the Lord remaineth for ever.

PSALM CXVII.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

The psalmist praiseth God for his delivery from evils; putteth his whole trust in him; and foretelleth the coming of Christ.

Alleluia.

GIVE praise to the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

2 Let Israel now say, that he is good: that his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Let the house of Aaron now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Let them that fear the Lord now say, that his mercy endureth for ever.

5 In my trouble I called upon the Lord: and the Lord heard me, and enlarged me.

^c Rom. xv. 11.—^d John xii. 34.

(W.) which I could not do at Babylon. Ps. lxxv. 13. S. Aug. and the ancient psalters omit this, perhaps supposing it to be taken from v. 18.

VER. 15. Precious. I am ready even to make a sacrifice of my life, if God's glory should require it; for he esteems the death of the saints. W. Bert.—He will not easily abandon them to destruction in this world, as the Heb. implies, (T. C.) though this meaning is not certain, nor verified by facts; the just being often slain by the wicked. Bert.—God rewards the sufferings of his servants; (C.) the psalmist will not therefore be deterred from paying his vows by the fear of death. M.

VER. 16. Handmaid. To be blessed, we must be in a state of grace, and children of the Church. W.—Out of it, death itself endured for Christ would profit nothing, (S. Aug.) but only be "a punishment of perfidy." S. Cyp.—No worship can please God, unless we be joined in communion with her, as the Fathers observe. Bert.—The psalmist glories in being a servant of God for ever. C.—Bonds. Of slavery, (C.) and sin. W. 1 Cor. vii. 22.

VER. 17. Praise. Or thanksgiving. Ps. xxvi. 6. Lev. vii. 12. C.—Lord. There is but one, as there is but one faith. Without the latter, it is in vain to call upon God. Eph. iv. 4. Bert.—"Whosoever eats the lamb out of this house, (the Church) is profane." S. Jer. ep. 57. ad Dam.

PSAL. CXVI. Alleluia. This word is found at the end of the last psalm, in Heb. H.—The captives invite all to thank God for their delivery, which was a most striking figure of the world's redemption, in which sense the apostle (Rom. xv. 11.) quotes this psalm, with the holy Fathers, though Ven. Bede puts it in the mouth of Ezechias, after the retrogradation of the sun. Kimchi allows that it regards the times of the Messias. C.—Praise him. S. Paul reads, magnify him, as the Heb. means, "extol" by your praises. Bert.—All are invited to praise, as the redemption is sufficient, (W.) and designed for all the posterity of Adam.

VER. 2. Remaineth is not in Heb. Mercy and truth confirm us. H.—The psalmist acknowledges that he also stands in need of them, and S. John assures us, that grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. Bert.—No promise had been made to the Gentiles (W.) by the law; though they were all included in the original promise. Gen. iii. 15. H.—God hath withdrawn them from idolatry, to impart to them his mercies. C.

PSAL. CXVII. VER. 1. Alleluia is borrowed from the end of the former psalm in Heb. Our Saviour and the apostles determine us to explain this solely of the Messias, though some would also see another literal sense, applicable to the victories of David, or of the captives, at their return, over Gog or Canbyaes. Bert.—This supposition seems very probable, 2 Esd. vi. 16. Yet the Jews saw that some passages belonged to the Messias, and were accustomed to use v. 26. in praying for his manifestation. This psalm is very pompous, and in the dramatic style, (C.) though this is not certain. Bert.—Praise. Or "confess," and praise God for his great mercies. W.

VER. 2. That he is good, is not here in Heb. The Sept. insert the words in the two next verses. The people, the priests, and all who fear God among the Gentiles must praise him (Ps. cxiii. 11. C.) particularly now under the new law, since they have received greater benefits. W.—Our Saviour seems to allude to this passage, observing that God alone is good, (Lu. xviii. 28.) to intimate that the man who gave him that title, must also acknowledge his divinity. S. Aug. Bert.

VER. 5. Trouble. Both spiritual and temporal. W.—Enlarged me, or set me at liberty in a spacious place. C.

VER. 7. My helper. Heb. "to me among the helpers." (Mont.) or most powerful, (Houbig.) and the mover of all, who lend me assistance. Jesus Christ

6 The Lord is my helper: I will not fear what man can do unto me.

7 *The Lord is my helper: and I will look over my enemies.

8 It is good to confide in the Lord, rather than to have confidence in man.

9 It is good to trust in the Lord, rather than to trust in princes.

10 All nations compassed me about: and in the name of the Lord I have been revenged on them.

11 Surrounding me, they compassed me about: and in the name of the Lord I have been revenged on them.

12 They surrounded me like bees, and they burned like fire among thorns: and in the name of the Lord I was revenged on them.

13 Being pushed, I was overturned, that I might fall: but the Lord supported me.

14 ^bThe Lord is my strength and my praise: and he is become my salvation.

15 The voice of rejoicing and of salvation is in the tabernacles of the just.

16 The right hand of the Lord hath wrought strength: the right hand of the Lord hath exalted me: the right hand of the Lord hath wrought strength.

17 I shall not die, but live: and shall declare the works of the Lord.

18 The Lord chastising, hath chastised me: but he hath not delivered me over to death.

19 Open ye to me the gates of justice: I will go in to them, and give praise to the Lord. 20 This is the gate of the Lord, the just shall enter into it.

* Heb. xlii. 6.—Exod. xv. 2.

prayed with tears, and was heard for his reverence. Heb. v. 7. We must expect afflictions, (Job. xxxiii.) and must have recourse to God.

VER. 9. Princes. For vain is the salvation of man. Ps. lix. 31. Jer. xvii. 5. C.—So neither can man hurt those whom God protects. Rom. viii. 31. H.

VER. 10. Revenged. Heb. "I have broken them," (C.) or "will render to them." Houbig.—This may relate to David, Nehemias, Christ, and his martyrs. C.—The Church, or any just man in the midst of enemies, confidently hopes for victory. W.—None shall prevail against Christ and his Church. Bert.

VER. 12. Bees. Sept. add, "do a honeycomb." But this is not in the original.—Burned. Heb. "were extinguished." The Sept. and Chal. seem to have read better, as it would then be useless to add, as is the former ver. "but... I will destroy them;" and therefore Prot. and Duport here put, "for," &c. (Bert.) though the ci be still used. H.—The rage of the enemy is well described by the similitudes of bees and fire. C.—Christ was attacked with mortal hatred by the Jews. S. Aug.—The fury of the multitude was fierce, but short-lived, as in God I have overcome them all. W.

VER. 13. Fall. I was very near falling. Heb. "pushing thou hast pushed me that," &c. M.—"My sin has strongly pushed me." Chal. C.—Those who stick to the Heb. suppose, that the psalmist addressed the chief of his enemies. But a letter or two may have been added, as S. Jerom, Felix, &c. admit not the second person. Houbigant prefers, "they have pushed me." Bert.—By God's grace I was prevented from yielding to the force of temptation. W.

VER. 15. Just. Such were the Jews by their vocation, though many answered very ill the designs of God. C.—Christians thank God for their redemption, and confessors are full of joy in their prisons and torments. Acts xvi. 25. Bert.

VER. 16. Me is not in Heb. All salvation is from God. Bert.—Right hand, repeated thrice, insinuates the blessed Trinity, as the word Lord is applied to Christ, who effected man's redemption with singular efficacy. W.

VER. 17. Live. The captives were dying daily, so that this rather belongs to the Church of Christ. Bert. John viii. 51.

VER. 18. Chastised me, severely. H.—Sept. may also signify, "has instructed me," (C.) by means of tribulation. H.—God chastiseth as a parent, that his children may not perish eternally. W.

VER. 19. Justice. Of the temple, where the undefiled Israelites alone can enter, (Ps. xiv. 1.) or the land of Judea. Is. xxvi. The Fathers explain it of the Church, and of heaven, to which none can be admitted, who have not departed in the communion of saints, (S. Chrys. S. Aug.) having walked in the narrow path. Euseb.—Christ styles himself the way, (H.) and the gate. Bert. Apoc. xxi. 14.—Formerly penitents were not allowed to be present during all the Mass; and heretics, &c. are cut off from the bosom of the Church. C.—The just here beg for instruction, which they promise to follow. W.

VER. 22. Corner. This was a sort of proverb, and is applied to David, Zorobabel, or the Jewish nation; but they can only be considered as figures of Christ, in whom this prediction was fulfilled, when he established his Church, 21 I will give glory to thee, because thou hast heard me: and art become my salvation.

22 *The stone which the builders rejected; the same is become the head of the corner.

23 This is the Lord's doing: and it is wonderful in our eyes.

24 This is the day which the Lord hath made: let us be glad, and rejoice therein.

25 O Lord, save me: O Lord, give good success.

26 Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

We have blessed you out of the house of the Lord. 27 The Lord is God, and he hath shone upon us.

Appoint a solemn day, with shady boughs, even to the horn of the altar.

28 Thou art my God, and I will praise thee: thou art my God, and I will exalt thee.

I will praise thee, because thou hast heard me, and art become my salvation.

29 O praise ye the Lord, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXVIII.

BEATI IMMACULATI.

Of the excellence of virtue, consisting in the love and observance of the commandments of God.

Alleluia.

ALEPH.

BLESSED are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord.

* Isai. xxviii. 16. Mat. xxi. 42. Luke xx. 17. Acts iv. 11. Rom. ix. 33. 1 Pet. ii. 7.

and made one people of those who were before divided. Is. xxviii. 16. Matt. xxi. 42. Acts iv. 11. C.—He was rejected by most of the Jews; yet he chose some of them, who, with the Gentiles, formed his Church. H.—This all Christians now confess. W.—The Pharisees pretended to build for the glory of God, when they opposed the designs of Christ, which, nevertheless, succeeded. They could not object to his application of this text, as they would have done, if it had been already verified in David, &c. Bert.—He has laid the foundation. We must be living stones, if we would co-operate in this heavenly building. 1 Pet. ii. 5.

VER. 24. Day. Of grace. W.—The Church often repeats this during the paschal time, though God is equally the author of all days. H. See Eph. iv. 30 Jo. viii. 56.

VER. 25. Save me. The person is not expressed in Sept. Or, (C.) Heb. hoshiha na, "salvifica nunc." Mont.—Na means likewise, "I beg." H.—Quero. Domine, saluum fac, obsecro: Quaso, Domine, fac prospere agere, obsecro. This formed the acclamations of the Jewish children, Hosanna, Matt. xxi. 9. The branches which were carried at the feast of tabernacles, were also styled Hosannas. C.—When Christ entered Jerusalem, the children sung his praises, holding palms. W.

VER. 26. We. The Levites, (C.) or Christ and his ministers pronounce this blessing, (W.) or the psalmist gives it, after having expressed his thanks for the graces brought by the Messias. Bert.

VER. 27. Us. Christ, who comes in the name of the Lord, "is himself God," our instructor. S. Aug. Tit. ii. 11. Bert.—Day. The feast of tabernacles, for which this psalm was probably composed. The Jews dwelt under tents. C. Lev. xxiii. 40. and 2 Esd. vii. 15.—Altar. Heb. "Bind a festival with cords unto the horns," &c. To make sense, the Chal. inserts, bind the lamb for the festival. But this Houbigant ridicules, and he believes that the solemn entrance of Jesus Christ into Jerusalem is here foretold. Scarcely any prediction in the Old Testament is more clearly verified in the new. Matt. xxi. 8. Heb. Bahabothum certainly means, "in ramis opacis" and S. Jerom translates, "frequent the solemnity in shady boughs." Bert.—The victims were never tied to the altar, but slain in the porch of the northern gate. Eze. xl. 39. C.

VER. 28. I will, &c. This might be in the copies of the Sept. It occurs v. 26. (Bert.) though it was here retrenched in the Hexapla. C.

VER. 29. For ever. Praise is our first and last duty. v. 1. W.

PSAL. CXVIII. VER. 1. Alleluia. There is no title in Heb. But (H.) this psalm contains the praises of the Lord, and of his holy law, under fourteen different names, (W.) of way, testimony, &c. repeated in every verse, except the 122d, (Muis.) with surprising variety, so as to avoid tautology, and to give a most perfect system of moral doctrine. It is written according to the order of the Heb. alphabet, (H.) that we may learn it from our infancy. S. Hil.—Eight verses begin with each of the twenty-two letters. S. Jerom (ad Paulam Urb.) & Proem. in Lam.) moralizes on the signification of these letters, which he renders, 1. Aleph &c. "the doctrine—2. of the house; 3. the plenitude, 4. of the

2 Blessed are they that search his testimonies: that seek him with their whole heart.

3 For they that work iniquity, have not walked in his ways.

4 Thou hast commanded thy commandments to be kept most diligently.

5 O! that my ways may be directed to keep thy justifications.

6 Then shall I not be confounded, when I shall look into all thy commandments.

7 I will praise thee with uprightness of heart, when I shall have learned the judgments of thy justice.

8 I will keep thy justifications: O! do not thou utterly forsake me.

BETH.

9 By what doth a young man correct his way? by observing thy words.

10 With my whole heart have I sought after thee: let me not stray from thy commandments.

11 Thy words have I hidden in my heart, that I may not sin against thee.

12 Blessed art thou, O Lord: teach me thy justifications.

13 With my lips I have pronounced all the judgments of thy mouth.

14 I have been delighted in the way of thy testimonies, as in all riches.

tables (or holy scriptures)—5. This 6. and 7. this 8. of life—9. a good 10. beginning—11. the hand 12. of discipline (or the heart)—13. From then 14. everlasting 15. help—16. the fountain (or eye) 17. of the mouth 18. of justice—19. the calling 20. of the head 21. of teeth 22. the signa." By thus connecting the letters, he forms sentences to shew that the holy Scriptures bring us to the knowledge of the Church, and of Christ, &c. See W. Thus every thing serves to excite the devotion of the saints, though the proud may deride their ingenuity. The sacred writers have certainly found some pleasure and utility in writing so frequently in the alphabetical order, though we may not perceive the advantages of it. H.—David is supposed to have written this psalm for the instruction of Solomon in his youth, (Bert.) though others believe that he composed it while he himself was young, and persecuted by Saul. Muir. Bossuet, &c.—It seems very probable, that Daniel wrote it for the consolation of the captives. C. Dan. ix. 2.—Origen and Ven. Bede refer it to those times; though it seems in reality to appertain to all who desire to live piously, (H.) and it is only a conjecture that any other but David was the author, to whom it is generally attributed. Its excellency cannot be denied, and the Church has adopted it for her daily office, dividing it into eleven psalms. Bert.—S. Aug. has written thirty-two, and S. Amb. twenty-two sermons on the contents; and S. Basil observes, that David has here comprised in one psalm the sum of all that he has written in the rest. Among other points of morality and doctrine, we may remark, that the psalmist insists on the necessity of God's grace, and the co-operation of free will, (W.) and overturns the Prot. system of justification. D.—The Israelites might recite this psalm on their journey, three times a-year, to the temple, as the fifteen gradual canticles which follow, were to be sung on the steps leading to the house of God. Bellar. M.—Lord. Such only are happy here, (W.) or hereafter. H.—All aim at happiness, but only the virtuous take the proper means to attain it. S. Aug.—The way may here designate this life, (W.) or the law, (S. Aug.) or Jesus Christ. Jo. xiv. 6. S. Amb. The psalmist evidently presupposes, that some can and do keep the law. W.

VER. 2. His testimonies. The commandments of God are called his testimonies, because they testify his holy will unto us. Note here, that in almost every verse of this psalm, (which in number are 176) the word and law of God, and the love and observance of it, are perpetually inculcated, under a variety of denominations, all signifying the same thing. Ch.—We must search the law, not out of curiosity, but to practise it; (H.) otherwise we shall become more guilty. W. Jam. iv. 17.

VER. 3. Ways. They may, however, repent. The just are subject to fall. 1 Jo. i. 8. But venial faults are not incompatible with justice. C.—Heb. "They also do no iniquity: they walk in his ways." Prot. Bert.

VER. 4. Diligently. Nimis. Lit. "too much." But this is a Heb. idiom, to imply the greatest diligence. H.—Some would refer it to "God's strong injunction;" which is not necessary. The psalmist henceforward speaks to God. Bert.

VER. 5. O! that. Conscious of his own insufficiency, he prays for grace to be justified. W.—Moses acknowledged, that man could not observe the law, without Christ. Deut. xxx. 11. Rom. x. 6.

VER. 6. All. At the day of judgment, it will not suffice to have observed only some of the commandments. See S. Jer. S. Amb. &c. who all seem to follow Origen. C.—The breach of any law brings confusion. W.

VER. 7. Justice. That all thy ordinances are most equitable, (W.) and when I shall have faithfully put them in practice. Eccli. xv. 9. Theod.

15 I will meditate on thy commandments: and I will consider thy ways.

16 I will think of thy justifications: I will not forget thy words.

GIMEL.

17 Give bountifully to thy servant, enliven me: and I shall keep thy words.

18 Open thou my eyes: and I will consider the wondrous things of thy law.

19 I am a sojourner on the earth: hide not thy commandments from me.

20 My soul hath coveted to long for thy justifications, at all times.

21 Thou hast rebuked the proud: they are cursed who decline from thy commandments.

22 Remove from me reproach and contempt: because I have sought after thy testimonies.

23 For princes sat, and spoke against me: but thy servant was employed in thy justifications.

24 For thy testimonies are my meditation; and thy justifications my counsel.

DALETH.

25 My soul hath cleaved to the pavement: quicken thou me according to thy word.

26 I have declared my ways, and thou hast heard me: teach me thy justifications.

VER. 8. Utterly. Heb. nimis, as v. 4. H.—It may be advantageous to us to be left awhile, that we may know our own weakness. S. Greg. Mor. xx. 21. W.—He does not beg never to be tempted, or in tribulation; (H.) but only that he may not yield to sin. S. No. These are most glorious titles, importing the true service of Christ, in unity with the Catholic Church, and under the Vicar of Jesus Christ, the Pope. 55 In the night I have remembered thy name, O Lord: and have kept thy law.

56 This happened to me: because I sought after thy justifications.

HETH.

57 O Lord, my portion, I have said, I would keep thy law.

58 I intreated thy face with all my heart: have mercy on me according to thy word.

59 I have thought on my ways: and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.

60 I am ready, and am not troubled: that I may keep thy commandments.

61 The cords of the wicked have encompassed me: but I have not forgotten thy law.

62 I rose at midnight to give praise to thee; for the judgments of thy justification.

63 I am a partaker with all them that fear thee, and that keep thy commandments.

64 The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy: teach me thy justifications.

TETH.

65 Thou hast done well with thy servant, O Lord, according to thy word.

66 Teach me goodness, and discipline, and knowledge; for I have believed thy commandments.

67 Before I was humbled, I offended; therefore have I kept thy word.

68 Thou art good; and in thy goodness teach me thy justifications.

69 The iniquity of the proud hath been multiplied over me: but I will seek thy commandments with my whole heart.

70 Their heart is curdled like milk: but I have meditated on thy law.

71 It is good for me that thou hast humbled me, that I may learn thy justifications.

72 The law of thy mouth is good to me, above thousands of gold and silver.

JOD.

73 Thy hands have made me, and formed me: give me understanding, and I will learn thy commandments.

74 They that fear thee shall see me, and shall be glad: because I have greatly hoped in thy words.

75 I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are equity: and in thy truth thou hast humbled me.

76 O! let thy mercy be for my comfort, according to thy word unto thy servant.

77 Let thy tender mercies come unto me, and I shall live: for thy law is my meditation.

78 Let the proud be ashamed, because they have done unjustly towards me: but I will be employed in thy commandments.

79 Let them that fear thee turn to me: and they that know thy testimonies.

80 Let my heart be undefiled in thy justifications, that I may not be confounded.

CAPH.

81 My soul hath fainted after thy salvation: and in thy word I have very much hoped.

82 My eyes have failed for thy word, saying: When wilt thou comfort me?

83 For I am become like a bottle in the frost: I have not forgotten thy justifications.

84 How many are the days of thy servant: when wilt thou execute judgment on them that persecute me?

85 The wicked have told me fables: but not as thy law.

86 All thy statutes are truth: they have persecuted me unjustly, do thou help me.

87 They had almost made an end of me upon earth: but I have not forsaken thy commandments.

88 Quicken thou me according to thy mercy: and I shall keep the testimonies of thy mouth.

LAMED.

89 For ever, O Lord, thy word standeth firm in heaven.

90 Thy truth unto all generations: thou hast founded the earth, and it continueth.

91 By thy ordinance the day goeth on: for all things serve thee.

92 Unless thy law had been my meditation, I had then perhaps perished in my abjection.

93 Thy justifications I will never forget: for by them thou hast given me life.

94 I am thine, save thou me: for I have sought thy justifications.

95 The wicked have waited for me to destroy me: but I have understood thy testimonies.

96 I have seen an end of all perfection: thy commandment is exceedingly broad.

MEM.

97 O how have I loved thy law, O Lord! it is my meditation all the day.

98 Through thy commandment, thou hast made me wiser than my enemies: for it is ever with me.

99 I have understood more than all my teachers: because thy testimonies are my meditation.

100 I have had understanding above ancients: because I have sought thy commandments.

101 I have restrained my feet from every evil way; that I may keep thy words.

102 I have not declined from thy judgments, because thou hast set me a law.

103 How sweet are thy words to my palate! more than honey to my mouth.

104 By thy commandments I have had understanding: therefore have I hated every way of iniquity.

NUN.

105 Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my paths.

106 I have sworn and am determined to keep the judgments of thy justice.

107 I have been humbled, O Lord, exceedingly: quicken thou me according to thy word.

108 The free offerings of my mouth make acceptable, O Lord: and teach me thy judgments.

109 My soul is continually in my hands; and I have not forgotten thy law.

W.—Those who receive not the sacrament, are still under a strict obligation to obey the truth; as all were created only for this purpose. H.—The psalmist means thus to express his firm determination to do all that God should require of him, (S. Aug.) and renews the solemn covenant entered into with the Deity by his ancestors. C. Still we acknowledge that we are useless servants, (Lu. xvii. 10.) with regard to God. We can give him nothing, which he has not first given us. Our piety will redound to our own advantage. H.—The psalmist may allude to his solemn engagement, (v. 106. C.) which he made with perfect freedom and willingness, though it was not a matter of choice. Bert.

VER. 109. My hands. In danger of being thrown by, or of falling, (W.) ready to appear before God's tribunal. I watch over myself, and strive to keep my soul tranquil. The prophet might have all this in view. Bert.—Most of the fathers read, "in thy hands," under God's protection. This is denied by S. Jer. (ad Sun.) though the commentary which goes under his name, and was written in the same age, has thy. The other reading is, however, more correct. The Greeks made use of a similar expression, to shew the danger of losing a treasure. Athen. xiii. 4. C.—Such is our soul, which we must fear to lose. S. Greg. Mor. vii. 6. Bert.

VER. 110. Snare, v. 67. In such dangers, I still remain faithful. C.

VER. 111. Inheritance. I will strive to imitate the faith of Abraham, &c. H.—I will stick to the law as to my portion, through pure love.

VER. 112. Inclined. He had said, (v. 36.) incline, as the work proceeds from grace and free-will. S. Aug.—Reward. S. Jer. "for the eternal reward." All agree, that the Heb. may have this sense. He is influenced by hope, though the motive of charity is placed first. Whether both motives can produce the same 110 Sinners have laid a snare for me: but I have not erred from thy precepts.

111 I have purchased thy testimonies for an inheritance for ever: because they are the joy of my heart.

112 I have inclined my heart to do thy justifications for ever, for the reward.

SAMECH.

113 I have hated the unjust: and have loved thy law.

114 Thou art my helper and my protector: and in thy word I have greatly hoped.

115 Depart from me, ye malignant: and I will search the commandments of my God.

116 Uphold me according to thy word, and I shall live: and let me not be confounded in my expectation.

117 Help me, and I shall be saved: and I will meditate always on thy justifications.

118 Thou hast despised all them that fall off from thy judgments; for their thought is unjust.

119 I have accounted all the sinners of the earth prevaricators: therefore have I loved thy testimonies.

120 Pierce thou my flesh with thy fear: for I am afraid of thy judgments.

AIN.

121 I have done judgment and justice: give me not up to them that slander me.

122 Uphold thy servant unto good: let not the proud calumniate me.

act, is an useless inquiry. The Scriptures frequently propose reward, the second, though less excellent motive. Matt. v. 12. Gen. xv. 1. Rom. viii. 18. Bert.—This text evidently shews, that the keeping of the commandments merits a reward, for which we may labour. W.—Prot. evade this, by reading, "always, even unto the end;" because heleb is ambiguous, and means also, the end. H.—"As if the Sept. were not sufficient to determine the same... But... they are resolved to take their liberty, though contrary to S. Jerom, and the ancient Fathers." Ward's Errat. p. 75.—God authorizes us to aim at the reward, though he would not have this to be the only motive. v. 33. C.

VER. 113. Unjust. Inasmuch as they oppose thy law. Bert.—So Christ orders us to hate our parents, when they are an obstacle to our salvation. We must love their persons and welfare, (S. Aug.) but hate their iniquity. W.—Heb. "the turbulent." S. Jer. "vain thoughts," and inconstant men. The meaning of sehaphim is not well ascertained. C.—But the psalmist might have all these senses (H.) in view, as they are all good; and hence we may admire the copiousness of the Hebrew language. Bert.

VER. 114. Helper. Heb. "asylum and buckler." We must keep in his presence, (H.) and avoid the society of the wicked, if we would search the law, v. 115. W.

VER. 116. Live. S. Aug. (tr. 124. in Joan.) beautifully describes the life of the just here and in heaven. Bert.—We may thus pray for grace, and spiritual life with confidence, if we be resolved to keep the commandments. Yet we must not fail to entreat God not to suffer us to be confounded, which will not be the case, if we entertain hope, and charity be poured on our hearts. Rom. v. 5. W.

VER. 119. Prevaricators. For though they be not acquainted with revelation, (H.) they have the natural law written in their hearts by God. Rom. ii. 12. S. Aug.—There is no such thing as the philosophic sin, (Bert.) which abstracts from every offence of the Deity, though it be allowed to be contrary to reason. H.—Sept. seem to have read differently esbathi, "I have," &c. instead of hishbatta, "thou hast destroyed." Sigim, scorias, may have been sugim in their copies, though both may be derived from sug, "he departed." Bert.—"Thou hast accounted as dross, or froth," &c. S. Jer.—Calmet says, that S. Jerom and Heb. read in the first person, which is inaccurate. Bert.—The just entertain the same sentiments of the wicked as God does. W.

VER. 120. Afraid. Servile fear is therefore profitable, though perfect charity expel it, and move us to do well for the love of God. 1 Jo. iv. W.—Yet fear sometimes returns, that the just may not give way to presumption. C.

VER. 121. Justice. This he declares out of zeal, praying to be freed from calumniators, (W.) particularly the devil. Apoc. xii. 9. The Babylonians probably laid falsehoods to the charge of the Jews, in order to oppress them, as they frequently accused Daniel.

VER. 122. Uphold. Heb. "answer for," (S. Jer.) as a bondsman.—Unto good. Thus the law is insinuated, though it is not here expressed. Bert.—In attacking the devil, who is so experienced, we must take God with us, or we shall surely be overcome. S. Aug. tr. 4. in Joan.

VER. 123. Salvation. The Messiah, (S. Hil. v. 41.) or liberty. v. 82. I have 123 My eyes have fainted after thy salvation: and for the word of thy justice.

124 Deal with thy servant according to thy mercy: and teach me thy justifications.

125 I am thy servant, give me understanding that I may know thy testimonies.

126 It is time, O Lord, to do: they have dissipated thy law.

127 Therefore have I loved thy commandments above gold and the topaz.

128 Therefore was I directed to all thy commandments: I have hated all wicked ways.

PHE.

129 Thy testimonies are wonderful: therefore my soul hath sought them.

130 The declaration of thy words giveth light: and giveth understanding to little ones.

131 I opened my mouth, and panted: because I longed for thy commandments.

132 Look thou upon me and have mercy on me, according to the judgment of them that love thy name.

133 Direct my steps according to thy word: and let no iniquity have dominion over me.

134 Redeem me from the calumnies of men: that I may keep thy commandments.

135 Make thy face to shine upon thy servant: and teach me thy justifications.

136 My eyes have sent forth springs of water: because they have not kept thy law.

been fatigued with looking up to heaven for aid, like a woman who looks for the return of her husband to port. C.

VER. 124. Mercy. When we have been most diligent, there still remains much to be done, and in many things we offend. S. Amb.

VER. 126. To do. Our best, since so many prove rebellious, (Heb. iv. 11. Eccli. v. 8. Bert.) or we stand in the utmost need of the Messiah, since even the Jews give erroneous explanations of the law. S. Amb.—Heb. &c. "it is time for the Lord to act," by punishing the guilty; or, "to act for the Lord," faciendi Dominus, by striving to repair the injuries done to his name and worship. C.

VER. 127. Topaz. Heb. paz, which denotes "the purest gold" of Phison. Gen. ii. 11. C.—The topaz was discovered only in the reign of Ptolemy, father of Philadelphus. S. Hil. Plin. xxvii. 8.—Yet S. Jerom and others have the topaz, (Bert.) which S. Amb. represents as the finest of precious stones. C.—The more the law is despised by the wicked, the more are the just in love with it. W.

VER. 128. Directed. In my steps. Bert.—Pagn. "I judged all, yea all thy precepts to be right." H.—The hatred of the wicked made the love of the beauty of thy law increase in my breast. W.

VER. 129. Wonderful. Under the letter, I discover many mysteries, which makes me study them diligently. C.—God's works and laws deserve our most serious attention. W.

VER. 130. Declaration. By God's ministers renders them intelligible, though so wonderful in themselves. Heb. styles this "the door of opening." Bert.—The Scriptures are full of difficulties, and Daniel (ix. 2.) made them his study. Since the coming of Christ, the mysteries and prophecies have been more developed. But those who refuse to acknowledge him, grope at mid-day. Matt. xi. 25. and xviii. 5. and 1 Cor. xiv. 20. C.—The first entrance into the knowledge of holy Scripture illuminates the understanding of the humble, whence they proceed to know more. W.

VER. 131. Panted. Like one afflicted with the asthma, (Bert.) or most eager to obtain something. W.—He asked and obtained the holy Spirit, (S. Aug.) enabling him to understand the law, (H.) and to comply with it. See Ezech. iii. 2. Pa. lxxx. 11. C.

VER. 132. Judgment. Or custom, (C.) as thou art wont to treat such. W.—Let us not be looked upon as criminals. C.—The just are persuaded, that God will not reject the humble, (Bert.) according to the opinion (sententiam) of &c. Chal.

VER. 134. Calumnies. That they may not cause me to abandon virtue. S. Aug.—A person must be well grounded not to yield on such occasions, when he is exposed to ridicule, &c. v. 122. C.—Even the psalmist dreaded this situation. Bert.

VER. 135. Shine. (v. 133.) Let me never go astray. Bert.—But shew me favour. W.

VER. 136. Law. This shews that David composed this psalm, as he fell by seeing Bethsabee.—They. Men. Dupont. Sept. "I." But this is unnecessary. The eyes and all our senses lead to our ruin. Rom. vii. 18. 24. Bert.—True re (785)

SADE.

137 Thou art just, O Lord: and thy judgment is right.

138 Thou hast commanded justice thy testimonies: and thy truth exceedingly.

139 My zeal hath made me pine away: because my enemies forgot thy words.

140 Thy word is exceedingly refined: and thy servant hath loved it.

141 I am very young and despised; but I forgot not thy justifications.

142 Thy justice is justice for ever: and thy law is the truth.

143 Trouble and anguish have found me; thy commandments are my meditation.

144 Thy testimonies are justice for ever; give me understanding, and I shall live.

COPH.

145 I cried with my whole heart, hear me, O Lord: I will seek thy justifications.

146 I cried unto thee, save me: that I may keep thy commandments.

147 I prevented the dawning of the day, and cried: because in thy words I very much hoped.

148 My eyes to thee have prevented the morning: that I might meditate on thy words.

149 Hear thou my voice, O Lord, according to thy mercy: and quicken me according to thy judgment.

150 They that persecute me have drawn nigh to iniquity; but they are gone far off from thy law.

penance requires lamentation, as well as a firm purpose of amendment, (W.) commissa diluere & abluta non iterare. S. Jer.

VER. 137. Right. He therefore makes people just indeed, and does not barely impute justice to them. W.

VER. 138. Truth. Thy laws are just and true in all respects, though we may not be able to discern it always. Rom. ix. 20. and xi. 33. Bert.—God punishes the wicked in his justice, and rewards the just in his truth, or according to his promises. Theod.

VER. 139. My. Sept. "thy zeal." The just are animated with the zeal of God, like S. Paul. The enemies here mentioned were the Israelites, who attacked David, and not the Babylonians, who never knew God's law, or apostate captives, since we do not find that they attempted to injure Daniel, &c. Bert.—Many, however, both at Nineve and Babylon prevaricated. Tob. i. 12. C.

VER. 140. Refined. Lit. "of fire." H.—Pure as any thing which has passed through the fire. W.—"It consumes sin, and enlightens the penitent." S. Jer.

VER. 141. Young. The Fathers explain this of David, who was preferred before his brothers; and of the Gentiles, who were chosen by Jesus Christ. W.—It may refer to Daniel, who was enabled to prophesy very soon, or to the disciples, for whom this psalm was composed, (C.) whether Solomon, or any of the faithful. Bert.—The just are often judged to be ignorant by the worldly wise; but they follow the law, and true wisdom. W.

VER. 142. Trouble. Such is the portion of the just. Rom. v. 3.—Meditation. Heb. "joy." Sym. C.—The sense is the same. Sept. generally give the former meaning, as they render by seeking what moderns would restrain to signify observing. v. 145. &c. Bert.

VER. 144. Live. In justice, as thy law enjoins. W.—Christ is the life. Bert.

VER. 145. Cried. With requisite fervour, (W.) and attention. S. Aug.

VER. 147. The. Lit. "in maturity." Some think that we should read maturitate, dupla, (S. Aug.) "in the dead of the night." The psalmist not only rose at midnight, but before sun-rise to meditate. H.—Kimchi says, he only indulged sleep the first three hours. But others believe, that he arose in the third and last watch. v. 148. C.—He got up before the ordinary time, and prayed with earnestness. W.—S. Amb. encourages people to come early to the church, to offer the first-fruits of their heart and voice to God; (C.) and S. Aug. informs us, that such was the practice of S. Monica. Conf. ix. 7. You are not in a higher station than the holy king who said, I rose, &c. v. 22. S. Chrys. ser. 42. ad pop. Bert.

VER. 148. Morning. Both night and morning, I prevented the usual hours of prayer. W.—To thee, is not in Heb. "my eyes prevented the watches." H.

VER. 149. Judgment. Or wonted mercy. W.

VER. 150. Law. There is no medium between faith and infidelity. If we do not observe this law, we sin. Not to advance is to go back. C.—Shall we hesitate whether to follow the narrow or the broad road? Bert.

VER. 151. Near. To reward or punish. We wander from thee, yet there 151 Thou art near, O Lord: and all thy ways are truth.

152 I have known from the beginning concerning thy testimonies: that thou hast founded them for ever.

RES.

153 See my humiliation and deliver me: for I have not forgotten thy law.

154 Judge my judgment and redeem me: quicken thou me for thy word's sake.

155 Salvation is far from sinners; because they have not sought thy justifications.

156 Many, O Lord, are thy mercies; quicken me according to thy judgment.

157 Many are they that persecute me, and afflict me; but I have not declined from thy testimonies.

158 I beheld the transgressors, and I pined away; because they kept not thy word.

159 Behold I have loved thy commandments, O Lord: quicken me thou in thy mercy.

160 The beginning of thy words is truth: all the judgments of thy justice are for ever.

SIN.

161 Princes have persecuted me without cause: and my heart hath been in awe of thy words.

162 I will rejoice at thy words, as one that hath found great spoil.

163 I have hated and abhorred iniquity: but I have loved thy law.

164 Seven times a day I have given praise to thee, for the judgments of thy justice.

is no place between. S. Aug. x. 26. 27. Bert.—God is ever ready to hear our just requests. W.—His law may be easily known. Deut. xxx. 11. C.

VER. 152. Ever. God's law is always the same in substance. W.—That of Moses receives its perfection in Christianity. C.—Though after this life we can no longer observe them, the reward of our past virtue will remain for ever. Bert.

VER. 153. Humiliation. Or "humility," as S. Aug. understands it of that virtue. C.

VER. 155. Sinners. Such cannot expect to be liberated. C.—Yet, as the captivity was fixed for seventy years, and many who were almost ignorant of the law, and had married strange wives, returned, this verse overturns that system, and shows that eternal salvation is meant. Bert.

VER. 157. Many. The Babylonians on one hand, and false brethren on the other, attack me; but I am grieved most to see God offended. C.—All the earth is stained with the blood of martyrs, whom the Church honours with festivals, and whose intercession heals many sick. S. Aug.

VER. 158. Transgressors. Sept. "fools," deueroûvras. If e were placed before s, the exact meaning of the Heb. would be preserved, though the wicked are often styled fools. H.—The prevaricating Jews are here designated. v. 136. C.

VER. 159. Behold. A person may profess his innocence without arrogance.

VER. 160. Truth. Hence all such commandments are immutable. W.—The threats of God have been put in execution, and we cannot doubt but the promised liberation will soon take place. C.

VER. 161. Princes. Of darkness, or the chiefs of the Philistines, &c. Bert.—Daniel was much exposed to the fury of the Babylonian princes, but he was more afraid of the terrors of the law, (Lev. xxvi.) than of all that they could do against him. C.—Thus the martyrs despised the threats of tyrants. S. Aug.—Cause. The powerful men of this world have no just reason to persecute the just, nor can they make them abandon virtue. W.—S. Basil answered Valens with great intrepidity, shewing how little he apprehended what the emperor could take from him, as we read in S. Greg. Naz. (or. 20.) who says, (or. 6.) let us fear only one thing, which is, to fear any person more than God. Bert.

VER. 162. Spoil. Having just mentioned fear; lest any should think that he entertained any secret dislike for the law; he adds, that it gives him more content than the greatest treasures or conquests can the miser or the hero. v. 14. 72. and 127. C.—He rejoiceth thus in keeping the commandments, how difficult soever they may be. W.

VER. 163. Iniquity. Heb. "lying." The Babylonians have attempted to draw me over to their false religion; but I perceive its vanity, (C.) and stick closer to the truth, (H. v. 85.) and to thy holy law. C.

VER. 164. Seven. Often, (W.) as the word signifies, Prov. xxiv. 16. &c. Vat.—Yet here it may determine the precise number, as the Church seems to have taken it, by instituting the seven canonical hours of the day, and matins and lauds for the night, in imitation of the psalmist. Bert. v. 147.—R. Solomon 165 Much peace have they that love thy law; and to them there is no stumbling-block.

166 I looked for thy salvation, O Lord; and I loved thy commandments.

167 My soul hath kept thy testimonies, and hath loved them exceedingly.

168 I have kept thy commandments, and thy testimonies, because all my ways are in thy sight.

TAU.

169 Let my supplication, O Lord, come near in thy sight; give me understanding according to thy word.

170 Let my request come in before thee; deliver thou me according to thy word.

171 My lips shall utter a hymn, when thou shalt teach me thy justifications.

172 My tongue shall pronounce thy word: because all thy commandments are justice.

173 Let thy hand be with me to save me; for I have chosen thy precepts.

174 I have longed for thy salvation, O Lord; and thy law is my meditation.

175 My soul shall live, and shall praise thee; and thy judgments shall help me.

understands it literally, prescribing prayer twice before the reading of the decalogue, and once after in the morning; and in the afternoon, twice before and after the same lecture. The Church has enjoined matins to be said at night, lauds in the morning, prime, tierce, sext, none, vespers and complin, in the course of the day. S. Ben. reg. 8. and 16. C.—This ecclesiastical office consists of hymns, psalms, &c. S. Isid.—Against it some have risen up, particularly against that part which was said in the night, pretending that God had made the night for rest; and hence they were called nuctazantes, or “drowsy” heretics. S. Isid. Of. i. 22.—S. Jerom styles Vigilantius Dormitanti, for the same reason; as if it were better to sleep than to watch. Wycliff (Wald. iii. Tit. iii. 21.) and Luther have oppugned the same holy practice, though it be so conformable both to Scripture and to the fathers. S. Baa. reg. ius. 37. S. Greg. dial. iii. 14. Ven. Bede. Hist. iv. 7. &c.—S. Clement, as many suppose, (W.) or at least some author before the fourth century, (H.) explains the reason why we should pray at these set times; but cautions us not to join with heretics, neither in the Church nor at home. Const. Apost. viii. 40.—For what society is there between light and darkness? 2 Cor. vi. S. Cyprian, (or. Dom.) S. Jerom, (ep. ad Eust.) and S. Aug. (ser. 55. de Temp.) mention several of these hours, and exhort the faithful to be diligent in attending these public prayers. W.

VER. 165. Peace, in their own conscience, (W.) and prosperity, without fear of danger. Not even death can disturb those who belong to God. Rom. viii. 38. C.—But all things work together for their good. ib. 28. H.—The perfect are not moved to imitate bad example, and the weak are not excused for so doing, as they ought to be constant. W.—The virtuous man is neither scandalized at the law, though he may not understand it perfectly, nor at the fall of those who had been most eminent for sanctity. S. Aug.

VER. 166. Loved. Heb. &c. “performed.” C.—The difference is but small. Bert.—He is actuated by real charity. W.

VER. 168. Sight, whom I would not offend. W.—The presence of God ought to deter us most effectually from sin. H. Tit. ii. 13.

VER. 169. Supplication. Heb. “cry.” Eusebius reads ἀξιοῦσα, “dignity,” which S. Amb. thinks has been substituted for ἀξίως, “prayer;” though all our copies of the Sept. have ἀνέως, (C.) a word of the same import. H.

VER. 171. A hymn. Heb. also, “praise.” H.—Like a spring sending forth a copious stream. C.

VER. 173. Save me. Though a person be endued with grace, he requireth more grace to resist temptations. W.—Actual grace is requisite. H.

VER. 175. Live in grace and glory. To serve God, it was not requisite that one should be at Jerusalem. Daniel, Tobias, &c. were saints elsewhere. Bert.—Yet it was more easy to worship God in his temple, where every thing moved to piety; (H.) and this the psalmist desires, deeming it a new life. C.

VER. 176. Lost. I am in captivity. C.—All men have been involved in sin, and Christ came to save them; but only such as keep the law will obtain salvation. W.—The conclusion contains a confession of misery in the name of all, and an allusion to Christ, the good shepherd. The prophet admits that notwithstanding his love of the law, he may have still many ways transgressed; and that without faith in the Messiah, he could not belong to his fold, or escape the many dangers of the world, 1 Cor. iv. 4. and ix. 27. Bert.—Seek. S. Hilary and some Greek copies have read incorrectly “quicken.” C.

PSAL CXIX. VER. 1. A gradual canticle. The following psalms, in number fifteen, are called gradual psalms or canticles, from the word gradus, signifying steps, ascensions or degrees; either because they were appointed to be sung on the fifteen steps, by which the people ascended to the temple; or that in the singing of them the voice was to be raised by certain steps or ascensions:

176 I have gone astray like a sheep that is lost: seek thy servant, because I have not forgotten thy commandments.

PSALM CXIX.

AD DOMINUM.

A prayer in tribulation.

A gradual canticle.

IN my trouble I cried to the Lord: and he heard me.

2 O Lord, deliver my soul from wicked lips, and a deceitful tongue.

3 What shall be given to thee, or what shall be added to thee, to a deceitful tongue?

4 The sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals that lay waste.

5 Wo is me, that my sojourning is prolonged! I have dwelt with the inhabitants of Cedar: 6 my soul hath been long a sojourner.

7 With them that hated peace I was peaceable; when I spoke to them, they fought against me without cause.

PSALM CXX.

LEVAVI OCULOS.

God is the keeper of his servants.

A gradual canticle.

or that they were to be sung by the people returning from their captivity, and ascending to Jerusalem, which was seated amongst mountains. The holy Fathers, in a mystical sense, understand these steps, or ascensions, of the degrees by which Christians spiritually ascend to virtue and perfection; and to the true temple of God in the heavenly Jerusalem. Ch.—Both these last interpretations seem more plausible and literal, as given by S. Chrysostom, &c. Bert.—The allusion to the steps of the temple (Exec. xl.) is very uncertain, as well as the raising of the voice in higher notes during each psalm. C.—They might be sung on a pulpit, 2 Esd. ix. 4. and 2 Par. xx. 19. M.—The authors seem to have lived at the close of the captivity, (C.) though David might well compose these canticles during some of his trials, or foreseeing this event. Bert.—They contain a consoling assurance of mankind's redemption, perfigured by the liberation of the Jews, and also that the power and fury of persecutors shall cease. W.—Shir, hannahaloth, may denote a very excellent canticle. Jun. Muis. H.—Trouble. No time is more proper for prayer. S. Chrys. C.—Heard. I am encouraged by past experience to hope for redress. W.

VER. 2. Tongue. From the Babylonians, who seek to delude me, (C.) and from detraction, which is most dangerous. W.

VER. 3. Added. This is an usual form of denouncing vengeance. Ruth i. 17. The Babylonians are threatened with God's judgments, v. 4. Some place these words in the mouth of God, answering the captives. How shall you be screened from the shafts of detraction? Fear not. The sharp, &c. C.—What punishment is great enough for this sin? W.

VER. 4. Waste. Heb. “of juniper” or thorn trees. Job. xxx. 4. The former is said to retain its heat a long time, and the latter is easily inflamed. Ps. cxvii. 12. Such fiery weapons have been often used. Ps. vii. 14. and lxxv. 8.

Spiculae et multa crinitum missile flammâ. Stat. Theb. v.

—How will God punish detraction? He will hurl his darts against the guilty. Hab. iii. 11. C.—This is their reward, (Bert.) and what they deserve. W.—

Charity and good example will best counteract their baneful influence. S. Aug.

VER. 5. Is prolonged. Heb. “is Meshec.” H.—But Houbigant rejects this as a place unknown; and the word may have the former signification, given by the Sept. and S. Jerom. C. Bert.—Moses speaks of Meshec, (Gen. x. 2.) or of the mountains separating Choleis from Armenia, where the Jews might be dispersed, (4 K. xvii. 23. and 1 Esd. ii. 59. and viii. 15.) as well as in Cedar, or Arabia Petrea, (Is. xlii. 11.) where the Saracens afterwards inhabited, according to S. Jerom. (Loc. Heb.) C.—Inhabitants. Heb. “tents,” in which the people chiefly dwelt. Bert.—From Cedar, the son of Ismael, sprung Mahomet, whose tyranny has been long felt. Cedar denotes the “darkness” of sin and error. The Jews bewailed their absence from the temple, and Christians their being unable to meet for the divine worship, and their banishment (W.) from heaven. S. Chrys.

VER. 7. Peaceable. Heb. “I spoke peaceable, and they warlike things.” S. Jer.—Lit. “I was peace, and when I spoke, they flew to war.” H.—Cause. This is easily understood from the context, (Bert.) though not expressed in the original. H.

PSAL CXX. VER. 1. Canticle. David wrote this during his flight from Absalom; (Grot.) and de Muis judges from the martial air, that it was composed in the midst of danger. It relates to the captives, (Orig. C.) and to all in the pilgrimage of this world. Bert.—Mountains. Jerusalem, and heaven, whence all our help must come. God most readily hears the prayers which are poured forth in places appointed by him. W.—Jerusalem was situated among mountains, and the Jews turned towards it in prayer. Dan. vi. 10. They did not depend on human aid. Jer. iii. 22.

I HAVE lifted up my eyes to the mountains, from whence help shall come to me.

2 My help is from the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

3 May he not suffer thy foot to be moved: neither let him slumber that keepeth thee.

4 Behold he shall neither slumber nor sleep, that keepeth Israel.

5 The Lord is thy keeper, the Lord is thy protection, upon thy right hand.

6 The sun shall not burn thee by day, nor the moon by night.

7 The Lord keepeth thee from all evil: may the Lord keep thy soul.

8 May the Lord keep thy coming in and thy going out; from henceforth now and for ever.

PSALM CXXI.

LÆTATUS SUM IN HIS.

The desire and hope of the just for the coming of the kingdom of God, and the peace of his Church.

A gradual canticle.

I REJOICED at the things that were said to me: We shall go into the house of the Lord.

2 Our feet were standing in thy courts, O Jerusalem.

3 Jerusalem, which is built as a city, which is compact together.

4 For thither did the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord; the testimony of Israel, to praise the name of the Lord.

5 Because their seats have sat in judgment, seats upon the house of David.

VER. 3. May. Heb. "he will not." Many have read in the second person, oath in the Heb. and Sept. "buffer not thy," &c. Aquila, S. Aug. &c. C.

VER. 4. Israel. The Church militant. W.—These figurative expressions shew that God will never cease to protect his people. Bert.

VER. 5. Hand. Always ready. Pa. xc. 4. and xv. 8. H.

VER. 6. Night. Neither prosperity nor adversity shall hurt thee, (S. Jer.) or the Church. W.—Cold is said to burn or parch up. Gen. xxi. 40. Justin (2) writes of the Scythians, Quoniam continuis frigoribus urantur, as the effects of extreme heat and cold are similar. The Jews were protected from both at their return; (Is. iv. 6. and xlix. 10. C.) though we may doubt of this explanation, as the text is applied to those in heaven. Apoc. vii. 16. Bert.

VER. 7. Keepeth. Heb. also, "shall or may." The words of a prophet are always true, and the tenses are varied at pleasure by S. Jerom, &c. Bert.—Soul, or spiritual life. W. 1 Pet. i. 4.

VER. 8. Coming in. Heb. has, "going out," first. Bert.—Yet Pagnin agrees with us. H.—This expression denotes all the occurrences of life. Deut. xxviii. 6.

C.—We may discover a beautiful progression in this psalm; God protects us from each and from every danger. Bert.—He is not like earthly friends, who have not always the will or the power to do it. S. Chrys.

PSAL CXXI. VER. 1. Canticle. Heb. Chal. and Syr. add, "of David," (C.) who saw in spirit the glory of the temple under Solomon, or the return of the captives, and the felicity of souls in heaven. Bert. See Pa. xli.—What is said of the earthly Jerusalem, is beautifully applied to heaven by S. Aug. &c. The captive Levites might write this psalm. C.—Lord. Many prophets assured the Jews of their speedy deliverance, as preachers still set before the people the joys of heaven; all which filled the psalmist with rapture. W.—The motive for this joy is disinterested and edifying. The captives had begged for redress in the former psalm. C.—Before they had been chastised, they profaned the temple. S. Chrys.

VER. 2. Were. Heb. also, "shall," &c. Yet many of the Levites had officiated in the temple, 1 Esd. iii. 12.—Courts, or gates, where justice was administered. C.—We may better (H.) rejoice in the Church, (W.) and in the prospect of heaven. H.—"At the news, it seemed as if our feet had been," &c. Bert.

VER. 3. Together. Well built and inhabited. The Jews throughout the world considered it as their most dear country. C.—The participation of spiritual graces (Pa. cxviii. 63. &c.) is a great comfort to Catholics, (W.) who look upon the chair of S. Peter at Rome as the centre of unity. H.—David established order in Jerusalem, when he had made the conquest, and various families contributed to the rebuilding of it. Bert.—All the tribes were united under the dominion of David. Houbig.

VER. 4. The. This was the testimony, (H.) or ordinance of the Lord, (C.) which Israel had solemnly engaged to perform. H.—All were obliged to repair thither thrice in the year; (Ex. xxiii. 17. M.) and this contributed most to the splendour of the city. C.—Houbigant would translate "the congregations of Israel;" or juxta may be understood, "according to the testimony." Bert.—

6 Pray ye for the things that are for the peace of Jerusalem: and abundance for them that love thee.

7 Let peace be in thy strength: and abundance in thy towers.

8 For the sake of my brethren and of my neighbours, I spoke peace of thee.

9 Because of the house of the Lord our God, I have sought good things for thee.

PSALM CXXII.

AD TE LEVAVI

A prayer in affliction, with confidence in God.

A gradual canticle.

TO thee have I lifted up my eyes, who dwellest in heaven.

2 Behold as the eyes of servants are on the hands of their masters:

As the eyes of the handmaid are on the hands of her mistress: so are our eyes unto the Lord our God, until he have mercy on us.

3 Have mercy on us, O Lord, have mercy on us; for we are greatly filled with contempt.

4 For our soul is greatly filled: we are a reproach to the rich, and contempt to the proud.

PSALM CXXIII.

NISI QUIA DOMINUS.

The Church giveth glory to God for her deliverance from the hands of her enemies.

A gradual canticle.

IF it had not been that the Lord was with us, let Israel now say: 2 If it had not been that the Lord was with us,

The tribes shall be all united, (C.) and come to Jerusalem, as all mankind should embrace the true faith in the Catholic Church. W.

VER. 5. Upon. Or "over." H.—The Jews made their sanhedrim superior to the kings, as the Chal. here insinuates. But the text rather means that both the ecclesiastical and civil courts shall be re-established, and bring an immense concourse of people to the city. C.—The Church is empowered to pass sentence, (W.) and the apostles shall judge both men and angels. H.

VER. 6. Pray. Sept. "ask Jerusalem for," &c. (H.) as if she were to give it. C.—And may there be abundance. Heb. "those who love thee shall be at rest." H.—Christ encourages us to ask; as Catholics exhort each other to pray for the Church. W.

VER. 7. Strength. Fortifications, (Bert.) or army.—Towers, or "palaces." Heb. Jer. xxxi. 23. C.—He insists so much on the blessing of peace, because he foresaw that Jerusalem would one day neglect it. Lu. xix. 42. Charity dwells in the towers or saints, (Bert.) and makes us resemble God. S. Chrys. de Laud. S. Paul. iii.

VER. 8. I. Heb. adds, "I will now;" (Mont.) or rather, "I have now spoken." Bert.—It was forbidden to beg for the peace of Chanaan. Deut. vii. 3. But Jeremiah (xxix. 7.) exhorts the captives to desire this blessing for the city, to which they were going, as it would redound to their own advantage. C.—Christ leaves his peace to his apostles, and to their successors; and in heaven, all good things are prepared for the elect. W.

PSAL CXXII. VER. 1. Canticle. Heb. adds, "of David." H.—Syriac also attributes it to him, though Zorobabel, &c. might recite it at their return. It may also refer to the captives groaning under oppression, (C.) and to every Christian, who must live in expectation of a better country. S. Aug. Berthier. T. viii.

VER. 2. Masters. Expecting liberty, or rather food; though it may also imply that they are ready to run at the first sign, which they observe with attention. Thus Menelaus had his eyes on Agamemnon. Homer. C.—As servants, and particularly handmaids, are very attentive, and hope to receive sustenance, so we ought to pray with all earnestness to God for what is necessary. W.—All must come from Him.—Until. Or "waiting for his having mercy on us." We shall not cease to look up to Him afterwards. Bert.—"Take care not to turn thine eyes away from mine." Terent. Adelph. ii. 1.

VER. 4. A reproach. Heb. "with the reproach of those at ease," &c. (H.) or "let reproach fall upon," &c. We are treated with too much scorn. Lam. iii. 30. C.—Yet God will not permit his friends to be overcome, but encourages them to hope for speedy redress, when their sufferings are great. W.

PSAL CXXIII. VER. 1. Canticle. Heb. &c. with some Lat. copies add, "of David," (C.) who might write it after being delivered from some danger. It may also be applicable to the martyrs, and to all who have been freed from temptation. Bert.—The captives might compose it in thanksgiving for the leave to return, (C.) or when they had been delivered from the assaults of the neighbouring nations. Orig. C.

When men rose up against us, 3 perhaps they had swallowed us up alive.

When their fury was enkindled against us, 4 perhaps the water had swallowed us up.

5 Our soul hath passed through a torrent: perhaps our soul had passed through a water insupportable.

6 Blessed be the Lord, who hath not given us to be a prey to their teeth.

7 Our soul hath been delivered, as a sparrow out of the snare of the fowlers.

The snare is broken and we are delivered.

8 Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXIV.

QUI CONFIDUNT.

The just are always under God's protection.

A gradual canticle.

THEY that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Sion: he shall not be moved for ever that dwelleth 2 in Jerusalem.

Mountains are round about it: so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth, now and for ever.

3 For the Lord will not leave the rod of sinners upon the lot of the just: that the just may not stretch forth their hands to iniquity.

4 Do good, O Lord, to those that are good, and to the upright of heart.

VER. 3. Perhaps. This word is here affirmative. Heb. "Then." Sept. "Surely." C.—He modestly leaves it to others to judge what would have been the event if God had not sent help. The weak would have been destroyed, as soon as if they had become a prey to wild beasts, as Jonas was swallowed up. W.—See Prov. i. 12. M.

VER. 5. Insupportable. Without bottom, or beyond our strength, ἀνυπόστατος. C.—Heb. "Then the swelling waters it had passed over our soul." Mont. C.—S. Jerom has, "perhaps they," &c. which is more correct. See Pa. lxviii. 3. H.—A torrent implies sudden great troubles. W.

VER. 7. Sparrow. Heb. "bird." This comparison shews at once the dangers to which the Jews had been exposed, and their miraculous deliverance. C.—Men may deceive others: but they cannot impose on God. W.—Grace preserves the soul from the most imminent dangers of temptation, sin, &c. Bert.—We must therefore fly; but who will give us wings except God! S. Amb.

PSAL. CXXIV. VER. 1. Canticle of thanksgiving, relating to the times of the Messias, (Abenezra) or to the Jews, who overcame the attempts of the nations at their return, 2 Esd. iv. and vi. Ven. Bede, &c. C.—It exhorts all to confide in God. Bert.—Trust. The Jews complied not with this condition, and are become vagabonds; but the faithful inherit this promise, (Heb. x. 19. Bert.) which is verified in the Catholic Church. S. Aug.—To be secure, like Sion, which is defended by other mountains, we must belong to her society. W.—The situation of Jerusalem was very advantageous. It was difficult to bring any cavalry against it, except by the way of Idumea. A handful of men might defend the passes leading to the north, as we see in the history of the Machabees.

VER. 2. About it. Coming from Joppe, travellers cannot see the city till they are very near it, though with respect to Judea, it is very elevated. Hence Josephus styles it "the navel of the land." Bel. Jud. iii. 2. or 4.—The construction of the Vulg. is very natural. C.—For the promise regards the inhabitants, rather than the place, as Heb. would insinuate.—Lord. Zac. ii. 5. Heresiarchs have in vain risen up against the Church, though they were able men, like mountains. S. Aug.

VER. 3. Rod. Sceptre, or violent dominion. Is. x. 5.—That, Or "therefore." Interp. in S. Chrys. God always concludes his threats with promises of pardon to the penitent, 1 Cor. x. 13. C.—He tries his servants for their good, and will not abandon them. W.—The captivity lasted only 70 years: the ten persecutions of the Christian Church were terminated in 300 years; and though the wicked should even put the just to death, then their rod remains no longer upon them. If the virtuous were always suffering, the temptation might be too strong. But those who are sincere, at last emerge from the cloud, and force their enemies to applaud their conduct. Bert.

VER. 4. Heart. This God will certainly perform. W.—He asks not for himself alone, and leaves all to the divine disposal. H.

VER. 5. Bonds, obligations. "Knots," as ἀσπυγγῆλαι, also means, (Bert.) rather than duties. Bel.—Some suspect that obligations was put originally, as Heb. means "crooked ways," (C.) "embarrassments." Aquila—He may allude to the dark machinations of false brethren, who endeavoured to thwart the pious designs of Nehemias vi. 14. Apostles shall be treated like infidels, (C.) or rather worse, as we shall be if we act not up to the lights, (H.) and graces which we have received. C.—Those who enter into any covenant, &c. to uphold a false religion, though they may despise it in their hearts, must expect to be 5 But such as turn aside into bonds, the Lord shall lead out with the workers of iniquity: peace upon Israel.

PSALM CXXV.

IN CONVERTENDO.

The people of God rejoice at their delivery from captivity.

A gradual canticle.

WHEN the Lord brought back the captivity of Sion, we became like men comforted.

2 Then was our mouth filled with gladness; and our tongue with joy.

Then shall they say among the Gentiles: The Lord hath done great things for them.

3 The Lord hath done great things for us: we are become joyful.

4 Turn again our captivity, O Lord, as a stream in the south.

5 They that sow in tears, shall reap in joy.

6 Going they went and wept, casting their seeds.

7 But coming they shall come with joyfulness, carrying their sheaves.

PSALM CXXVI.

NISI DOMINUS.

Nothing can be done without God's grace and blessing.

A gradual canticle of Solomon.

UNLESS the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it.

Unless the Lord keep the city, he watcheth in vain that keepeth it.

punished, while the Church shall have peace. W.—Israel. S. Paul adds, of God, to shew who may be entitled to this blessing. Bert.—Heretics can neither give nor receive this peace. S. Aug.

PSAL. CXXV. VER. 1. Sion. It cannot be doubted but this regards the captives of Babylon: but still David might compose it, as he was a prophet; and herein the redemption of mankind may also be described. Bert.—The captives pray for the return of the rest of their brethren. C.—Comforted. Heb. "dreaming." C.—They could hardly believe their own eyes, like S. Peter. Acts xii. 9. This extraordinary joy is felt by devout souls, when freed from sin. W.—The Greek cites which the Romans declared free, could scarcely believe that they had understood the herald. Majus gaudium fuit, &c. Livy xxxiii.—Thus were the Jews affected. C. Ps. xiii. 2.—Chal. "we were like convalescents," which comes nearer to the sense of the Sept. Bert.

VER. 2. Shall. Or "did;" (C.) though the future is here well employed. Bert.—The prophet uses both tenses, shewing the certainty of the event. W.—It would require some time before the Gentiles would become sufficiently acquainted with the concerns of the Jews. Bert.—As soon as they did, they expressed their admiration, while the former were careful not to imitate the conduct of those who murmured at leaving Egypt. S. Chrys.

VER. 4. South. As the Egyptians hope for the overflowing of the Nile; (Hammond) or as the south wind melts the snow, so as to make the Jordan overflow its banks. Theod.—The return of our brethren will be as agreeable to us as water to a thirsty soil. Chal. Muir.—Make them come quickly, and in great numbers. Is. lx. 3. and lxvi. 12. C.—Esdras brought back some, and Nehemias others, from Babylon. Bert.—The ten tribes returned from Assyria later, and by degrees, (C. Diss.) if at all. Those who arrived first at Jerusalem pray for the rest. Bert.—The prophet foreseeing this event, desireth its perfect and speedy accomplishment, (W.) though it were scarcely to be expected, no more than (H.) a copious torrent in the south. W.

VER. 5. Joy. This was the case of the martyrs, &c. (Lu. vi. 21. Jo. xvi. 20.) as well as of the captives. Jer. xxxi. 9. Is. lxvi. 10. Bar. v. 6. C.—Tribulation commonly attends the virtuous in this life. Their reward is reserved for the next. S. Aug. W.—Sowing, we know not whether we shall ever reap. H.—This is a sort of proverb, which is applied to the captives. Bert.

VER. 6. They. Heb. "he," which must be taken distributively for all. Bert.

PSALM CXXVI. VER. 1. Of. Or "for" Solomon. This word is not in the Sept. Bert.—Some suppose that David put the psalm into his hands, to teach him that all depends on God. Muir.—He was to undertake various important works during his reign, (H.) particularly the temple, at the dedication of which this might be sung. W.—The chiefs of the captives might also appropriate it to their use, (Bert.) when they were rebuilding the temple, 2 Esd. iv. and vi. C.—It seems to refer to the times of the Messias. Bert.—House, or temple, and grant children. Ex. i. 21. Gen. xxx. 2. Without God's assistance, all your endeavours to rebuild the temple and city will prove fruitless.—H. Nehemias had ordered the citizens to watch the attempts of Sanaballat. C.—But still depended more on Providence than on his own industry. H.—David, Solomon, Esdras, &c. may have held this language. Bert.—Yet inactivity is not encouraged. We must labour, and still expect success from God alone. S. Chrys. Eph. ii. 16.—God must be the principal agent, (W.) and all the glory must be given to Him. H.

2 It is vain for you to rise before light: rise ye after you have sitten, you that eat the bread of sorrow.

When he shall give sleep to his beloved: 3 behold the inheritance of the Lord are children: the reward, the fruit of the womb.

4 As arrows in the hand of the mighty, so the children of them that have been shaken.

5 Blessed is the man that hath filled his desire with them; he shall not be confounded when he shall speak to his enemies in the gate.

PSALM CXXVII.

BEATI OMNES.

The fear of God is the way to happiness.

A gradual canticle.

BLESSED are all they that fear the Lord; that walk in his ways.

2 For thou shalt eat the labours of thy hands: blessed art thou, and it shall be well with thee.

3 Thy wife as a fruitful vine, on the sides of thy house.

Thy children as olive plants round about thy table.

4 Behold, thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord.

5 May the Lord bless thee out of Sion: and mayst thou see the good things of Jerusalem all the days of thy life.

6 And mayst thou see thy children's children, peace upon Israel.

VER. 2. Light. That is, your early rising, your labour and worldly solicitude, will be vain, that is, will avail you nothing, without the light, grace, and blessing of God. Ch.—Nehemias divided the people into companies, to prevent their being too much fatigued. C.—Without light it is impossible for man to work. Jo. ix. 4. H.—The labours of those who live by the robbery of the distressed, are vain. Chal.—Rise ye, is not in Heb. H.—Sitten. Allow yourselves proper time for rest, after your labours and sorrows: for his beloved, whom he favours with his grace, shall sleep and rest under his wing, and yet abound with offspring, and all blessings. Ch.—Sorrow. S. Jer. "of idols." This worship of God is odious.—Beloved. Solomon. Houb.—Yet some explain the Heb. in the plural, as it is applicable to all the people. The Jews were under great alarms: but were encouraged to hope that God would protect them, and give them a numerous progeny; though, as the country was probably never so well peopled as under Solomon, this may rather refer to the elect, who after the sleep of death (Bert.) shall behold those whom Christ shall acknowledge for his children, (H.) and obtain an eternal reward. S. Hil.—Whatever people may think they have done well, without God's grace, is all useless, and they must begin again; whereas those who are guided by it, perform all with as much ease as they would sleep, and yet merit a reward, which is promised in heaven to the true children who are born to God in the Catholic Church. W.

VER. 4. As arrows, &c. The offspring which God shall give his servants, that have been shaken and tossed about, (as the children of Israel were in their captivity) shall be like arrows in the hand of the mighty, which shall prosper and do great execution. Ch.—The patient sufferer will obtain a glorious recompense. W.—Children defend their parents.—Of them, &c. Heb. "of youth." S. Jer.—Such may be able to assist their aged parents, whereas those who are born in their old age must frequently be left orphans, (H.) and distressed. C.—Yet the Heb. may well admit the sense of the Vulg. as children will be more assimilated to revenge the wrongs of those, from whom they have received their life. The Jews are here represented in the state of persecution. Bert.

VER. 5. Desire. Who has as many children as he could wish. Heb. "his quiver." They are like arrows for his defence. C.—The Sept. may have put the thing signified instead of the figure; or aspatho may not be confuted to the former sense.—He shall. Heb. "they," father and son; yet the Chal. &c. retain he.—The children of Christ, and of his martyrs, who have been persecuted, are declared to be very powerful protectors; (Bert.) while such as imitate them, (H.) shall easily answer the objections which shall be put to them at the day of judgment, and be happy. W.—Gate. The enemies' envoys were not admitted into the city. 4 K. xviii. 17. Orig. &c.—In law-suits, children will prove excellent assistants. C. Eccl. xxx. 4.

PSAL. CXXVII. VER. 1. Canticle. Being a sequel to the former, (C.) and similar to the 111th, as both promise felicity to the captives at their return, if they prove faithful, 2 Ead. ix. 38. Ferrand.—It is a sort of epithalamium. Moller.—Both temporal and spiritual blessings are set before us. Bert.—Ways. Many saints have not received temporal rewards; and this confirms our faith that there is a world to come. C.—In effect, no temporal advantages are here specified, as they are below. Bert.

VER. 2. Hands. The idle are not entitled to blessings, which God will bestow on the industrious who fear him, preserving them from evils. Lev. xxvi. 16. and Deut. xxviii. 30. C. 2 Cor. iii. 10.—Some have explained seprow, "fruits;" though it here means hands. Bert.

VER. 3. Sides. Against which vines were planted. C.—The married people who fear God, shall commonly have a numerous posterity; or their souls shall

PSALM CXXVIII.

SÆPE EXPUGNAVERUNT

The Church of God is invincible: her persecutors come to nothing.

A gradual canticle.

OFTEN have they fought against me from my youth: let Israel now say.

2 Often have they fought against me from my youth: but they could not prevail over me.

3 The wicked have wrought upon my back: they have lengthened their iniquity.

4 The Lord, who is just, will cut the necks of sinners: 5 let them all be confounded, and turned back, that hate Sion.

6 Let them be as grass upon the tops of houses: which withereth before it be plucked up:

7 Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand; nor he that gathereth sheaves, his bosom.

8 And they that passed by have not said: The blessing of the Lord be upon you: we have blessed you in the name of the Lord.

PSALM CXXIX.

DE PROFUNDIS.

A prayer of a sinner trusting in the mercies of God. The 6th penitential psalm.

A gradual canticle.

OUT of the depths I have cried to thee, O Lord: 2 Lord, hear my voice.

produce many good works in the Church, which springs from our Saviour's side. Children denote such good works. W.—Plants. Ps. cxliii. 12. Hom. Odyss. vi. 163.

VER. 5. Sion. Where he displayed his bounty. C.—Jerusalem. In heaven. 1 Cor. xv. 19. Bert.—Mayst thou live happy in the holy city, after thy long captivity. C.

VER. 6. Israel. This is best secured by a well-regulated and numerous people. Bert.—The good works, performed on earth, will be rewarded in heaven. W.—We shall rejoice in the spiritual children, whom we shall have begotten. M. PSAL. CXXVIII. VER. 1. Canticle. In which David, (H.) or the Jews, at their return, after they had got the better of their enemies, render thanks to God. S. Chrys. C.—It may suit the Church, Jesus Christ, and every person; as none can escape trouble. Bert.—Fought against. Heb. "afflicted."—Expugnaverunt might seem to imply that they had obtained the victory. But this was not the case, at least eventually, though the people of God might sometimes be oppressed, and yield to sin. H.—Youth. Since the Israelites left Egypt. Os. ii. 15. Jer. ii. 2. C.—From the beginning, the just Abel, Seth, Abraham, &c. have been persecuted. W.

VER. 2. But. Or "for," et enim. On this account they repeated their attacks. H.—But the psalmist testifies that they will not succeed. W.

VER. 3. Back. Heb. "labourers have laboured on my neck," (S. Jer.) or "back." They have made me bear the yoke, or have ploughed up my back. This proverbial expression shews the cruelty of the Babylonians, (C.) and of the enemies of Christ, (Is. i. 6.) and the martyrs. Theod.—Heb. charash, means also to work like a blacksmith. Gen. iv. 22. Bert.—The Church bears patiently all crosses. Sinners build on her, or even on God's back, when they go on in their wicked ways, presuming that they will be saved at last by the sacraments, &c. W.

VER. 4. Necks. Heb. "collars," (Theodot.) "snares," (Sym.) or "bands," with which they have oppressed us. Cyrus abandoned the Babylonians to be slaves of those Persians who had taken them, and made them till the land, &c. Zenoph. vii. C.

VER. 5. Back. By a sincere conversion. C.—God will cover the presumptuous with eternal confusion, so that none shall bless them, v. 8. W.

VER. 6. Houses. Which were flat, so that grass might grow, but the heat of the climate would not suffer it to come to perfection.—Up. S. Jer.—Chal. "flourish," as some copies of the Sept. read. Yet Hammond, &c. declare for our version. The precise import of the Heb. is not known. The same comparison occurs, (4 K. xix. 26. C.) and Plautus says, Qualis solstitialis herba paulisper fuit, &c. Pseud. i. II.

VER. 8. Upon you. Chal. adds, "and they did not reply."—We, &c. H.—The custom of blessing reapers continued in the days of S. Aug. Ruth ii. 4. C.—The wicked render themselves incapable of deriving benefit from the good wishes of others. Bert.

PSAL. CXXIX. VER. 1. Canticle. David might compose it after his sin, though it might suit the captives, and all sinners, as well as the souls in purgatory. Bert.—It has long been recited in their behalf. W.—Depths of the prison of expiation, or from this vale of misery, (Bert.) captivity, (C.) and from the bottom of my heart. S. Chrys.

VER. 3. Mark. Heb. "observe or keep."—It. Heb. "who shall stand upright, (C.) or make opposition." H.—We all stand in need of mercy, as none can stand before the rigours of divine justice. W.

Si quoties homines peccant, sua fulmina mittatJupiter, exiguo tempore inermis erit.—Trist. ii. H.

Let thy ears be attentive to the voice of my supplication.

3 If thou, O Lord, wilt mark iniquities; Lord, who shall stand?

4 For with thee there is merciful forgiveness: and by reason of thy law, I have waited for thee, O Lord.

My soul hath relied on his word: 5 my soul hath hoped in the Lord.

6 From the morning watch even until night, let Israel hope in the Lord.

7 Because with the Lord there is mercy; and with him plentiful redemption.

8 And he shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities.

PSALM CXXX.

DOMINE NON EST

The prophet's humility.

A gradual canticle of David.

LORD, my heart is not exalted: nor are my eyes lofty.

Neither have I walked in great matters, nor in wonderful things above me.

2 If I was not humbly minded, but exalted my soul: As a child that is weaned is towards his mother, so reward in my soul.

3 Let Israel hope in the Lord, from henceforth, now and for ever.

* 2 Kings vii. 2.—2 Par. vi. 41.

VER. 4. Law. The promises of pardon contained therein. W.—Heb. is now different from what the ancient interpreters read. C.—“Therefore shalt thou be feared.” Mont. H.—Sym. and Theodotion agree with us.

VER. 5. Word. And promises that the captivity should end, (C.) and sin be remitted. H.

VER. 6. From. Or Heb. “more than the morning watch; yea, more than the morning watch.” I expect my deliverance with greater eagerness than sentinels do the return of morning. All the day and night long I am filled with these sentiments. C.—The hope of penitents resembles the watches of the day, which are more comfortable than those of the night. W.

VER. 7. Redemption. Our Saviour affords the greatest consolation. W.—He will save the people. Matt. i. 21. and 1 Jo. ii. 2. Bert.

PSAL. CXXX. VER. 1. Of David, is not in Sept. But he probably composed this psalm to exculpate himself from the accusation of pride. Bert.—It may agree with Esther, Nehemias, &c. 2 Esd. v. 15. C.—David proposes his own humility to the imitation of others, without any evil intention. W.—Sometimes the saints may speak their own praises, as S. Paul did, particularly when they are inspired. Bert.—Above me. This deportment is admirable in the great. C.—We must neither undertake nor pry into things above our ability. M.

VER. 2. So reward, &c. The meaning is, that according to his disposition with regard to humility, so he expected a reward in his soul to return to him, and stick as close to him as the child just weaned, which would willingly never be separated from the mother. Ch.—If I was not humble, may my soul be treated like an infant, &c. Heb. “If I did not render (or humble and silence) my soul, like an infant weaned from his mother, let my soul be to me as a weaned child.” I willingly submit to all thy rigours, if I did not adore thy ways in silence and in humiliation. C.—The text may be differently rendered. Bert.—As children come willingly to their mother, so the child of God approaches to Him, though he may not always find the same sweetness; and he expects that he will be rewarded accordingly. W.—Gemul means, “a weaned infant, or a reward.” D.

VER. 3. Israel. This occurs in the preceding psalm. C.—David encourages all to hope by his own experience. W.

PSAL. CXXXI. VER. 1. David. Jesus Christ, (S. Hil. &c.) or the pious king David, when he intended to build the temple. Solomon adopts some of the verses at his dedication, (v. 8. 2 Par. vi. 41. H.) and some have attributed the psalm to him, to the captives, or to some prophet in the time of the Machabees, though the prophets then, in fact, appeared no longer. Bert. See Ps. xliii. lxviii. lxxvi. lxxxviii. and xeviii.—The Jews allow, that some verses regard the Messias, of whom the whole may be explained in a spiritual, (C.) or even in the second literal sense. Bert.—It is usual for David, Moses, &c. to speak of themselves in the third person. W.—Meekness. Heb. also “humility,” (C.) or “affliction,” (S. Jer.) as the prophet might have all this in view. David gave abundant proofs of his humility (2 K. vii. 2. 13. Bert.) and moderation, and was greatly afflicted all his life. H.—Blessed are the meek. Mat. v. Christ has set before us his own example.

VER. 2. Jacob. Probably after he had removed the ark to Sion. Bert.—What is omitted in one place, is thus explained elsewhere. C.—David had a most earnest desire to build the temple; and though the honour was reserved for his son, he prepared the materials. W.—He acknowledges that without God, he cannot perform his vow. Bert.—We have engaged to be the temples of God. S. Aug.

VER. 3. If. He expresses his vow in the form of an imprecation, without PSALM CXXXI.

MEMENTO DOMINE.

A prayer for the fulfilling of the promise made to David.

A gradual canticle.

O LORD, remember David, and all his meekness.

2 How he swore to the Lord, he vowed a vow to the God of Jacob.

3 *If I shall enter into the tabernacle of my house: if I shall go up into the bed wherein I lie:

4 If I shall give sleep to my eyes, or slumber to my eye-lids,

5 Or rest to my temples: until I find out a place for the Lord, a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

6 Behold we have heard of it in Ephrata: we have found it in the fields of the wood.

7 We will go into his tabernacle: we will adore in the place where his feet stood.

8 *Arise, O Lord, into thy resting place: thou and the ark, which thou hast sanctified.

9 Let thy priests be clothed with justice: and let thy saints rejoice.

10 For thy servant David's sake, turn not away the face of thy anointed.

11 The Lord hath sworn truth to David, and he will not make it void: *of the fruit of thy womb I will set upon thy throne.

* 2 Kings vii. 12. Luke i. 58. Acts. ii. 30.

expressing the penalty, as he submits to the rigour of God's justice, if he proves faithless. C.—He vows to take no rest, till he might, if it so pleased God, find a place to build a temple. W.—This he discovered; yet was not permitted to execute his pious designs. How does his fervour confound our neglect of salvation! H.—Self-love shuts the door of our heart against Christ. S. Aug.

VER. 5. Temples. This seems to have been in the copies of Sept. and Theodotion. It is not correct to say that the former added it by inspiration, as they were only interpreters. Bert.—It was marked as an addition in the Hexapla. C.

VER. 6. Heard of it in Ephrata. When I was young, and lived in Bethlehem, otherwise called Ephrata, I heard of God's tabernacle and ark, and had a devout desire of seeking it; and accordingly I found it, at Cariathiarim, the city of the woods: where it was, till it was removed to Jerusalem. See 1 Par. xiii. Ch.—Or it was revealed to David, that the temple should be built in that part of Jerusalem, which looked towards Bethlehem, and is surrounded with woods. All the plan was laid before him. 1 Par. xxviii. W.—But it is not probable that Jerusalem should be thus described, and there is no proof that the threshing-floor of Ornan was woody. It seems rather, that the psalmist alludes to the ark, first at Silo, secondly in the country of Ephraim, or the Ephrathians, (Ps. lxxvii. 60. 67. and Judg. xii. 5.) for 328 years, and afterwards at Cariathiarim, for other 70. The captives may also recount its different stations, and pray that it may be restored; though it seems never to have been placed in the second temple.—It, (cam) the tabernacle, which in Heb. is fem. C.—Yet as the text has tabernacles, or “dwellings,” misheanoth, (v. 5.) and as the Mosaic tabernacle was kept at Silo or Gabaon, and was not with the ark at Cariathiarim, we may perhaps suppose, that the psalmist alludes to the ark, (H.) or to the thing indefinitely, (Bert.) where the glory of the Lord was displayed. S. Jer. and Houbigant have “him,” the God of Jacob. H.—The Fathers explain it of Jesus Christ, (Theod.) who was born at Bethlehem, (W.) and was prefigured by the temple, (C.) styled “the fields of wood.” Heb. sede yahar, to intimate the great extent and the quantity of wood used in it; though (H.) Cariathiarim, “the city of the woods,” may be meant. C.

VER. 7. Stood. If David did this out of devotion, why may not Christians visit the places sanctified by the presence of our Saviour? W.—God had not chosen to have a temple before the time of Solomon. 2 K. vii. 6. C.

VER. 8. Sanctified. Heb. “ark of thy strength,” which title proceeds from the sanctity of God, who resides there. 1 K. vi. 20. Our heart ought to be his resting place. Is. lxvi. 2. Bert.—Leaving Silo, &c. come into thy temple, with the ark where thou sanctifiest thy people. He contemplates a higher mystery, the coming of the Messias, and his glorious resurrection. W.—The same words were repeated, when the ark was removed in the desert, and by Solomon, as they might be also by the captives. C.

VER. 9. Justice. And all virtues, (Bert.) of which their robes were emblematical.—Saints. Levites. Chal. C.—Let both priests and Levites perform well their sacred functions, (W.) and may all the faithful act up to their vocation. Bert.—Rejoice. Heb. “sing,” which was the office of the Levites. C.—Yet the original term is more comprehensive, and denotes all the emotions of joy. H.

VER. 10. Sake. What confidence are we not taught to place in the merits of the saints! The captives remind God of the virtues of David and Solomon, and use their expressions to move him to shew mercy, and to restore the temple to its ancient splendour; (C.) or rather, (H.) the consideration of David's being a man according to God's own heart, to whom various promises had been made for the establishment of his seed, is adduced to move the Lord to send the Mes-

12 If thy children will keep my covenant, and these my testimonies, which I shall teach them :

Their children also for evermore shall sit upon thy throne.

13 For the Lord hath chosen Sion : he hath chosen it for his dwelling.

14 This is my rest for ever and ever : here will I dwell, for I have chosen it.

15 Blessing, I will bless her widow : I will satisfy her poor with bread.

16 I will clothe her priests with salvation : and her saints shall rejoice with exceedingly great joy.

17 *There will I bring forth a horn to David : I have prepared a lamp for my anointed.

18 His enemies I will clothe with confusion : but upon him shall my sanctification flourish.

PSALM CXXXII.

ECCE QUAM BONUM.

The happiness of brotherly love and concord.

A gradual canticle of David.

BEHOOLD how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

Which ran down to the skirt of his garment : 3 as nias speedily. W.—The future obstinacy of many Jews in rejecting him, was foreseen and deprecated. S. Aug.—Anointed. Do not cover me with confusion, (C.) or delay the promised Redeemer. H.

VER. 11. Make. Lit. "deceive him." Heb. "will not turn from it," the truth. Bert.—Thy. S. Cyprian and S. Hil. read, "my throne," which belonged to the Lord. 1 Par. xxix. 23. C.—But it might also be styled David's, as the promises were made to him. H.—Christ was born of the virgin's womb, without having any man for his father. S. Aug.—This promise actually was fulfilled in Solomon, and in Christ, who would infallibly possess the throne. 2 K. vii. and Acts ii. But Christ reigns over all. Bert. Lu. i. 32.—S. Peter hence proves our Saviour's resurrection, (W.) and power in the Church. H.—After the captivity, the royal power was not enjoyed by the family of David : which ought to have persuaded the Jews to acknowledge Christ and his eternal spiritual kingdom.

VER. 12. If. The promises made to the carnal posterity of David were conditional, and seem to imply, that they would forfeit them. S. Hil.—But those regarding the Messias are absolute. C.—Yet heaven is only promised to the children in the Church, if they observe God's commandments. Rom. viii. 17. W.—The kings of Juda seem not to have believed these threats ; and many Christians live as if heaven required no conditions on their part. God knew what would be the event ; but he speaks thus to testify their free-will, and his desire to preserve the temporal throne of David, at least till the coming of the Messias, if the Jews had proved faithful. Bert.

VER. 14. This. God is introduced speaking to the end. H.—Chosen. Heb. "desired." This relates to his spouse, the Church. C.—He dwelleth in this Sion for ever. W.—It was the figure of the Christian Church, as this is of heaven. Heb. xii. 22. Bert.

VER. 15. Widow. Whose name is often joined with orphans, and the poor, as the Heb. Tsedah may imply one "desolate." 1 Tim. v. 5. Bert.—The Greek copies vary : some have widow, and others, "prey," which is most commonly given as the sense of the Heb. H.—The poor priests and Levites, who had no land, shall be abundantly supplied. C.—The Church, though deprived of Christ's visible presence, is replenished with many blessings, and her humble children are relieved with the holy Sacraments. W.

VER. 16. Salvation. To instruct others. Bert.—The Church hath always had some virtuous priests and laics. W.

VER. 17. There. Lit. "thither." (H.) Utuc, as Christ came from heaven. Bert.—Horn. Power and glory. This regards Solomon, and the Messias. Heb. "I will make to bud," &c. alluding to Christ's miraculous birth. Is. iv. 2. C.—Lamp. S. John the Baptist, (Jo. v. 35. S. Athan.) or Christ himself, (Lu. ii. 32. Apoc. xxi. 23.) though it may also be understood of David's son and successor. C.—Yet this lamp was too dreadfully extinguished. Bert.—Christ protects his Church, which is placed for the instruction of all. W.

VER. 18. My. Heb. "his diadem," (S. Ser.) or "consecration." The glory of David was great, as a figure of Christ, to whom this more properly belongs. He is the king of ages, without sin, &c. C.

PSAL CXXXII. VER. 1. "Of David," as we read in Heb. and the Alex. Sept. being composed by him, when all Israel acknowledged his dominion, (Bert.) after his third anointing. Houbig.—Others explain it of the captives returned, and particularly of the sacred ministers resolving to perform their duties with unanimity. C.—Esdra might propose the example "of David," for the imitation of others. W.

VER. 2-3. Precious. Is expressed in Heb. The name of Aaron would suffice. (792) the dew of Hermon, which descendeth upon Mount Sion.

For there the Lord hath commanded blessing, and life for evermore.

PSALM CXXXIII.

ECCE NUNC BENEDICITE.

An exhortation to praise God continually.

A gradual canticle.

BEHOOLD now bless ye the Lord, all ye servants of the Lord :

Who stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

2 In the nights lift up your hands to the holy places, and bless ye the Lord.

3 May the Lord out of Sion bless thee, he that made heaven and earth.

PSALM CXXXIV.

LAUDATE NOMEN.

An exhortation to praise God : the vanity of idols.

1 Alleluia.

PRAISE ye the name of the Lord : O you, his servants, praise the Lord :

2 You that stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

3 Praise ye the Lord, for the Lord is good : sing ye to his name, for it is sweet.

ciently denote that it was of this nature. Bert. See Ex. xxx. 28.—Moses poured it on his head, with such profusion that it ran upon all his beard, and even to the skirt, or neck, as the Sept. insinuate, though the Heb. means "the mouth," or orifice, through which the head entered, (C.) as the robes resembled our sacred vestments. H.—The union of priests is no less sweet. C.—Of this we need no other proof than to behold the advantages of concord in every community, and especially in the Church of God. The unction of Aaron denoted grace and unity descending from the head of the Church, to the other priests, and to the meanest of the faithful ; (W.) or that which Heb. "of Hermon descending on the mountains of Sion," Tziyon. H.—There is a hill written Saiyon at the foot of Hermon. Ex. iv. 48. Eccl. xxiv. 17. It is not probable that dew should flow 50 leagues across the Jordan. C.—Unity is equally desirable, as moisture to a thirsty soil. H.—Sion may here denote any "dry" mountain. Muis.—There was also a Hermon in the tribe of Issachar, and the dews in that country resembled showers of rain. Such copiousness would be very refreshing, like fraternal concord. The enemies of Christianity observed how the disciples loved each other, being of one heart and soul, (Bert.) as their divine master had taught them to be thus distinguished. H.—As the snow or dew which descends from Hermon, causes fruitfulness, so does concord promote piety. W.—There, in concord, or in the temple. C.—The holy Spirit came upon the disciples when they were together. Acts ii. and iv. 32. W.—Life everlasting. Jonathan was not preserved from dying young, though he was so faithful to his friend, and the possession (Bert.) of temporal prosperity cannot satisfy the heart.

PSAL CXXXIII. VER. 1. Canticle. David composed it for the Levites going on duty, (H.) or Solomon for the dedication of the temple. The people might use it on the last day of the three great festivals ; or the Levites are exhorted to watch carefully. They may excite each other, (v. 2. C.) as all Christians should do. 1 Pet. ii. 9. Bert.—In the courts, &c. seems to be taken from Ps. cxxxiv. 2. (C.) as it is not in Heb. S. Hil.—The court of the people was divided for the men and women, and perhaps there was a separate place for the priests, and for the Levites, in the court allotted to them, where the latter kept watch. C.

VER. 2. Lift up. This posture was very natural, and expressive. 1 Tim. ii. 8. H.—Agatharides testifies, that the Jews did no servile work on the sabbath, but "stretched forth their hands to pray in the temple, till the evening." Joseph. con. App. 1.

VER. 3. Thee. "A Levite on guard answers the cantor," (Houbig.) or the priests say this to the people, when they were departing home. Num. vi. 23. C.—Earth. All things were made to praise God. W.

PSAL CXXXIV. VER. 1. Alleluia. The psalm turns on God's praises, and might be composed by David, after he had settled the order of the Levites, though it may suit all people. Bert.—The latter part agrees with Ps. cxiii. and Jer. x. which might lead us to conclude that it was composed after the captivity, perhaps for the dedication of the second temple. The next psalm is a repetition of this, with the chorus interspersed. C.

VER. 2. Courts. Both clergy and laity praise God for his favours and power. W.

VER. 3. Sweet. Occupation, and very useful. Ps. cxlvi. 1. C.

VER. 4. Possession. Heb. "jewel," "property." Chal. "well-beloved." See Deut. lii. 8. Eccl. xvii. 14. C.—The first patriarchs corresponded with God's goodness : but their descendants were for the most part ungrateful : so that Christians have now entered into their place, and must praise God. Bert.

4 For the Lord hath chosen Jacob unto himself: Israel^a for his own possession.

5 For I have known that the Lord is great, and our God above all gods.

7 ^aHe bringeth up lightnings from the ends of the earth: He hath made lightnings for the rain.

He bringeth forth winds out of his stores: 8 ^bHe slew the first-born of Egypt, from man even unto beasts.

10 ^cHe smote many nations, and slew mighty kings;

11 ^dSehon, king of the Amorrites, and Og, king of Basan, and all the kingdoms of Chanaan.

12 And gave their land for an inheritance, for an inheritance to his people Israel.

13 Thy name, O Lord, is for ever: thy memorial, O Lord, unto all generations.

14 For the Lord will judge his people, and will be entreated in favour of his servants.

15 ^eThe idols of the Gentiles are silver and gold, the works of men's hands.

16 ^fThey have a mouth, but they speak not: they have eyes, but they see not.

17 They have ears, but they hear not: neither is there any breath in their mouths.

18 Let them that make them be like to them: and every one that trusteth in them.

19 Bless the Lord, O house of Israel: bless the Lord, O house of Aaron.

20 Bless the Lord, O house of Levi: you that fear the Lord, bless the Lord.

21 Blessed be the Lord out of Sion, who dwelleth in Jerusalem.

VER. 5. Gods. Whatever is so esteemed by men. S. Chrys.—He then proceeds to shew the vanity of such false gods. C.

VER. 7. Earth. The Mediterranean sea is so called. Lu. xii. 54.—Rain. Indicating, or causing rain. H.—The most incompatible things are united. Theod.—The sinner melts into tears at the sight of God's judgments. S. Aug.—Stores, which are his will and decrees. Theod. Jer. ii. 16.

VER. 14. Entreated. Deut. xxxii. 36. "Have pity," (Bert.) or revenge.

VER. 20. Fear. It was important to distinguish the priests from the people. C. PSAL. CXXXV. VER. 1. Alleluia. in Heb. is at the end of the last psalm.

H.—It is omitted entirely in S. Aug. &c. Origen thinks that the captives sung this psalm at their return, as it greatly resembles the 106th, 134th, &c. C.—We read, (2. Par. vii. 6.) the priests stood in their offices, and the Levites, with the instruments of music of the Lord, which king David made to praise the Lord, "because his mercy endureth for ever, &c." This chorus is found only in this psalm, which seems therefore to have been sung at the dedication of the temple. Bert. The first part of the verse was sung by the priests, or cantors, (H.) and the second was repeated perhaps by the people, (C.) or by other musicians, as we now answer at the litanies, and often repeat the Rosary, Glory, &c. (W.) which shrewly may be done without any superstition, though Leigh, in his Barrologia, and Casaubon (Exer. 14.) be pleased to ridicule the Jesus psalter, on this account.—Præse. Lit. "confess" (H.) your sins, and praise God. S. Hil.—For ever. Or is unbounded. His heart overflows at this thought. Bert.

VER. 3. Gods. Angels, kings, (Theod.) or idols. S. Aug.—God is over all. C.

VER. 3. Lord. By these three repetitions the blessed Trinity is insinuated, (W.) as some of the Fathers have remarked, though the argument is not convincing. Bert.

VER. 4. Wonders. If saints or others work miracles, it is only by God's permission. Theod.—None can do any thing against his will. H.—Only He can perform true miracles, above the course of nature. W.—They prove the divinity. C.

VER. 5. Understanding. Or Son, who is the uncreated Wisdom, (S. Aug.) or to lead us to the knowledge of him. All has been made by the divine power and wisdom. Cajetan, &c. would assert the heavens to be intelligent, or governed by angels. Gen. i. 14. Orig. Prin. 1. &c.—But this opinion is generally rejected.

VER. 6. Waters. On which it was supposed to rest like a vessel. C.

VER. 7. Lights. The stars, (S. Jer.) or the sun and moon, v. 8. Gen. i. 16. C. All are great lights, though the moon be comparatively small. Bert.

VER. 10. First-born. Justice was exercised on them, and mercy on Israel. C.

VER. 13. Parts. Two, not twelve, as the Rabbins pretend, (Bert.) and as Origen &c. seem to allow. Ex. xiv. 22.

VER. 16. Desert. This was very astonishing, as they were not incommoded by the heat, or destitute of food and clothes for forty years, (C.) except when God tried them for their improvement, or for their sins.

VER. 23. Affliction. Lit. "humility," (H.) when we entered into ourselves under the judges, or during the captivity. C.

25 Who giveth food to all flesh: for his mercy endureth for ever.

26 Give glory to the God of heaven: for his mercy endureth for ever.

27 Give glory to the Lord of lords: for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM CXXXVI.

SUPER FLUMINA.

The lamentation of the people of God, in their captivity, in Babylon.

A psalm of David, for Jeremias.

UPON the rivers of Babylon, there we sat and wept: when we remembered Sion:

2 On the willows in the midst thereof, we hung up our instruments. 3 For there they that led us into captivity required of us the words of songs.

And they that carried us away, said: Sing ye to us a hymn of the songs of Sion.

4 How shall we sing the song of the Lord in a strange land?

5 If I forget thee, O Jerusalem! let my right hand be forgotten.

6 Let my tongue cleave to my jaws, if I do not remember thee:

If I make not Jerusalem the beginning of my joy.

7 Remember, O Lord, the children of Edom, in the day of Jerusalem:

VER. 25. Food. Heb. "bread," which denotes all sorts of eatables. Bert.—The particular and general favours of God proceed from his mercy. W.

VER. 27. Give, &c. This verse is marked as superfluous in the most correct psalters, being a repetition of v. 3. and unknown to the Heb. Sept. &c. though it be found in the Arab. S. Aug. &c. O.

PSAL. CXXXVI. VER. 1. For Jeremias. For the time of Jeremias, and the captivity of Babylon. Ch.—Or "of" (Jeremias. H.) Jeremias; on which subject he composed his Lamentations, as the Sept. thus insinuate. W.—The title may be a later insertion, and is not the same in all the Greek or Latin copies. It is wholly omitted in Heb. &c. Theodoret blames those who have written the name of Jeremias, as he was never at Babylon. C.—He might send the psalm to the captives, (Grot.) though it were written by David, (Gerer.) who was a prophet. See Ps. lxxviii. Bert.—The captives express their sentiments at Babylon. (Bossuet) or at their return; (C.) and thus, under the figure of the earthly Jerusalem, (Bert.) aspire to heaven. S. Aug.—Rivers. Euphrates, &c. The Jews retired to such places to pray. Philo, con. Flac. Acts xvi. 18. H.—Sion, and all the ceremonies of religion. W.

VER. 2. Willow. With which the Euphrates was lined. Is. xv. 7. It passed through the city, which was adorned with trees, and contained extensive tracts of land for cultivation. C.—Babylon may also include all the territory. Bert.—Instruments. Heb. Kinnor means properly the ancient lyre, but here it is put for all instruments of music. C.—In grief, music was laid aside. Is. xlv. 8. Ezec. xxvi. 18. Apoc. xviii. 21. Yet Christians may unite spiritual canticles with holy compunction. Col. iii. 16. We must not expose the word of truth to the ridicule of infidels. Bert.

VER. 3. Sion. The Levites were trained to singing from their infancy, at the expense of the nation. Under David, there were 288 masters, and 8,000 Levites who played on music. 1 Par. xv. The Babylonians wished to hear them, (C.) or (W.) spoke insultingly, (Theod.) as the pagans asked what good Christ had done? S. Aug.

VER. 4. Land. They were oppressed with grief, (Eccli. xxii. 6.) and unwilling to expose sacred things to profanation, though there was no prohibition for them to sing out of Judea, for their mutual comfort. C.—They excuse themselves on both accounts.

VER. 5. Forgotten. May all that is most dear to us perish, if we do not serve God. (W.) and seek to procure the welfare of Jerusalem. H.—Yet they knew that the joy of their earthly abode in that city could not satisfy their desires. They allude, therefore, ultimately to heaven. Bert.

VER. 7. Day. When Jerusalem was taken, or when it shall be re-established. H.—The Idumeans incited the Babylonians to destroy it entirely, and even cut in pieces such as had escaped. Abdias v. 11. Jer. xii. 6. But Nabuchodonosor punished them five years afterwards, and Hircanus forced them to receive circumcision. Joseph. x. 11, and xiii. 18. C.—Isaias (xxi. 11.) denounced their ruin, as the psalmist does here. W.—S. Chrysostom thinks that the latter expresses the vindictive sentiments of the Jews: but he rather desires that God's cause should be maintained in the manner in which He should judge best. The illusions of our own imagination and vanity are most dangerous and domestic enemies, as the Edomites sprung from the same stock as Israel. Bert.

VER. 8. Daughter. Citizens.—Miserable "plunderer," (Sym.) or "ruined." (Aquila) or "which shall be given up to plunder." Theod.—Cyrus reduced the city to a state of abjection, and it has since experienced other miseries, (C.) so that its situation is now unknown. H.—Isaias (xlii.) foretold this destruction. W.

Who say: Rase it; rase it, even to the foundation thereof.

8 O daughter of Babylon, miserable: blessed shall be he who shall repay thee thy payment which thou hast paid us.

9 Blessed be he that shall take and dash thy little ones against the rock.

PSALM CXXXVII.

CONFITEBOR TIBI.

Thanksgiving to God, for his benefits.

For David himself.

I WILL praise thee, O Lord, with my whole heart: for thou hast heard the words of my mouth.

I will sing praise to thee in the sight of the angels: 2 I will worship towards thy holy temple, and I will give glory to thy name.

For thy mercy, and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy holy name above all.

3 In what day soever I shall call upon thee, hear me: thou shalt multiply strength in my soul.

4 May all the kings of the earth give glory to thee: for they have heard all the words of thy mouth.

5 And let them sing in the ways of the Lord: for great is the glory of the Lord.

6 For the Lord is high, and looketh on the low: and the high he knoweth afar off.

7 If I shall walk in the midst of tribulation, thou

VER. 9. Dash thy little ones, &c. In the spiritual sense, we dash the little ones of Babylon against the rock, when we mortify our passions, and stifle the first motions of them, by a speedy recourse to the rock, which is Christ. Ch. S. Aug. S. Greg. Ps. l. W.—We do not read that Cyrus treated Babylon with this rigour; but such practices were then customary, (Osc. xiv. 1. Iliad xxii.) and Darius cruelly punished the revolted city. Herod. iii. 169. C. God will reward those who execute his decrees (H.) against Babylon. W.—The psalmist contrasts the felicity of the conqueror, with the misery of the citizens, without approving of his conduct. Bert.

PSAL. CXXXVII. VER. 1. David. It contains a form of thanksgiving for him, or for any other. W. Bert.—Some Greek copies add, "of Aggeus and Zacharias." But this is of small authority, though they might sing this psalm (C.) when the Jews had been delivered from all their enemies, (Origen) under Darius, who married Esther. It might also be used by Ezechias, after his recovery, (C.) or by David, when he found himself at rest, (Muis) and had the Messiah in view. Bert.—Praise. Lit. "confess," (H.) by repentance, (S. Jer.) and praise. S. Hil.—For, &c. This sentence is placed after angels, in Sept. and is not at all in Heb. Bert. Chal. Syr. &c. C.—It seems probable that the Sept. found this reason for praise in their copies.—Angels. Some would translate "judges, gods," &c. But the psalmist would rather pray before the angels, who would attend in the temple, and present his petitions. Bert. Apoc. v. and viii. Const. Apost. viii. 4.—Their presence ought to fill us with awe, (Lu. xii. 8. and 1 Tim. v. 21.) and with confidence, if our prayer comes from the heart. H.—Such God will hear, and the angels will present. Tob. xii. Acts x. and 1 Cor. xi. 10. Ps. xxiv. 10.

VER. 2. Towards. Thus the Jews acted when they were at a distance from the temple, and in captivity. W.—Truth. Which thou hast displayed in my regard.—Holy. Sept. may have perhaps written, doxion, "Word," agreeably to the Heb. though our version seems more easy. Bert.—S. Jerom (ad Sun.) explains it of Jesus Christ, the Word, whose name is so exalted, (Phil. ii. 9. C.) as well as the divine majesty. W.—The holy doctor translates, "thou hast magnified thy word above every name." But thy is joined with name in Heb. Others would supply "thy name and thy word." Bert.—Strength. Sept. &c. add, "thy." C.—All virtue comes from God. H.—If my prayer be granted, as formerly, I shall advance in virtue. S. Chrys. Eph. iii. 14.

VER. 4. Mouth. All kingdoms shall, sooner or later, become acquainted with the gospel. W.—The predictions of Jeremias, &c. had been communicated to the neighboring princes, (C.) and all might know that God had executed his threats and promises. H.—Yet none of them embraced the true religion, soon after the captivity, so that this relates to Christ. Bert.

VER. 5. Ways. Of Providence, (C.) and mercy, &c. Ps. xxiv. 10. Bert.—Some have read, "canticles," odas, being substituted for odas. H.

VER. 6. The high, &c. The proud and haughty, who exalt themselves, God knoweth afar off: that is, he despiseth them, and setteth them at a distance from him; whilst he stoopeth down to favour and embrace the low and humble. Ch.—He treats the proud as strangers to him. W.—If kings would sing in the ways of the Lord, they also must love, and be humble. S. Aug.—God knows all things before they happen, (S. Chrys.) and both high and low are equally open to his eye. Ps. cxii. 5. and cxxxviii. 2. and 8. C.

VER. 7. Will quicken me. And not otherwise. S. Aug.—There is no going to heaven without crosses. H.—Wrath. Most furious and cruel enemies. C.

VER. 8. Repay. Taking me under his protection, (S. Chrys.) he will punish wilt quicken me: and thou hast stretched forth thy hand against the wrath of my enemies: and thy right hand hath saved me.

8 The Lord will repay for me: thy mercy, O Lord, endureth for ever: O despise not the works of thy hands.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

DOMINE PROBATI.

God's special providence over his servants.

1 Unto the end, a psalm for David.

LORD, thou hast proved me, and know me: 2 thou hast known my sitting down and my rising up.

3 Thou hast understood my thoughts afar off: my path and my line thou hast searched out.

4 And thou hast foreseen all my ways: for there is no speech in my tongue.

5 Behold, O Lord, thou hast known all things, the last and those of old: thou hast formed me, and hast laid thy hand upon me.

6 Thy knowledge is become wonderful to me: it is high, and I cannot reach to it.

7 Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy face?

8 *If I ascend into heaven, thou art there: If I descend into hell, thou art present.

9 If I take my wings early in the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea:

* Amos ix. 2.

my oppressors; or he has done it already. C.—Hands. Rescue me from the oppression of my temporal and spiritual enemies. Bert.

PSAL CXXXVIII. VER. 1. David. Some Greek copies add, "a psalm or alleluia of Zacharias in the dispersion," when the Israelites were at Babylon. But Theodoret greatly disapproves of those additions, and explains this psalm of king Josias, while others refer it to David, though it may have no reference to any historical fact, being designed to praise the knowledge of God. C.—It is the most beautiful and sublime piece in all the psalter. Abenezra.—Proved me. God makes trial of his servants, to let them know themselves, as all things are open to him. W.—Me. Houbigant supplies the omission in Heb. "hast known."—Up. Or all the occurrences of my life. Lam. iii. 63. H.—The expression is similar to that of coming in and going out. Acts i. 21. This may be explained of Christ, whose sufferings and resurrection were foreseen. C.—God sounds the very heart. Jer. xvii. 9. Rom. viii. 27. Bert.

VER. 8. Off. Before they were formed. S. Chrys.—Line. Or the measure of my life and actions. C.—Heb. "my lying down," alluding to hares, &c. which are followed to their resting places. Houbig.—Some read, "my direction," (S. Hil. &c.) or "limit." 8. Aug. C.—The utmost extent of my intention, and the words yet unuttered, are not unknown to thee. W.

VER. 4. No speech, &c. viz. unknown to thee: or when there is no speech in my tongue, yet my whole interior and my most secret thoughts are known to thee. Ch.—Sept. Vat. "no evil speech." Ald. "no deceit." Bert.

VER. 5. Last. Heb. "what are behind and before:" or, joining it with the sequel, "thou hast formed behind," &c. which seems not so noble. Bert. See Job x. 18.—Chal. "thou hast afflicted me before and behind, and hast stricken me with thy hand." Hence the Rabbins have ridiculously inferred that God reduced the extraordinary size of Adam after his sin to 100 cubits! The sense of the Chal. may be adopted, though the hand upon me, in Heb. may also signify the divine protection. Ps. lxxix. 18. C.

VER. 6. To me. Lit. "from me, ex me." Heb. "above me," (H.) or "more than I," (Houbig.) which seems little. "The knowledge which thou hast of me is admirable." Bert.—To consider attentively the workmanship of man, we shall be filled with astonishment, (M.) as the Jews explain this passage, (C.) and as the Vulg. seems to intimate. H.—The formation of the body, and its union with the soul, are truly astonishing. This gives the highest idea of the divine wisdom. H.—By experience we are convinced that his knowledge surpasses our comprehension. W.

VER. 7. Face? or anger. S. Aug. Chal. C. Is. xxx. 28. M.—The power of God extends everywhere. Wisd. i. 7. C.—The third divine person is truly God, and immense. S. Jer.—As God's knowledge comprehends every thing, so his presence reaches to all. W.

VER. 8. Descend. Heb. "make my bed the grave or hell." Job xvii. 13. The living and the dead are equally in God's power. C.

VER. 9. In the morning. Shahar is so rendered by S. Jer. H.—Some would understand "the black eagle," (Lyran.) or the east (Orig.) or aurora. The poets assign wings to the sun, &c. Mal. iv. 2. C.

VER. 11. Cover. Lit. "tread me under foot," conculcabunt. H.—Heb. "shall cover or be my aurora." C.—Pleasures of the most secret kind. All is naked before God. H.—The prophet speaks in the name of all who are curious, that darkness itself cannot hide any thing from him. W.—He seems also to repre-

10 Even there also shall thy hand lead me: and thy right hand shall hold me.

11 And I said: Perhaps darkness shall cover me: and night shall be my light in my pleasures.

12 But darkness shall not be dark to thee, and night shall be light as the day: the darkness thereof, and the light thereof, are alike to thee.

13 For thou hast possessed my reins: thou hast protected me from my mother's womb.

14 I will praise thee, for thou art fearfully magnified: wonderful are thy works, and my soul knoweth right well.

15 My bone is not hidden from thee, which thou hast made in secret: and my substance in the lower parts of the earth.

16 Thy eyes did see my imperfect being, and in thy book all shall be written: days shall be formed, and no one in them.

17 But to me thy friends, O God, are made exceedingly honourable: their principality is exceedingly strengthened.

18 I will number them, and they shall be multiplied above the sand: I rose up and am still with thee.

19 If thou wilt kill the wicked, O God: ye men of blood, depart from me.

20 Because you say in thought: They shall receive thy cities in vain.

sent one who seeks to avoid being seen in his pleasures. Bert.—Heb. "around me." But it also has the former meaning, and shews that if we seek to indulge ourselves in darkness, it will be all in vain. M.

VER. 12. Thereof. Alluding to day and night. Bert.

VER. 13. Reins, and interior. Theod.—Nothing seems more hidden than a man's entrails, or a child in his mother's womb, who is formed by God, v. 16. 2 Mac. vii. 22. W.—Protected. Heb. "covered," which may also mean formed. Bert.

VER. 14. Magnified. Chal. and S. Jer. "hast magnified me." Heb. seems less correct, "I have been terribly magnified," though the sense is much the same. Bert.—I have been stricken with awe and astonishment at thy works. C.

VER. 15. Bone. Heb. "substance"—And my. Heb. "and curiously wrought." Prot. H.—Sept. have read rather differently, and give a very good sense; "and is my substance in?" &c. Most explain this also of the embryo. But it seems rather to refer to the corpse in the grave. Ps. lxxii. 10. C. Bert.

VER. 16. My imperfect being, &c. viz. When I was as yet but an embryo, in my mother's womb; and even then, in the book of thy knowledge, all the parts and members of my body were exactly set down; which by succession of days were formed, and brought to perfection; and no one of them but what was fashioned by thee. Ch.—Or none shall return from the grave, nemo in eis. Bert.—No man can form the body. Job. x. 8. W.—None of these days, (H.) or men, shall escape thee, (C.) or "live for ever." Syr.—The embryo is formed successively, but nothing yet appears of what it shall be. Petau.—Prot. "in thy book all my members (nearly all of them) were written, which in continuance were fashioned, (nearly, or what days they should be fashioned) when as yet there was none of them." H.—Imperfect. Chal. "body." Syriac "reward."—Book here alludes to the list of the living, kept by God, (Ex. xxxii. 32) or to the decree of predestination. Phil. iv. 3. C.—Our first and last state are both horrible, (H.) so that hardly any vestiges of man can be discovered. Bert.—We shall find ourselves entire only in eternity, if we have spent our days well. H.

VER. 17. Friends. Many pervert this passage, translating "thoughts," because the word may have that sense in Chal. (W.) though the paraphrase agree with us; (C.) and all confess that our version is accurate. The other may also be admitted. While the dead seem to have no longer any existence, the saints are still with God, and the psalmist hopes to rise with them. Bert.—Principality. S. Jer. and Theod. "poor," who are generally employed by God in his greatest works, that no flesh may glory in his sight. Though the elect be comparatively few, yet they cannot be numbered (H. Apoc. vii. 9) by man. W.

VER. 18. I rose up, &c. I have taken a resolution to rise up from sloth and sleep; and to be still with thee, whose friends are so honourable and so happy. Ch.—I hope to persevere in thy service. W.—With thee. At my rising, I am still employed in the same manner, and cannot find out the number of thy servants or thoughts. H.

VER. 19. If. Heb. "surely" Houbig.—From me. How long shall I be forced to live among the enemies of the Lord? C.—Since he will reward the good, and punish the wicked eternally, I renounce the society of the latter. W.—He specifies murderers, as he had described the wonderful formation of man. M.

VER. 20. Because you say in thought, &c. Depart from me, ye wicked, who plot against the servants of God, and think to cast them out of the cities of their

- 21 Have I not hated them, O Lord, that hated thee? and pined away because of thy enemies?
- 22 I have hated them with a perfect hatred: and they are become enemies to me.
- 23 Prove me, O God, and know my heart: examine me, and know my paths.
- 24 And see if there be in me the way of iniquity: and lead me in the eternal way.

PSALM CXXXIX.

ERUPE ME DOMINE.

A prayer to be delivered from the wicked.

1 Unto the end a psalm of David.

2 DELIVER me, O Lord, from the evil man: rescue me from the unjust man.

3 Who have devised iniquities in their hearts: all the day long they designed battles.

4 *They have sharpened their tongues like a serpent: the venom of asps is under their lips.

5 Keep me, O Lord, from the hand of the wicked: and from unjust men deliver me.

Who have proposed to supplant my steps: 6 the proud have hidden a net for me.

And they have stretched out cords for a snare: they have laid for me a stumbling-block by the way side.

7 I said to the Lord: thou art my God: hear, O Lord, the voice of my supplication.

8 O Lord, Lord, the strength of my salvation: thou hast overshadowed my head in the day of battle.

9 Give me not up, O Lord, from my desire to the *Supra v. 11. Rom. iii. 18.

habitation; as if they had received them in vain, and to no purpose. Ch.—Thy cities. Sixtus V. &c. read "their." C.—Schismatics, and all innovators, endeavour to withdraw all their dependencies from the truth; (S. Aug.) and infidels wish to prevent the propagation of the gospel. Bert.—The enemies of Nehemias, &c. may be here meant, 2 Esd. iv. 2. C.—Depart from me, all you who would represent the felicity of heaven to be a dream. W.

VER. 22. Hatred. Christ commands, "Love your enemies;" not those who hate God. S. Aug.—We must love in them what God loves, and detest what he condemns. Theod.—The Jews abused this passage, thinking they might hate those who were not of their nation. C.—The example of the prophet might have rectified them. Bert.—Fervent zeal against God's enemies is commendable.

VER. 23. Paths. No one knowing, without a special revelation, whether he be worthy of love or hatred, (Eccli. ix.) the just submit to God's examination.

VER. 24. Way. If I be in sin, pardon me, and prepare me for heaven. W.—Or I refuse not to be punished, if I imitate sinners. C.—This interpretation seems less accurate. Bert.

PSAL CXXXIX. VER. 1. David. He, (C.) Ezechias, (Ven. Bede) the captives, (Bossuet) or Jesus Christ and his servants under persecution, speak in this psalm. Holy Fathers. See Ps. lv. C.

VER. 2. Man. Saul, (C.) Judas, (S. Hil.) or self-love, the old man, who is our most dangerous enemy. Bert.

VER. 3. Battles. And formed plots to destroy the just. W.

VER. 4. Serpent. So Plautus says, "A double-tongued and wicked man is like a creeping beast," in Persa. H.

VER. 6. Side. The enemies of David calumniated him, and strove to make him follow idols. 1 K. xxiv. 19.

VER. 8. Battle. Against Goliath, or against the attempts of Saul, &c. C.—Prayer and divine grace are necessary, to guard us from sin. W.

VER. 9. Desire. If I yield to my passions, (S. Aug.) or after I have expressed my request, contrary to my desire, &c. Heb. "grant not the desire of the sinner, complete not his thought. They will be elated." Some supply, "lest they be." The ancients seem not to have read in the same manner. Bert.—Abandon not my soul, which is all my care, (Ps. xxi. 21.) to the sinner. C.

VER. 10. Head. Heb. also "poison," (Bert.) or "sum" of their mischievous devices. W.—Labour, or punishment. C.—Their subtle persuasions shall turn to their ruin. W.

VER. 11. Fires of hell, (W. Chal.) as well as temporal afflictions, from lightning, &c. Ps. xvii. 9. H.—Some have ridiculed the belief of hell. But the universality of this opinion is a strong proof of it, as it is also confirmed by revelation. Bert.

VER. 12. Tongue. This member is very dangerous. Pet. Bless. cxix. Jam. iii. 6.—The just man is not styled "a man of tongue," but "of heart;" for which reason Christ exhorted his disciples not to make long speeches in prayer. Matt.

wicked: they have plotted against me: do not thou forsake me, lest they should triumph.

10 The head of their compassing me about: the labour of their lips shall overwhelm them.

11 Burning coals shall fall upon them; thou wilt cast them down into the fire: in miseries they shall not be able to stand.

12 A man full of tongue shall not be established in the earth: evils shall catch the unjust man unto destruction.

13 I know that the Lord will do justice to the needy, and will revenge the poor.

14 But as for the just, they shall give glory to thy name: and the upright shall dwell with thy countenance.

PSALM CXL.

DOMINE CLAMAVI.

A prayer against sinful words, and deceitful flatterers.

A psalm of David.

I HAVE cried to thee, O Lord, hear me: hearken to my voice, when I cry to thee.

2 Let my prayer be directed as incense in thy sight; the lifting up of my hands as evening sacrifice.

3 Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth: and a door round about my lips.

4 Incline not my heart to evil words; to make excuses in sins.

With men that work iniquity: and I will not communicate with the choicest of them.

5 The just man shall correct me in mercy, and shall reprove me: but let not the oil of the sinner fatten my head.

vi. 7. Bert.—Into. Lit. "in;" though (H.) it should be into, conformably to the Sept. Bert.

Raro antecedentem scelerumDeservit pede poena claudo.—Hor. iii. Od. ii.

VER. 13. I know. Heb. "thou knowest." But some copies read more accurately. Houbig.—Poor. Thus, in the end, was Lazarus treated. W.

VER. 14. Countenance in glory, when thou shalt appear. 1 Jo. iii. 2. H.—They shall dwell under thy special protection in the tabernacle. C.

PSAL CXL. VER. 1. David. When persecuted by Saul. C.—It is very difficult, and was used in the evening service in the oriental churches, (S. Chrys.) as it is on Friday in the Rom. Breviary. The psalm may be applicable to all in distress, (Bert.) who are members of Christ. S. Aug.—Hearken. Heb. "hasten to me, hear my voice," &c. H.—God approves such cries. C.

VER. 2. As. May be understood. "My prayer is an evening sacrifice," or equally acceptable. H.—Sacrifice. Heb. "offering," which may be the same with the incense, or the evening holocaust. C.—The Church prays that her petitions may ascend to the throne of God, and be accepted. The morning sacrifice was rather more solemn. But the evening one is here specified, in allusion to Christ's, at the last supper, and on the cross, (W.) which was consummated in the evening. S. Aug. T.—It may denote a perfect worship. S. Chrys. Bert.

VER. 3. And. Heb. "keep guard at the door of my lips," (Mont.) or "on the poverty of," &c. (S. Jer.) that I may not speak too much, or imprudently; as I shall do, if left to myself. H.—Houbigant rejects this version, which is very expressive. Bert. Eccli. xxviii. 28.—Heb. dal is rendered "elevation," (Chal.) and may here stand for "a door." Nature has included the tongue within a double restraint of the teeth and lips, to counteract its too great volubility. Theod.—David prays that he may not be unguarded in his speech. He always spoke of Saul with the greatest respect. 1 K. xxiv. 18. C.—The lips must be like a door, neither always open, when we ought to be silent, nor always shut, when we should confess our sins. W.

VER. 4. Sins. Such excuses are always vain. S. Jer.—God does not incline any to sin, as the Manichees elect pretended. S. Aug.—The pride of the human heart would throw the blame of sin on any but itself. H.—Sometimes, fate, predestination, &c. are charged with it. Our first parents excused themselves; but David candidly confessed his sins, and was presently pardoned. Bert.—Choicest. Heb. also, "I will not eat of their most delicious meats." I will have no society with libertines, (Bert.) nor with those who teach false doctrine. 2 Jo. 10. and Tit. iii. 10.

VER. 5. In mercy. Prov. xxvii. 16. and Ezech. xix. 8. H.—Let not the oil of the sinner. &c. That is, the flattery, or deceitful praise. Ch.—This is pernicious; while the reprehension of the just may do us good. W.—Sinner. Heb. "of poison, or of the head, (vass) break, or fatten, (S. Jer.) or be broken upon my head." The vessel was usually broken. Mar. xiv. 3. Bert.—Prot. "Let the righteous

For my prayer also shall still be against the things with which they are well pleased: 6 their judges, falling upon the rock, have been swallowed up.

They shall hear my words, for they have prevailed: 7 as when the thickness of the earth is broken up upon the ground:

Our bones are scattered by the side of hell. 8 But to thee, O Lord, Lord, are my eyes: in thee have I put my trust, take not away my soul.

9 Keep me from the snare, which they have laid for me, and from the stumbling-blocks of them that work iniquity.

10 The wicked shall fall in his net: I am alone until I pass.

PSALM CXLI.

VOCE MEA.

A prayer of David in extremity of danger.

1 Of understanding for David. A prayer when he was in the cave. 1 Kings xxiv.

2 I CRIED ^ato the Lord with my voice: with my voice I made supplication to the Lord.

3 In his sight I poured out my prayer, and before him I declare my trouble.

4 When my spirit failed me, then thou knewest my paths.

In this way wherein I walked, they have hidden a snare for me.

smite me, it shall be a kindness, and let him reprove me, it shall be an excellent oil, which shall not break, &c. H.—Or “he shall not,” &c. as his only aim tends to my advantage. Many other senses may be given. C.—For my prayer, &c. So far from coveting their praises, who are never well pleased but with things that are evil; I shall continually pray to be preserved from such things as they are delighted with. Ch.—Against. Lit. “in or concerning their desirable things.” H.—I pray to God that I may be preserved from their malice, in which they take delight, (M.) and that they may cease to run on to their ruin. H.—The Church still prays for sinners, though as yet they delight in their criminal pursuits, (W.) in order that a wholesome bitterness may wean them from such things. S. Chrys.—My prayer shall subsist amid their pleasures. Bert.

VER. 6. Their judges, &c. Their rulers, or chiefs, quickly vanish and perish, like ships dashed against the rocks, and swallowed up by the waves. Let them then hear my words, for they are powerful and will prevail; or, as it is in the Hebrew, for they are sweet. Ch.—The Israelites were long governed by judges, and the supreme magistrates at Carthage had the same title. C.—Sept. “their strong ones” have or shall become victims of the divine justice. H.—They shall know that the prayers of the Church are effectual, and obtain the grace of constancy for her children, whom she instructs in the doctrines of peace, which cannot injure the commonwealth. W.—Prevailed. Or, “been able” to hear. Israel submitted to David, after Saul’s death. Bert.

VER. 7. As when the thickness, &c. If this is to be connected with what goes before, it declares the efficacy of those powerful words, capable to break up the thick and hard earth, of the hearts of man. But if it is to be connected with the following words, our bones are scattered, &c. it means, that the malice of our enemies has, as it were, scattered our bones near the confines of death and hell; as the husbandman, plowing up or digging the earth, scatters and breaks the clods. Ch.—These are made small, that they may bear fruit, which is the effect of persecution upon the faithful. S. Aug. W.—Heb. “like the labourer breaking up the earth, so our,” &c. C.—Houbigant would read, “their,” (Bert.) with the Arab. and many Greek copies. David alludes to his distress, (C.) while his people were still divided into parties, (H.) whose union he foretells. Bert.—Dry bones point out the state of the captives. Ezec. xxxvii. 11. C.—Some persecutors rage against the bones and relics of the saints, which they would willingly hurl into hell. But the Church places her confidence in God. W.

VER. 10. His. “Own,” (Prot.) the devil’s, (S. Hil.) or God’s net. S. Chrys. &c.—Saul twice fell into David’s power. C.—Alone. Singularly protected by the Almighty, until I pass all their nets and snares. Ch.—Though alone, I fear no danger. H.—I will have no connection with the wicked in this life, (S. Chrys.) which is beset with snares. C.—Heb. “I will be a witness till I pass.” Houbig.—Yachad means, “together,” &c. Bert.—Sinners shall at last be entrapped; but the Church shall be for ever protected. W.

PSAL CXLI. VER. 1. Cave. Of Engaddi, (Bossuet. C.) or of Odollam. Bellar. Bert.—Here David was a figure of Christ praying in the garden, &c. S. Hil.—The psalm may relate to the captives, (S. Chrys.) or to martyrs, (S. Aug.) and to all under trial. David might recite it in the cave. Bert.—Voice. He did not speak aloud, for fear of being detected. W.—But the fervent prayer of the just, “is a cry to God.” S. Hil. Ex. xiv. 15. C.

VER. 8. Pour out. Explaining all the sentiments of my heart. Ps. lxi. 9. C.—This is never perfectly done with earthly friends. 1 Pet. v. 7. Bert.

5 I looked on my right hand, and beheld: and there was no one that would know me.

Flight hath failed me: and there is no one that hath regard to my soul.

6 I cried to thee, O Lord; I said: Thou art my hope, my portion in the land of the living.

7 Attend to my supplication: for I am brought very low.

Deliver me from my persecutors; for they are stronger than I.

8 Bring my soul out of prison, that I may praise thy name: the just wait for me, until thou reward me.

PSALM CXLI.

DOMINE EXAUDI.

The psalmist in tribulation calleth upon God for his delivery. The seventh penitential psalm.

1 A psalm of David, when his son, Absalom, pursued him. 2 Kings xvii.

HEAR, O Lord, my prayer: give ear to my supplication in thy truth: hear me in thy justice.

2 And enter not into judgment with thy servant: for in thy sight no man living shall be justified.

3 For the enemy hath persecuted my soul: he hath brought down my life to the earth.

He hath made me to dwell in darkness as those that have been dead of old: 4 and my spirit is in anguish within me: my heart within me is troubled.

VER. 4. Knewest. With approbation, (Ps. i. 6. H.) my deportment towards Saul, and also the dangers to which I was exposed, and the means of escaping. —They. Ancient psalters add, “the proud,” from Ps. cxxxvi. 6. C.—The devil and his agents attack the just at all times. S. Jer.—When I was reduced to such distress that I could not help myself, thou didst approve of my conduct, and deliver me. W.

VER. 5. Hand. For succour. Ps. xv. 8. So was David situated at Engaddi, as our Saviour was, when he was abandoned by his disciples. C.—None would appear to be acquainted with those in distress. H.

VER. 6. Living. On the earth, (Bert.) or land of Judea, (S. Chrys.) in this life, (C.) or in the next. In all, God is our only protector, and reward. Ps. xv. 5. Bert.

VER. 7. Low. Sym. “languid.” S. Jer. “infirm.” H.

VER. 8. Prison. Or the cave. C.—As David was never in prison, this is more applicable to Christ, seized by his enemies, and consigned to the tomb. Houbig.—Name. God expects it from us. Ps. xlix. 15. The motive of David in praying to be delivered, was most disinterested, as he had in view God’s glory, and the gratification of his just servants, who would join with him in returning thanks, and promoting the divine worship.—Wait. Heb. “will crown.” Sym. S. Jer. H.—But Aquila adopts the Chal. and Syr. sense of the word, with the Sept. (C.) and this may very well be the meaning, as David and his friends did not pretend to reign till the death of Saul. Bert.—He wished to be at liberty in the country where God’s worship was observed, (W.) and determined to promote religion with all his power; as, under Saul, the good were under great restraints, and the priests were even slain. H.—All this happened to David, as the figure of Christ. He had then a clear understanding of what the latter would have to endure from the Jews, and how he would pray to his Father. In the first part, he complains of Judas, and in the second, he desires to be set free from hell, because the faith of all the saints depended on his resurrection. Ven. Bede. W.

PSAL CXLI. VER. 1. Absalom is not specified in Rom. Sept. &c. (C.) though it be in other copies. H.—The latter part of the title has been added by the Greeks. S. Hil.—If David composed the psalm, on occasion of his son’s revolt, he considered it as a punishment of his former transgression. The Fathers explain it of Jesus Christ, who suffered for our sins. Bert.—It might also relate to the captives, (Ferrand) or to the same event as the preceding psalm, (Bossuet) though there is no reason for abandoning the title. C.—Justice. Or mercy. S. Chrys.—Absalom had no just cause of complaint, (H.) and God had promised to protect David on the throne.

VER. 2. Justified. Compared with thee, (C.) and without mercy. God is bound by his promise to hear the penitent. W.—David and S. Paul had been assured of the remission of their sins, yet never ceased to beg for pardon. Bert.

VER. 3. Of old. Lit. “of an age,” (H.) who are quite forgotten. Lam. iii. 6. C.—The devil had violently tempted me, by means of temporal and spiritual calamities. W.—The greatest darkness is that of the heart. Ephes. iv. 17. H.

VER. 4. Troubled. David knew not what course to take. 1 K. xv. 25. 31 Our Saviour was in the greatest agony. C.

VER. 5. Of old. What God had done formerly for me and others. W.—The sacred records of 3,000 years tended to raise the hopes of David. Bert.

VER. 6. Water. We can add nothing to this idea. C.—Man can do no good

5 I remembered the days of old, I meditated on all thy works: I meditated upon the works of thy hands.

6 I stretched forth my hands to thee: my soul is as earth without water unto thee.

7 Hear me speedily, O Lord: my spirit hath fainted away.

Turn not away thy face from me, lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit.

8 Cause me to hear thy mercy in the morning, for in thee have I hoped.

Make the way known to me, wherein I should walk: for I have lifted up my soul to thee.

9 Deliver me from my enemies, O Lord, to thee have I fled: 10 teach me to do thy will, for thou art my God.

Thy good spirit shall lead me into the right land: 11 for thy name's sake, O Lord, thou wilt quicken me in thy justice.

Thou wilt bring my soul out of trouble: 12 and in thy mercy thou wilt destroy my enemies.

And thou wilt cut off all them that afflict my soul: for I am thy servant.

PSALM CXLIII.

BENEDICTUS DOMINUS.

The prophet praiseth God, and prayeth to be delivered from his enemies. No worldly happiness is to be compared with that of serving God.

A psalm of David against Goliath.

BLESSED be the Lord, my God, who teacheth my hands to fight, and my fingers to war.

2 My mercy, and my refuge: my support and my deliverer:

My protector, and I have hoped in him: who subdued my people under me.

without God's grace, which David implores with his hands stretched out, both to mortify himself, and to denote fervour. W.

VER. 7. Pit. Or "lake," meaning (H.) the grave. C.—If man be left to himself, he will presently yield to sin, from which he will not be delivered without God's grace.

VER. 8. Morning. At the first assault of temptation, (W.) or speedily. David might address this prayer to God during the night, after he left Jerusalem. He was only relieved the next day, when his troops had crossed the Jordan. 2 K. xvii. 12.—To thee. With the most ardent desire. Jer. xxii. 27. This might suit the captives, v. 5. 11. C.

VER. 9. Fled. Heb. "To thee I have hidden myself," (Mont.) or "am protected." S. Jer.—But the Sept. seemed to have read better, ēlthi. "I have hoped." Chal.

VER. 10. Spirit. I look for a favourable wind, like one at sea, in danger of suffering shipwreck, and I apply to God, to the Holy Ghost the Comforter.—Right. Even (C.) and not like this country, full of precipices. In Judea the right worship was observed. H.—The penitent may rest assured, that God will free him from all perils, (W.) and bring him (Heb.) "into the land of rectitude," which is heaven. The Holy Ghost is here represented as a distinct person. Bert.

VER. 12. Mercy. Towards me. Justice required that the rebels should be punished, as they were, even contrary to David's intention. 1 K. xviii. 5. C.

PSAL. CXLIII. VER. 1. Goliath. Heb. has simply, "of David." H.—S. Hilary thinks that the Sept. added the rest by inspiration, (C.) because this was David's first exploit in war. W.—But others pay no deference to this part of the title. The Chaldees, however, seems to allude to the same victory, (v. 10.) and the Syriac to that which David obtained over Asaph, brother of Goliath. 1 Par. xx. 5. C.—David prays that he may overcome the Philistines, and gives thanks in Ps. xvii. Ferrand.—These two psalms are very much alike, and this seems to have been written after the rebels were discomfited, while the 17th expresses the sentiments of the prophet, towards the end of his life, for all his victories. C.—Zorobabel, after the defeat of Gog, (Ezec. xxxviii. Orig.) or the Machabees; (Greek paraphrast.) or Jesus Christ might adopt these sentiments. Holy Fathers.—Kimchi and Gaon refer the psalm to the Messias. C.—God. Heb. "rock."—Fingers. Which chose the five pebbles. He was to exert himself, and yet to acknowledge that all success came from God. Bert.—He had not been trained to war, when he overcame Goliath. W.

VER. 2. Mercy. "All the titles of God remind us of his benefits." S. Jer.—My people. After the defeat of the rebels, (C.) and the death of Ishobeth. Bert.—Heb. may also be "peoples," as Ps. xvii. (Syr. &c.) including them, and the various nations that were subdued by David. C.—Conquerors are generally in confusion, while those who keep their passions under are free. 2 Cor. iii. 17. Bert.

VER. 3. To him. Heb. "thou dost acknowledge him." S. Jer. H.—In the transport of gratitude, he reflects on his own weakness. Job. vii. 17. Rom. viii. 31. C.—Before Christ, all mankind were undeserving of revelation. W.

3 Lord, what is man, that thou art made known to him; or the son of man, that thou makest account of him?

4 Man is like to vanity: "his days pass away like a shadow.

5 Lord, bow down thy heavens, and descend: touch the mountains, and they shall smoke.

6 Send forth lightning, and thou shalt scatter them: shoot out thy arrows, and thou shalt trouble them.

7 Put forth thy hand from on high, take me out, and deliver me from many waters: from the hand of strange children.

8 Whose mouth hath spoken vanity: and their right hand is the right hand of iniquity.

9 To thee, O God, I will sing a new canticle: on the psaltery and an instrument of ten strings I will sing praises to thee.

10 Who givest salvation to kings: who hast redeemed thy servant, David, from the malicious sword:

11 deliver me,

And rescue me out of the hand of strange children; whose mouth hath spoken vanity: and their right hand is the right hand of iniquity:

12 Whose sons are as new plants in their youth: Their daughters decked out, adorned round about after the similitude of a temple:

13 Their storehouses full, flowing out of this into that. Their sheep fruitful in young, abounding in their goings forth: 14 their oxen fat.

There is no breach of wall; nor passage, nor crying out in their streets.

15 They have called the people happy, that hath

* Job viii. 9. and xiv. 2.

VER. 4. Vanity. Heb. hebel, "nothing, a vapour," &c. Eccle. i. 1. Jam. iv. 15. H.—Our lives resemble a shadow, which is the less distinct, the more it increases. Bert.—As it cannot subsist of itself, so neither can man without God. W.

VER. 5. Mountains. The proud, (Orig.) spirits. S. Hil.—Come to my assistance, as thou didst appear on Sinai. Ex. xix. 16. Ps. xvii. 8. C.—This is a poetical description of God's aid.

VER. 7. Waters. Of tribulation. W.—Children. My rebellious subjects, (H.) who lead bad lives in the true Church. W.—Foreign nations continued faithful, while Israel rose up against their sovereign.

VER. 8. Iniquity. Heb. "lying." They have sworn fidelity, and have prevaricated. C.—They adhere not to their engagements of keeping God's law. W.

VER. 9. New. More excellent. Bert.—Psaltery. Heb. "on the nebel of ten strings," (H.) the chief instrument, fit for a new canticle of thanksgiving. W.

VER. 10. Kings. Their power cannot protect them. H.—Hust. Several read, "wilt redeem."—Malicious. Heb. "his servant from the evil sword" (Mont.) of Goliath, (Chal.) or of Saul, (Bert.) and all his other enemies. H.—He represents himself in the midst of danger, from the rebels. C.

VER. 11. Children. Both Jews and Christians who live ill, are like strangers, who frame to themselves a temporal felicity, making riches and pleasures their god. W.

VER. 12. Whose. Heb. "our." This makes quite a different sense from the ancient versions, which refer what follows to the rebels, who had no cause to complain of David's government, v. 14. C.—S. Jerom, however, agrees with the Heb. "that our sons may be," &c. Prot. asher means "whose (v. 11.) and that." H.—If we supply, they said, the text and versions will give the same sense, (Geneb. Bert.) as it is inserted v. 15. H.—Decked. Heb. "our daughters, like corner-stones cut like a temple," (Mont.) or "palace." Prot.

VER. 13. That. The partitions are too small; or fresh fruits come before the old ones are consumed. Lev. xxvi. 10. C.—Fruitful. Heb. "our sheep (or small cattle, pecudes) producing a thousand, bringing forth ten thousand, in our streets. Pagn.

VER. 14. Fat. Heb. "our bulls (oxen or cows) are burdened," &c.—Of wall. Sym. "nor burying nor mourning in their places." The other interpreters cited by Theodoret, have also "their." C.—Passage. Of the enemy. H.

VER. 15. They. Heb. "happy the people, to which such things belong; happy," &c. S. Jer. H.—This text speaks all along of the temporal blessings attending the virtuous. C.—But the Sept. being convinced that these were rather the sentiments of David's enemies, give it this turn, (Bert.) and shew that real happiness consists rather in the possession of God, as the psalmist intimates, by the concluding sentence. H.—Worldlings are satisfied with temporal advantages. Ps. lxxii. 4.—But the saints take God for their reward. C.—The devil promises riches, that he may kill, and Christ promises poverty, to save us. S. Jer.—True happiness consists in preferring God before all. W.

these things: but happy is that people whose God is the Lord.

PSALM CXLIV.

EXALTABO TE DEUS.

A psalm of praise, to the infinite majesty of God.

Praise, for David himself.

I WILL extol thee, O God, my king: and I will bless thy name for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

2 Every day will I bless thee: and I will praise thy name for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

3 Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised: and of his greatness there is no end.

4 Generation and generation shall praise thy works: and they shall declare thy power.

5 They shall speak of the magnificence of the glory of thy holiness: and shall tell thy wondrous works.

6 And they shall speak of the might of thy terrible acts: and shall declare thy greatness.

7 They shall publish the memory of the abundance of thy sweetness: and shall rejoice in thy justice.

8 The Lord is gracious and merciful: patient and plenteous in mercy.

9 The Lord is sweet to all: and his tender mercies are over all his works.

10 Let all thy works, O Lord, praise thee: and let thy saints bless thee.

11 They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom: and shall tell of thy power:

12 To make thy might known to the sons of men: and the glory of the magnificence of thy kingdom.

13 Thy kingdom is a kingdom of all ages: and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations.

The Lord is faithful in all his words: and holy in all his works.

* Supra cxliv. 2.

PSAL. CXLIV. VER. 1. Praise. The remaining seven psalms relate to the praises of God, to intimate that this occupation ought to be our glory, both in time and in eternity, as all were created for that purpose. Ven. Bede.—This is the seventh of the alphabetical psalms, the four last of which are only recognized by S. Jer. as perfect. See Ps. xxiv. xxxiii. xxxvi. cx. cxi. and cxviii. Yet here the ver. 14. which should commence with N, is wanting in Heb. though it was probably there at first, as it is in the Greek and Latin, (W.) as well as in the Syr. and Arabic. C.—Hence it appears, that our versions ought not always to be corrected by the Heb. which might be rendered more perfect by a collation with them. W.—The Jews assert, that whoever reads this psalm thrice a-day, may be sure of obtaining heaven, provided, says Kimchi, that his heart accompany his words. The new baptized used to recite it in thanksgiving for having received the body and blood of Christ. S. Chrys.—Ferrand supposes that this psalm was composed after the captivity. But there seems to be no ground for this supposition, and the author had probably no particular event in view. C.—My king. On whom I entirely depend. Bert.—And ever. S. Jer. “and after,” (H.) both in time and in eternity. Christ is styled king, to whom the nations were promised; (Ps. ii.) and David gives the highest honour to the blessed Trinity. W.—David still praises God by the mouths of the faithful, as also in heaven.

VER. 3. End. Heb. “finding out,” because he is infinite. Bert. Job v. 9.

VER. 4. And. Heb. “to generation.” The vocation of the Gentiles is insinuated. C.

VER. 5. And shall. Heb. “and I shall relate the words of thy wonders,” (S. Jer.) or “shall meditate on,” &c. Pagn. H.—Yet our version is more followed. C.

VER. 6. Acts. Miracles which strike people with awe, (W.) such as those which overwhelmed the Egyptians, &c. Theod. C.—And shall. Heb. “and shalt,” &c. But Chal. (S. Jer.) read more naturally with the Sept.

VER. 7. Justice. Or mercy. S. Chrys. C.—They shall approve of thy judgments. II.

VER. 8. Patient. Heb. “slow to anger,” which is more expressive. Bert.

VER. 9. Works. The people of Israel (v. 10. Ps. lxxxix. 18. Ferrand) and all mankind, who are all invited to embrace the true faith, and the mercy of God. C.—The effects of mercy shine forth above all his other works, in the redemption, and in the recalling of sinners, when they have gone astray. W.—This sense is good, but not literal. His mercy extends to all. Bert.—Yet he punishes the reprobate for ever, chastising their works. S. Aug.

VER. 10. Works. They shew his power, and excite us to praise him. S. Jer.

VER. 11. Thy. Heb. “his.” But the Sept. read more correctly, with the 14 The Lord lifteth up all that fall: and setteth up all that are cast down.

15 The eyes of all hope in thee, O Lord: and thou givest them meat in due season.

16 Thou openest thy hand, and fillest with blessing every living creature.

17 The Lord is just in all his ways: and holy in all his works.

18 The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him: to all that call upon him in truth.

19 He will do the will of them that fear him: and he will hear their prayer, and save them.

20 The Lord keepeth all them that love him: but all the wicked he will destroy.

21 My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord: and let all flesh bless his holy name for ever; yea, for ever and ever.

PSALM CXLV.

LAUDA ANIMA.

We are not to trust in men, but in God alone.

1 Alleluia, of Aggeus and Zacharias.

2 PRAISE* the Lord, O my soul, in my life I will praise the Lord: I will sing to my God as long as I shall be.

Put not your trust in princes: 3 in the children of men, in whom there is no salvation.

4 His spirit shall go forth, and he shall return into his earth: in that day all their thoughts shall perish.

5 Blessed is he who hath the God of Jacob for his helper, whose hope is in the Lord, his God: 6^b who made heaven and earth, the sea, and all things that are in them.

7 Who keepeth truth for ever: who executeth judg-

* Acts xiv. 14. Apoc. xiv. 7.

Chal. &c.—Men. The Gentiles, to whom the saints, (Bert.) or converted Jews, preached. H.

VER. 18. Agas. The kingdom of God in his Church is very magnificent, but not so much as in heaven. W.—The. Heb. Chal. Aquila, S. Jer. &c. omit this verse, which is necessary to complete the alphabet. It probably commenced with Namon, “Faithful.” C.—The Sept. could not insert it by inspiration, as they were only interpreters. Bert.—It was consequently in their Heb. copies. Houbig.

VER. 14. Lifteth. Heb. “upholdeth all who are falling.” H.—No one can stand or rise without God. Bert.—He is ready to lift up every one. W.

VER. 15. Hope. For sustenance, Ps. cxvii. 2. Matt. vi. 26.

VER. 16. Blessing. Abundantly, (C.) “satisfieth the desire” (Prot. H.) even of brute beasts, giving to all what is requisite. W.

VER. 17. Just. Before, his fidelity was noticed, v. 13. H.

VER. 18. Truth. Observing his commandments. Matt. vii. 21. Theod.

VER. 19. Will. He will obey their voice; (Jos. x. 14.) or rather he will grant their requests (C.) of eternal happiness. Bert.

VER. 21. Flesh. Every human being, though even the least favoured, must praise God, as all have received much from him. H.

PSAL. CXLV. VER. 1. Of. &c. This addition of the Sept. intimates that these prophets would thus exhort the people to trust in Providence, and to prefer his service before worldly cares. See Ps. cxxxvi. W.—They might compose this psalm after Cyrus had revoked the permission to build the temple, (v. 2. and 1 Esd. i. 3. and iv. 4.) as the following psalms seem all to have been sung at the dedication of the walls. C.—This might be the case, but the titles afford but a slender proof, and David might write this to excite himself and people to confide in God.—In my. Heb. begins here the second verse, with the answer of the soul to the prophet's invitation. It is immortal, and promises always to praise the Lord. Bert.

VER. 3. Children. Heb. “sons of Adam.” The greatest prince is of the same frail condition as other men. He is not always willing, nor able to save. He must die, and all his projects cease. H.—If we could have depended on any, Cyrus seemed to be the person. Yet he has been deceived, and now forbids the building of a temple. We must, however, be grateful for the liberty which we enjoy by the goodness of God. C.—In one Son of man (Christ) we may trust; not because he is the Son of man, but because he is the Son of God. S. Aug. W.

VER. 4. Forth. From the body, which shall be consigned to the earth from which it was taken. Eccl. xii. 7.—And he. Man, (C.) or each of the princes, (H.) with respect to the body. W.—It does not refer to the spirit, which in Heb. is feminine. C.—It is the want of faith, which causes people to confide in ment for them that suffer wrong: who giveth food to the hungry.

The Lord looseth them that are fettered: 8 the Lord enlighteneth the blind.

The Lord lifteth up them that are cast down: the Lord loveth the just.

9 The Lord keepeth the strangers, he will support the fatherless and the widow: and the ways of sinners he will destroy.

10 The Lord shall reign for ever: thy God, O Sion, unto generation and generation.

PSALM CXLVI.

LAUDATE DOMINUM.

An exhortation to praise God for his benefits.

Alleluia.

PRAISE ye the Lord, because psalm is good: to our Lord be joyful and comely praise:

2 The Lord buildeth up Jerusalem: he will gather together the dispersed of Israel.

3 Who healeth the broken of heart, and bindeth up their bruises.

4 Who telleth the number of the stars; and calleth them all by their names.

5 Great is our Lord, and great is his power: and of his wisdom there is no number.

6 The Lord lifteth up the meek: and bringeth the wicked down even to the ground.

great ones, rather than in Providence. S. Aug.—Thoughts. Projects of ambition, &c. C.

VER. 7. Truth. Houb. "his truth," and promises. H.—The disposition of Cyrus towards the Jews had changed, in consequence of some false insinuations of their enemies.—Wrong. The Babylonians have been, and the Samaritans will be, punished.—Fettered. We may hope to be freed from the dominion of the Persians. C.

VER. 8. Enlighteneth. Heb. "openeth the eyes." Sept. "gives wisdom to the blind." Many of these favours seem to be understood in a spiritual sense, and allude to the times of Christ, when these miracles were performed. Bert. Is. xxxv. 6. Matt. xi. 5. C.

VER. 9. Strangers. He charges his people to be compassionate towards such. Ex. xxii. 21. Jam. i. 27. Bert.—We have been captives. Ps. cxii. 9.—Sinners, who have calumniated us, v. 7. C.

VER. 10. Sion. Figure of the true Church. God is now no more attached to Sion than to any other place. Bert.—He lives for ever, and therefore alone deserves our confidence. C.—Generation. Heb. adds, "Alleluia," which we have in the next title, as the psalm also begins with the same word. H.

PSAL CXLVI. VER. 1. Alleluia. In some editions of the Sept. (H.) and in Syr. Arab. &c. the same inscription occurs, as in the former psalms. Many ascribe this to the same authors, and to the same occasion. Heb. and Chal. have no title. Yet the psalm seems to be a thanksgiving (C.) for the permission to build the temple and walls of Jerusalem, (Orig.) which had been neglected, till God visited the people with a famine, v. 8. 2 Esd. v. 1. Agg. i. 6. Bossuet.—Zorubabel, &c. urge the people to build. Syr. C.—Still David might compose this psalm, as he was a prophet, (Bert.) and he may allude to the beginning of his reign, when the people were all united. Jans.—Good. Agreeable and advantageous for us.—Praise. This consists in purity of life, rather than in the sweetest accents. C.

VER. 2. Jerusalem. After the captivity, (W.) or at the beginning of David's reign, when he had taken Sion, and Israel acknowledged his dominion. 2 K. v. It may also allude to the Church, (Jo. xi. 51.) and to heaven. Heb. xii. 22. Apoc. xxi. Bert.

VER. 3. Bruises. God delivered the captives, after chastising them. Deut. xxxii. 39. C.—He gives life to the penitent, as Christ healed the sick, &c. Is. lxi. 1. Bert.

VER. 4. Stars. Which to man are innumerable. Though some have counted 1022 with Ptolemy, yet the discovery of telescopes have shown that many more are discernible, (C.) and none would dare at present to fix their number. Bert.—Cicero (Of. i.) treats this as a thing impossible. See Gen. xv. 5. C.—Ptolemy could only ascertain the number of the more notorious. W.—Kimchi admits 1098 created to shine, besides innumerable others, which have influence over plants, &c. God has the most perfect knowledge of all. They are like his soldiers, whom he knows by name, (Is. xl. 25.) as the good shepherd does his sheep. Jo. x. 3. C.—We read that Cyrus knew the name of all his officers, (Cyrop. v.) and that Adrian, and Scipio, the Asiatic, could even name all the soldiers in their armies.

VER. 5. Power. God the Son. Earthly monarchs are forced to depend on others for the execution of their orders. But God is infinite. C.—Number. He knows innumerable things; (W.) or rather, (H.) the divine wisdom hath no parts. Jer. x. 6. Bert.

7 Sing ye to the Lord with praise: sing to our God upon the harp.

8 Who covereth the heaven with clouds: and prepareth rain for the earth.

Who maketh grass to grow on the mountains, and the herb for the service of men.

9 Who giveth beasts their food: and to the young ravens that call upon him.

10 He shall not delight in the strength of the horse: nor take pleasure in the legs of a man.

11 The Lord taketh pleasure in them that fear him, and in them that hope in his mercy.

PSALM CXLVII.

LAUDA JERUSALEM.

The Church is called upon to praise God for his peculiar graces and favours to his people. In the Hebrew, this psalm is joined to the foregoing.

Alleluia.

PRAISE the Lord, O Jerusalem: praise thy God, O Sion.

13 Because he hath strengthened the bolts of thy gates: he hath blessed thy children within thee.

14 Who hath placed peace in thy borders: and filleth thee with the fat of corn.

15 Who sendeth forth his speech to the earth: his word runneth swiftly.

16 Who giveth snow like wool; who scattereth mist like ashes.

VER. 6. Ground. As he had done to the Egyptians, &c. C.

VER. 7. Praise. Lit. "confession," (H.) including both compunction and praise. Bert.

VER. 8. Clouds. This is represented as something wonderful, (Job. v. 9. and xxxvii. 6.) though conformable to the laws of nature. The preservation of things is like a new creation. C.—And the herb, &c. Herbam, (Ps. ciii. 14. H.) is now wanting in Heb. as it was in the days of S. Jer. and Chal. though the Sept. Aquila, &c. read it, and it is not probable that they would borrow it from another psalm. Bert.—Their copies must therefore have varied. H.—The herb, may denote corn, and all vegetables for food. These productions evince the goodness and wisdom of God, (Bert.) as well as his power. W.

VER. 9. Young. Lit. "the sons of ravens," which may denote those birds in general, as well as their young. God provides for all. Many fables have been recounted concerning ravens, as if they neglected or forgot their young ones; and the Hebrews seem to have entertained some of these opinions, to which the sacred writers conform themselves. Job xxxviii. 41. C.—S. Luke (xii. 24.) specifies ravens, though S. Matthew (vi. 26.) has the birds, when relating the same speech.—Upon him, must be understood in Heb. See Ps. ciii. 21. (Bert.) Joel i. 20. C.—If God take such care of the neglected ravens, how much more will he provide for his servants? S. Chrys. W.

PSAL CXLVII. VER. 12. Alleluia. This word is not in Heb. H.—Many with the Sept. add, "of Aggeus and Zacharias." C.—This psalm has the same object in view as the preceding. Bert.—The Fathers explain it of the Church, and of heaven. C.—Sion. This place was highly favoured before the captivity, and rebuilt afterwards so as to enjoy many blessings. But all this was only a figure of the privileges belonging to the Church, and to the heavenly Sion, the true vision of peace. W.—The earthly Jerusalem was too often faithless; (Gal. iv. 26. Heb. xii. 22.) so that the psalmist cannot have it alone in view. Bert.

VER. 13. Within thee. Jerusalem was better fortified than (H.) other cities. But the Church is built upon a rock, and enriched with many graces, while heaven is free from all danger, and its inhabitants secure. W.—Nehemias repopled the city, which he had surrounded with walls, (C.) despising the sarcasms of his enemies. 2 Esd. vii. 4.

VER. 14. Peace. To obtain this, the peace of Jesus Christ must triumph in our hearts. Col. iii. 15. H.—Borders. People perceiving that Assuerus favoured the Jews, durst no longer attack them. 2 Esd. vi. 16. C.—They enjoyed peace and plenty. In the Church we have remission of sin in baptism and penance, and the spiritual food of Christ's body and blood in the blessed Eucharist, with the graces of the other sacraments. In heaven peace and joy subsist for ever. W.—Fruit. The best (H.) of all sorts of fruit. Theod.—The Fathers understand the blessed Eucharist, or the holy Scriptures. S. Aug. &c. C.

VER. 15. Speech. Rain, (Kimchi) Jesus Christ, (S. Aug.) or the gospel, (S. Hil. S. Jer.) which was presently propagated over all the earth. Rom. x. 18. W.—God's commands are instantly obeyed. H.—No sooner did he speak to Saul, but he was converted. Acts ix. 4. Heb. iv. 12. Bert.

VER. 16. Like wool. Because it is white, and light, and covereth the earth as with a fleece, which keeps it warm, and makes it fruitful. On which account also, in the following words, mists, (or as it is in the Hebrew, hoar frosts) are compared to ashes, which give a fruitfulness to the ground. Ch.—Trees and 17 He sendeth his chrystal like morsels: who shall stand before the face of his cold?

18 He shall send out his word, and shall melt them: his wind shall blow, and the waters shall run.

19 Who declareth his word to Jacob: his justices and his judgments to Israel.

20 He hath not done in like manner to every nation: and his judgments he hath not made manifest to them. Alleluia.

PSALM CXLVIII.

LAUDATE DOMINUM DE CÆLIS.

All creatures are invited to praise their Creator.

Alleluia.

PRAISE ye the Lord from the heavens: praise ye him in the high places.

2 Praise ye him, all his angels: praise ye him, all his hosts.

3 Praise ye him, O sun and moon: praise ye him, all ye stars and light.

4 *Praise him, ye heavens of heavens: and let all the waters that are above the heavens 5 praise the name of the Lord.

For he spoke, and they were made: he commanded, and they were created.

6 He hath established them for ever, and for ages of ages: he hath made a decree, and it shall not pass away.

7 Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons and all ye deeps.

fruits are preserved by the snow resting upon them Vota arborum frugumque . . . nives. insidens. Pliny xvii. 2.—Mists are succeeded by clear weather. By penance and austerity sins are remitted, and devils expelled. Is. i. 18. W.

VER. 17. His chrystal. Some understand it of hail, which is as it were ice, divided into bits, or morsels. Ch. Eccli. xliii. 22. C.—In summer and winter God sends proper moisture for the earth. T.—The most hardened are sometimes converted: but this must be the effect of grace. W.—Cold. If it were to continue all would perish. He therefore sends the warm (C.) "south wind." Syr.

VER. 18. Wind. "Spirit." The blessed Trinity (S. Jer.) grants compunction. Bert.—By preaching and grace conversions are wrought.

VER. 19. Jacob. These spiritual blessings pertain only to the true Church. W.

VER. 20. Them. He hath not announced his decrees to them. This glory was reserved for Israel. Deut. iv. 7. C.—The written law was granted to the latter. Yet God had sufficiently manifested his will to all mankind, so that they must also appear before his tribunal. S. Chrys. Bert.—Alleluia. Considering that all were in the mass of sin, and that God justly let many perish; those whom he justifies are more bound to praise him; and therefore the prophet concludes this and the following psalms with Alleluia. W.—Christians, and particularly Catholics, are most concerned, since many have rebelled against the light of faith, (Bert.) and abuse the gift of the holy Scriptures. H.

PSAL. CXLVII. VER. 1. Alleluia. Sept. Syr. &c. add, "of Aggeus and Zacharius," as it seems to have been composed after the captivity, v. 18. C.—But why might not David thus invite all to praise God? He descends from the highest creatures to those on earth. Bert.—Heavens. All ye blessed spirits, preach God for the excellence of your nature, and for your numbers. W.

VER. 2. Hosts. Stars, (C.) or rather angels. S. Chrys. Matt. xxvi. 52.—The three children made the same invitation to them, rejoicing in this holy communion. Bert.

VER. 3. And light. Heb. "of light," meaning the planets. Kimchi.—The harmony of these things invites us to praise the Lord. Origen and S. Hilary seem to represent them as intelligent. But (C.) when God is praised on their account . . . they all praise him. S. Aug.—Irrational things shew forth the excellence of their Creator. W.

VER. 4. Of Heavens. The highest and most excellent, (C.) though not the abode of the angels, which had been specified before.—Heavens, in the clouds. It is not necessary to allow these waters to be above the stars. Bert.

VER. 5. He spoke, and they were made, is not in Heb. or Chal. being taken from Ps. xxxii. 9. (C.) or lost in the original. Bert.

VER. 6. Away. The heavenly bodies observe the most constant order. H.—They are not liable to change, like sublunary things, (C.) though God may suspend the laws which he has established. Bert.

VER. 7. Earth. All ye inhabitants. H.—He then addresses whales, and all in the seas.

VER. 8. Word. For the punishment of the wicked, (C.) and to strike the saints with awe. H.

9 Mountains and all hills, fruitful trees and all cedars.

10 Beasts and all cattle, serpents and feathered fowls.

11 Kings of the earth, and all people: princes and all judges of the earth.

12 Young men and maidens: let the old with the younger, praise the name of the Lord: 13 for his name alone is exalted.

14 The praise of him is above heaven and earth: and he hath exalted the horn of his people.

A hymn to all his saints: to the children of Israel, a people approaching to him. Alleluia.

PSALM CXLIX.

CANTATE DOMINO.

The Church is particularly bound to praise God.

Alleluia.

SING ye to the Lord a new canticle: let his praise be in the church of the saints.

2 Let Israel rejoice in him that made him: and let the children of Sion be joyful in their king.

3 Let them praise his name in choir: let them sing to him with the timbrel and the psaltery.

4 For the Lord is well pleased with his people: and he will exalt the meek unto salvation.

5 The saints shall rejoice in glory: they shall be joyful in their beds.

6 The high praises of God shall be in their mouth: and two-edged swords in their hands:

7 To execute vengeance upon the nations, chastisements among the people:

VER. 9. Mountains. Thaies, Origen, &c. have attributed souls to waters, &c. But this cannot be proved from this poetical personification. C.

VER. 11. Kings, &c. God is to be praised for the diversity of states, whereby the whole community is preserved.

VER. 13. Alone. God, and not any idol, has disposed all things. W.

VER. 14. Earth. All contribute towards the divine praise. Yet they cannot afford as much as God deserves.—Horn. Glory, (C.) or the Messias; though this cannot easily be proved to be the literal sense. Bert.—People. Establishing his Church. W.—Saints. Israelites, (Bert.) particularly the sacred ministers. Deut. iv. 7. C.—To him. By free-will, assisted by God's grace. W. Heb. xi. 6. Jam. iv. 8. Bert.

PSAL. CXLIX. VER. 1. Alleluia. Theodoret repeats this word here and in the following psalm. The author of this psalm is unknown. It was sung after the captivity, to thank God for the favours and peace granted to his people, and to foretell the conquests gained under the Machabees, and more fully under the Messias. Orig.—The Jews still looked for them in vain. Why do they not open their eyes, to see all accomplished by the propagation of the gospel? Muis refers the psalm to the beginning of David's reign over Israel, when the people entertained the strongest expectations of victory; and this opinion is very plausible, though we prefer that of the Fathers. C.—The prophet undoubtedly invites the faithful to praise God. Bert.—New, and excellent; (C.) nova carmina, (Virg. Ec. 8.) is explained magna miranda, by Servius. This psalm deserves the title, as it speaks of the new covenant. S. Chrys.—Saints of Israel, dedicated to God's service. Ex. xxii. 31. C.—Though all creatures are bound to praise the Lord, he excepts only the praises of those who live in the Church. W.

VER. 2 In him. Heb. "them." The plural is used out of respect, (Rabbins, C.) or rather to insinuate the blessed Trinity, as in Gen. i. Job xxxv. 10. Is. liv. 5. Bert.—King David, or the Lord, who was the true king of Israel. 1 K. viii. 8.

VER. 3. Choir. A musical instrument, though it imply also a dance, &c.

VER. 4. Unto. Heb. "in Jesus," (S. Jer.) or "he will adorn the meek with salvation," as with a precious robe. Ps. cxxxi. 9. 16.—The captives shall be restored to glory. C.

VER. 5. Beds. In eternal rest. W.—The prosperity of the Israelites but feebly represents the happiness of the elect. C.

VER. 6. Hands. He seems to allude to the regulation of Nehemias, (2 Esd. iv. 17. H.) or to the Machabees, who were priests and soldiers. They shall proclaim God's praises, and defend the nation. In the spiritual sense, Catholics employ the two-edged sword of the Old and New Testament against heretics, and exercise the power of Christ in excommunicating the wicked. S. Jer.—Our Saviour enables the saints to judge at the last day. Matt. xix. 28. C.—This chiefly regards such as have left all things, like the apostles, and those who embrace a monastic life. Matt. iv. 20. and xix. 27. Acts iv. 34. and 1 Cor. vi. 3.—They shall judge whether people have made good or bad use of their possessions. St. Aug. Ven. Bede.—All the blessed will approve of God's sentence; and their example in overcoming difficulties, will evince the baseness of the wicked, who have yielded to less temptations. W.

VER. 8. Iron. These poetical expressions denote victory. The Machabees made great conquests, and the Jews expect greater under the Messias. But this has been verified in the conversion of nations to Christ. Is. xlix. 23. and lx. 14. C.—The victories of the Machabees were of short duration. Bert.

VER. 9. Written. In God's decrees. W. Job xxxi. 35. Dan. vii. 10. C.—This judicial power is part of the glory of the saints. W. 1 Cor. vi. 2. Wisd. iii. 7. H.—All shall judge the wicked who have imitated the disinterestedness of the apostles. C.

PSAL. CL. VER. 1. Alleluia. This invitation is addressed to the sacred ministers, as the people and all creatures had been already exhorted to praise God. C.—This psalm was sung when the first-fruits were brought to the temple. Selden, Syn. 8.—The Lord Heb. el, "God." H.—Places. Heb. "his sanctuary," (H.) or heaven. C.—All both in heaven and earth sound forth his praises.

VER. 2. Acts. Ye, for whom miracles have been wrought, praise him as much as you are able, though you cannot do it sufficiently. W.

2 Praise ye him for his mighty acts: praise ye him according to the multitude of his greatness.

3 Praise him with sound of trumpet: praise him with psaltery and harp.

4 Praise him with timbrel and choir: praise him with strings and organs.

5 Praise him on high sounding cymbals: praise him on cymbals of joy: let every spirit praise the Lord. Alleluia.

VER. 8. Trumpet. This instrument was reserved for priests, Num. x. 2. The nine others might be used by Levites. C.—The precise signification of them is not known. Bert.

VER. 4. Choir...Strings. Unity and mortification are requisite to make our praises acceptable, as strings are made of the bowels of beasts. W.

VER. 5. Spirit. Wind instrument, (M.) or man, who is bound to praise God, even more than the angels, as Christ has assumed his nature, and will bring him to sing with them Alleluia. W.—Let "all that breathes" praise, (Bert.) including every living creature, (C.) as well as the celestial spirits. H.—Alleluia is not in Sept. Syr. &c. But it is in Heb. and no word could answer better for a conclusion of the psalms, which are almost wholly employed in the divine praises. This ought to be our occupation both on earth, and in heaven. Amen C.—Pope Damasus, A. D. 380. ordered the Glory, &c. to be added to each of the psalms, as it has been since observed. W.—An apocryphal psalm, concerning David encountering Goliath, occurs in many Greek and Latin copies; but it is of no authority. C.

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS.

This book is so called, because it consists of wise and weighty sentences, regulating the morals of men; and directing them to wisdom and virtue. And these sentences are also called PARABLES, because great truths are often couched in them under certain figures and similitudes. Ch.—Wisdom is introduced speaking in the nine first chapters. Then to ch. xxv. more particular precepts are given. W.—Ezechias caused to be collected, (H.) who comes in the five next chapters, and in the two last. Some other, or rather Solomon himself, (H.) which is prophetic of the Catholic Church. He also wrote the two next works, besides many other things, which have been lost. This is the first of those five which are called "sapiential," giving instructions how to direct our lives, by the dictates of sound reason. W.—It is the most important of Solomon's works, though collected by different authors. C.—T. Paine treats Solomon as a witty jester. But his jests are of a very serious nature, and no one had before heard of his wit. Watson.

CHAP. I.

The use and end of the proverbs. An exhortation to flee the company of the wicked: and to hearken to the voice of wisdom.

THE parables of Solomon, the son of David, king of Israel,

2 To know wisdom, and instruction:

3 To understand the words of prudence: and to receive the instruction of doctrine, justice, and judgment, and equity:

4 To give subtilty to little ones, to the young man knowledge and understanding.

5 A wise man shall hear, and shall be wiser: and he that understandeth shall possess governments.

6 He shall understand a parable, and the interpretation, the words of the wise, and their mysterious sayings.

* Ps. cx. 10. Eccl. i. 10.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Israel.—The dignity of the author, and the importance of the subject, invite us to read. S. Bas.—Solomon is the first whose name is placed at the head of any work in Scripture. C.

VER. 2. To know. This is the design of these parables. C.—They tend to instruct both the unexperienced and the wise. v. 5. There are three sorts of wisdom: the divine, which is God himself; (c. iii. 16) the supernatural, which is his gift, to lead us into all virtue; and the worldly, which is mixed with error, &c. W. Wisd. vii. 25.

VER. 4. Subtilty. Discretion to the innocent. C.

VER. 5. Wiser. "Tamdiu audiendum & discedum est, quamdiu nescias, & si proverbio credimus, quamdiu vivas," says Seneca, ep. 77.—Governments. And be fit to govern others, (W.) as well as himself. C.

7 *The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Fools despise wisdom and instruction.

8 My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother:

9 That grace may be added to thy head, and a chain of gold to thy neck.

10 My son, if sinners shall entice thee, consent not to them.

11 If they shall say: Come with us, let us lie in wait for blood, let us hide snares for the innocent without cause:

12 Let us swallow him up alive like hell, and whole as one that goeth down into the pit.

12 We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our houses with spoils.

14 Cast in thy lot with us, let us all have one purse.

VER. 6. Sayings. This science was much esteemed. 3 K. x. 1. Eccl. xxxix. 2.

VER. 7. Fear. Thus we arrive at charity. S. Aug. in ep. Jo. ix. Job xxviii. 28. &c. This fear includes religion, but not barren speculations. C.—It implies a desire to act, and not simply to understand.

VER. 8. Mother. The first precept is to learn of our elders, and the second to resist evil counsels. v. 10. W.—Our parents have the greatest influence over us. Solomon presupposes that they are virtuous and well informed. C.

VER. 10. Entice. Heb. "deceive." C.—Pessimus inimicorum genus laudantes. Tacit. in vit. Agric.

VER. 12. Pit. Grave, or hell, like Dathan. Num. xvi. This shews the greatest rage. Job xxxi. 31.

15 My son, walk not thou with them, restrain thy foot from their paths.

16 "For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.

17 But a net is spread in vain before the eyes of them that have wings.

18 And they themselves lie in wait for their own blood, and practise deceits against their own souls.

19 So the ways of every covetous man destroy the souls of the possessors.

20 Wisdom preacheth abroad, she uttereth her voice in the streets:

21 At the head of multitudes she crieth out, in the entrance of the gates of the city she uttereth her words, saying:

22 O children, how long will you love childishness, and fools covet those things which are hurtful to themselves, and the unwise hate knowledge?

23 Turn ye at my reproof: behold I will utter my spirit to you, and will shew you my words.

24 "Because I called, and you refused: I stretched out my hand, and there was none that regarded.

25 You have despised all my counsel, and have neglected my reprehensions.

26 I also will laugh in your destruction, and will mock when that shall come to you which you feared.

27 When sudden calamity shall fall on you, and destruction, as a tempest, shall be at hand: when tribulation and distress shall come upon you:

28 Then shall they call upon me, and I will not hear: they shall rise in the morning, and shall not find me:

29 Because they have hated instruction, and received not the fear of the Lord, 30 Nor consented to my counsel, but despised all my reproof.

31 Therefore they shall eat the fruit of their own way, and shall be filled with their own devices.

32 The turning away of little ones shall kill them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them.

33 But he that shall hear me, shall rest without terror, and shall enjoy abundance, without fear of evils.

* Isai. lix. 7.—Isai. lxxv. 12, and lxxvi. 4. Jerem. vii. 13.

VER. 17. Wings. If thou attend, therefore, to my instructions, their arts will be vain. Ven. Bede.—They unjustly seek to deceive the pious. C.—Watchfulness will be the best protection against them. W.

VER. 19. Possessors. Of money. C.—While they attempt to invade another's property, they ruin themselves, and come to the gallows. H.

VER. 20. Streets. In every place we may learn wisdom. "The wise learn more from fools, than fools do from the wise," as Cato well observed. C.

VER. 22. Fools. Heb. "and scorners delight in their scorning." Prot.—Such are the pests of society. H.—They turn piety to ridicule, and will talk about things which they do not understand, like our ceprits forts, (C.) or pretended philosophers. H.

VER. 26. Mock. God is too much above us to act thus; but he will treat us as an enraged enemy. C.—In hell, the damned will cry in vain. v. 28. They had sufficient graces offered while they were alive. W.

VER. 28. Find me. Because their repentance was false, like that of Antiochus. 2 Mac. ix. 13. Ps. xi. 4. C.

VER. 30. Despised. Lit. "detracted," (H.) supposing my threats would not be put in execution. Heb. "they abhorred." C.

VER. 32. Turning. Heb. "the ease of the simple," who have given way to deceit. C.—Them. The objects of their eager desires, prove their ruin. Ezech. xvi. 49.

VER. 33. Evils. Both the just and the wicked, (v. 31. H.) shall be treated according to their deserts. 2 Cor. v. 10. W.—Even in this world, the just enjoy the peace of a good conscience. M.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. If. This proves free will. To become truly wise, we must desire it with the same avidity as a miser seeks for riches. W.—We must also pray, (v. 3.) with humility (v. 2.) to God, the giver of wisdom. v. 6. Every science which has not Him for the beginning and end, is vain and dangerous. C.

CHAP. II.

The advantages of wisdom: and the evils from which it delivers.

MY son, if thou wilt receive my words, and wilt hide my commandments with thee,

2 That thy ear may hearken to wisdom: incline thy heart to know prudence.

3 For if thou shalt call for wisdom, and incline thy heart to prudence:

4 If thou shalt seek her as money, and shalt dig for her as for a treasure:

5 Then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and shalt find the knowledge of God:

6 Because the Lord giveth wisdom: and out of his mouth cometh prudence and knowledge.

7 He will keep the salvation of the righteous, and protect them that walk in simplicity,

8 Keeping the paths of justice, and guarding the ways of saints.

9 Then shalt thou understand justice, and judgment, and equity, and every good path.

10 If wisdom shall enter into thy heart, and knowledge please thy soul:

11 Counsel shall keep thee, and prudence shall preserve thee,

12 That thou mayst be delivered from the evil way, and from the man that speaketh perverse things:

13 Who leave the right way, and walk by dark ways:

14 Who are glad when they have done evil, and rejoice in the most wicked things:

15 Whose ways are perverse, and their steps infamous.

16 That thou mayst be delivered from the strange woman, and from the stranger, who softeneth her words;

17 And forsaketh the guide of her youth,

18 And hath forgotten the covenant of her God: for her house inclineth unto death, and her paths to hell.

19 None that go in unto her, shall return again, neither shall they take hold of the paths of life.

20 That thou mayst walk in a good way: and mayst keep the paths of the just.

21 For they that are upright, shall dwell in the earth; and the simple shall continue in it.

VER. 7. Salvation. Prot. "sound wisdom." Tushiya (H.) often occurs in this book, and is very comprehensive, (C.) denoting the substance (H.) of goodness, virtue, &c. Job v. 12.

VER. 8. Justice. In his servants. C.—God gives them grace to follow virtue, (H.) and protects them from every danger. C.

VER. 12. Things. The danger of such company for young people is very great, as the heart is misled by the understanding, (C.) if it do not itself shew the way to error. H.—We all possess a fund of corruption. C.

VER. 14. Evil. These signs prove whom we ought to shun. S. Aug. depicts his own conduct before his conversion in the darkest colours. C.

VER. 16. Strange. Idolatress, (Grot.) or rather the abandoned woman, whether married or not.—C.—This description, as well as the former, guards us against heretics, who leave the right way of the Catholic Church, (v. 13.) and devise perverse doctrines of rebellion against princes, &c. as if faith alone were sufficient. By this faith, Prot. do not mean any article which all must believe but only that each one must be convinced that he himself is just, and will be saved. Like the strange woman, they preach a comfortable doctrine, and use sweet speeches. Rom. xvi. 18. Their conversion is a very difficult matter, (v. 19.) because they are condemned by their own judgment, (Tit. iii. 11.) and will not admit of the ordinary means of instruction in the Church. W.

VER. 17. Youth. Her husband, whom she married young when love is more lasting. This increases her guilt. It may also signify her father, or preceptor.

VER. 18. God. The law forbids adultery, and all impurities. Deut. xxiii. 17. Lev. xx. 10. Both the parties, guilty of adultery, were punished with death. C.

VER. 19. Life. A sincere conversion is so rare among people once addicted to impurity, (H.) which resembles a deep pit. C.—This illness is hardly removed. M.

VER. 21. Earth. Happily. This was the wish of the carnal Jews. But the more enlightened raise their thoughts to heaven.

22 *But the wicked shall be destroyed from the earth: and they that do unjustly, shall be taken away from it.

CHAP. III.

An exhortation to the practice of virtue.

MY son, forget not the law, and let thy heart keep my commandments.

2 For they shall add to thee length of days, and years of life, and peace.

3 Let not mercy and truth leave thee, put them about thy neck, and write them in the tables of thy heart.

4 And thou shalt find grace, and good understanding before God and men.

5 Have confidence in the Lord with all thy heart, and lean not upon thy own prudence.

6 In all thy ways think on him, and he will direct thy steps.

7 *Be not wise in thy own conceit: fear God, and depart from evil:

8 For it shall be health to thy navel, and moistening to thy bones.

9 *Honour the Lord with thy substance, and give him of the first of all thy fruits;

10 And thy barns shall be filled with abundance, and thy presses shall run over with wine.

11 *My son, reject not the correction of the Lord: and do not faint when thou art chastised by him:

12 For whom the Lord loveth, he chastiseth: and as a father in the son he pleaseth himself.

13 Blessed is the man that findeth wisdom, and is rich in prudence:

14 The purchasing thereof is better than the merchandise of silver, and her fruit than the chief and purest gold:

15 She is more precious than all riches: and all the things that are desired, are not to be compared to her.

16 Length of days is in her right hand, and in her left hand riches and glory.

17 Her ways are beautiful ways and all her paths are peaceable.

18 She is a tree of life to them that lay hold on her: and he that shall retain her is blessed.

* Job. xviii. 17.—^b Rom. xii. 16.—^c Tobias iv. 7. Luke xiv. 13.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. My son. God speaks, or the master instructs his disciple. v. 21. C.—We must remember and love instruction, and reduce it to practice. W.

VER. 2. Pence. These prefigured more substantial blessings. C.

VER. 3. Truth. Be kind and faithful to all. Gen. xxiv. 27. Ps. xxiv. 10.

VER. 4. Good. Sept. "forecast good before the Lord and men." S. Paul seems to allude to this version, Rom. xii. 17. and 2 Cor. viii. 22. H.

VER. 5. All. God will have nothing by halves.—Lean not. By pride. 2 Cor. xii. 13. All must be referred to God. C.—In him we may safely trust. W.

VER. 8. Bones. Thou shalt enjoy perfect health.

VER. 9. Fruits. Sept. add, "of justice;" to intimate that no presents will be acceptable, which have been unjustly acquired.

VER. 11. Him. Correction is rather a proof of love than of anger. Ps. iii. 19. C.—God thus shows that he approves of his servants; and therefore his other promises which seem of a temporal nature, must be understood with reference to the next life. W.

VER. 12. And as. Sept. "but he scourgeth every son whom he receiveth," as S. Paul quotes this passage. Heb. xii. 6. The verb is now wanting in Heb. or ceab; "as a father" may signify scourgeth, in piel, (M.) with i prefixed. C.

VER. 15. Riches. Heb. peninim, (H.) "pearls." Job xxviii. 18. C.

VER. 16. Glory. Her hands are full, and she grants favours with profusion, (H.) as with both hands, promising eternal life. W.

VER. 18. Life. Like that planted in paradise. Gen. ii. 9.

VER. 19. Wisdom. Hitherto he had spoken of that virtue. Now he treats of the uncreated wisdom, (C) which is God the Son. M. Jans. S. Greg. Mor. xii. 4.

VER. 20. Out. The higher and lower waters being divided, (C.) or the channels formed to receive the waters. Pisat.—It may also speak of the deluge. (804)

19 The Lord by wisdom hath founded the earth hath established the heavens by prudence.

20 By his wisdom the depths have broken out, and the clouds grow thick with dew.

21 My son, let not these things depart from thy eyes: keep the law and counsel:

22 And there shall be life to thy soul, and grace to thy mouth.

23 Then shalt thou walk confidently in thy way, and thy foot shall not stumble:

24 If thou sleep thou shalt not fear: thou shalt rest, and thy sleep shall be sweet.

25 Be not afraid of sudden fear, nor of the power of the wicked falling upon thee.

26 For the Lord will be at thy side, and will keep thy foot that thou be not taken.

27 Do not withhold him from doing good, who is able: if thou art able, do good thyself also.

28 Say not to thy friend: Go, and come again: and to-morrow I will give to thee: when thou canst give at present.

29 Practise not evil against thy friend, when he hath confidence in thee.

30 Strive not against a man without cause, when he hath done thee no evil.

31 *Envy not the unjust man, and do not follow his ways.

32 For every mocker is an abomination to the Lord, and his communication is with the simple.

33 Want is from the Lord in the house of the wicked but the habitations of the just shall be blessed.

34 He shall scorn the scorers, and to the meek he will give grace.

35 The wise shall possess glory: the promotion of fools is disgrace.

CHAP. IV.

A further exhortation to seek after wisdom.

HEAR, ye children, the instruction of a father, and attend, that you may know prudence.

2 I will give you a good gift, forsake not my law.

3 For I also was my father's son, tender, and as an only son in the sight of my mother:

* Heb. xii. 5. Apoc. iii. 10.—^c Ps. xxxvi. 1.

Ven. Bede.—With. Heb. "have distilled dew." This is so copious, as to resemble rain in Palestine. Judg. vi. 37. and 2 K. xvii. 12.

VER. 22. Mouth. There have been wise and virtuous men afflicted, v. 11. But they have borne all with patience, and have merited a more glorious reward than what this earth could afford. C.

VER. 27. Able. Prot. "withhold not good from them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it." Believe the distressed. H.—They have a title to that wealth, since those who possess it are bound to relieve the indigent. C.—Sept. "refrain not from doing good," &c. H.

VER. 28. Present. Alms in season are doubly valuable. W.—Antigonus acquired the title of Alseus, "about to give," as he never gave, (Plutarch) but only promised.

VER. 30. Cause. We may defend ourselves; but herein great discretion is necessary. C.—Omni pari contendere anceps est: cum superiore furiosum; cum inferiore sordidum. Senec. Prov.

VER. 31. Ways. Of injustice. Seek not to attain his prosperity by the same means. C.

VER. 33. Want. Heb. "a curse"—Shall be. Heb. "he blesseth." H.

VER. 34. Scorners. Lit. "he will delude the scorers." H.—He will treat them as they would treat others. Ps. xvii. 27. C.—Set. "the Lord resisteth the proud," &c. So the apostles quote this passage. 1 Pet. v. 5. Jam. iv. 6. H.

VER. 35. Disgrace. They are seen by more, and their fall is more dangerous. C.—A fool extolls what is ignominious." Pagn.—H.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Father. He shows the greatest respect for his parents. v. 3. C.

VER. 3. As. This is not expressed. H.—But Solomon was not the only son of Bethsabee, as S. Luke (iii. 23.) specifies Nathan, his brother. See 2 K. xii. 24. Sept. have "beloved in," &c.

4 And he taught me, and said: Let thy heart receive my words, keep my commandments, and thou shalt live.

5 Get wisdom, get prudence: forget not, neither decline from the words of my mouth.

6 Forsake her not, and she shall keep thee: love her, and she shall preserve thee.

7 The beginning of wisdom, get wisdom, and with all thy possession purchase prudence.

8 Take hold on her, and she shall exalt thee: thou shalt be glorified by her, when thou shalt embrace her.

9 She shall give to thy head increase of graces, and protect thee with a noble crown.

10 Hear, O my son, and receive my words, that years of life may be multiplied to thee.

11 I will shew thee the way of wisdom, I will lead thee by the paths of equity:

12 Which when thou shalt have entered, thy steps shall not be straitened, and when thou runnest, thou shalt not meet a stumbling-block.

13 Take hold on instruction, leave it not: keep it, because it is thy life.

14 Be not delighted in the paths of the wicked, neither let the way of evil men please thee.

15 Flee from it, pass not by it: go aside, and forsake it.

16 For they sleep not, except they have done evil: and their sleep is taken away unless they have made some to fall.

17 They eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of iniquity.

18 But the path of the just, as a shining light, goeth forwards, and increaseth even to perfect day.

19 The way of the wicked is darksome: they know not where they fall.

20 My son, hearken to my words, and incline thy ear to my sayings.

21 Let them not depart from thy eyes, keep them in the midst of thy heart:

22 For they are life to those that find them, and health to all flesh.

23 With all watchfulness keep thy heart, because life issueth out from it.

24 Remove from thee a froward mouth, and let detracting lips be far from thee.

VER. 4. He. Heb. is masculine. C.—As David instructed his son, so the latter teaches all how they may learn wisdom. W.

VER. 7. Beginning. The first part of wisdom is to desire it. For nothing hindereth from being just, but that justice is not desired. S. Aug. in Ps. cxviii. 20. W.—"Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get," &c. Prot. H.—It is the one thing necessary. C.—The pearl, to acquire which we must part with every thing else, if required. Matt. xiii. 46. M.

VER. 17. Wickedness. Acquired thereby, or they make sin their food. C. xxvi. 6.

VER. 18. Day. They are children of light, (Jo. xii. 35.) and give edification, always advancing in virtue. M.

VER. 19. Full. They are unconcerned about sin, and neither avoid it, nor strive to repent. C.

VER. 22. Flesh. All may derive benefit from their consideration. H.

VER. 23. From it. As the heart is the principal part of the body, so the will is the chief power of the soul, from which good or evil proceeds. W.—A clean heart gives life, a corrupt one, death. Mat. xv. 11. 19.

VER. 24. From thee. Neither detract, nor give any countenance to detractors.

VER. 25. Steps. Be attentive to thy own affairs. Prov. xvii. 24.

VER. 26. Straight. Heb. "ponder." Examine what thou takest in hand, and walk not at random. Heb. xii. 13.

VER. 27. For, &c. What follows is not in Heb. or the Complut. (C.) Sept. But it is in the Roman, &c. (H.) and in the new edit. of S. Jerom, as it was explained by Ven. Bede. Lyran and Cajetan reject it. C.

CHAP. V. VER. 2. Thoughts. Or wisdom; and act with discretion.—Mund, 25 Let thy eyes look straight on, and let thy eyelids go before thy steps.

26 Make straight the path for thy feet, and all thy ways shall be established.

27 Decline not to the right hand nor to the left: turn away thy foot from evil. For the Lord knoweth the ways that are on the right hand: but those are perverse which are on the left hand. But he will make thy courses straight, he will bring forward thy ways in peace.

CHAP. V.

An exhortation to fly unlawful lust, and the occasions of it.

MY son, attend to my wisdom, and incline thy ear to my prudence.

2 That thou mayst keep thoughts, and thy lips may preserve instruction. Mind not the deceit of a woman.

3 For the lips of a harlot are like a honeycomb dropping, and her throat is smoother than oil.

4 But her end is bitter as wormwood, and sharp as a two-edged sword.

5 Her feet go down into death, and her steps go in as far as hell.

6 They walk not by the path of life, her steps are wandering, and unaccountable.

7 Now, therefore, my son, hear me, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

8 Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the doors of her house.

9 Give not thy honour to strangers, and thy years to the cruel.

10 Lest strangers be filled with thy strength, and thy labours be in another man's house,

11 And thou mourn at the last, when thou shalt have spent thy flesh and thy body, and say;

12 Why have I hated instruction, and my heart consented not to reproof,

13 And have not heard the voice of them that taught me, and have not inclined my ear to masters?

14 I have almost been in all evil, in the midst of the church and of the congregation.

15 Drink water out of thy own cistern, and the streams of thy own well:

16 Let thy fountains be conveyed abroad, and in the streets divide thy waters.

&c. is omitted in Heb. and S. Jer. C.—By woman all concupiscence, or the inducement to sin, is commonly understood. We must not think of such things. W.

VER. 4. Sword. "It is a crime even to hearken." S. Amb. de Abrah. ii. 11. She seeks thy ruin, v. 5. c. ii. 16.

VER. 6. They. Heb. "If perhaps thou ponder the path of life." Pagn. H.—Or "she ponders not," &c. She walks inconsiderately, and consults only her passions, c. vii. 10. C.—No one can depend on her love. M.

VER. 9. Strangers. The world, the flesh, and the devil are such; cruelly devising our ruin. W.

VER. 10. Strength. Or children. v. 16. Gen. xlix. 8. C.

VER. 11. Body. He alludes to a shameful disease, the just punishment of intemperance. Eccl. xix. 3.

VER. 14. Evil. Infirm and worn out, having lost my reputation, &c. C.—Though I lived among the faithful, I was under no restraint. M.

VER. 15. Well. Live comfortably on your own property, (Cajet.) with your own wife. C.

VER. 16. Waters. Mayst thou have a numerous offspring, (v. 10.) and be liberal. Many copies of the Sept. &c. have a negation, with Aquila, "let not thy," &c. (C.) though it may be read with an interrogation, "are the waters of thy fountain to be?" &c. De Dieu.—By no means. Origen (in Num. xii.) acknowledges both readings. C.—Good instructions must be given to those who are well disposed, but not to scoffers, or obstinate infidels. W.—Husbands are exhorted to be content with their own wives, (v. 15. 20.) so that the negative particle seems to be here wanting, as it is, c. vi. 17. in MS 60. (Kennicott) and c. xiv. 33. Sept. &c. Capellus.

17 Keep them to thyself alone, neither let strangers be partakers with thee.

18 Let thy vein be blessed, and rejoice with the wife of thy youth:

19 Let her be thy dearest hind, and most agreeable fawn: let her breasts inebriate thee at all times: be thou delighted continually with her love.

20 Why art thou seduced, my son, by a strange woman, and art cherished in the bosom of another?

21 *The Lord beholdeth the ways of man, and considereth all his steps.

22 His own iniquities catch the wicked, and he is fast bound with the ropes of his own sins.

23 He shall die, because he hath not received instruction, and in the multitude of his folly he shall be deceived.

CHAP. VI.

Documents on several heads.

MY son, if thou be surety for thy friend, thou hast engaged fast thy hand to a stranger,

2 Thou art ensnared with the words of thy mouth, and caught with thy own words.

3 Do, therefore, my son, what I say, and deliver thyself: because thou art fallen into the hand of thy neighbour. Run about, make haste, stir up thy friend:

4 Give not sleep to thy eyes, neither let thy eye-lids slumber.

5 Deliver thyself as a doe from the hand, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

6 Go to the ant, O sluggard, and consider her ways, and learn wisdom:

7 Which, although she hath no guide, nor master, nor captain,

8 Provideth her meat for herself in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest.

9 How long wilt thou sleep, O sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep?

10 ^bThou wilt sleep a little, thou wilt slumber a little, thou wilt fold thy hands a little to sleep:

11 And want shall come upon thee, as a traveller, and poverty as a man armed. But if thou be diligent, thy harvest shall come as a fountain, and want shall flee far from thee.

12 A man that is an apostate, an unprofitable man, walketh with a perverse mouth,

13 He winketh with the eyes, presseth with the foot, speaketh with the finger.

14 With a wicked heart he deviseth evil, and at all times he soweth discord.

15 To such a one his destruction shall presently come, and he shall suddenly be destroyed, and shall no longer have any remedy.

16 Six things there are, which the Lord hateth, and the seventh his soul detesteth:

17 Haughty eyes, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood,

18 A heart that deviseth wicked plots, feet that are swift to run into mischief,

19 A deceitful witness that uttereth lies, and him that soweth discord among brethren.

20 My son, keep the commandments of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother.

21 Bind them in thy heart continually, and put them about thy neck.

22 When thou walkest, let them go with thee: when thou sleepest, let them keep thee, and when thou awakest, talk with them.

23 Because the commandment is a lamp, and the law a light, and reproofs of instruction are the way of life:

24 That they may keep thee from the evil woman, and from the flattering tongue of the stranger.

25 Let not thy heart covet her beauty, be not caught with her winks:

26 For the price of a harlot is scarce one loaf: but the woman catcheth the precious soul of a man.

27 Can a man hide fire in his bosom, and his garments not burn?

28 Or can he walk upon hot coals, and his feet not be burnt?

29 So he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife, shall not be clean when he shall touch her.

* Job xiv. 16. and xxxi. 4. and xxxiv. 21.

^b Infra xxiv. 33.

VER. 17. Thee. Stick to thy own wife. In a moral sense, let those who instruct others, take care not to neglect themselves.

VER. 18. Vein. Thou shalt have a numerous progeny. Ps. lxxvii. 28. Is. xlviii. 1. C.

VER. 19. Love. This is spoken by way of permission, and to withdraw people from unlawful connections. Eccle. ii. 1. and 1 Cor. vii. 29. C.

VER. 22. Ropes. "Evil habits unrestrained induce a necessity." (S. Aug. Conf. viii. 5.) though not absolute. H.—The libertine thinks he can get free as soon as he pleases; not being aware of the chains which he is forging for himself. C.—Sin requires punishment. M.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Hand. Agreements were made by shaking hands, Is. lxii. 8. Xen. Anab. iii.—Stranger. Sept. "enemy." He will presently be such, or thy friend's creditor will soon lay hold on thee. By standing surety for another, we expose ourselves to be ruined by his negligence. C.—The Persians had a horror chiefly of lying and debts. Herod i. 138.—All sureties are not condemned, but only such as are inconsiderate. M.—A diligent compliance with engagements is commended. W.

VER. 3. Make. Heb. "humble thyself, and make sure thy friend," (Prot.) entreating (H) and forcing him to pay his debts. The Fathers apply this to pastors, who have undertaken to direct others. Their soul is at stake. S. Greg. C.

VER. 8. Harvest. The economy and diligence of this little republic is admirable. Pliny, xxx. 11.—Some copies of the Sept. add with S. Amb. (Hex. v. 21. &c. C.) "or go to the bee, and behold what a worker it is, and how beautiful is its work; whose labours kings and private people use for health. But it is desirable and glorious to all; and though it be weak in strength, by the love of wisdom it has got forward" (H) in esteem. C.—Nature has given the form of a monarchy in bees, and of a democracy in the regulations of the ant. Tournenemine.

VER. 11. A traveller. Sept. add, "wicked," and Heb. gives the idea of a robber. M.—Bul, &c. This is not in Heb. Complut. or S. Jerom. C.

VER. 12. Apostate. Heb. "of Belial," without restraint of religion and law. C.—Dent. xiii. 18. M.—Every one who sins through malice, and particularly heretics, employ all their members to pervert others. W.—Mouth. No reliance can be had on his promises. C.

VER. 13. Finger. These signs imply haughtiness, &c. Ps. xxxiv. 19. Is. lviii. 9. The posture indicates the interior sentiments. (S. Amb. off. i. 18.) inasmuch, that S. Ambrose would not receive among the clergy one whose gestures were too light. The Persians still speak by signs. C.

VER. 16. Detesteth. This expression does not always mean that the last is worse than the former. M.—All the six sins are damnable, but the seventh is here most so, being against charity and unity, and the devil's sin. W.—Lying seems to be reprobated by three different terms. C.

VER. 23. Instruction. Given for our improvement, (H.) with charity. See Dent. vi. 6. Ps. xviii. 9.

VER. 24. Stranger. This is often inculcated, because nothing is more dangerous in youth, more contrary to the study of wisdom.

VER. 26. Woman. Who is married, exposes her lover to the danger of death. She chooses the most accomplished men, while the harlot receives the first comer. C.

VER. 27. Burn. No one can deal with an adulteress without guilt. M.—All probable occasions of sin must be shunned. W.

VER. 29. Clean. Or be left unpunished. No crime disturbs the order of society so much, nor is pardoned with more difficulty. C.

VER. 30. The fault is not so great, &c. The sin of theft is not so great, as to be compared with adultery; especially when a person pressed with hunger (which is the case here spoken of) steals to satisfy nature. Moreover the damage

30 The fault is not so great when a man hath stolen: for he stealeth to fill his hungry soul:

31 And if he be taken, he shall restore seven-fold, and shall give up all the substance of his house.

32 But he that is an adulterer, for the folly of his heart shall destroy his own soul:

33 He gathereth to himself shame and dishonour, and his reproach shall not be blotted out:

34 Because the jealousy and rage of the husband will not spare in the day of revenge,

35 Nor will he yield to any man's prayers nor will he accept for satisfaction ever so many gifts.

CHAP. VII.

The love of wisdom is the best preservative from being led astray by temptation.

MY son, keep my words, and lay up my precepts with thee. Son,

2 Keep my commandments, and thou shalt live: and my law as the apple of thy eye:

3 Bind it upon thy fingers, write it upon the tables of thy heart.

4 Say to wisdom: Thou art my sister: and call prudence thy friend,

5 That she may keep thee from the woman that is not thine, and from the stranger who sweeteneth her words.

6 For I looked out of the window of my house through the lattice,

7 And I see little ones, I behold a foolish young man,

8 Who passeth through the street by the corner, and goeth nigh the way of her house,

9 In the dark when it grows late, in the darkness and obscurity of the night.

10 And behold a woman meeteth him in a harlot's attire, prepared to deceive souls: talkative and wandering,

11 Not hearing to be quiet, not able to abide still at home,

12 Now abroad, now in the streets, now lying in wait near the corners.

13 And catching the young man, she kisseth him, and with an impudent face, flattereth, saying:

done by theft may much more easily be repaired, than the wrong done by adultery. But this does not hinder but that theft also is a mortal sin, forbidden by one of the ten commandments. Ch.—Heb. "they will not despise a thief, when he hath stolen to fill his soul, when he is hungry." Mont. H.—This was commonly supposed to be his motive, and he was only condemned to make restitution, without any further disgrace. C. xix. 24. Ex. xxii. 1. But what necessity could the adulterer plead? Both he and the woman must suffer death. Lev. xx. 10.

VER. 31. Seven-fold. Or as much as may be required. The law never subjected the thief to restore above five fold. If he had not enough, his person might be sold. C.

VER. 32. Folly. Lit. "want," inopiam. Heb. "is faint-hearted, corrupting his own soul, he will do that." H.

VER. 35. Gifts. "A husband would rather hear that his wife had been slain, than that she had been defiled." S. Jer. in Amos vi.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Words. As dangerous temptations always threaten, the same instructions are frequently inculcated. W.

VER. 5. Thine. But another's v. 19. Give thy heart to wisdom, that it may be guarded against impure love.

VER. 6. Lattice. No glass was used, on account of the great heat. C.

VER. 7. Ones. Not in age but prudence. M.

VER. 10. Attire. Covered with a veil. (Gen. xxxviii. 15.) though different from that of honest women. C.—The wanton are commonly the most gaudy; mulierum fere pretiosior cultus est quam quarum pudor vilis est. S. Cyp. de Habitu. —Prepared, &c. Heb. "guarded," (C.) or "subtle of heart." Prot, "who makes the hearts of youths take flight." Sept. Cant. vi. 4. H.

VER. 11. Not... quiet. Is not in Heb. C.—"She is loud and stubborn, her feet abide not in her house." Prot. H.—Chaste women are guarded in their speech, and keep at home. M.

14 I vowed victims for prosperity, this day I have paid my vows.

15 Therefore I am come out to meet thee, desirous to see thee, and I have found thee.

16 I have woven my bed with cords, I have covered it with painted tapestry, brought from Egypt.

17 I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon.

18 Come, let us be inebriated with the breasts, and let us enjoy the desired embraces, till the day appear.

19 For my husband is not at home, he is gone a very long journey.

20 He took with him a bag of money: he will return home the day of the full moon.

21 She entangled him with many words, and drew him away with the flattery of her lips.

22 Immediately he followed her as an ox led to be a victim, and as a lamb playing the wanton, and not knowing that he is drawn like a fool to bonds,

23 Till the arrow pierce his liver: as if a bird should make haste to the snare, and knoweth not that his life is in danger.

24 Now, therefore, my son, hear me, and attend to the words of my mouth.

25 Let not thy mind be drawn away in her ways: neither be thou deceived with her paths.

26 For she hath cast down many wounded, and the strongest have been slain by her.

27 Her house is the way to hell, reaching even to the inner chambers of death.

CHAP. VIII.

The preaching of wisdom. Her excellences.

BOOTH not wisdom cry aloud, and prudence put forth her voice.

2 Standing in the top of the highest places by the way, in the midst of the paths,

3 Beside the gates of the city, in the very doors she speaketh, saying:

4 O ye men to you I call, and my voice is to the sons of men.

5 O little ones understand subtlety, and ye unwise, take notice.

VER. 14. Prosperity. Or thy welfare, (Corn. a Lap. T.) so great is my love for thee. M.—Vows. And therefore I have a feast prepared. People might carry home the greatest part of the victim to eat, if they were clean. Lev. vii. 29. C.

VER. 16. Cords. For greater ease, instead of boards, (M.) or the curtains are hung with precious cords from Egypt. C.

VER. 17. Aloes. Of Syria, (Jo. xix. 39) different from ours. Num. xxxiv. 6. C.

VER. 18. Inebriated. Prot. "take our fill of love until the morning: let us solace ourselves with loves." H.—This passion is a sort of intoxication. M.

VER. 19. My. Lit. "the man." H.—She speaks thus out of contempt. C.

VER. 20. The day. Sept. "after many days." Heb. "at the day concealed," or when the people will dwell under tents, (Chal. C.) or "at the new moon," when it does not appear. Piscat.—He will not return for a long time, so that we need apprehend no danger from him. M.

VER. 22. Lamb. Prot. "fool to the correction of the stocks," (H) or "like a shackle (abs.) for the chastisement of a fool." Mont.—Interpreters have read different words. C.—Sinners who have given way to temptations are as inconsiderate as oxen, or birds which hasten to their own ruin. W.

VER. 26. Her. Solomon gave a melancholy proof of this, as well as David, and Amnon. C.

VER. 27. Death. There can be no precaution too great. c. ii. 18. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Voice. Men are wanting to themselves: they cannot plead ignorance. C.—Wisdom stands on high in the Catholic Church inviting all to virtue and happiness. W.—Some explain this of the light which is communicated to men; but the Fathers apply it to Jesus Christ, some of the expressions regarding his divine, and others his human nature. Eccli. xxiv.

VER. 3. Doors. Amid disputants, whose eagerness ought to convince us to the preference due to wisdom over all terrestrial concerns. v. 10.

6 Hear, for I will speak of great things: and my lips shall be opened to preach right things.

7 My mouth shall meditate truth, and my lips shall hate wickedness.

8 All my words are just, there is nothing wicked, nor perverse in them.

9 They are right to them that understand, and just to them that find knowledge.

10 Receive my instruction, and not money: choose knowledge rather than gold.

11 For wisdom is better than all the most precious things: and whatsoever may be desired cannot be compared to it.

12 I, wisdom, dwell in counsel, and am present in learned thoughts.

13 The fear of the Lord hateth evil; I hate arrogance, and pride, and every wicked way, and a mouth with a double tongue.

14 Counsel and equity is mine, prudence is mine, strength is mine.

15 By me kings reign, and lawgivers decree just things.

16 By me princes rule, and the mighty decree justice.

17 I love them that love me: and they that in the morning early watch for me, shall find me.

18 With me are riches and glory, glorious riches and justice.

19 For my fruit is better than gold and the precious stone, and my blossoms than choice silver.

20 I walk in the way of justice, in the midst of the paths of judgment,

21 That I may enrich them that love me, and may fill their treasures.

22 The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his ways, before he made any thing from the beginning.

23 I was set up from eternity, and of old, before the earth was made.

VER. 10. Money. They are generally incompatible.

VER. 12. Thoughts. All good comes from God, the eternal wisdom, (C.) which speaks here. W.

VER. 15. Things. Power and knowledge are the gift of the Almighty. Rom. xii. 1. A prince who resembles God the most, is his best present. Pliny in Trajan.

VER. 18. Glorious. Lit. "proud." H.—But here it only means great. Is. ix. 15. and lxi. 6. Riches but too commonly nourish pride, and it is very rare to see them joined with justice. G.

VER. 19. Stone. So the Sept. translate paz, (H.) which designates a more pure sort of gold. Gen. ii. 11. C.

VER. 21. Enrich. Heb. "grant what is (real goods) an inheritance to them." &c.—Treasures. Sept. add, "with goods. If I announce to you daily occurrences, I will admonish you to number the things of the world," (H.) and all past events. C.

VER. 22. Possessed. As Christ was with God, equal to him in eternity. Jo. i. Sept. "created," which many of the Fathers explain of the Word incarnate. (see Corn. a Lapide. Bossuet) or he hath "placed me," (S. Anthan. iii. con. Arian. Euseb.) a pattern of all virtues. The Sept. generally render kana, "possessed," as Aquila does here. C.

VER. 23. Up. Heb. "anointed." Sept. "he founded." Christ was appointed to be the foundation, on which we must be built. S. Athan. iii. Orat.

VER. 24. Conceived.—Having yet manifested none of my works. Since the creation, wisdom only seeks to communicate itself to us. C.

VER. 26. Poles. Heb. "head or height of the dust of the world." H.—I subsisted with the chaos, before things appeared in their present form. C.—The poles denote the north and south, or the four quarters of the world. M.

VER. 28. Sky. Prot. "clouds." Pagn. "the air." Vulg. æthera. Sept. "the clouds above." H.—Moses assigns the higher and lower waters the same origin. Gen. i. 7.

VER. 30. Forming. Heb. "one nursed," (C.) or nursing, nutritius. Pagn.—He was not an idle spectator.—Playing. With ease and surprising variety. C.

VER. 31. Men. God saw that all was good, but delighted most in his own

24 The depths were not as yet, and I was already conceived, neither had the fountains of water as yet sprung out.

25 The mountains, with their huge bulk, had not as yet been established: before the hills, I was brought forth:

26 He had not yet made the earth, nor the rivers nor the poles of the world.

27 When he prepared the heavens, I was present when with a certain law, and compass, he enclosed the depths:

28 When he established the sky above, and poised the fountains of waters:

29 When he compassed the sea with its bounds, and set a law to the waters that they should not pass their limits: when he balanced the foundations of the earth;

30 I was with him forming all things: and was delighted every day, playing before him at all times;

31 Playing in the world: and my delights were to be with the children of men.

32 Now, therefore, ye children, hear me: Blessed are they that keep my ways.

33 Hear instruction, and be wise, and refuse it not.

34 Blessed is the man that heareth me, and that watcheth daily at my gates, and waiteth at the posts of my doors.

35 He that shall find me, shall find life, and shall have salvation from the Lord.

36 But he that shall sin against me shall hurt his own soul. All that hate me love death.

CHAP. IX.

Wisdom invites all to her feast. Folly calls another way.

WISDOM hath built herself a house, she hath hewn her out seven pillars.

2 She hath slain her victims, mingled her wine, and set forth her table.

3 She hath sent her maids to invite to the tower, and to the walls of the city:

image. M.—He prefers man before all other corporeal creatures. W.—To him alone below he has granted understanding, and a soul capable of virtue. The Son has also assumed our nature. Bar. iii. 37.

VER. 35. Lord. Wisdom, or Jesus Christ, is our salvation, happiness, and life. Sept. "and the will is prepared by the Lord." S. Aug. often quotes this to prove the necessity of preventing grace. Ep. cxxvii. and clxxxvi. C.

VER. 36. Death. Not in itself, (H.) but by adhering to such things as bring death. M.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. House. The sacred humanity, (S. Ignat. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xii. 20.) or the Church. S. Greg. Mor. xxxiii. 15.—Here we may receive all instruction, the seven sacraments, and the gifts of the Holy Ghost. Pleasure had mentioned her attractions: now those of true wisdom are set before us. C.—God sent his pastors at all times, to invite people to embrace the latter. They are all included in the number seven, both before and under the law, as well as in the gospel, where S. Paul styles SS. Peter, James, and John, pillars. Gal. ii. This is the literal sense, on which the mystical is grounded, and both are intended by the Holy Ghost, intimating that the uncreated wisdom took flesh of the blessed Virgin, prepared the table of bread and wine, as Priest according to the order of Melchisedec, and chose the weak of this world to confound the strong, as S. Aug. explains this passage. Sup. and q. 51. W.

VER. 2. Victims. Moses ordered the blood to be poured out at the door of the tabernacle, and a part to be given to the priests, after which the rest might be taken away. The like was probably done at Jerusalem. Lev. xvii. 4. These victims are contrasted with those of pleasure. c. vii. 14.—Mingled. It was not customary for any but barbarians and the gods to take pure wine. Some mixed two, others three, five, or even twenty parts of water. But the scholiast of Aristophanes says, the best method was to have three parts of water, and two of wine. Mercury complains that his wine was half water. Arist. Plut. v. Sun. i.—The Fathers often apply this text to the feast of Jesus Christ in the blessed Eucharist. C.—S. Cyprian (ep. iii.) citeth the whole passage of Christ's sacrifice in the forms of bread and wine. W.

VER. 3. Maids. Sept. "servant men," the pastors of the church, inviting all to piety in so public a manner, that none can plead ignorance. S. Greg. C.—To invite. Prot. "she crieth upon the highest places of the city." H.—Christ enjoins his apostles to preach on the roofs. Matt. x. 37.

4 Whosoever is a little one, let him come to me. And to the unwise she said:

5 Come, eat my bread, and drink the wine which I have mingled for you.

6 Forsake childishness, and live, and walk by the ways of prudence.

7 He that teacheth a scorner, doth an injury to himself; and he that rebuketh a wicked man, getteth himself a blot.

8 Rebuke not a scorner, lest he hate thee. Rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee.

9 Give an occasion to a wise man, and wisdom shall be added to him. Teach a just man, and he shall make haste to receive it.

10 "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledge of the holy is prudence.

11 For by me shall thy days be multiplied, and years of life shall be added to thee.

12 If thou be wise, thou shalt be so to thyself: and if a scorner, thou alone shalt bear the evil.

13 A foolish woman and clamorous, and full of allurements, and knowing nothing at all,

14 Sat at the door of her house, upon a seat, in a high place of the city,

15 To call them that pass by the way, and go on their journey:

16 He that is a little one, let him turn to me. And to the fool she said:

17 Stolen waters are sweeter, and hidden bread is more pleasant.

18 And he did not know that giants are there, and that her guests are in the depths of hell.

THE PARABLES OF SOLOMON.

CHAP. X.

In the twenty following chapters are contained many wise sayings and axioms, relating to wisdom and folly, virtue and vice.

* Pa. ex. 10. Supra i. 7. Eccli. i. 16.

VER. 4. One. Simple, but not inconstant, like children. 1 Cor. xiv. 20. Pleasure addresses the same, (c. vii. 7.) but for their destruction. C.

VER. 7. Scorner. This is the reason why wisdom speaks only to the simple. The conceited would only laugh at her instructions. These scoffers represent heretics and libertines. c. i. 22. C.—Where there is no hope of amendment, prudence and charity require us to be silent, as our rebukes would only procure us enmity, and make the sinner worse. W.—Of such S. John was afraid, and therefore ceased from writing. 3 Jo. 9. Yet S. Paul commands public reprehension. 1 Tim. v. 20. M.—When there is any prospect of good, all, particularly superiors, are bound to correct. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. i. 9. and S. Bas. reg. fus. 158. W.

VER. 9. Occasion. This word is found in Sept. Syr. and Arab. We might supply instruction, (C.) with Prot.

VER. 10. Prudence. Or "prudence is the science of the saints," (H.) directing what to choose on all occasions to obtain heaven. C.—The knowledge contained in the holy Scriptures, and possessed by the saints, is superior to all other sciences. M.

VER. 13. And full. Prot. "she is simple and knoweth nothing." Sept. "is in want of a piece of bread." They have several verses before this, which are here omitted. H.—Wisdom and pleasure are opposed to each other. C.

VER. 17. Pleasant. Impure pleasures are more delightful (C.) to sensual men. H.—The prohibition increases appetite. M.

VER. 18. Giants. Who lived when all flesh had corrupted its ways, (Gen. vi. 12.) and were sentenced to hell. Job xxvi. 5. Is. xiv. 9. C.

CHAP. X. Solomon. This title is not found in Sixtus V. or Sept. Hitherto the preface extends, shewing the advantages of wisdom. C.—The subsequent chapters more properly contain the parables, and are written with great elegance, so as to oppose vice to virtue. See Bain. S. Jer. &c. W.

VER. 1. Mother. A virtuous child cannot be indifferent to the joy of his parents.

VER. 2. Wickedness. Riches ill acquired, or tending to corrupt the heart. Lu. xvi. 9.

VER. 3. Famine. Pa. xxxvi. 25. The prophets and Lazarus rejoice in suffering.

VER. 4. Poverty. Even of those who had plenty. This is true in a spiritual sense likewise. C.—The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence. H.—Otiotas mader nugarum, noverca virtutum. S. Bern. consid. ii.—He, &c. This is not in

A WISE son maketh the father glad: but a foolish son is the sorrow of his mother.

2 "Treasures of wickedness shall profit nothing: but justice shall deliver from death.

3 The Lord will not afflict the soul of the just with famine, and he will disappoint the deceitful practices of the wicked.

4 The slothful hand hath wrought poverty: but the hand of the industrious getteth riches.

He that trusteth to lies feedeth the winds: and the same runneth after birds, that fly away.

5 He that gathereth in the harvest, is a wise son: but he that snorteth in the summer, is the son of confusion.

6 The blessing of the Lord is upon the head of the just: but iniquity covereth the mouth of the wicked.

7 The memory of the just is with praises: and the name of the wicked shall rot.

8 The wise of heart receiveth precepts: a fool is beaten with lips.

9 He that walketh sincerely, walketh confidently: but he that perverteth his ways, shall be manifest.

10 "He that winketh with the eye, shall cause sorrow: and the foolish in lips shall be beaten.

11 The mouth of the just is a vein of life: and the mouth of the wicked covereth iniquity.

12 Hatred stirreth up strifes: "and charity covereth all sins.

13 In the lips of the wise is wisdom found: and a rod on the back of him that wanteth sense.

14 Wise men lay up knowledge: but the mouth of the fool is next to confusion.

15 The substance of a rich man is the city of his strength: the fear of the poor is their poverty.

16 The work of the just is unto life: but the fruit of the wicked unto sin.

† Infra xi. 4.—* Eccli. xxvii. 25.—† 1 Cor. xiii. 4. 1 Pet. iv. 8.

Heb. Greek, S. Jer. or in several Lat. copies. C.—We find it in the Sept. C. ix. 13.—Away. He derives no benefits from lies. M.

VER. 5. He. Sept. "a son well educated shall be wise, and shall have the unwise for his servant. An intelligent son has been saved from the heat. But the wicked son is destroyed by the wind in time of harvest." H.—A good part of this is not in the original; yet it is received by the Greeks.

VER. 6. Wicked. Or, as the Heb. seems to indicate, "the wicked covereth iniquity, by an hypocritical exterior," (C.) or, "the injury" (Mont.) done to another, (chamas. H.) "unseasonable, or infinite mourning" πένθος άμωρον. Sept.

VER. 7. Rot. Heb. "stink." His reputation shall be lost. Gen. xxxiv. 30. C.

VER. 8. Lips. He will not bear correction. M.—But suffers the punishment of his own ungarded speeches; or rather the man who hath foolish lips, shall be beaten, v. 13. C.

VER. 9. Sincerely. Or Simply, Heb. "in uprightness," (H.) or innocence. M.—Manifest. The hypocrite shall be at last detected.

VER. 10. Sorrow. Sept. add, "to men as well as to himself." C.—"But he who chides boldly shall make peace," (H.) or "work safety," as the Syr. and Arab. also read, instead of Heb. "a prating fool shall fall." "When a man convives at his friend's failings, . . . the offender is encouraged to sin on, and to heap up matter for very sorrowful reflections; but the man, who with an honest freedom, prudently reproves him, most effectually contrives his honour and safety." The consequences of a virtuous and a vicious friendship, seem to be also expressed in the next verse. Thus the latter hemistic generally illustrates the first. But here, part of v. 8. may be improperly inserted. The two parts of the verses in Proverbs, &c. being arranged in distinct columns, has occasioned sometimes a part, and sometimes a whole verse, to be omitted, as the transcriber might mistake the line. Kennicott.

VER. 11. Life. Or a never-failing spring, fons perennis, as we should speak in Latin. C. xiii. 14. Apoc. vii. 17.

VER. 12. Sins. Sept. "all who contend." Charity pardons all. 1 Pet. iv. 8.

VER. 13. Sense. Lit. "a heart." But the Hebrews use this expression in a different sense from what we do, and thus designate a fool. Ose. vii. 11.

VER. 14. Confusion. He speaks inconsiderately, and involves himself in continual dangers, while the wise are cautious in their speech.

VER. 15. Poverty. Diffidence hinders the advancement of the poor, as presumption is too common among the rich. A happy mediocrity is best. v. 1" (809)

17 The way of life, to him that observeth correction : but he that forsaketh reproofs, goeth astray.

18 Lying lips hide hatred : he that uttereth reproach, is foolish.

19 In the multitude of words there shall not want sin : but he that refraineth his lips, is most wise.

20 The tongue of the just is as choice silver : but the heart of the wicked is nothing worth.

21 The lips of the just teach many : but they that are ignorant, shall die in the want of understanding.

22 The blessing of the Lord maketh men rich : neither shall affliction be joined to them.

23 A fool worketh mischief as it were for sport : but wisdom is prudence to a man.

24 That which the wicked feareth, shall come upon him : to the just their desire shall be given.

25 As a tempest that passeth, so the wicked shall be no more : but the just is as an everlasting foundation.

26 As vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes, so is the sluggard to them that sent him.

27 The fear of the Lord shall prolong days : and the years of the wicked shall be shortened.

28 The expectation of the just is joy : but the hope of the wicked shall perish.

29 The strength of the upright is the way of the Lord : and fear to them that work evil.

30 The just shall never be moved : but the wicked shall not dwell on the earth.

31 The mouth of the just shall bring forth wisdom : the tongue of the perverse shall perish.

32 The lips of the just consider what is acceptable : and the mouth of the wicked uttereth perverse things.

CHAP. XI.

A DECEITFUL balance^a is an abomination before the Lord : and a just weight is his will.

5 The justice of the upright shall make his way prosperous : and the wicked man shall fall by his own wickedness.

^a Infra xx. 10. 23.

VER. 18. Foolish. We must neither dissemble our resentment, through hypocrisy, nor manifest it without reason. C.

VER. 19. Sin. A prolix discourse on subjects of importance is not reprehended. S. Aug. Retrac. l.—But it is very difficult to speak much, without going against some virtue. C.

VER. 21. Understanding. Lit. “hear.” H. v. 13.

6 The justice of the righteous shall deliver them : and the unjust shall be caught in their own snares.

7 When the wicked man is dead, there shall be no hope any more : and the expectation of the solicitous shall perish.

8 The just is delivered out of distress : and the wicked shall be given up for him.

9 The dissembler with his mouth deceiveth his friend : but the just shall be delivered by knowledge.

10 When it goeth well with the just, the city shall rejoice : and when the wicked perish, there shall be praise.

11 By the blessing of the just the city shall be exalted : and by the mouth of the wicked it shall be overthrown.

12 He that despiseth his friend, is mean of heart : but the wise man will hold his peace.

13 He that walketh deceitfully, revealeth secrets : but he that is faithful, concealeth the thing committed to him by his friend.

14 Where there is no governor, the people shall fall : but there is safety where there is much counsel.

15 He shall be afflicted with evil, that is surety for a stranger : but he that is aware of snares, shall be secure.

16 A gracious woman shall find glory : and the strong shall have riches.

17 A merciful man doth good to his own soul : but he that is cruel casteth off even his own kindred.

18 The wicked maketh an unsteady work : but to him that soweth justice, there is a faithful reward.

19 Clemency prepareth life : and the pursuing of evil things death.

20 A perverse heart is abominable to the Lord : and his will is in them that walk sincerely.

21 Hand in hand the evil man shall not be innocent : but the seed of the just shall be saved.

22 A golden ring in a swine's snout, a woman fair and foolish.

23 The desire of the just is all good, the expectation of the wicked is indignation.

VER. 13. Walketh. Sept. “the double-tongued,” dissembler, or great talker. C.

VER. 15. That is. Heb. “that hateth those who make agreements is secure.” Mont.

VER. 16. Gracious. Virtuous and beautiful, as God hath granted beauty also for good purposes. This and virtue tend to the advancement of women, while men can use their strength to acquire riches. C.—Glory. Sept. Syr. and Arab. add, “of her husband. But she that hateth righteousness is a throne of disgrace. The slothful, though rich, shall come to poverty ; but the laborious shall retain their riches.” Two hemistichs seem to be lost in Heb. Kennicott.—Most of the additions in the Sept. are only glosses, or useless repetitions, (C.) though they seem not to be so in this place. H.

VER. 17. Kindred. Heb. “flesh.” Gen. xxix. 14. The miser is cruel even to himself.

VER. 21. In hand. At rest, or making agreements. God will punish the race of the wicked.

29 He that troubleth his own house, shall inherit the winds: and the fool shall serve the wise.

30 The fruit of the just man is a tree of life: and he that gaineth souls is wise.

31 *If the just man receive in the earth, how much more the wicked and the sinner?

CHAP. XII.

HE that loveth correction, loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof, is foolish.

2 He that is good, shall draw grace from the Lord: but he that trusteth in his own devices, doth wickedly.

3 Man shall not be strengthened by wickedness: and the root of the just shall not be moved.

4 A diligent woman is a crown to her husband: and she that doth things worthy of confusion, is as rottenness in his bones.

5 The thoughts of the just are judgments: and the counsels of the wicked are deceitful.

6 The words of the wicked lie in wait for blood: the mouth of the just shall deliver them.

7 Turn the wicked, and they shall not be: but the house of the just shall stand firm.

8 A man shall be known by his learning: but he that is vain and foolish, shall be exposed to contempt.

9 ^bBetter is the poor man that provideth for himself, than he that is glorious and wanteth bread.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Knowledge. It is a great kindness to shew us our faults. But God's grace is necessary to make us reap benefit from correction, (C.) as self-love recoils at it.

15 The way of a fool is right in his own eyes: but he that is wise hearkeneth unto counsels.

16 A fool immediately sheweth his anger: but he that dissembleth injuries is wise.

17 He that speaketh that which he knoweth, sheweth forth justice: but he that lieth, is a deceitful witness.

19 The lip of truth shall be steadfast for ever: but he that is a hasty witness, frameth a lying tongue.

20 Deceit is in the heart of them that think evil things: but joy followeth them that take counsels of peace.

21 Whatsoever shall befall the just man, shall not make him sad: but the wicked shall be filled with mischief.

VER. 18. Promiseth. Sept. "there are, who speaking, wound with the sword but," &c. Heb. bote (H.) means also, making a foolish promise, which causes remorse. 28 In the path of justice is life: but the bye-way leadeth to death.

CHAP. XIII.

A WISE son heareth the doctrine of his father: but he that is a scorner, heareth not when he is re-proved.

2 Of the fruit of his own mouth shall a man be filled with good things: but the soul of transgressors is wicked.

3 He that keepeth his mouth keepeth his soul: but he that hath no guard on his speech shall meet with evils.

4 The sluggard willeth, and willeth not: but the soul of them that work, shall be made fat.

5 The just shall hate a lying word: but the wicked confoundeth, and shall be confounded.

6 Justice keepeth the way of the innocent: but wickedness overthroweth the sinner.

7 One is as it were rich, when he hath nothing: and another is as it were poor, when he hath great riches.

8 The ransom of a man's life are his riches: but he that is poor, beareth not reprehension.

9 The light of the just giveth joy: but the lamp of the wicked shall be put out.

10 Among the proud there are always contentions: but they that do all things with counsel, are ruled by wisdom.

Heb. “and mercy the sinful people,” whom God spares on account of their alms-deeds, (Dan. iv. 24.) or “sin is the shame of peoples.” C.—Montanus renders chesed mercy, and Pagnin “ignominy.” The former is scarcely intelligible, et misericordia populum peccatum, unless sin be here taken for a sin-offering, (H.) as it is by Vatab. CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. It is the part of man, &c. That is, a man should prepare in his heart and soul what he is to say; but after all, it must be the Lord that must govern his tongue, to speak to the purpose. Not that we can think any thing of good without God's grace: but after that we have (with God's grace) thought and prepared within our souls what we would speak; if God does not govern our tongue, we shall not succeed in what we speak. Ch.—He will put into our mouths what we have to say to persecutors. Lu. xxi. 14. He often causes us to utter the reverse of what we intended, as Balaam did. Num. xxiii. CHAP. XVIII.

HE that hath a mind to depart from a friend, seeketh occasions: he shall ever be subject to reproach.

2 A fool receiveth not the words of prudence: unless thou say those things which are in his heart.

3 The wicked man, when he is come into the depths of sins, contemneth: but ignominy and reproach follow him.

4 *Words from the mouth of a man are as deep water: and the fountain of wisdom as an overflowing stream.

5 It is not good to accept the person of the wicked to decline from the truth of judgment.

"through desire, a man having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom." The solitary seeks heaven. H.

VER. 10. Name. Essence, or protection of God. The rich depends on his own wealth.

16 A man's gift enlargeth his way, and maketh him room before princes.

17 The just is first accuser of himself: his friend cometh, and shall search him.

18 The lot suppresseth contentions, and determineth even between the mighty.

19 A brother that is helped by his brother, is like a strong city: and judgments are like the bars of cities.

21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue: they that love it, shall eat the fruits thereof.

22 He that hath found a good wife, hath found a good thing, and shall receive a pleasure from the Lord. He that driveth away a good wife, driveth away a good thing: but he that keepeth an adulteress, is foolish and wicked.

23 The poor will speak with supplications, and the rich will speak roughly.

24 A man amiable in society, shall be more friendly than a brother.

CHAP. XIX.

BBETTER is the poor man, that walketh in his simplicity, than a rich man that is perverse in his lips and unwise.

2 ^aWhere there is no knowledge of the soul, there is no good: and he that is hasty with his feet shall stumble.

3 The folly of a man supplanteth his steps: and he fretteth in his mind against God.

VER. 22. Good wife. Good is not in Heb. but should be understood, as it is expressed in Sept. of Complut. (C.) and Alex. H.—He that, &c. occurs not in Heb. Sixtus V. &c. But it is found in Sept. and Arab. The Syriac omits the last sentence.—Wicked. S. Aug. had frequently asserted that a divorce was only of counsel: but this he retracted, when he reflected on this text. Ret. i. 19.—The Hebrews, Athenians, and Romans, followed the same practice with adulteresses. Selden, Ux. iii. 16. Dem. in Neæram, &c.—Hermas (past. i. 4.) prescribes that the penitent shall be received again, but not often. In case of divorce, the fathers still permit not a second marriage, that the parties may be reconciled. They enjoin the husband to put away only such as are incorrigible. S. Aug. Adul. ii. 8. C.

VER. 24. Brother. The ties of nature are not so strong as those of friendship. C.—Heb. "a man that hath friends must shew himself friendly; and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." Prot. H.—Ut ameris ama. Mart.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Rich, is not in Heb. Sept. Compl. or S. Jerom. C.—But as there is no antithesis between a poor man and a fool, it ought to be inserted, as it is in the Syriac, which reads, "than he who is perverse in his ways, though he be rich." The MS. 2 confirms "ways." Kennicott.

6 Many honour the person of him that is mighty, and are friends of him that giveth gifts.

7 The brethren of the poor man hate him: more over also his friends have departed far from him.

He that followeth after words only, shall have nothing.

8 But he that possesseth a mind, loveth his own soul, and he that keepeth prudence, shall find good things.

9 A false witness shall not be unpunished: and he that speaketh lies, shall perish.

10 Delicacies are not seemly for a fool: nor for a servant to have rule over princes.

11 The learning of a man is known by patience: and his glory is to pass over wrongs.

12 As the roaring of a lion, so also is the anger of a king: and his cheerfulness as the dew upon the grass.

13 A foolish son is the grief of his father: and a wrangling wife is like a roof continually dropping through.

14 House and riches are given by parents: but a prudent wife is properly from the Lord.

15 Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep, and an idle soul shall suffer hunger.

16 He that keepeth the commandment, keepeth his own soul: but he that neglecteth his own way, shall die.

17 He that hath mercy on the poor, lendeth to the Lord: and he will repay him.

18 Chastise thy son, despair not: but to the killing of him set not thy soul.

19 He that is impatient, shall suffer damage: and when he shall take away, he shall add another thing.

do who excuse themselves on account of their temper, habits, stars, the violence of temptation, &c. C.

VER. 7. Only. Heb. has lo, and the marg. lu, with the Vulg. C.—The former word intimates that the words have no solidity, and the latter that they shall be his only portion who is so foolish as to trust in them. Sequens dicta non ipsa; (Mout.) or ei ipsa, if we follow the margin. H.

VER. 8. Mind. Heb. "heart," intelligence. C. xv. 32.—Loveth. This does not contradict the gospel; (Jo. xii. 25.) as those who refrain from what the soul would crave to its own detriment, truly love it.

VER. 10. Fool. He would eat them, so as to prejudice his health.—Princes. C. xxx. 21. Such are commonly insolent, and should attend to Ausonius. Fortunam reverenter habe.

VER. 18. Killing. Prot. "crying;" or by his complaint be not deterred. H.—Chal. agrees with us. The law permitted parents to sell their children, and to have them stoned to death, if they declared them disobedient, (Deut. xxi. 18. C.) and riotous, v. 20. Timely chastisement may prevent such extremities. H.—S. Paul dissuades unnecessary severity. Col. iii. 21.

VER. 19. Thing. A child neglected will continue to steal, or to offend; (C.) while too much harshness will do no good, but tend to the damage of all parties. H.—Anger is productive of the worst effects.

VER. 21. Ignorance and weakness cause men to change.

22 A needy man is merciful: and better is the poor than the lying man.

23 The fear of the Lord is unto life: and he shall abide in the fulness without being visited with evil.

24 *The slothful hideth his hand under his arm-pit, and will not so much as bring it to his mouth.

25 ^bThe wicked man being scourged, the fool shall be wiser: but if thou rebuke a wise man, he will understand discipline.

26 He that afflicteth his father, and chaseth away his mother, is infamous and unhappy.

27 Cease not, O my son, to hear instruction, and be not ignorant of the words of knowledge.

28 An unjust witness scorneth judgment: and the mouth of the wicked devoureth iniquity.

29 Judgments are prepared for scorers: and striking hammers for the bodies of fools.

See Job v. 27. Matt. xviii. 21. C.—He who is not subject to mortal sin, may still be exposed to many failings, and venial sins, which do not deprive him of the title of just; whereas the wicked consents to mortal sin, from which he riseth not so easily. Hence the wise man admonishes us not to lie in wait, or callously seek iniquity in the house or soul of the just. W.

22 For their destruction shall rise suddenly: and who knoweth the ruin of both?

23 These things also to the wise: *It is not good to have respect to persons in judgment.

26 He shall kiss the lips, who answereth right words.

27 Prepare thy work without, and diligently till thy ground: that afterward thou mayst build thy house.

VER. 28. Cause, and necessity. Sept. "be not a false witness against thy fellow-citizen."

VER. 29. Work. Revenge is often reprobated, though the law allowed of retaliation, which the more virtuous did not insist upon.

VER. 30. Man. Those who neglected their land were despised. C.—The ancient Romans esteemed agriculture as a most laudible and profitable employment. Cato. Rust. i. Cic. Off. i.

VER. 32. Which. Sept. "at last I repented: I looked forward to receive instruction."

VER. 33. Said I, is not in Heb. C. vi. 10. C.—Sept. "I will slumber a while," to rest. Sept. "I will enfold my breast in my hands a little." H.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. These. Solomon wrote 3,000, and we have only 915 verses extant. C.—The rest perhaps shewed his genius, but were less useful. Tostat. in 3 K. iv. 9.—Men. Isaias, Subna, &c. C.—Out of other records, (M.) or "translated" into a language better understood. Carthus. Bayn.

VER. 2. Speech. The Scriptures will denounce the truth to them, and shew them how to reign with justice. We must adore the mysteries of God; but are allowed to examine the secret designs of princes.

VER. 3. Unsearchable. Their counsellors must not betray their secrets. Tob. xii. 7. The greatest enterprises depend on secrecy.

4 Take away the rust from silver, and there shall come forth a most pure vessel:

5 Take away wickedness from the face of the king, and his throne shall be established with justice.

6 Appear not glorious before the king, and stand not in the place of great men.

7 For it is better that it should be said to thee: Come up hither; than that thou shouldst be humbled before the prince.

8 The things which thy eyes have seen, utter not hastily in a quarrel: lest afterward thou mayst not be able to make amends, when thou hast dishonoured thy friend.

9 Treat thy cause with thy friend, and discover not the secret to a stranger:

10 Lest he insult over thee, when he hath heard it, and cease not to upbraid thee.

Grace and friendship deliver a man: keep these for thyself, lest thou fall under reproach.

11 To speak a word in due time, is like apples of gold on beds of silver.

12 As an ear-ring of gold and a bright pearl, so is he that reproveth the wise, and the obedient ear.

13 *As the cold of snow in the time of harvest, so is a faithful messenger to him that sent him, for he refresheth his soul.

14 As clouds, and wind, when no rain followeth, so is the man that boasteth, and doth not fulfil his promises.

15 By patience a prince shall be appeased, and a soft tongue shall break hardness.

16 Thou hast found honey, eat what is sufficient for thee, lest being glutted therewith thou vomit it up.

17 Withdraw thy foot from the house of thy neighbour, lest having his fill he hate thee.

Erige; amicitias et tibi junge pares.*—Ovid. Trist. iii. 4.

VER. 8. Not. Sept. "repent when thy friend may reproach thee." H.—
Friend. A word spoken in haste may expose him to ridicule.

VER. 9. Stranger. It sometimes happens that friends fall out; but if either disclose the secret of the other, he will be deemed infamous. C. Jos. con. Ap. 2.—S. Ambrose says of his brother Satyrus, "though we had all things in common, yet the secret of our friends was not so."

VER. 10. Grace, &c. is not in Heb. Compl. S. Jerom, &c. But it is in the Sept. "favour and friendship may give liberty; which keep thou for thyself, that thou mayst not be exposed to great shame. But guard thy ways unchangeably." H.—Avoid quarrels.

VER. 11. Time, (Sym.) "on its wheels," (Heb.) flowing smoothly, (C.) or "according to his two faces, is apples of gold in network of silver." The Scriptures have a double sense. The exterior one leads to that sense which is interior, and more excellent. Maimonid. Parkhurst, p. 366.—Gold, oranges.—Beds. On such the kings of Parthia slept, and these metals were very common under Solomon, 1 K. x. 27. Est. i. 6. C.—Mont. renders mascioth "transparent cases." Prot. "pictures of silver."

VER. 12. Bright. Heb. chali cathem, "an ornament of fine gold," (Mont. Prot. H.) may probably denote a collar or ring. The eastern nations wore rings fixed at the top of the ears, and under the nose. Some were so large that they put their meat through them. The Scripture often alludes to these customs, which are so different from ours. Cant. vii. 1.

VER. 13. Harvest. In June and July, when the heat was most intense, people of quality had snow from Libanus to mix with what they drank. Jer. xvi. 14. C.

VER. 15. Hardness. Heb. and Sept. "bones." H.

VER. 16. Up. We must moderate the sensual appetite, (M.) and even the study of wisdom, which is compared to honey. C. xxiv. 13. Rom. xii. 3. Eccle. vii. 17. C.—We must not be too familiar, v. 17. Ven. Bede. Cajet.

VER. 17. Having. Heb. "being tired of thee." No man is so perfect, but he will manifest some defect, and become importunate. C.

Nulli te facias nimis sodalem. Mart.

18 A man that beareth false witness against his neighbour, is like a dart and a sword and a sharp arrow.

19 To trust in an unfaithful man in the time of trouble, is like a rotten tooth, and weary foot,

20 And one that looseth his garment in cold weather.

As vinegar upon nitre, so is he that singeth songs to a very evil heart. As a moth doth by a garment, and a worm by the wood: so the sadness of a man consumeth the heart.

21 *If thy enemy be hungry, give him to eat: if he thirst, give him water to drink:

22 For thou shalt heap hot coals upon his head, and the Lord will reward thee.

23 The north wind driveth away rain, as doth a sad countenance a backbiting tongue.

24 *It is better to sit in a corner of the house-top: than with a brawling woman, and in a common house.

25 As cold water to a thirsty soul, so are good tidings from a far country.

26 A just man falling down before the wicked, is as a fountain troubled with the foot and a corrupted spring.

27 As it is not good for a man to eat much honey, *so he that is a searcher of majesty shall be overwhelmed by glory.

28 As a city that lieth open and is not compassed with walls, so is a man that cannot refrain his own spirit in speaking.

heart." H.—The former sentence may be joined with the preceding, as it is improper to deprive a person of his garment, no less than to trust in the faithless; though some would suppose (C.) that this conduct, as well as the mixing of vinegar with nitre, is no less absurd than to attempt to relieve by music those who are extremely afflicted. Eccli. xxii. 6. T.—But Solomon does not speak of such, but only of those who are "heavy;" and we know that music has wonderful efficacy in relieving them, (1 K. xvi. 17.) in like manner as this mixture serves to cleanse the skin and garments, (Jer. ii. 22. C.) and to purify the ears, when they are deafish. Pliny xxxi. 10. Vales. lx.—As a, &c. is not in Heb. S. Jer. &c. C.—The Chal. has the latter part, (H.) "grief tries the heart, as fire does silver. As the worm eats wood, so folly," &c. C.

VER. 22. Coals of charity; (S. Chrys. in Rom. xii. 20.) or, if he prove obstinate, his punishment will be the greater. Geier.—The former sense is more received. C.

VER. 23. Rain; (Sym. Prot.) or marg. "bringeth forth rain." H.—But S. Jerom, who lived in the country, knew that this wind was rather dry; and therefore he has abandoned the Sept. "raiseth the clouds." Job xxxvii. 9. Joel ii. 20. Eccli. xviii. 23. The countries north of Palestine were not calculated to produce vapours and rain, which came rather from the south. C.—Tongue. If the hearers would shew their displeasure, detractors would soon be reduced to silence. S. Jer. ad. Rust. S. Bern.

VER. 24. It is. C. xxi. 9. Sixtus V. does not insert this verse here.

VER. 25. Tidings. Heb. and Sept. The Vulg. seems rather to speak of a "good messenger." Homer said that a good messenger honoured the business most. Pind. Pyth. viii. C.

VER. 26. Falling into disgrace, or sin, occasions the wicked to exult, as if there were no God or religion. C.

VER. 27. Majesty, viz. of God. For to search into that incomprehensible Majesty, and to pretend to sound the depths of the wisdom of God, is exposing our weak understanding to be blinded with an excess of light and glory, which it cannot comprehend. Ch.—When the Church proposes to us any mystery, we have only to believe. Heb. "but it is glorious to sound their glory," and see where the wicked end, that we may not envy them. C. iii. 31. Ps. xxxvi. 7. C.—Prot. "so for men to search their own glory, is not glory," but a sin H.—"It is not good to eat too much honey," (Chal.) or to sound the glorious words of God and wisdom, or the mysteries of religion. Sept. "But it is right to reverence glorious speeches," (C.) with esteem and humility. Cat. Græc.

VER. 28. Speaking. He lays himself open to every attack. C. xxix. 11. . . (823)

3. A whip for a horse, and a snaffle for an ass, *and a rod for the back of fools.

4 Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou be made like him.

5 Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he imagine himself to be wise.

6 ^bHe that sendeth words by a foolish messenger, is lame of feet and drinketh iniquity.

7 As a lame man hath fair legs in vain: so a parable is unseemly in the mouth of fools.

8 As he that casteth a stone into the heap of Mercury: so is he that giveth honour to a fool.

9 As if a thorn should grow in the hand of a drunkard: so is a parable in the mouth of fools.

10 Judgment determineth causes: and he that putteth a fool to silence, appeaseth anger.

11 ^cAs a dog that returneth to his vomit, so is the fool that repeateth his folly.

12 Hast thou seen a man wise in his own conceit? there shall be more hope of a fool than of him.

13 The slothful man saith: There is a lion in the way, and a lioness in the roads.

14 As the door turneth upon its hinges, so doth the slothful upon his bed.

15 ^dThe slothful hideth his hand under his arm-pit, and it grieveth him to turn it to his mouth.

16 The sluggard is wiser in his own conceit, than seven men that speak sentences.

17 As he that taketh a dog by the ears, so is he that passeth by in anger, and meddleth with another man's quarrel.

18 As he is guilty that shooteth arrows and lances unto death:

19 So is the man that hurteth his friend deceitfully: and when he is taken, saith: I did it in jest.

* Supra xxiii. 18.—^b Supra xxv. 18.—^c 2 Pet. ii. 22.—^d Supra xix. 24.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. Glory and power. A fool in a high office will endanger himself and the public; (C.) while the virtuous, seeing that merit is not regarded, will not push themselves forward. Æschines.

VER. 2. As a bird, &c. The meaning is, that a curse uttered without cause shall do no harm to the person that is cursed, but will return upon him that curseth; as whithersoever a bird flies, it returns to its own nest. Ch.—Come. Chul. "shall not come in vain," if it be just, like that of Noe, Josue, &c. Heb. "shall not come" (C.) to the person against whom it is uttered, though God will not hold the curser guiltless, as the Vulg. intimates. H. Curses, anathemas, &c. vented without reason, do not injure any but those who denounce them. Yet out of respect for ecclesiastical authority, those who are under censures, must abstain from their functions till they be absolved. C.

VER. 3. snaffle. "Bit" or muzzle, (camus) to prevent the animal from biting. H.—Sept. Arab. &c. "a goad for an ass." But methog denotes a bridle. (Mont.) asses being there very large, and commonly used for riding. C. xiii. 18. C.

VER. 4. Answer not a fool, &c. Viz. so as to imitate him; but only so as to reprove his folly. Ch.—If thou answer at all, (v. 5.) do it to the purpose, and to prevent others from taking scandal, (C.) as well as to humble the wicked, for his good. H.

VER. 6. Iniquity. He is exposed to shame, (Sept.) and must condemn his own folly. C.

VER. 7. Fair. Heb. "unequal legs," or "lifted up," so, &c. H.

VER. 8. Mercury. The god of travellers, who were wont to throw a stone at the foot of his statue, as the Indians (Vincent. Bellor. xxiv.) and Arabs did. Mahomet would not disturb this superstitious custom. The Rabbins style these statutes Mercolis. But Sept. &c. give another sense, "as he that bindeth a stone (C.) in the boss of a ring, σφενδα, (M.) or in a sling," can do no good, but only endanger himself or others, "so," &c. Yet margema is never used elsewhere for a sling, and it means undoubtedly "a heap of stones," (C.) as Mont. substitutes instead of "the sling," in Pagn. "As a small piece of precious stone in a heap of stones is lost, so," &c. Pole. Syn. Parkhurst in rogom. H.—Honour, or an office, in which he may do harm. C.

VER. 9. If. Heb. "as a thorn goeth up into the," &c. Prot. H.—If he attempt to handle or to extract one, he will wound himself the more, as the fool would render truth and wisdom contemptible. C.—Parable. Sept. "but slavery in the hands of fools" groweth up. H.

20 When the wood faileth, the fire shall go out: and when the tale-bearer is taken away, contentions shall cease.

21 As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire, *so an angry man stirreth up strife.

22 The words of a tale-bearer are as it were simple, but they reach to the innermost parts of the belly.

23 Swelling lips joined with a corrupt heart, are like an earthen vessel adorned with silver dross.

24 An enemy is known by his lips, when in his heart he entertaineth deceit.

25 When he shall speak low, trust him not: because there are seven mischiefs in his heart.

26 He that covereth hatred deceitfully, his malice shall be laid open in the public assembly.

27 He that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it: and he that rolleth a stone, it shall return to him.

28 A deceitful tongue loveth not truth: and a slippery mouth worketh ruin.

CHAP. XXVII.

BOAST not for to-morrow, for thou knowest not what the day to come may bring forth.

2 Let another praise thee, and not thy own mouth: a stranger, and not thy own lips.

3 ^aA stone is heavy, and sand weighty: but the anger of a fool is heavier than them both.

4 Anger hath no mercy: nor fury, when it breaketh forth: and who can bear the violence of one provoked?

5 Open rebuke is better than hidden love.

6 Better are the wounds of a friend, than the deceitful kisses of an enemy.

7 ^aA soul that is full shall tread upon the honeycomb: and a soul that is hungry shall take even bitter for sweet.

VER. 10. Anger, and prevents lawsuits. Heb. is variously read and translated. C.—Prot. "the great God, that formed all things, both rewardeth the fool and rewardeth the transgressors." Marg. VER. 11. Dog. This is the only animal which is known to do so. S. Peter uses this comparison to deter any from renouncing the faith; as the Fathers do, to shew the misery attending a relapse. Sept. here add, "there is a confusion," &c. taken from Eccli. iv. 25. C.

THE wicked man fleeth, when no man pursueth: but the just, bold as a lion, shall be without dread.

2 For the sins of the land many are the princes thereof: and for the wisdom of a man, and the knowledge of those things that are said, the life of the prince shall be prolonged.

4 They that forsake the law, praise the wicked man: they that keep it, are incensed against him.

5 Evil men think not on judgment: but they that seek after the Lord, take notice of all things.

6 *Better is the poor man walking in his simplicity, than the rich in crooked ways.

VER. 10. Soul. They wish to protect the upright. Pa. cxli. 5.

6 A snare shall entangle the wicked man when he sinneth: and the just shall praise and rejoice.

7 The just taketh notice of the cause of the poor: the wicked is void of knowledge.

8 Corrupt men bring a city to ruin: but wise men turn away wrath.

9 If a wise man contend with a fool, whether he be angry, or laugh, he shall find no rest.

10 Blood-thirsty men hate the upright: but just men seek his soul.

11 A fool uttereth all his mind: a wise man deferreth, and keepeth it till afterwards.

12 A prince that gladly heareth lying words, hath all his servants wicked.

13 ^aThe poor man and the creditor have met one another: the Lord is the enlightener of them both.

14 The king that judgeth the poor in truth, his throne shall be established for ever.

15 ^aThe rod and reproof give wisdom: but the child that is left to his own will, bringeth his mother to shame.

16 When the wicked are multiplied, crimes shall be multiplied: but the just shall see their downfall.

17 Instruct thy son and he shall refresh thee, and shall give delight to thy soul.

18 When prophecy shall fail, the people shall be scattered abroad: but he that keepeth the law, is blessed.

19 A slave will not be corrected by words: because he understandeth what thou sayest, and will not answer.

20 Hast thou seen a man hasty to speak? folly is rather to be looked for, than his amendment.

21 He that nourisheth his servant delicately from his childhood, afterwards shall find him stubborn.

22 A passionate man provoketh quarrels: and he that is easily stirred up to wrath, shall be more prone to sin.

23 ^aHumiliation followeth the proud: and glory shall uphold the humble of spirit.

24 He that is partaker with a thief, hateth his own soul: he heareth one putting him to his oath, and discovereth not.

25 He that feareth man shall quickly fall: he that trusteth in the Lord, shall be set on high.

26 Many seek the face of the prince: but the judgment of every one cometh forth from the Lord.

27 The just abhor a wicked man: and the wicked loath them that are in the right way.

VER. 13. Enlightener. Sept. "visitor," with punishment, as they seem to speak of palliated usury, which cannot escape God. See C. xxii. 2.

VER. 18. Prophecy, by the urim, or by the mouth of prophets, who were in great power and estimation. 3 K. i. 24. and xii. 28. and 2 Par. xxv. 6. and xxviii. 8. C.—Sept. "There shall be none to explain the law to the impious nation." H.—When pastors are wanting, all goes to ruin. 1 Cor. xi. 4. V. Bede. C.

VER. 20. Amendment. S. Jerom (ad Evag.) says, after Thucydides: "Ignorance produces confidence, and learning fear."

VER. 24. Soul, and exposeth himself to death, though this was only inflicted for stealing a man. Ex. xxi. 16. The night-thief might also be killed in the fact. Ex. xxii. 2. But if the person who had stolen denied it on oath, he was put to death for perjury. Lev. v. 1.

VER. 25. Fall. Human respects will not long preserve him from sin. C.—Sept. have a double version: "Those who fear and are ashamed of men, shall be thrown down. But he who confideth in the Lord, shall rejoice. Impiety overturneth man, while he who trusteth in the Lord shall be saved." Grabe. H.

CHAP. XXX. VER. 1. Gatherer, &c. or, as it is in the Latin, Congregans, the son of Vemena. The Latin interpreter has given us in this place the significa-

The son that keepeth the word, shall be free from destruction.

CHAP. XXX.

The wise man thinketh humbly of himself. His prayer, and sentiments upon certain virtues and vices.

THE words of Gatherer, the son of Vomiter. The vision which the man spoke, with whom God is, and who being strengthened by God, abiding with him, said:

2 I am the most foolish of men, and the wisdom of men is not with me.

3 I have not learned wisdom, and have not known the science of saints.

4 Who hath ascended up into heaven, and descended? who hath held the wind in his hands? who hath bound up the waters together as in a garment? who hath raised up all the borders of the earth? what is his name, and what is the name of his son, if thou knowest?

5 Every word of God is fire-tried: he is a buckler to them that hope in him.

6 Add not any thing to his words, lest thou be re-proved and found a liar:

7 Two things I have asked of thee, deny them not to me before I die.

8 Remove far from me vanity, and lying words. Give me neither beggary, nor riches: give me only the necessities of life:

9 Lest perhaps being filled, I should be tempted to deny, and say: Who is the Lord? or being compelled by poverty, I should steal, and forswear the name of my God.

10 Accuse not a servant to his master, lest he curse thee, and thou fall.

11 There is a generation that curseth their father, and doth not bless their mother.

12 A generation, that are pure in their own eyes, and yet are not washed from their filthiness.

tion of the Hebrew names, instead of the names themselves, which are in the Hebrew, Agur, the son of Jakeh. But whether this Agur be the same person as Solomon, as many think, or a different person, whose doctrine was adopted by Solomon, and inserted among his parables or proverbs, is uncertain. Ch.—Vomiter may denote David, who delivered many excellent canticles; Eruclavit cor, Ps. xlv. De Dieu translates, "The words of him who is recollected the son of obedience." The author styles himself foolish, and asks for neither beggary nor riches, (v. 2, 3.) which seems not to agree with Solomon; though there can be no doubt but this chapter is inspired. C.—In effect, that great king might form this petition, being mindful of the instability of human greatness, and confess that of himself he was foolish.—Vision. Heb. massa (H.) generally implies something disagreeable, but here it is put for a collection of moral sentences.—With, &c. Heb. also, "to Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal," (Prot. H.) friends of Agur, (C.) or his children, (M.) or rather Solomon speaks to all the faithful. We never find Agur mentioned as a canonical writer; and if he were, he would have been placed after Solomon. W.

VER. 2. With me. He speaks of what he could claim of his own, abstracting from the prophetic light. C.—In his humility, he supposeth that others are more perfect. The wisest know best their own defects. W.

VER. 4. Descended. How then could I acquire such a sublime science? Deut. xxx. 11. C.—Christ alone could impart it, (Jo. iii. 13. H.) who is the perfect wisdom. W.—Hands. Sept. "breast." H.—It is no less difficult to fathom the designs of Providence. Some understand the "spirit" of prophecy to be here meant.—Son. Sept. "children." But many Greek copies, and all the interpreters, have Son, which the Fathers explain of the second person of the blessed Trinity, specified C. viii. 22. C.

VER. 5. Is fire-tried; that is, most pure, like gold purified by fire. Ch. Ps. xvii. 31. Jer. xxiii. 29.—It cannot deceive.

VER. 6. Add not any thing contrary. Deut. iv. 2. and xii. 32.—Liar. Our Saviour condemned the false explanations of the Pharisees, as his Church does those of all heretics.

VER. 8. Words, which are so opposite to thine. v. 5.—Riches. The former often prompts men to deceive, the latter to grow proud and forget God.

13 A generation, whose eyes are lofty, and their eye-lids lifted up on high.

14 A generation that for teeth hath swords, and grindeth with their jaw-teeth, to devour the needy from off the earth, and the poor from among men.

15 The horse-leech hath two daughters that say. Bring, bring.

There are three things that never are satisfied, and the fourth never saith: It is enough.

16 Hell and the mouth of the womb, and the earth which is not satisfied with water: and the fire never saith: It is enough.

17 The eye that mocketh at his father, and that despiseth the labour of his mother in bearing him, let the ravens of the brooks pick it out, and the young eagles eat it.

18 Three things are hard to me, and the fourth I am utterly ignorant of.

19 The way of an eagle in the air, the way of a serpent upon a rock, the way of a ship in the midst of the sea, and the way of a man in youth.

20 Such also is the way of an adulterous woman, who eateth and wipeth her mouth, and saith: I have done no evil.

21 By three things the earth is disturbed, and the fourth it cannot bear.

22 By a slave when he reigneth: by a fool when he is filled with meat:

23 By an odious woman when she is married: and by a bond-woman when she is heir to her mistress.

24 There are four very little things of the earth, and they are wiser than the wise.

25 The ants, a feeble people, which provide themselves food in the harvest:

26 The rabbit, a weak people, which maketh its bed in the rock:

27 The locust hath no king, yet they all go out by their bands:

b Deut. iv. 2. and xii. 32.

VER. 10. Accuse. Sept. "deliver not" to an idolater. Deut. xxiii. 15. Rabins.—Servant. Add not to his affliction. W.—We must suppose that the accusation is frivolous or false. Lyran.—A servant may do a person much injury: but this ought not to deter the other from performing what justice and charity require.

VER. 15. The horse-leech: concupiscence, which hath two daughters that are never satisfied, viz. lust and avarice. Ch.

VER. 16. Womb. Sept. "the love of a woman," (H.) a harlot, or rather Heb. "a barren woman."—Enough. The more fuel, the brighter the flame. These four similitudes may denote cruelty, lust, avarice, and prodigality; (C.) or the first and last may be understood (H.) of envy and ambition. W.

VER. 17. Labour. Sept. &c. "old age." Heb. "the obedience or admonition." Those who cursed their parents, were sentenced to death. Lev. xx. 6.

VER. 19. Youth. Heb. "a virgin." The "conception of a mighty man (the Messiah. H.) in a virgin," is fitly compared to the flight of an eagle in the air, which leaves no trace behind, and is the most difficult to comprehend. See Jer. xxxi. 22. Univ. Hist. iii. p. 144, note. Ia. vii. 14. Parkhurst in alm. H.—Some of the Jews have admitted this explanation. A. Lap.—Others understand that the marks of virginity are equivocal; (Bossuet, &c.) or, if we stick to the Vulg. and Sept. the difference betwixt a child and a young man is extremely great, and almost incomprehensible. C.—Young people who follow their carnal appetite, can no more give an account of their actions than of the course of an eagle, &c. W.—His wanderings are manifold. The Heb. seems to contain a prophecy of Christ's conception.

VER. 23. Mistress, and is married to her master. She will generally prove insolent; like slaves on the throne, Regnabit sanguine multo ad regnum quisquis venit ab exilio. Suet. Tib. 59. C.

VER. 27. Bands, like an army. When one rises or falls, all do the like. They are so numerous in the East, as to darken the sun and spread destruction. Joel i. and ii. C.

VER. 28. The stellio. A kind of house lizard, marked with spots like stars, from whence it has its name. Ch.—Heb. sennamith. H.—It probably provides 28 The stellio supporteth itself on hands, and dwelleth in kings' houses.

29 There are three things, which go well, and the fourth that walketh happily:

30 A lion, the strongest of beasts, who hath no fear of any thing he meeteth:

31 A cock girded about the loins: and a ram: and a king, whom none can resist.

32 There is that hath appeared a fool after he was lifted up on high: for if he had understood, he would have laid his hand upon his mouth.

33 And he that strongly squeezeth the paps to bring out milk, straineth out butter: and he that violently bloweth his nose, bringeth out blood: and he that provoketh wrath, bringeth forth strife.

CHAP. XXXI.

An exhortation to chastity, temperance, and works of mercy; with the praise of a wise woman.

THE words of king Lamuel. The vision wherewith his mother instructed him.

2 What, O my beloved, what, O the beloved of my womb, what, O the beloved of my vows?

3 Give not thy substance to women, and thy riches to destroy kings.

4 Give not to kings, O Lamuel, give not wine to kings: because there is no secret where drunkenness reigneth:

5 And lest they drink and forget judgments, and pervert the cause of the children of the poor.

6 Give strong drink to them that are sad, and wine to them that are grieved in mind:

7 Let them drink, and forget their want, and remember their sorrow no more.

8 Open thy mouth for the dumb, and for the causes of all the children that pass.

food against the stormy season, like ants. Bochart. C.—Others understand "the spider," (Kinchi) or "monkey." Vat. &c.

VER. 30. Meeleth. If he retreat, he looks back with disdain, till the woods conceal the turpitude of his flight. Pliny viii. 16.

VER. 31. Loins. It rules, and is even terrible to lions. Pliny x. 21.—The terms of the original are found nowhere else, and some understand the horse, the bee, and a soldier in arms. C.—Whom. Heb. "and Alkum with him." Mont.—But we know no animal or king of this name; and it may imply, "in the midst of his court," or "assembly." Chal. Some Latin copies read, Et Rex, nec est qui resistat ei, (Sext. V.) which is more conformable to the Heb. (C.) and is here translated, though the Vulg. read, Nec est rex qui, &c. These four emblems (H.) denote fortitude, chastity, order, and justice.

VER. 32. Mouth. Fools ought not to govern. W.—Many might have been deemed wise, if they had continued in a lower station. C.—Heb. "If thou hast acted foolishly in raising thyself, and if thou hast entertained evil thoughts, put thy hand to thy mouth." H.—Chal. "put not thy," &c. Give not way to pride, or to insolent language. C.

VER. 33. And. Heb. "For he who presseth milk." C.—Prot. "Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter," &c. H.—Strife. Moderation is necessary, (C.) in all actions. W.

CHAP. XXXI. VER. 1. Lamuel. This name signifies, God with him; and is supposed to be one of the names of Solomon. Ch.—Grotius would explain it of Ezechias. But why should we abandon the tradition of both Jews and Christians?—Mother; Bethsabee, who it seems was inspired, unless she received these maxims from Nathan. Solomon always speaks of her with the utmost respect, as a prudent mother may have the greatest influence over the tender minds of her children. C. i. 8. and xxiii. 25.

VER. 2. Vnos. She seems unable to express her concern for him when he first mounted the throne, and shewed her the greatest reverence. 3 K. ii. 19.

VER. 3. Women. This would destroy thy health, and tend to impoverish the kingdom.—Kings, by injustice and ambition. C.

VER. 4. Give. Sept. "Do all with counsel. By advice drink wine. Lords are inclined to anger; let them not drink wine." H.—Solomon took this advice. Eccl. ii. 3.

VER. 5. Poor. Solon condemned to death, at Athens, the prince who should get drunk; and the Areopagites excluded from their assembly a judge who had dined in a tavern. Laert. i. Athen. xiii. 2.

VER. 6. Drink. Heb. shecar, particularly palm-wine.—Are sad. Heb. "perish," being sentenced to die; (Mark xv. 28. Amos ii. 8.) or, who grieve and mourn for 9 Open thy mouth, decree that which is just, and do justice to the needy and poor.

10 Who shall find a valiant woman? far, and from the uttermost coasts is the price of her.

11 The heart of her husband trusteth in her, and he shall have no need of spoils.

12 She will render him good, and not evil all the days of her life.

13 She hath sought wool and flax, and hath wrought by the counsel of her hands.

14 She is like the merchant's ship, she bringeth her bread from afar.

15 And she hath risen in the night, and given a prey to her household, and victuals to her maidens.

16 She hath considered a field, and bought it: with the fruit of her hands she hath planted a vineyard.

17 She hath girded her loins with strength, and hath strengthened her arm.

18 She hath tasted, and seen that her traffic is good: her lamp shall not be put out in the night.

19 She hath put out her hand to strong things, and her fingers have taken hold of the spindle.

20 She hath opened her hand to the needy, and stretched out her hands to the poor.

21 She shall not fear for her house in the cold of snow: for all her domestics are clothed with double garments.

22 She hath made for herself clothing of tapestry: fine linen, and purple, is her covering.

23 Her husband is honourable in the gates, when he sitteth among the senators of the land.

24 She made fine linen, and sold it, and delivered a girdle to the Chanaanite.

25 Strength and beauty are her clothing, and she shall laugh in the latter day.

one deceased. On such occasions no food was prepared in the house, but the friends supplied what was necessary, and went to eat and drink with the afflicted. Eccl. vii. 3.

VER. 7. Mora. Not that intoxication is permitted even to them.

VER. 8. Pass through life, or the country. C.—Sept. "Open thy mouth and judge righteously. Render justice to the poor and weak." H.—Doctrine is best received by those who are more ready to hear than to speak. W.

VER. 10. Who. The following verses are in alphabetical order. They contain a grand eulogy of Bethsabee, who repented, or of a perfect matron. C.—Such are rare, though they may be found. W.—Valiant; industrious.—Price. Formerly people bought their wives. C.—Is. Heb. "is far above rubies (Prot. H.) or pearls." Lam. iv. 7.

VER. 11. Spoils, taken in war. His wife will supply all necessities. v. 21.

VER. 13. Hands, with skill and industry, (C.) or "willingness." Heb. M.—Ladies of the highest quality formerly employed themselves in this manner, like Penelope. Alexander, Augustus, and Charlemagne wore garments, which their sisters or wives had wrought. Curt. 5. Suet. 64. Eginhard.

VER. 14. Bread; all that is used for meat and drink. Sept. "riches." Grabe, "livelihood." Bdv. H.

VER. 15. Night, or early in the morning, as soon as the night was over; de nocte. Heb. "while it is yet night." H.—Extreme vigilance is required of those who direct others. "The master must be first up, and last in bed." Cato v.

VER. 16. Considered. This conduct is suggested by prudence. C.—Cato (Rust. 2.) says, "Do not go only once round the field," &c.

VER. 17. Arm; working, and making others obey.

VER. 18. Night, during a great part of which she will work.

VER. 19. Strong things, "becoming" (Sept.) her station. C.—Spindle. She purposes and begins well, trusting in God for perfection and a reward. W.

VER. 21. Domestics. Heb. "house is clothed in purple," which may be understood of the domestics, though it seems more probably to refer to her husband and children.

VER. 22. Tapestry, for the beds and floor.—Linen, or cotton; byssus. Ex. xxv. 4.

VER. 23. Gates. Chal. "provinces." The rich were chosen for judges. C.

VER. 24. The Chanaanite, the merchant; for Chanaanite, in Hebrew, signifies a merchant. Ch.—The Phoenicians travelled into all countries. Traffic was not then deemed a discredit, even to kings.—Girdles were worn both by men and women, and were very costly, inasmuch that (C.) the kings of Persia assigned cities to furnish their wives with them. Athen. i. in Antylla.—They who practise and teach the law may be said to buy and sell. W.

26 She hath opened her mouth to wisdom, and the law of clemency is on her tongue.

27 She hath looked well on the paths of her house, and hath not eaten her bread idle.

28 Her children rose up, and called her blessed: her husband, and he praised her.

VER. 25. Clothing: it is very beautiful, or wisdom and virtue surround her. —Day. She fears not death, (C.) or future distress of hunger, &c. Jans.

VER. 26. Tongue. She is ever bent on doing good. H.—Very different from many of her sex, who are taken up with vanity and complaints. C.

VER. 27. Idle, out of a sense of duty, and not through avarice.

VER. 28. Her. They were best able to judge of her merit.

VER. 30. Lord. Hitherto natural qualifications appear: but to these the Christian matron must add sincere piety: and thus Solomon completes the character of his mother, (C.) who had given him such excellent instructions, or of any 29 Many daughters have gathered together riches thou hast surpassed them all.

accomplished woman. Outward beauty soon (H.) decays; but the fear of God is more deserving of praise. W.

VER. 31. Gates, before all the judges (H.) and people. M.—Good works shall be rewarded at God's tribunal, (W.) when the vain worldly beauty shall be covered with confusion. H.—This idea of a perfect woman is best verified in the Catholic Church, (S. Aug. Ven. Bede) though the blessed Virgin, &c. may also be designated. W.—The use of the alphabet herein denotes, that we must begin with a moral good life, if we would penetrate the greater mysteries of the Scriptures. S. Jerom. Lam.

ECCLESIASTES.

THIS Book is called Ecclesiastes, or the preacher, (in Hebrew, Cohoeleth) because in it Solomon, as an excellent preacher, setteth forth the vanity of the things of this world, to withdraw the hearts and affections of men from such empty toys. Ch.—Cohoeleth is a feminine noun, to indicate the elegance of the discourse. It is very difficult to discriminate the objections of free-thinkers from the real sentiments of the author. It is most generally supposed that Solomon wrote this after his repentance; but this is very uncertain. S. Jerom (in C. xii. 12.) informs us that the collectors of the sacred books had some scruple about admitting this; and Luther speaks of it with great disrespect: (Coll. conviv.) but the Church has always maintained its authority. See Conc. v. Act. 4. Philast. 132. C.—It refutes the false notions of worldlings, concerning felicity; and shews that it consists in the service of God and fruition. W.

CHAP. I.

The vanity of all temporal things.

THE words of Ecclesiastes, the son of David, king of Jerusalem.

2 Vanity of vanities, said Ecclesiastes, vanity of vanities, and all is vanity.

3 What hath a man more of all his labour, that he taketh under the sun?

4 One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh: but the earth standeth for ever.

5 The sun riseth and goeth down, and returneth to his place: and there rising again,

6 Maketh his round by the South, and turneth again to the North: the spirit goeth forward, surveying all places round about, and returneth to his circuits.

7 All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea doth not overflow: unto the place from whence the rivers come, they return to flow again.

8 All things are hard: man cannot explain them by word. The eye is not filled with seeing, neither is the ear filled with hearing.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Jerusalem. This clearly designates Solomon. See v. 12. C. xii. 8.

VER. 2. Vanities. Most vain and despicable, (C.) and frustrating the expectations of men. M.—S. Aug. reads vanitatum, and infers that this vanity of sublunary things is an effect of man's sin. Yet he afterwards discovered that he had read incorrectly. Ret. i. 7.

VER. 3. Labour. People fight for a mere point; for such is the earth compared with the universe. Sen. q. Nat. Hoc est punctum, &c. Matt. xvi. 26.

VER. 4. Ever. Its substance remains, though the form be changed. C.—At the end of time, it will be purified to continue for ever. W.

VER. 5. Place daily. Its annual motion is then mentioned. C.

VER. 6. Spirit. The sun, (S. Jer.) which is like the soul of the world, and which some have falsely asserted to be animated; or rather (C.) the wind is meant, as one rises in different parts of the world when another falls. Pliny ii. 27. M.

VER. 7. Again. The sea furnishes vapours, &c. Homer (Il. 6) expresses himself in the same manner.

VER. 8. Hearing. In all sciences there are many difficulties. If a man had arrived at perfect knowledge, his researches would cease.

VER. 10. New. Such vicissitudes have occurred before, though we must not infer that the world is eternal; or that there have been many others before this,

9 What is it that hath been? the same thing that shall be. What is it that hath been done? the same that shall be done.

10 Nothing under the sun is new, neither is any man able to say: Behold, this is new: for it hath already gone before, in the ages that were before us.

11 There is no remembrance of former things: nor indeed of those things which hereafter are to come, shall there be any remembrance with them that shall be in the latter end.

12 I, Ecclesiastes, was king over Israel, in Jerusalem.

13 And I proposed in my mind to seek and search out wisely concerning all things that are done under the sun. This painful occupation hath God given to the children of men, to be exercised therein.

14 I have seen all things that are done under the sun, and behold all is vanity, and vexation of spirit.

15 The perverse are hard to be corrected, and the number of fools is infinite.

16 I have spoken in my heart, saying: Behold, I am become great, and have gone beyond all in wis-as Origen would suppose. Prin. iii. 5. &c. C.—Men's souls, which are created daily, are nevertheless of the same sort as Adam's was; and creatures proceed from others of the same species, which have been from the beginning. S. Tho. p. 1. q. 73. W.—Natural and moral things continue much the same. M.

VER. 11. Things. Otherwise we should read of similar events to those which we behold. The same cause naturally produces the same effect.

VER. 12. Israel. This was the case with none of Solomon's descendants. C.

VER. 14. Vexation. Heb. also, "food of wind;" (Sym.) or "choice of the spirit." Sept. People are eager to become learned, and yet find no satisfaction. H.—All natural things are insufficient to procure felicity. W.

O Curas hominum! O quantum est in rebus inane! Persius.

VER. 15. Perverse. Habitual and obstinate sinners. C.—Fools, who follow the broad road. H.—Heb. and Sept. "the defect cannot be numbered." We know not to what a height the soul of man might have risen, if he had continued faithful.

VER. 16. Learned. Solomon was blessed both with a natural genius, which he improved by study, and also he had the gift of supernatural wisdom. Yet he declares that all is vanity and pain.

VER. 17. Errors. Sept. "parables and science." But to discern the mistakes of men is a part of wisdom, (C.) and Grabe substitutes "wandering," in (820) dom, that were before me in Jerusalem: and my mind hath contemplated many things wisely, and I have learned.

17 And I have given my heart to know prudence, and learning, and errors, and folly: and I have perceived that in these also there was labour, and vexation of spirit,

18 Because in much wisdom there is much indignation: and he that addeth knowledge, addeth also labour.

CHAP. II.

The vanity of pleasures, riches, and worldly labours.

I SAID in my heart: I will go, and abound with delights, and enjoy good things. And I saw that this also was vanity.

2 Laughter I counted error: and to mirth I said: Why art thou vainly deceived?

3 I thought in my heart, to withdraw my flesh from wine, that I might turn my mind to wisdom, and might avoid folly, till I might see what was profitable for the children of men: and what they ought to do under the sun, all the days of their life.

4 I made me great works, I built me houses, and planted vineyards.

5 I made gardens, and orchards, and set them with trees of all kinds.

6 And I made me ponds of water, to water therewith the wood of the young trees.

7 I got me men-servants, and maid-servants, and had a great family: and herds of oxen, and great flocks of sheep, above all that were before me in Jerusalem:

8 *I heaped together for myself silver and gold, and the wealth of kings, and provinces: I made me singing men, and singing women, and the delights of the sons of men, cups and vessels to serve to pour out wine:

9 And I surpassed in riches all that were before me in Jerusalem: my wisdom also remained with me.

stead of "parables," after Theodot. as Heb. calluth (H.) means "errors," (C.) or "follies." Mont.

VER. 18. Labour. He is bound to do more for heaven, as he is convinced of his own defects, and of the strict judgments of God. Wisdom is not true happiness, but the means to obtain it. W.—The more a person knows, the more he is convinced of his own ignorance, (C.) and filled with grief, that wisdom should be so much concealed. S. Jer.—Those who are learned, feel indignant that their disciples should be so dull. M.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Delights. He speaks in the name of libertines, (S. Greg. Dial. iv. 4.) or after his conversion. C.—The worldling might object that since wisdom affords not content, it is best to try pleasure. But this meets not with the approbation of the wise, as all terrestrial joy is short, and can yield no more than a passing consolation. W.

VER. 2. Why. Heb. "What doth that?" Sept. "Why dost thou so?" Immoderate laughter is a sign of folly. Eccli. xxi. 23. C.—"Even spiritual joy is a temptation." S. Jer.

VER. 3. Wine, and to lead a temperate life. C.—Prot. "to give myself unto wine, (yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom) and to lay hold on folly," &c. H.—I wished to indulge myself in pleasure, yet so as not to lose the reputation of wisdom. C. v. 9. H.

VER. 4. Works; palaces, towns, and particularly the temple. Many, like Solomon, will refrain from wine, and still yield to other excesses.

VER. 5. Orchards. Heb. "paradises," in which fruit-trees were planted. C.

VER. 7. Family of slaves, "born in my house," (Prot.) distinct from those whom I got for money. H.—They were generally procured from foreign nations, as the Hebrews obtained their liberty on the sabbatic year.—Sheep. David had the like; but Solomon had also horses. 8 K. x. 21.

VER. 8. Silver, which became, in consequence, of little value.—Singing. At the court of Persia, people sung all night, and during the feasts. Athen. xii. and 14.—Cups and vessels; (Aq. and Syn.) or, "men and women to," &c. Sept. or "a field and fields;" (C.) or Prot. "as musical instruments and that of all sorts." Heb. shidda beshiddoth. H.

10 And whatsoever my eyes desired, I refused them not: and I withheld not my heart from enjoying every pleasure, and delighting itself in the things which I had prepared: and esteemed this my portion, to make use of my own labour.

11 And when I turned myself to all the works which my hands had wrought, and to the labours wherein I had laboured in vain, I saw in all things vanity, and vexation of mind, and that nothing was lasting under the sun.

12 I passed further to behold wisdom, and errors, and folly, (What is man, said I, that he can follow the king, his maker?)

13 And I saw that wisdom excelled folly, as much as light differeth from darkness.

14 *The eyes of a wise man are in his head: the fool walketh in darkness: and I learned that they were to die both alike.

15 And I said in my heart: If the death of the fool and mine shall be one, what doth it avail me, that I have applied myself more to the study of wisdom? And speaking with my own mind, I perceived that this also was vanity.

16 For there shall be no remembrance of the wise no more than of the fool for ever, and the times to come shall cover all things together with oblivion: the learned dieth in like manner as the unlearned.

17 And, therefore, I was weary of my life, when I saw that all things under the sun are evil, and all vanity, and vexation of spirit.

18 Again I hated all my application, wherewith I had earnestly laboured under the sun, being like to have an heir after me, 19 Whom I know not whether he will be a wise man or a fool, and he shall have rule over all my labours with which I have laboured and been solicitous: and is there any thing so vain?

20 Wherefore I left off, and my heart renounced labouring any more under the sun.

* Prov. xvii. 24. Infra viii. 1.

VER. 9. Wisdom, not that which was supernatural, and could not be found amid such delights. v. 3. Jam. iii. 17. I knew that all this was vanity. C.

Video meliora proboque,

Deteriora sequor.—Ovid. H.

VER. 10. Labour. Heb. "and this was my portion of all my labour." I perceived that I could not thus obtain content. C.—"Thou (O God) hast made us for thyself, and our hearts are restless till they repose in thee." S. Aug. Conf. i. 1. M.—Aurelius makes the same confession as Solomon, respecting the insatiable nature of his own heart, and the emptiness of pleasure, &c.

VER. 12. What. Heb. "For what man shall come after the king?" Sept. "after counsel" Many other versions may be given of this obscure text. Solomon stopt at human wisdom, without consulting the divine; or he asks who shall have greater facility to acquire knowledge than himself, or equal his works? C.—Man's wisdom compared with God's is contemptible; though it be preferable to folly. M.

VER. 14. Darkness and ignorance. He knows not whither he is going. Prov. iv. 19. and xvii. 24. Wisdom is to be preferred before wealth, &c. C.—Consideration directs a person to do good.—Alike. Thus worldlings speak, who reflect not on the life to come. W.—In many respects all resemble one another though their sentence be very different. M.

VER. 15. Vanity. This inference was false, (v. 16.) or my labouring for wisdom was to no purpose. C.—Sept. "I then spoke more in my heart, (for the fool speaks out of his abundance) since this also is vanity." H.

VER. 16. Unlearned. He answers, (Jans.) or rather continues the objections. Geier. C.

VER. 17. Life. Heb. "I hated life," as all is attended with anxiety. Rom. vii. 24.

VER. 19. Solicitous. We naturally desire to have our plans perfected. Solomon had, perhaps, a presentiment of Roboam's misconduct. Eccli. xlvii. 27.

VER. 20. Off, in a sort of despair; suggested by worldly wisdom. Religion alone can impart steady principles. C.—Prot. "I went about, to cause my heart to despair of all the labour which I took under the sun;" in the transactions of the world. H.

21 For when a man laboureth in wisdom, and knowledge, and carefulness, he leaveth what he hath gotten to an idle man: so this also is vanity, and a great evil.

22 For what profit shall a man have of all his labour, and vexation of spirit, with which he hath been tormented under the sun?

23 All his days are full of sorrows and miseries, even in the night he doth not rest in mind: and is not this vanity?

24 Is it not better to eat and drink, and to shew his soul good things of his labours? and this is from the hand of God.

25 Who shall so feast and abound with delights as I?

26 God hath given to a man that is good in his sight, wisdom and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he hath given vexation, and superfluous care, to heap up and to gather together, and to give it to him that hath pleased God: but this also is vanity, and a fruitless solicitude of the mind.

CHAP. III.

All human things are liable to perpetual changes. We are to rest on God's providence, and cast away fruitless cares.

ALL things have their season, and in their times all things pass under heaven.

2 A time to be born, and a time to die. A time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted.

3 A time to kill, and a time to heal. A time to destroy, and a time to build.

4 A time to weep, and a time to laugh. A time to mourn, and a time to dance.

5 A time to scatter stones, and a time to gather. A time to embrace, and a time to be far from embraces.

6 A time to get, and a time to lose. A time to keep, and a time to cast away.

7 A time to rend, and a time to sew. A time to keep silence, and a time to speak.

8 A time of love, and a time of hatred. A time of war, and a time of peace.

9 What hath man more of his labour?

10 I have seen the trouble, which God hath given the sons of men, to be exercised in it.

11 He hath made all things good in their time, and hath delivered the world to their consideration, so that

VER. 21. Wisdom. The writings of the wise are often perverted by perverse heretics. S. Jer.—Idle heirs dissipate the possessions, which had been accumulated with such industry. C.—Riches tend to encourage the profligacy of the heir. M.

VER. 24. Drink, using with moderation the things which we have acquired, rather than to be solicitous for more, (W.) which may fall into the hands of an idle heir, who is appointed by God, v. 26. This may also be the plea of libertines, (C.) who would use freely what he has given. S. Aug. con. Jul. iv. 3.

VER. 26. Pleased God, though he may not be his relation. Prov. xxvi. 16. Job xiii. 22. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Heaven, in this world, where alone things change. S. Jer.—Nothing is here perpetual, but to be used in a proper manner. W.—The heart must not be attached to any thing created. C.—Pleasure had been condemned and approved. C. 2. He shews that all must have its time. M.

VER. 5. Stones, with a sling, or to render a field useless. 4 K. iii. 25. Is. v. 2. —Embraces. Continence was sometimes prescribed to married people. Lev. xx. 18. and 1 Cor. vii. S. Jer. S. Aug. Ench. 78. C.—Hatred often succeeds love. v. 8. and 2 K. xiii. 14. H.

VER. 9. Labour? What advantage does he derive from any of these things? C. i. 8. C.

VER. 11. Consideration. Lit. "dispute." Heb. and Sept. "heart." H.—Pagn. "He has implanted the desire of immortality in their hearts."—End. If we could discover the properties of each thing, we should be in raptures; (C.) but as we cannot, this increases our vexation. M.

VER. 12. Well; virtuously: or, perhaps, as literally, to enjoy himself. v. 13. C.—Thus thinks the man of pleasure. Is. xxii. 31. S. Jer.

man cannot find out the work which God hath made from the beginning to the end.

12 And I have known that there was no better thing than to rejoice, and to do well in this life.

13 For every man that eateth and drinketh, and seeth good of his labour, this is the gift of God.

14 I have learned that all the works which God hath made, continue for ever: we cannot add any thing, nor take away from those things which God hath made, that he may be feared.

15 That which hath been made, the same continueth: the things that shall be, have already been: and God restoreth that which is past.

16 I saw under the sun in the place of judgment, wickedness, and in the place of justice, iniquity.

17 And I said in my heart: God shall judge both the just and the wicked, and then shall be the time of every thing.

18 I said in my heart concerning the sons of men, that God would prove them, and shew them to be like beasts.

19 Therefore the death of man, and of beasts is one, and the condition of them both is equal: as man dieth, so they also die: all things breathe alike, and man hath nothing more than beast: all things are subject to vanity,

20 And all things go to one place: of earth they were made, and into earth they return together.

21 Who knoweth if the spirit of the children of Adam ascend upward, and if the spirit of the beasts descend downward?

22 And I have found that nothing is better than for a man to rejoice in his work, and that this is his portion. For who shall bring him to know the things that shall be after him?

CHAP. IV.

Other instances of human miseries.

ITURNED myself to other things, and I saw the oppressions that are done under the sun, and the tears of the innocent, and they had no comforter: and they were not able to resist their violence, being destitute of help from any.

2 And I praised the dead rather than the living:

VER. 13. God. He gives peace and plenty; and still more the grace to use these things, so as to obtain heaven. C.

VER. 14. Feared. The order of the seasons, &c. teaches men to adore Providence. S. Jer.—He has arranged every thing, how mutable soever. S. Aug. Conf. i. 6.

VER. 15. Past. He causes plants to spring forth afresh. Heb. Sept. &c. "But will God seek after the oppressed?" Here commences another objection. C.

VER. 17. And then. Prot. "for there is a time there (v. 1.) for every purpose, and for every work." At the day of judgment all will receive their due. H.

VER. 18. Beasts. Another doubt; or suggestion of infidels. S. Greg. Dial. iv. 4.

VER. 19. Man hath nothing more, &c. viz. as to the life of the body. Ch.

VER. 21. Who knoweth, &c. viz. experimentally; since no one in this life can see a spirit. But as to the spirit of the beasts, which is merely animal, and becomes extinct by the death of the beast, who can tell the manner it acts so as to give life and motion, and by death to descend downward, that is, to be no more? Ch.—Few are able to prove that the soul of man is immortal rather than that of beasts, since the bodies of both are subject to the like inconveniences. The objection is answered C. xii. 7. C.—The difficulty of answering is intimated by "Who?" &c. Ps. xiv. 1. M.

VER. 22. After him. He knows not who shall be his heir, or how soon he may die. None returns from the other world to inform him of what is there transacted. Thus the libertine encourages himself. C.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Any. God suffereth the innocent to be oppressed for a time, that they may merit a greater reward. Ps. lxxii.

3 And I judged him happier than them both, that is not yet born, nor hath seen the evils that are done under the sun.

4 Again I considered all the labours of men, and I remarked that their industries are exposed to the envy of their neighbour: so in this also there is vanity, and fruitless care.

5 The fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh, saying:

6 Better is a handful with rest, than both hands full with labour, and vexation of mind.

7 Considering I found also another vanity under the sun:

8 There is but one, and he hath not a second, no child, no brother, and yet he ceaseth not to labour, neither are his eyes satisfied with riches, neither doth he reflect, saying: For whom do I labour, and defraud my soul of good things? In this also is vanity, and a grievous vexation.

9 It is better, therefore, that two should be together, than one: for they have the advantage of their society:

10 If one fall, he shall be supported by the other: woe to him that is alone, for when he falleth, he hath none to lift him up.

11 And if two lie together, they shall warm one another: how shall one alone be warmed?

12 And if a man prevail against one, two shall withstand him: a threefold cord is not easily broken.

13 Better is a child that is poor and wise, than a king that is old and foolish, who knoweth not to foresee for hereafter.

14 Because out of prison and chains sometimes a man cometh forth to a kingdom: and another born king is consumed with poverty.

15 I saw all men living, that walk under the sun with the second young man, who shall rise up in his place.

VER. 3. Born. It is better to have no existence than to be in eternal misery. Matt. xxvi. 24. But the affliction of the just procureth glory for them. W.—The pagan sages observed, that it was “best for mortals not to be born; and if they were, to die very soon.” Chalcid. and Theognis.—But they considered only temporal inconveniences. Religion has in view the danger of sin, and the desire of eternal happiness. Rom. vii. 24.

VER. 4. Industries, or Heb. “righteous actions.” If one be poor, he is in distress; if rich, he is exposed to envy; so that all is vanity. C.

VER. 6. Flesh, which he will not labour to sustain; (H.) or he repines at his own past misconduct, and at the affluence of others.

VER. 6. Mind. These are the words of the slothful, (C.) or of truth. H. Prov. xvii. 1.—The indolent will not observe moderation in the application of this sentence. M.

VER. 8. Things? He acts as if he were to live for ever, or feared to be starved.

VER. 9. Therefore is not in Heb. &c. The miser had better have some society. It is advantageous; though to refrain from its comforts, out of piety, is not blamed. The solitary must be “an angel or a devil.” C.—Society. Besides the advantages of friendship, this implies that a person must have Jesus Christ with him, that he may rise from sin and death by his assistance. S. Jer. W.

VER. 10. Fall into sickness, poverty, or sin. The saints have withdrawn people from the dangers of the world into monasteries, where they may fight together against the devil.

VER. 12. Cord. True charity increaseth in strength as it does in number, (S. Jer. W.) though friendship may not admit of more than two persons. H.—Some explain this triple cord of the blessed Trinity, or of the three monastic vows, the theological virtues, or parts of penance, &c.

VER. 13. Foolish. Great wisdom and prudence is required of kings; who, like others, are exposed to many vicissitudes.

VER. 14. Prison. The exaltation of Joseph, Mardochei, and Daniel, was remarkable. C.—Si fortuna volet, fies de Rhetore Consul. Juv. Sat. vii.

VER. 15. Second heir. M.—“They adore the rising (Papinius) more than the setting sun; (Plut. Pomp.) and a person is no sooner on the throne than his successor begins to be courted: (v. 16.) so inconstant are mortals! C.

VER. 16. In him. Many are perfectly unacquainted with the king, who finds 16 The number of the people, of all that were before him, is infinite: and they that shall come afterwards, shall not rejoice in him: but this also is vanity, and vexation of spirit.

17 Keep thy foot, when thou goest into the house of God, and draw nigh to hear. *For much better is obedience, than the victims of fools, who know not what evil they do.

CHAP. V.

Caution in words. Vows are to be paid. Riches are often pernicious: the moderate use of them is the gift of God.

SPEAK not any thing rashly, and let not thy heart be hasty to utter a word before God. For God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few.

2 Dreams follow many cares: and in many words shall be found folly.

3 If thou hast vowed any thing to God, defer not to pay it: for an unfaithful and foolish promise displeaseth him: but whatsoever thou hast vowed, pay it:

4 And it is much better not to vow, than after a vow not to perform the things promised.

5 Give not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin: and say not before the angel, There is no providence; lest God be angry at thy words, and destroy all the works of thy hands.

6 Where there are many dreams, there are many vanities, and words without number: but do thou fear God.

7 If thou shalt see the oppressions of the poor, and violent judgments, and justice perverted in the province, wonder not at this matter: for he that is high hath another higher, and there are others still higher than these.

8 Moreover, there is the king that reigneth over all the land subject to him.

* 1 Kings xv. 22. Osee vi.

so many admirers about his person, and even of these the greatest part begin to be presently disgusted, and wish for another change.

VER. 17. Keep. Here many begin the fifth chap. as Solomon alters his style, and gives many important instructions. C.—For. Heb. “rather than that fools should offer sacrifice, since they know not that they are doing wrong.” Mont.—Do not imitate hypocrites, (H.) who have the appearance of sanctity, while they despise God’s orders. Jer. vii. 2. C.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Few. As none can arrive at the perfect knowledge of God, they should be reserved in speaking of Him. W.—De Deo etiam vera loqui periculosum. Cic. de Nat.—In prayer (C.) we must not pretend to give him any information, like the heathens. Matt. vi. 7. H.

VER. 2. Folly. Under anxiety a person is naturally disturbed with dreams, in which some true ideas may present themselves; in like manner, as a great talker will say some things respecting God, which may not be reprehensible, though the greatest part of his discourse will be nothing to the purpose. This is another abuse. All must speak of God and religion, though few are able to do it, with propriety! C.

VER. 3. Pay it. Deut. xxiii. Vows must be fulfilled. W.—God requires that we should keep the commandments; (Lu. x. 28.) and if we engage ourselves to perform some work of supererogation, he expects that we should be faithful. To vow is of counsel; but to comply with it is of precept. An abuse too common among the Jews is here condemned. C.

VER. 5. Sin by making a vow, above thy strength, (Chal. Pineda) or by speaking what may excite the passions. Thaum. Boss.—Angel guardian assigned to each one, (W.) or the priest, who took cognizance of vows. C.—Providence, or “foresight” in me to avoid the evil. Heb. and Sept. “it is an error,” (H.) or sin of ignorance, for which certain victims were specified. Lev. v. 4. The neglect of vows could not be thus expiated. C.—Use no allurements to lust. M.

VER. 6. Number. Those who observe dreams, are filled with apprehension. The Jews were very subject to this superstition. C.—As dreams are vain, so are many words or excuses to evade a vow. Jun. Grot.—Such pretences must not be made. S. Jer. M.

VER. 7. These. God will bring the wicked to judgment, (C.) and shew for what design he left them in power. H.

VER. 8. Him. An appeal may be made to the king or to God. Rages in

9 A covetous man shall not be satisfied with money: and he that loveth riches, shall reap no fruit from them: so this also is vanity.

10 Where there are great riches, there are also many to eat them. And what doth it profit the owner, but that he seeth the riches with his eyes?

11 Sleep is sweet to the labouring man, whether he eat little or much: but the fulness of the rich will not suffer him to sleep.

12 *There is also another grievous evil which I have seen under the sun: riches kept to the hurt of the owner.

13 For they are lost with very great affliction: he hath begotten a son, who shall be in extremity of want.

14 ^bAs he came forth naked from his mother's womb, so shall he return, and shall take nothing away with him of his labour.

15 A most deplorable evil: as he came, so shall he return. What then doth it profit him that he hath laboured for the wind?

16 All the days of his life he eateth in darkness, and in many cares, and in misery, and sorrow.

17 This, therefore, hath seemed good to me, that a man should eat and drink, and enjoy the fruit of his labour, wherewith he hath laboured under the sun, all the days of his life, which God hath given him: and this is his portion.

18 And every man to whom God hath given riches, and substance, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to enjoy his portion, and to rejoice of his labour: this is the gift of God.

19 For he shall not much remember the days of his life, because God entertaineth his heart with delight.

CHAP. VI.

The misery of the covetous man.

THERE is also another evil, which I have seen under the sun, and that frequent among men:

2 A man to whom God hath given riches, and substance, and honour, and his soul wanteth nothing of all that he desireth: yet God doth not give him power to eat thereof, but a stranger shall eat it up. This is vanity, and a great misery.

ipson imperium est Jovis. Hor. iii. ode 1.—Heb. "the king serves, (Mont.) or is served by the field." Prot. H.—All have a mutual dependence on each other, and thus the vanity of men and the order of Providence appear. C.

VER. 9. Money. Avarice is like a dropsy, (C.) or poison, infecting all the person. Sallust.—The miser is the slave, and not the possessor, of his riches, (S. Chrys.) like Tantalus, who could not drink, though in the midst of waters.

Hor. i. Sat. 1.—Nescis quo valeat nummus, quem præbeat usum.

VER. 10. Them. He shews the vanity of the great.

VER. 11. Sleep. Is not the health and content of the poor to be preferred?

VER. 12. Owner. When they are taken away, they bring greater sorrow, (C.) and even when present, they fill the mind with anxiety. H.

VER. 13. Affliction. Heb. "by an evil affair," or accident. C.—Who. Heb. "and there is nothing in his hand." H.—As temporal riches prove detrimental to their owners, so do false philosophy and heresy to those who follow them. S. Jer. W.

VER. 14. Labour. All must die in this manner. But it is most afflicting that he was formerly rich, and must leave his son indigent. C.

VER. 16. Sorrow. The person whose riches have been taken away, had made a bad use of them, (H.) living like a miser. It would be more rational to indulge in the pleasures which they afford, though this is also vain. C. iii. 14.

VER. 19. Delight, while he observes due moderation. His life passes away sweetly. C.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. Thereof. "Di tibi divitias dederunt artemque fruendi." Hor. i. Ep. 4.—The proper use of riches is rare. C.—Misery. Riches do not make people happy. W.

VER. 3. Than he, since the latter has injured no one, nor experienced any evil in the world, (C.) by his own fault; (M.) whereas the miser has both hurt

3 If a man beget a hundred children, and live many years, and attain to a great age, and his soul make no use of the goods of his substance, and he be without burial: of this man I pronounce, that the untimely born is better than he.

4 For he came in vain, and goeth to darkness, and his name shall be wholly forgotten.

5 He hath not seen the sun, nor known the distance of good and evil:

6 Although he lived two thousand years, and hath not enjoyed good things: do not all make haste to one place?

7 All the labour of man is for his mouth: but his soul shall not be filled.

8 What hath the wise man more than the fool? and what the poor man, but to go thither, where there is life?

9 Better it is to see what thou mayst desire, than to desire that which thou canst not know. But this also is vanity, and presumption of spirit.

10 *He that shall be, his name is already called: and it is known that he is man, and cannot contend in judgment with him that is stronger than himself.

11 There are many words that have much vanity in disputing.

CHAP. VII.

Prescriptions against worldly vanities: mortification, patience, and seeking wisdom.

WHAT needeth a man to seek things that are above him, whereas he knoweth not, what is profitable for him in his life, in all the days of his pilgrimage, and the time that passeth like a shadow? Or who can tell him what shall be after him under the sun?

2 *A good name is better than precious ointments: and the day of death than the day of one's birth.

3 It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to the house of feasting: for in that we are put in mind of the end of all, and the living thinketh what is to come.

4 Anger is better than laughter: because by the sadness of the countenance the mind of the offender is corrected.

* 1 Kings xlii. 14. and 8 Kings xlii. 2.—^a Prov. xxii. 1.

himself and others, and has neglected to make himself friends of the mammon of iniquity.

VER. 4. He. The infant, though some explain it of the miser. C.

VER. 7. Mouth. We are always providing food. S. Jer.—The rich are wholly bent on pleasure; or the poor cannot get a sufficiency.

VER. 8. Life. The wise poor shall be blessed. Heb. "the poor knowing how to walk before the living," (H.) in society (C.) among the saints. H.

VER. 9. Know. Enjoyment has the advantage over hope. Heb. "better is the sight of the eyes than the going of the soul," which denotes her desires. C.—Presumption. Heb. " vexation." H.

VER. 10. He, &c. This is plainly spoken of Christ, whose name was given before he was born; (S. Jer. W.) or men resemble each other in all ages, (C. i. 9. C.) being proud, fragile, &c.

VER. 11. Disputing. Are we better acquainted with nature than former ages? This is another subject of confusion. C.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Above him. We are intent on things which regard us not, while we neglect the important concerns of heaven. Heb. may be joined with the preceding. C.—Prot. (11) "seeing there are many things which increase vanity, what is man the better? (12) for who knoweth?" &c. H.—Some strive to obtain riches or honours, which will prove fatal to them. C.—None can perfectly know the nature of things either present or future. W.

VER. 2. Name. "It is necessary for the sake of others," (S. Aug. de B. Vid. xxii.) particularly for those who have to direct souls. S. Greg. in Ezecl. C.—In this second part is shewn that felicity is procured by a good life. W.—Death. Speaking of the just, for death is the beginning of sorrows to the wicked. C.—Some nations mourned on the birth-day of their children. Val. Max. ii. 6. Eurip. in Ctes.

5 The heart of the wise is where there is mourning, and the heart of fools where there is mirth.

6 It is better to be rebuked by a wise man, than to be deceived with the flattery of fools.

7 For as the crackling of thorns burning under a pot, so is the laughter of a fool: now this also is vanity.

8 Oppression troubleth the wise, and shall destroy the strength of his heart.

9 Better is the end of a speech than the beginning. Better is the patient man than the presumptuous.

10 Be not quickly angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of a fool.

11 Say not: What thinkest thou is the cause that former times were better than they are now? for this manner of question is foolish.

12 Wisdom with riches is more profitable, and bringeth more advantage to them that see the sun.

13 For as wisdom is a defence, so money is a defence: but learning and wisdom excel in this, that they give life to him that possesseth them.

14 Consider the works of God, that no man can correct whom he hath despised.

15 In the good day enjoy good things, and beware beforehand of the evil day: for God hath made both the one and the other, that man may not find against him any just complaint.

16 These things also I saw in the days of my vanity: A just man perisheth in his justice, and a wicked man liveth a long time in his wickedness.

17 Be not over just: and be not more wise than is necessary, lest thou become stupid.

18 Be not overmuch wicked: and be not foolish, lest thou die before thy time.

19 It is good that thou shouldst hold up the just, yea, and from him withdraw not thy hand: for he that feareth God, neglecteth nothing.

20 Wisdom hath strengthened the wise more than ten princes of the city.

21 For there is no just man upon earth, that doth good, and sinneth not.

22 But do not apply thy heart to all words that are spoken: lest, perhaps, thou hear thy servant reviling thee.

23 For thy conscience knoweth, that thou also hast often spoken evil of others.

24 I have tried all things in wisdom. I have said: I will be wise: and it departed farther from me,

25 Much more than it was: it is a great depth; who shall find it out?

26 I have surveyed all things with my mind, to know, and consider, and seek out wisdom, and reason: and to know the wickedness of the fool, and the error of the imprudent:

27 And I have found a woman more bitter than death, who is the hunter's snare, and her heart is a net, and her hands are bands. He that pleaseth God shall escape from her; but he that is a sinner shall be caught by her.

28 Lo, this have I found, said Ecclesiastes, weighing one thing after another, that I might find out the account, 29 Which yet my soul seeketh, and I have not found it. One man among a thousand I have found, a woman among them all I have not found.

30 Only this I have found, that God made man right, and he hath entangled himself with an infinity of questions. Who is as the wise man? and who hath known the resolution of the word?

VER 3. Come. While at birth-day feasts (Gen. xl. 20. Matt. xiv. 6.) people give themselves up to joy, and cherish the idea of living long. C.

VER 4. Anger. That is, correction, or just wrath and zeal against evil, (Ch.) is preferable to a misguided complaisance. Prov. xxvii. 6. C.—Anger, when rightly used, helps us to correct our faults. W.

VER 5. Mourning. They submit willingly to correction, (S. Jer.) or think seriously on the dangers of sin and God's judgments.

VER 6. Wise man. Much prudence is requisite to correct with fruit, and to persuade the sinner that he is under a mistake. C.

VER 7. Laughter. It is loud and soon over. Eccli. xxi. 23. Lu. xxvi. 5. C.

VER 8. Oppression. Lit. "calumny." The most perfect can hardly bear it. Heb. "oppression (or calumny of others. C.) will make the wise insane, and a present will ruin the heart." Mont.—Avarice blinds us. H.—Deut. xvi. 19. "a corrupt judge examines ill the truth."

VER 9. Speech. Heb. "thing." The best projects often are seen to fail.—Beginning, as the auditor is no longer kept in suspense.—Presumptuous. Rashness must not be confounded with courage. C.—Hasty and immoderate anger is hurtful. W.

VER 10. Bosom, as in its proper place. The wise may feel its impressions, but he immediately makes resistance.

VER 11. Foolish. Men endeavour to excuse themselves by the manners of the age. But there have always been both good and evil. C. i. 10. C.—Corruption was prevalent in former times as well as now. M.

VER 12. With. Heb. also, "above, or much as riches." C.—These are impediments in the hands of the reprobate, while they promote virtue in the good." S. Amb. Lu. viii. n. 85.—The man who has only wisdom, cannot do as much good as those who are also rich. C.—The moderate use of riches helps the servants of God, while they do not set their hearts upon them. VER 13. Them. Money may procure necessities for the body; (H.) but wisdom gives a long and happy life. Prov. iv. 10. Bar. iii. 28. C.

VER 14. Despised. God never neglects first. Trid. Ses. vi. 11.—He detests sin, and at last abandons the obstinate, though he never fails to offer sufficient graces. A person who is of an unhealthy constitution, or involved in sin, cannot be cured by man alone. Yet we must not cease to preach, &c. while we expect all from God, who gives the increase. 1 Cor. iii. 7.

VER 15. Complaint. Prosperity and adversity succeed each other, that we may be neither elated nor dejected too much. S. Bern. ep. xxxvi.—If we enjoy the advantages of nature, we must be thankful; if we feel pain, we must cheerfully submit to God's will. H.

VER 16. Vanity, during this miserable life.—Wickedness. This seemed more incongruous under the old law, when long life was promised to the just, (C. Pa. lxxii. 3. Ex. xx. 12.) though it chiefly regarded heaven. H.

VER 17. Over just, viz. By an excessive rigour in censuring the ways of God in bearing with the wicked. Ch.—Give not way to scruples, (S. Bern.) nor to self-conceit. Alcuin.—Become. Heb. "perish," being oppressed with majesty. Lorin. T. C.

VER 18. Overmuch. No sin can be tolerated. C.—But as all offend in many things, (v. 21. H.) they are encouraged to rise again with diligence and sorrow.

VER 23. Thy. We must be satisfied with a good conscience, as we cannot control the thoughts and words of all. S. Amb. Of. i. 1.

VER 24. Me. This is a proof of having made great progress in wisdom, since the half-learned are the most presumptuous. C.

VER 25. Much. Prot. "that which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out?" H.

VER 26. Reason. Of all things. In this natural wisdom consists. Sept. "and number." He examined the pretensions of philosophy, which attempted thus to predict future events; but found that it was all deceit, like a harlot. Olympiod.—He explored the qualities of different things, as an arithmetician counts numbers. M.

VER 27. Her. He speaks by experience, (S. Jer.) as none perhaps ever fell more terribly victims of impure love. C.—Though a plurality of wives was then permitted, Solomon did wrong in marrying strangers; and in suffering himself to be deluded by them, so as to erect temples to their respective idols. H.—All the attractions of women are replete with danger, and can only be overcome by God's grace, and by flight. 1 Cor. iv. 8. Prov. vii. 22. and xxii. 14. C.

CHAP. VIII.

True wisdom is to observe God's commandments. The ways of God are unsearchable.

THE wisdom of a man shineth in his countenance, and the most mighty will change his face.

2 I observe the mouth of the king, and the commandments of the oath of God.

3 Be not hasty to depart from his face, and do not continue in an evil work: for he will do all that pleaseth him:

4 And his word is full of power: neither can any man say to him: Why dost thou so?

5 He that keepeth the commandment, shall find no evil. The heart of a wise man understandeth time and answer.

6 There is a time and opportunity for every business, and great affliction for man:

7 Because he is ignorant of things past, and things to come he cannot know by any messenger.

8 It is not in man's power to stop the spirit, neither hath he power in the day of death, neither is he suffered to rest when war is at hand, neither shall wickedness save the wicked.

9 All these things I have considered, and applied my heart to all the works that are done under the sun. Sometimes one man ruleth over another to his own hurt.

10 I saw the wicked buried: who also, when they were yet living, were in the holy place, and were praised in the city as men of just works: but this also is vanity.

11 For, because sentence is not speedily pronounced against the evil, the children of men commit evils without any fear.

12 But though a sinner do evil a hundred times, and by patience be borne withal, I know from thence men, (S. Jer.) and there is none who may not prove fatal to those who are off their guard. C.—Yet some are doubtless innocent, like the blessed Virgin. H.

* Supra ii. 14.

VER. 30. Right. He fell by his own free-will. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xiv. 11. W.—The great corruption of the world is not, therefore, to be attributed to God. Eph. iv. 23. Our first parents were led by curiosity to examine whether the fruit was good, &c. (S. Cyr. Cat. ii. Chal. Boss.) or mankind, in general, make useless enquiries.—And he. Heb. and Sept. "they," &c. C.—Of the word. That is, of this obscure and difficult matter (Ch.) if this sentence have any connection with the preceding. It is placed at the head of the next chap. in Heb. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Most. Sept. "he whose face is impudent, shall be hated." The truly wise and virtuous man is always polite and affable. C.—As we may form a probable conjecture of a person's disposition from his countenance, so we may judge of men's virtue by their actions. They are right and meritorious when the intention is good, (W.) and the works themselves blameless.

VER. 2. I. Prot. add, counsel thee, to keep, &c. "Obey the king and God." H. 1 Pet. ii. 17.—Solomon proposes his own example, or speaks in the name of the just.—God. The law of Moses, confirmed with an oath, or the engagement to be faithful to the king. 2 K. v. 3. 1 Par. xxix. 24.

VER. 3. Face. This courtiers observe, while many Christians neglect God.—Work. Defend not what has been said or done amiss.

VER. 4. So? The eastern kings rule with absolute sway. Prov. xvi. 14.

VER. 5. Answer. Heb. "judgment." He knows when to reprove even kings with effect; like Nathan, Elias, or S. Ambrose. 2 K. xii. 1. and 3 K. xviii. 17.

VER. 6. Man. Solomon often reminds him of his misery. Sept. and Theod. "man is possessed of much knowledge," as they read dahik for rahik. C.

VER. 7. Past. Prot. and Sept. "that shall be." H.

VER. 8. Spirit from leaving the body, or the wind from blowing. There is no quarter given by death; so the wicked cannot escape vengeance.

VER. 9. Hurt. Those who are despised in elevated situations, might have been happy in obscurity.

VER. 10. Works. In life and death hypocrites are mixed with the unjust; and this excites indignation.

VER. 11. Fear. Thus they abuse the patience of God, and grow worse, because he is good. His time will come. Apoc. xvi. 15. Eccl. v. 4. 2 Pet. iii. 10.

VER. 12. Face. If God shew such clemency to the wicked, will he disregard his servants? Greek interpreters have read in a different meaning. C.—Sept.

that it shall be well with them that fear God, who dread his face.

13 But let it not be well with the wicked, neither let his days be prolonged, but as a shadow let them pass away that fear not the face of the Lord.

14 There is also another vanity, which is done upon the earth. There are just men to whom evils happen, as though they had done the works of the wicked: and there are wicked men, who are as secure, as though they had the deeds of the just: but this also I judge most vain.

15 Therefore I commended mirth, because there was no good for a man under the sun, but to eat, and drink, and be merry: and that he should take nothing else with him of his labour in the days of his life, which God hath given him under the sun.

16 And I applied my heart to know wisdom, and to understand the distraction that is upon earth: for there are some that day and night take no sleep with their eyes.

17 And I understood that man can find no reason of all those works of God that are done under the sun: and the more he shall labour to seek, so much the less shall he find: yea, though the wise man shall say, that he knoweth it, he shall not be able to find it.

CHAP. IX.

Man knows not certainly that he is in God's grace. After death, no more work or merit.

ALL these things have I considered in my heart, that I might carefully understand them: There are just men and wise men, and their works are in the hand of God: and yet man knoweth not whether he be worthy of love, or hatred:

2 But all things are kept uncertain for the time to come, because all things equally happen to the just and to the wicked, to the good and to the evil, to the clean and to the unclean, to him that offereth victims,

"the sinner has done evil from that time, and for a long while," (T.) &c. See S. Jer. H.

VER. 13. Let. Or, Heb. "it shall not," &c. Prot. H.—Faith evinces that the wicked will be punished.—But. Heb. "like a shadow." Sept. "under the shade," in prosperity.

VER. 14. Vain, or afflicting. Hence some have denied Providence. S. Jer. xii. 1. C.

VER. 15. No good for a man, &c. Some commentators think the wise man here speaks in the person of the libertine, representing the objections of these men against divine Providence, and the inferences they draw from thence, which he takes care afterwards to refute. But it may also be said, that his meaning is to commend the moderate use of the goods of this world, preferably to the cares and solicitudes of worldlings, their attachment to vanity and curiosity, and presumptuously diving into the unsearchable ways of divine providence. Ch. C. ii. 24. and iii. 12. Eccl. xv. C.—Felicity is not attached to temporal prosperity, nor are the afflicted always miserable. W.

VER. 16. Distraction of politicians, (Grot.) and of all human affairs.

VER. 17. Reason. We know in general that God does all for his own glory, and for the welfare of his elect. But we cannot account for his treatment of mankind in particular cases. Rom. xi. 33. S. Jer. C.—Say. Sept. "speak what thing soever, that he may know he," &c. H.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Of God. He seems to treat both alike, so that the just themselves cannot say whether their sufferings be a punishment or a trial. S. Jer. C.—Knoweth not certainly, and in an ordinary manner. W.—Hatred. Heb. and Sept. "yet love and hatred man knoweth not." H.—Prosperity or adversity proves nothing. C.—Mortals cannot tell whether their afflictions tend to their greater improvement, like Job's, or they are in punishment of sin, like those of Pharaoh, and of the Egyptians. This they shall know after death. W.—Yet the wicked know already that they are displeasing to God. Salméron in 2 Cor. xii. "The just and . . . their works are in the hand of God, even love and hatred; men know not," &c. Dieu. Amama.

VER. 2. But. Heb. joins this with the preceding not, "by all that is before them. All things come alike to all, there is one event to," &c. Prot. H.—The pagans distinguished real goods and evils from those which were only apparent, like prosperity and adversity, which are determined only by the good or bad use. S. Jer.—Thus religion looks upon virtue and vice in the former light; and and to him that despiseth sacrifices. As the good is, so also is the sinner: as the perjured, so he also that sweareth truth.

3 This is a very great evil among all things that are done under the sun, that the same things happen to all men: whereby also the hearts of the children of men are filled with evil, and with contempt while they live, and afterwards they shall be brought down to hell.

4 There is no man that liveth always, or that hopeth for this: a living dog is better than a dead lion.

5 For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know nothing more, neither have they a reward any more: for the memory of them is forgotten.

6 Their love also, and their hatred, and their envy, are all perished, neither have they any part in this world, and in the work that is done under the sun.

7 Go then, and eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with gladness: because thy works please God.

8 At all times let thy garments be white, and let not oil depart from thy head.

9 Live joyfully with the wife whom thou lovest, all the days of thy unsteady life, which are given to thee under the sun, all the time of thy vanity: for this is thy portion in life, and in thy labour wherewith thou labourest under the sun.

10 Whatsoever thy hand is able to do, do it earnestly: for neither work, nor reason, nor wisdom, nor knowledge, shall be in hell, whither thou art hastening.

11 I turned me to another thing, and I saw that under the sun, the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, nor bread to the wise, nor riches to the learned, nor favour to the skilful: but time and chance in all.

12 Man knoweth not his own end: but as fishes are taken with the hook, and as birds are caught with the snare, so men are taken in the evil time, when it shall suddenly come upon them.

13 This wisdom also I have seen under the sun, and it seemed to me to be very great:

14 A little city, and few men in it: there came against it a great king, and invested it, and built bulwarks round about it, and the siege was perfect.

15 Now there was found in it a man poor and wise, and he delivered the city by his wisdom, and no man afterward remembered that poor man.

16 And I said that wisdom is better than strength: how then is the wisdom of the poor man slighted, and his words not heard?

17 The words of the wise are heard in silence, more than the cry of a prince among fools.

18 "Better is wisdom than weapons of war: and he that shall offend in one, shall lose many good things."

CHAP. X.

Observations on wisdom and folly; ambition and detraction.

DYING flies spoil the sweetness of the ointment. Wisdom and glory is more precious than a small and short-lived folly.

2 The heart of a wise man is in his right hand, and the heart of a fool is in his left hand.

3 Yea, and the fool, when he walketh in the way, whereas he himself is a fool, esteemeth all men fools.

4 If the spirit of him that hath power, ascend upon thee, leave not thy place: because care will make the greatest sins to cease.

5 There is an evil that I have seen under the sun, as it were by an error proceeding from the face of the prince:

6 A fool set in high dignity, and the rich sitting beneath.

* Supra vii. 20.

riches, poverty, &c. in the latter. It may be difficult to decide, whether, under adversity, the just have supported themselves better by virtue, or the wicked by vanity. God will manifest the truth. C.—Perjured. Heb. and Sept. "swearer, so he that fears an oath." H.

VER. 3. Evil. People hence take occasion to indulge in vice, (C. viii. 14.) though the conduct of God be irreproachable. C.—Shall. Heb. "they go to the dead." H.—Many think that these are the sentiments of the impious.

VER. 4. There. Even those who have had the vanity to claim divine honours, never could persuade themselves that they would escape death. But the just forms a different conclusion from the wicked. He looks upon his life only as a preparation for the other, (Heb. xi. 13. Eph. ii. 19.) while libertines make haste to enjoy the fleeting pleasure. Ia. xxii. 13. To the former death seems desirable, (C. iv. 2. and vi. 3.) to the latter it is a subject of consternation; and he prefers the vilest creature living, to the most noble when dead. C.—Heb. "for whosoever is chosen (yebuchar. Marg. yechubar, "is united") to all the living, has hope; for a," &c. H.—Moderns generally follow the marginal reading of the Masorets. C.—"For who shall live for ever?" Sym. "Who partakes with all the living? There is hope." Sept. H.—During life alone the sinner may amend. C. ii. 3. The Gentiles are preferred before the Jews. W.

VER. 5. Know nothing more, viz. As to the transactions of this world, in which they have now no part, unless it be revealed to them; neither have they any knowledge or power now of doing any thing to secure their eternal state, (if they have not taken care of it in their lifetime) nor can they now procure themselves any good, as the living always may do, by the grace of God. Ch.

VER. 7. God. Be grateful to him, and make a good use of his benefits, S. Jer. c. p. 2.) or these are the words of libertines. Boss. S. Jer. l. explicat. C.

VER. 8. White. As in times of joy, and among people of quality. C. x. 17. Prov. xxxi. 23.—Head. Our Saviour reproaches the Pharisees for neglecting this. Lu. vii. 45.

VER. 9. Wife. Some translate, "the woman," or harlot; as if the wicked still spoke.

VER. 10. Earnestly. Live in delights, or perform many good works. C. ii. 5. Our Lord seems to allude to this passage. What thou dost, do quickly. Jo. xiii. 27.

VER. 11. All. Thus it appears to the inattentive, and to the wicked. For Solomon frequently inculcates that Providence directs all wisely. Human industry is not always attended with success. Deut. xxix. 19. This is a fresh proof of the vanity of all things. C.

VER. 12. With. Heb. adds, "evil." Net, (Mont.) or hook. H.—Them. (836)

They may use precautions; but, without God's aid, they will not succeed. Pa. cxxvi. 1. C.

VER. 14. And the siege, &c. Heb. has only "great bulwarks over or against it." H.

VER. 15. Afterward, is not in Heb. The poor man was unnoticed before. C.—Vulg. insinuates that he met with no return of gratitude, which is but too common; (H.) and this shews the vanity of the world.

VER. 16. Heard? Eccl. xiii. 28. Men are so unjust as to despise wisdom, if it be in a poor man. The prudence of an individual has often saved cities, as was the case at Abela, and Bethulia; (2 K. xx. 22. C.) and Syracuse was defended a long time by Archimedes against the whole Roman army. Plut. in Marcel.

VER. 17. Fools. Though the wise often meet with contempt, it is only among fools, who form the majority. C.—Vain declaimers in the Church shew their own folly, as well as that of their hearers. S. Jer.

VER. 18. Things. A woman saved Abela; and Achan almost ruined Israel. Want of prudence in a general is often fatal. Virtues are connected, as well as vices. C.—For one transgression, many acts of virtue are lost. S. Jer.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Ointment. A fly cannot live in it. Pliny xi. 19.—Hence the smallest faults must be avoided, (C.) and superfluous cares, (S. Greg.) as well as the conversation of the wicked, (Thaumat.) particularly of heretics. S. Aug. con. Fulg. 14.—Detractors may be compared to flies: they seek corruption, &c. A little leaven corrupteth the whole lump. 1 Cor. v. 6. C.—The wicked infect their companions, and vice destroys all former virtues. W.—Wisdom, or "a small . . . folly is more precious than wisdom," &c. of the world. 1 Cor. i. 25. and iii. 18. Dulce est desipere in loco. Hor. iv. ode 12.—Heb. "folly spoils things more precious than wisdom." A small fault is often attended with the worst consequences, (C. ix. 18.) as David and Roboam experienced. 2 K. xxiv. and 3 K. xii. 14. C.—Sept. "a little wisdom is to be honoured above the great glory of foolishness." Prot. "dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking flavour; so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour." H.

VER. 2. Hand, to do well or ill. Deut. i. 39. Jon. iv. 11. Chal.

VER. 3. Fools. People judge others by themselves. C.—Thus Nero could not believe that any were chaste. Suet.

VER. 4. Place. If the devil tempt or persuade thee to sin, repent and humble thyself; or if thou hast offended the great, shew submission.

VER. 5. Prince, who seems to have been guilty of any indiscretion.

VER. 6. Rich. Such were chosen magistrates. Ex. xviii. 21. Prov. xxviii. 16. and xxx. 21.

7 I have seen servants upon horses: and princes walking on the ground as servants.

8 He that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it: and he that breaketh a hedge, a serpent shall bite him.

9 He that removeth stones, shall be hurt by them: and he that cutteth trees, shall be wounded by them.

10 If the iron be blunt, and be not as before, but be made blunt, with much labour it shall be sharpened: and after industry shall follow wisdom.

11 If a serpent bite in silence: he is nothing better than backbiteth secretly.

12 The words of the mouth of a wise man are grace: but the lips of a fool shall throw him down headlong.

13 The beginning of his words is folly, and the end of his talk is a mischievous error.

14 A fool multiplieth words. A man cannot tell what hath been before him: and what shall be after him, who can tell him?

15 The labour of fools shall afflict them that know not how to go to the city.

16 Woe to thee, O land, when thy king is a child, and when thy princes eat in the morning.

17 Blessed is the land whose king is noble, and whose princes eat in due season for refreshment, and not for riotousness.

18 By slothfulness a building shall be brought down, and through the weakness of hands the house shall drop through.

* Prov. xxvi. 27. Eccl. xxvii. 29.

VER. 8. Him. Those who disturb the state or the Church, shall be in danger.

VER. 9. Stones. Landmarks or walls. Prov. xxii. 18.—Them. God will punish his injustice, in meddling with another's property.

VER. 10. Made blunt. After being repeatedly sharpened, (C.) it will be more difficult to cut with it, and will expose the person to hurt himself, v. 9. II.—Man, since original sin, is in a similar condition.—Wisdom. The wise perform great things even with bad tools. Heb. "wisdom is the best directress." C.

VER. 11. Silence. Prot. "without enchantment, and a babbler is no better." II.—But he compares the detractor to a serpent, (C.) as he infuses the poison into all who pay attention to him. S. Jer. S. Bern.

VER. 12. Grace. Pleasing and instructive. C.

VER. 14. Tell him. How foolish, therefore, is it to speak about every thing!

VER. 15. City. Being so stupid, that they know not, or will not take the pains to find what is most obvious. C.—Thus the pagan philosophers knew all but what they ought to have known; (S. Jer.) and many such wise worldlings never strive to discover the paths which lead to the city of eternal peace: like him who contemplated the stars, and fell into a ditch. C.

VER. 16. When thy. Heb. lit. "whose," cujus, as v. 17. H.—S. Jerom gives two senses to this passage, the literal and the mystical, according to his usual custom. The dominion of young men and of luxurious judges is reproved, as well as innovations in matters of religion. Is. iii. 4. Those are blessed who have Christ for their head, descending from the patriarchs and saints, (over whom sin ruled not, and who of course were free) and from the blessed Virgin, who was "more free." They have the apostles for princes, who sought not the pleasures of this world, but will be rewarded, in due time, and eat without confusion. T. 7. —Child. Minorities often prove dangerous to the state, while regents cannot agree.—Morning, as children eat at all times. This may relate to the ruler who is a child in age, or in knowledge, though it seems rather to refer to his counsellors. Is. v. 11.

VER. 17. Noble. Royal extraction, (Εὐθλὴν γένεσθαι. Eurip. Hec.) and education, afford many advantages which others, who raise themselves to the throne, do not enjoy. Heb. "the son of those in white," (C.) or "of heroes." Mont.—Eurim, (H.) or Chorim seems to have given rise to the word Hero. The advantages of birth only make the defects of degenerate children more observable. C.—Heroun filii noxa. "The sons of heroes are a nuisance," (H.) was an ancient proverb.—Season. The time was not fixed; but it was deemed a mark of intemperance to eat before noon, when judges ought to have decided causes. Dan. siii. 7. Acts ii. 15.

VER. 18. Through. If we neglect our own, or others' souls, (H.) in the administration of Church, (S. Jer.) or state, all will go to ruin.

VER. 19. Feast. As if they were born for this purpose, (Phil. iii. 19. C.) fructus consumere nati. Hor. i. ep. 2.—Money.—

Scilicet uxorem cum dote fidemque et amicos,

Et genus, et formam regina pecunia donet.—Hor. i. ep. 6.

—Heb. "money answers all purposes," (H.) to procure meat, drink, &c. C.

19 For laughter they make bread, and wine, that the living may feast: and all things obey money.

20 Detract not the king, no not in thy thought; and speak not evil of the rich man in thy private chamber: because even the birds of the air will carry thy voice, and he that hath wings will tell what thou hast said.

CHAP. XI.

Exhortation to works of mercy, while we have time, to diligence in good, and to the remembrance of death and judgment.

CAST thy bread upon the running waters: for after a long time thou shalt find it again.

2 Give a portion to seven, and also to eight: for thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth.

3 If the clouds be full, they will pour out rain upon the earth. If the tree fall to the south, or to the north, in what place soever it shall fall, there shall it be.

4 He that observeth the wind, shall not sow: and he that considereth the clouds, shall never reap.

5 As thou knowest not what is the way of the spirit, nor how the bones are joined together in the womb of her that is with child: so thou knowest not the works of God, who is the maker of all.

6 In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening let not thy hand cease: for thou knowest not which may rather spring up, this or that: and if both together, it shall be the better.

7 The light is sweet, and it is delightful for the eyes to see the sun.

8 If a man live many years, and have rejoiced in

VER. 20. Said. Pigeons are taught to carry letters in the east, and Solomon alludes to this custom, or he makes use of this hyperbole to shew, that kings will discover the most secret inclinations by means of spies. We must not speak ill even of those who are worthy of blame. v. 16. C.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. Waters. Sow thy seed where it may produce a good crop. C.—Be charitable to all! Lu. vi. 30. Indiscrete facinorandum bene. S. Jer.—Assist those in distress, (C.) even though they may be ungrateful, or unable to make a return. Lu. xiv. 12. T.—In this third part we are exhorted to serve God with perseverance. Of all virtues, the works of mercy avail most. Matt. xxv. W.

VER. 2. Eight. To as many as thou art able, (C.) especially to those who are of the household of faith, (Gal. vi. 10. H.) whether under the old or the new Testament, signified by the numbers, seven and eight. W. S. Jer.—Mandatum accipis octo illis partem dare, fortasse benedictionibus, (S. Amb. in Lu. vi. n. 49.) which intimates, that we must apply ourselves to the pursuit of all virtues, as the number eight denotes perfection. C.

VER. 3. If the tree fall, &c. The state of the soul is unchangeable, when once she comes to heaven or hell; and the soul that departs this life in the state of grace, shall never fall from grace; as on the other side, a soul that dies out of the state of grace, shall never come to it. But this does not exclude a place of temporal punishments for such souls as die in the state of grace: yet not so as to be entirely pure; and therefore they shall be saved, indeed, yet so as by fire. 1 Cor. iii. 13. 14. 15. Ch.—After death, none can merit. W.—He who shall not have cultivated his field, (the soul) shall after this life experience the fire of purgation, or eternal punishment." S. Aug. de Gen. con. Man. ii. 20. H.—The souls in purgatory have their names inscribed in heaven, like the ancient saints, who were detained in the bosom of Abraham. C.—They fall, therefore, to the south. Let people dispense their alms to all, as the clouds rain upon the just and unjust, (H.) upon the cultivated and the barren land, and let them do it before death. They know not how soon it may lay them low. C.—By looking at the branches of a tree, we may conclude which way it will fall; so we may form a judgment of our future state, by reflecting on our present dispositions. "Our branches are our desires, by which we stretch ourselves to the south, if they be spiritual," &c. S. Bern. ser. xlix. The liberal are not concerned where they bestow charity. People will gather up the fruit both on the north and south, and they who have given alms will find them (Abenezra; Mercer.) laid up in the heavenly tabernacles. H.—This agrees with the sequel. C.

VER. 4. Reap. Those who are too circumspect in their alms-deeds, will often pass over such as stand in need, (S. Jer.) and people who reflect on the difficulties of a virtuous life, will never begin. S. Greg. iii. Past. xvi. and Mor. xxvii. 5.

VER. 5. Spirit. In a man, or of the wind. Why then wouldst thou judge of the merit of thy petitioner? or pretend to determine why God has made thee rich and him poor?

VER. 6. Better. Be kind to all during life. Gal. vi. 10. C.—Do good, both in youth and in old age, (W.) lest, if thou shouldst grow remiss, all would be lost. S. Jer.

them all, he must remember the darksome time, and the many days: which when they shall come, the things past shall be accused of vanity.

9 Rejoice, therefore, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart be in that which is good in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the sight of thy eyes: and know that for all these God will bring thee into judgment.

10 Remove anger from thy heart, and put away evil from thy flesh. For youth and pleasure are vain.

CHAP. XII.

The Creator is to be remembered in the days of our youth: all worldly things are vain: we should fear God, and keep his commandments.

REMEMBER thy Creator in the days of thy youth, before the time of affliction come, and the years draw nigh, of which thou shalt say: They please me not:

2 Before the sun, and the light, and the moon, and the stars be darkened, and the clouds return after the rain:

3 When the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall stagger, and the grinders shall be idle in a small number, and they that look through the holes shall be darkened:

4 And they shall shut the doors in the street, when the grinder's voice shall be low, and they shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of music shall grow deaf.

VER. 8. And the. Heb. "for they are many. What comes to pass is vanity." Mont.—Nothing can more effectually repress the love of this world. Eccl. vii. 40. After Solomon has presented the objections of the wicked, he comes to this conclusion.

VER. 9. Eyes. He speaks ironically, (C.) or exhorts to spiritual joy and moderation. S. Greg. Mor. xxiv.

VER. 10. Anger. All turbulent passions, and evil or carnal pleasures. S. Jer.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Not. Prevent old age, to procure a stock of virtues. H.—Solomon refutes the former sentiments of the wicked, which he had perhaps once entertained. C.

VER. 2. Before the sun, &c. That is, before old age: the effects of which upon all the senses and faculties are described in the following verses, under a variety of figures. Ch.—All are exhorted to live well, before death come to deprive them of their senses and all helps: and to continue in expectation of judgment, the signs of which are given, as Matt xxiv. W. S. Jer.—Rain. One misery succeeds another, the understanding is darkened, and the senses become dull. C.—The Jews explain v. 2. 7. of the future distress of their nation under captivity. S. Jer. M.

VER. 3. House. The sides, (S. Jer.) or rather the arms. C.—Some understand prelates, or angels. Thaumatz.—And the powers that are in heaven shall be moved. Mar. xiii. 25. H.—Men. The arms, (Chal.) or thighs, (Smith) or those who were formerly the most robust.—Number. The rest have been lost, and what remain are of little service for chewing meat. C.—Holes. Spectacles, (Gejer) as if they had been already in use. C.—Heb. "windows." H.

VER. 4. Doors. The lips, (C.) feet, (Chal.) nostrils, (Vat.) or the trachea and pulmonary arteries. Bird. The cock-crowing; or at the least sound their slumbers are broken.—Deaf. Heb. "be low." The ears cannot enjoy music, nor can the voice of old people please. 2 K. xix. 25.

VER. 5. Way. They shall walk bent down, and afraid of rough ground.—Flourish. Their head shall become white, like the almond-flower. Jer. i. 11.—Fat. Sept. "heavy."—Destroyed. The hair shall fall off. C.—Concupiscence shall be extinct. Vat. T. Eternity. The body being consigned to the grave, and the soul to the region of spirits, to have no farther concern with the transactions of the world. H. Job vii. 9.—Street. This custom is often mentioned.

(838)

5 And they shall fear high things, and they shall be afraid in the way, the almond-tree shall flourish, the locust shall be made fat, and the caper-tree shall be destroyed: because man shall go into the house of his eternity, and the mourners shall go round about in the street.

6 Before the silver cord be broken, and the golden fillet shrink back, and the pitcher be crushed at the fountain, and the wheel be broken upon the cistern,

7 And the dust return into its earth, from whence it was, and the spirit return to God, who gave it.

8 Vanity of vanities, said Ecclesiastes, and all things are vanity.

9 And whereas Ecclesiastes was very wise, he taught the people, and declared the things that he had done: and seeking out, he set forth many parables.

10 He sought profitable words, and wrote words most right, and full of truth.

11 The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails deeply fastened in, which by the counsel of masters are given from one shepherd.

12 More than these, my son, require not. Of making many books there is no end: and much study is an affliction of the flesh.

13 Let us all hear together the conclusion of the discourse. Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is all man:

14 And all things that are done, God will bring into judgment for every error, whether it be good or evil.

Herod. ii. 85. Lu. vii. 32.—The women dance, having one (C.) or two old people disfigured in the midst of them, to recount the actions of the deceased. Brun.

VER. 6. Cord. The nerves.—Fillet. Veins, or the spermatic vessels, (C.) and the soul. S. Jer.—Cistern. When the bladder, &c. become disordered. Num. xxiv. 7. C.

VER. 7. It. Man is composed of two distinct parts; the destination of which we ought never to forget. Thus the objection of infidels (c. iii. 19.) is refuted. Plato and some of the ancients had the same idea of the soul's spiritual nature; though some took it to be an aerial body. C.

VER. 8. Ecclesiastes. "The preacher." W.—He returns to his first proposition, and having pushed the objection of free-thinkers as far as possible, shews us what we ought to believe and practise. He establishes the distinction of soul and body, the advantage of instruction, (v. 11.) without meddling with things too high, (v. 12.) the obligation of fearing God, (v. 13.) and future retribution. v. 14. This is the sum of all sound morality. C.

VER. 10. Profitable. Heb. "pleasing." Utile dulci. H.—Perhaps he condemns his attempt to know all things. c. i. 18. C.

VER. 11. In. The ground, (H.) to keep a tent in its proper place. He seemed before to have placed the wise on the same level with fools. C. vi. 8. 11. and vii. 1. C.—Shepherd. God, or Solomon. The Jews explain it of Moses, and his successors, who taught the people.

VER. 12. Not. I have had experience of all.—End. They can teach nothing farther. C.—

Tenet insanabile multos

Scribendi cacochætes.—Juv. Sat. vii.

—Impious productions abound, while those which promote piety are too scarce. When the same truths are enforced, as those which the Scriptures contain, we cannot be accused of writing many books. Orig. Philoc. v. S. Jer.—Flesh. It ruins the health.

VER. 13. All man. The whole business and duty of man. Ch.—This is the sum of all profitable doctrine. W.—He who does not fear God, deserves not the title of man. He is nothing but vanity. C.

VER. 14. Error. Or hidden and secret things. Ch.—Hob. "with every secret thing." (Prot. H.) "every inadvertency." Sept. Sym. C.

SOLOMON'S CANTICLE OF CANTICLES.

This book is called the Canticle of Canticles, that is to say, the most excellent of all canticles: because it is full of high mysteries, relating to the happy union of Christ and his spouse; which is here begun by love; and is to be eternal in heaven. The spouse of Christ is the Church: more especially as to the happiest part of it, viz. perfect souls, every one of which is his beloved; but above all others, the immaculate and ever blessed Virgin mother. Ch.—The bridegroom is Christ, as God and man. His praises and those of his spouse are recorded by various speakers. Solomon has given us three works; for beginners, the more advanced, and the perfect; as the philosophers teach ethics, physics and metaphysics. All the holy Scriptures contain spiritual food, but they are not all fit for every person. Heb. v. 13. With what humility ought we not, therefore, to read this most perfect and mystical canticle, as the sentiments of spiritual love are expressed in the same words as that of worldlings, and we are more inclined to follow our own judgment and carnal notions! W.—None, therefore, should dare to peruse this work, who has not mastered his passions, having his conversation in heaven. II.—The Jews would not allow any to read it before the age of thirty. Orig. and S. Jer.—Some of the fathers and commentators have even asserted that the mystical sense is the only one which pertains to this book, (Theod. Durham. T) and it is certainly the true and principal one, though allusion may be made to the marriage of Solomon with Pharaoh's daughter, (C. Bossuet. D.) or with a Tyrian princess, (c. iv. 8 and 3 K. xiii. 5.) or with Abisag. Rabbins.—Grotius shews the corruption of his own heart in his impure comments, as Theodorus, of Mopsuesta, is blamed by the second Council of Const. iv. a. 68. The name of God never, indeed, occurs; as he is represented under the idea of the bridegroom, &c. and the piece is allegorical. It might be divided into seven scenes, or nights, as the marriage feast lasted so long. Gen. xxix. 22. During this time the bridegroom saw his spouse seldom, and with great reserve, (C.) as was the custom with the Lacedæmonians. Plut. in Lye.—We might also refer all to six nights, or to the six ages of the Church, conformably to the system of De la Chetardie and Bishop Walmesley on the Apocalypse.—I. Age. C. i. 2. marks the ascension of Christ, and the propagation of Christianity; v. 4. 5. persecutions; v. 6. 7. vocation of the Gentiles; v. 12. protection granted by Christ. II. C. ii. 3. peace under Constantine; v. 11. 17. troubles excited by Arius. III. C. iii. 1. irruption of barbarians; v. 4. does not overturn the Church; v. 6. they are converted; v. 11. and Christ is more glorified, as Apoc. xix. IV. C. iv. 5. the Latin and Greek Churches; v. 8. the Chaldees, lions, and Greeks, leopards, (Dan.) are converted; the Turks obtain dominion; v. 12. the Greek schismatics cut off; v. 16. the Church is persecuted, but protected. V. C. v. 2. Deu marks the cooling of charity, (S. Aug.) when Luther appeared; c. vi. 3. yet the Church triumphs, particularly after the Council of Trent. VI. C. vi. 9. after the sounding of the sixth trumpet, the Jews are converted, and adorn the Church, in spite of antichrist's power; v. 11. she addresses the synagogue, v. 12. C. viii. 2. obtains leave to go into the house of her mother, as the apostles were of Jewish extraction; v. 7. the constancy of the martyrs appears; (see Rondet.) v. 8–14. the Church pants for her speedy union with her beloved. We may justly admire her authority, in preserving this and the former work in the canon, notwithstanding the internal and external evidence, and the ill use made of them by infidels, which seemed to militate against them. The Prot. Chateillon styles this "a wicked book." Several passages may, no doubt, be abused by a corrupt heart; but what is there so holy, which may not be perverted? When we meditate on this canticle, we ought to remember the admonition given by the Church in the Mass: "Let hearts be on high;" and Oh! that all might answer with truth: "We have them to the Lord!"

CHAP. I.

The spouse aspires to an union with Christ; their mutual love for one another.

LET him kiss me with the kiss of his mouth: for thy breasts are better than wine,

2 Smelling sweet of the best ointments. Thy name is as oil poured out; therefore young maidens have loved thee.

3 Draw me: we will run after thee to the odour of thy ointments. The king hath brought me into his store-rooms: we will be glad and rejoice in thee, remembering thy breasts more than wine: the righteous love thee.

CHAP. I. Canticles. Heb. shir hashirim asher Lishlomo, "the Canticle of Canticles which is for (H.) or according to Solomon," (M.) dictated to him by the Holy Ghost.

VER. 1. Let. Heb. yishakeni, (H.) "kiss or instruct me," as if to insinuate that we must raise our thoughts from carnal to spiritual things.—The. Heb. "kisses."—His mouth. Others I reject. M.—The synagogue prays for Christ's coming, as the Church does for his glorious appearance. W.—The figures of the law and predictions afford not satisfaction; only the Messiah can bring it to mankind. Orig.—They shall all be taught of God. Jo. vi. 45. Heb. 1. 2. H.—Breasts. Heb. also "loves." But the former is the primary signification of (M.) dodec. Christ, in his divine and human nature, is the source of all our good. His graces are manifested. He instructs and feeds us with the truths contained in Scripture, and in tradition, (H.) or in the Old and New Testament. Ven. Bede, &c.—Spiritual delights are to be preferred before all terrestrial ones. From the incarnation of Christ, and sanctification of man, all other graces proceed. T.—At first the spouse speaks to the bridegroom in the third person, to show her respect, though he was certainly present. Her companions attend her. C.—Wine. All seem to agree that these words are addressed to the bridegroom: which shews that they must be understood in the mystical sense. H.

VER. 2. Ointments. The bosom used to be perfumed. Athen. xv. 5. and xv. 14.—Thy name. Thou thyself. The preaching of the gospel produced a wonderful change in the world. 2 Cor. ii. 15. C.—The Church honours the name of Jesus on the second Sunday after the Epiphany. A. Butler, p. 130. H.—Thee. The martyrs and Christian virgins are inflamed with divine love.

VER. 3–4. To, &c. is in the Sept.; but not in Heb. or Complut. C.—Grace must draw, and then people will run. Jo. vi. 44. and xii. 32. Phil. iii. 12. S. Amb. Bossuet.—Rooms. Where there is abundance of wine and ointments. The extraordinary favours of heaven are not granted to all. Matt. xiii. 11. C.—Righteous. The apostles, and faithful souls, (H.) and all who form a right judgment of things, (M.) Having their thoughts, words, and actions composed. T.—Black. Or brown. v. 5. H.—The Egyptians were of a less fair complexion,

4 I am black, but beautiful, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Cedar, as the curtains of Solomon.

5 Do not consider me that I am brown, because the sun hath altered my colour: the sons of my mother have fought against me, they have made me the keeper in the vineyards: my vineyard I have not kept.

6 Shew me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou liest in the mid-day, lest I begin to wander after the flocks of thy companions.

7 If thou know not thyself, O fairest among women, go forth, and follow after the steps of the flocks, and feed thy kids beside the tents of the shepherds.

and she had been exposed to the sun. v. 5. C.—The synagogue gloried in her advantages; but the Gentiles being chosen by Christ, obtain the palm. Theod.—Though outwardly afflicted, the Church is inwardly fair. W.—Cedar. Or of the Arabs, who dwelt in tents, made of black goat's hair. C.—The tents of the eastern kings were equal in magnificence to our palaces. Bernier, Valle, &c.

VER. 5. Altered. Heb. "looked upon me," (Prot.) or "darted his rays at me." Mont. H.—The Church of the Gentiles was quite disfigured before Christ chose it. Persecutors afterwards strove to tarnish its beauty, but in vain.—Vineyard. My face (C.) and person I have not regarded, while I was attentive to serve others. H.—Pastors, who are chosen against their will, sometimes pay so much attention to the welfare of their flock, that they neglect their own interior, and fall into small faults, which Christ will know how to excuse and pardon. Eze. xxxiii. 2. S. Bern. ser. xxx. C.

VER. 6. Liest. Heb. "makest thy flock to rest." Prot. H.—Mid-day. She represents herself and her beloved as guarding flocks, which were usually driven into some shady place during the heat of the day, when the shepherds took their innocent recreations.—Wander. Sept. Prot. But marg. has, "as one that is veiled," which was the mark of a common woman. Gen. xxxviii. 14. The Gentile Church is eager to be guided by the one true Shepherd, and adheres to him with the greatest fervour, (C.) during the heat of persecution. Cassiod.—We ought to imitate the solitude of the spouse, and hide ourselves under the shadow of the cross when we are tempted. Isai. xxv. 4. C.

VER. 7. If. Christ comforts his Church. W.—He doubts not of her fidelity. M.—But the very insinuation, which she had made, causes him to give her this sort of rebuke. God is jealous. Ex. xxxiv. 14. He punishes the smallest faults. The spouse perceives this, and runs towards him.—Thyself. He who is ignorant of himself, must be so likewise of God, (C.) and will be sentenced to feed goats. S. Jer. ep. xxii. ad Eustoc.—Kids. Which had been detained at home. They will naturally seek their mothers. All creatures will raise the soul to God. Job xii.—Shepherds. Though in the midst of a perverse generation of idolaters and philosophers, the Church will continue steadfast. M.

8 To my company of horsemen, in Pharaoh's chariots, have I likened thee, O my love.

9 Thy cheeks are beautiful as the turtle dove's, thy neck as jewels.

10 We will make thee chains of gold, inlaid with silver.

11 While the king was at his repose, my spikenard sent forth the odour thereof.

12 A bundle of myrrh is my beloved to me, he shall abide between my breasts.

13 A cluster of cyprus my love is to me, in the vineyards of Engaddi.

14 Behold thou art fair, O my love, behold thou art fair, thy eyes are as those of doves.

15 Behold, thou art fair, my beloved, and comely. Our bed is flourishing.

16 The beams of our houses are of cedar, our rafters of cypress-trees.

CHAP. II.

Christ caresses his spouse; he invites her to him.

I AM the flower of the field, and the lily of the valleys.

2 As the lily among thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

3 As the apple-tree among the trees of the woods, so is my beloved among the sons. I sat down under his shadow, whom I desired: and his fruit was sweet to my palate.

VER. 8. Company. Heb. "mare." Such were preferred, as more gentle and swift. Pharaoh had probably made his son-in-law a present of a magnificent chariot. Theocritus (xviii) compares the beautiful Helena to a Thessalian horse in a chariot, so that this idea is not low. Gen. xlix. 14. Os. x. 11. C.—Horsemen. Prot. "horses." H.—Heb. ausa. Sept. hinnos means also "cavalry," as well as a mare. The Church has nothing to fear. M.

VER. 9. As, &c. Heb. "with rows of jewels, thy neck with chains of gold." Prot.—Sept. here read like the Vulg. c instead of b before thurim, which signifies chains, (v. 10. H.) as well as turtles. We cannot say that this bird has cheeks. C.—It is an emblem of the Church mourning, and ever true to her beloved, (Orig. &c.) who bestows a variety of graces on different people. 1 Cor. xii. 4. C.

VER. 11. While. The Church meditates on his passion and resurrection. W.—Repose. Or bed. Thus our Saviour was treated. Matt. xxvi. 7. Lu. vii. 37. C.—Odour. The virtues of the Church please him. M.—The saints, before and since his coming, pray with all earnestness. Apoc. v. 8.

VER. 12. Abide. Heb. aida, "all night." Christ remained nine months in the virgin's womb. C.—The faithful discover him in both the Testaments, (H.) and meditate on his sufferings. Myrrh is a bitter but odoriferous liquor.

VER. 13. Cyprus. A shrub with leaves like the olive-tree, and fruit growing in clusters, of a very agreeable smell. See Pliny, xii. 24. Christ has given us his sacred blood on the cross, and in the blessed Eucharist. M.

VER. 14. Behold. Christ praiseth his spouse. W.—Doves. Sharp-sighted, and reddish. Gen. xlix. 12. The Holy Ghost came upon Christ in the form of a dove. Matt. iii. 16. We must imitate his simplicity, (Matt. x. 16.) and have a pure and single eye, or intention, (Matt. vi. 22. C.) inviolably to please God. Orig.—The Church decides matters of controversy, without any mistakes. M.

VER. 15. Behold. The spouse makes a return of praise, and thanksgiving for her repose, to Christ. W.—The corporal beauty of Solomon or of our Saviour is not fully ascertained; but their inward perfections are often proclaimed. —Flourishing. Heb. "green." Sept. "shaded." Est. i. 5.—This bed was the womb of the blessed Virgin, the cross, or any faithful soul. S. Bernard says it is a monastery, retired and adorned with all virtues. C.

VER. 16. Beams. Prelates.—Rafters. Virtuous subjects. M.—Cypress. These are both odoriferous and incorruptible. The cypress has leaves from top to bottom, and grows not so large as the cedar. Pliny, xii. 17.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Yam. The spouse compares herself to a lily, as she is the fairest flower on the bed, (C.) or Christ may here speak. W. Isa. xi. 1. Orig.—He praises himself first, that his spouse may hear her own eulogy. M.

VER. 2. Thorns. The bridegroom enhances the praise of his spouse. The Church, surrounded by infidels and persecutors, maintains her beauty and station. Heretics, &c. are no better than thorns. Orig. C.—The Church excels all other societies. In her communion the innocent are preferred before sinners, and among the former, the blessed Virgin surpasses all.

VER. 3. As. The Church praises Christ, resting secure under his protection. W.

VER. 4. Cellar. This was not under ground. Homer (Od. b. 237.) places the wine near the nuptial bed. C.—In me. Heb. "he brought me to the banquetting-house, and his banner over me was love." Prot. H.—He has shewn me the greatest tenderness. Only the religion of Christ lays before us our 4 He brought me into the cellar of wine, he set in order charity in me.

5 Stay me up with flowers, compass me about with apples: because I languish with love.

6 His left hand is under my head, and his right hand shall embrace me.

7 I adjure you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and the harts of the fields, that you stir not up, nor make the beloved to awake, till she please.

8 The voice of my beloved, behold he cometh leaping upon the mountains, skipping over the hills.

9 My beloved is like a roe, or a young hart. Behold he standeth behind our wall, looking through the windows, looking through the lattices.

10 Behold my beloved speaketh to me: Arise, make haste, my love, my dove, my beautiful one, and come.

11 For winter is now past, the rain is over and gone.

12 The flowers have appeared in our land, the time of pruning is come: the voice of the turtle is heard in our land:

13 The fig-tree hath put forth her green figs: the vines in flower yield their sweet smell. Arise, my love, my beautiful one, and come:

14 My dove in the cliffs of the rock, in the hollow places of the wall, shew me thy face, let thy voice sound in my ears: for thy voice is sweet, and thy face comely.

duties to God, to ourselves, and neighbours. C. S. Tho. ii. 2. q. 26. H.—The holy Spirit came on the assembled disciples, who were deemed to be drunk, and Christ nourishes the pious soul with the wine of his own blood. M.

VER. 5. Flowers. Heb. "bottles."—Languish. Sept. "am wounded." H.—Those who enter upon the paths of virtue, are often deprived of consolations. C.—They must support themselves by reflecting on the words and sufferings of Christ. S. Amb. ps. cxviii. ser. 5. Boss.

VER. 6. Hand. After peace comes affliction: grace is followed by glory. Prov. iii. 16. C.

VER. 7. I. Christ permits not his Church to be persecuted, till she be able to bear it. W.—Roes. Sept. "armies and powers;" the angels and apostles, who have spread the gospel through the world. It would seem that the Jewish women loved hunting, (C.) like those of Phœnicia and Lacedæmon. Æneid. i. They were going to sing, (C.) the morning epithalamium, (Theocrit. xviii.) after the first night of the marriage. The second meeting takes place, v. 8. 17. II.

VER. 8. The. Feeling the protection of Christ, the Church preacheth boldly the truth against pagans and heretics. W.—She knows the voice of the shepherd, (Jo. viii. 47. and x. 2.) and keeps at a distance the wolves in sheep's clothing, or pretended reformers, who would scatter the flock.—Hills. She sees him returning in the evening with the utmost speed of a stag, as the Heb. implies. C. ii. 9. and viii. 14.

VER. 9. Hart, (Prov. v. 18.) which is swifter than the dogs. Xenoph. Cuneq. —This animal is said to destroy serpents, as Christ did the power of the devil. Theod.—Wall. Under the old law, Christ was only seen in figure. He manifested himself in the new. Yet our sins separate him from us. Is. lix. 2. He is concealed in the sacred mysteries, (C.) and his humanity keeps from our sight the glory of his divinity, which alone can impart full content. S. Amb. S. Bern. He shewed a glimpse of it at his transfiguration, and by his miracles. M.

VER. 10. Arise. He sings under the window, to v. 16.—My dove, is taken from the Sept. C.—Christ invites his spouse to approach, though he shews not himself as yet; and orders his pastors to root out heresies. v. 25. W.—She is ever faithful, and rejoices in him. 2 Cor. xi. 2. Matt. ix. 15. Eph. v. 28. C.

VER. 11. Winter. The rigour and darkness of the old law give place to that of light and love. Orig.—After persecution had ceased, pruning became more necessary. C.—The Israelites and the world were redeemed in spring, and the ceremonies of the law were abolished at the same season. M.

VER. 12. Pruning. Prot. "singing of birds." H.—But the former version is better. Sept. Sym. &c.—Turtle. Which returns in spring. Is. viii. 9. C.—It denotes the preaching of the gospel, (S. Cyr. ador. 15.) or rather the sighs of a holy soul in exile.

VER. 14. Rock. Wild pigeons retire thither. Varro, iii. 7. Κόλωνα ἐπιστάντες περιήν. II. 20. Ser. xlviii. 28. C.—Holy souls seek protection in the wounds of their Saviour. S. Greg. S. Bern. ser. lxi.—Wall. In the holy Scriptures, which defend the Church. She is brought to light for the edification of all. M.

VER. 15. Foxes. They hurt vines, (Theoc. 5.) and denote false prophets. Ecce. xiii. 4. S. Aug. Ps. lxxx.—For. Heb. "and our vines of Semadar." v. 13. C.—Foxes breed in spring, and greatly infested the country. Judg. xv. 4.

VER. 16. Feedeth. "His rock." Sept. He still retains the fragrance of 15 Catch us the little foxes that destroy the vines : for our vineyard hath flourished.

16 My beloved to me, and I to him who feedeth among the lilies,

17 Till the day break, and the shadows retire. Return : be like, my beloved, to a roe, or to a young hart upon the mountains of Bethel.

CHAP. III.

The spouse seeks Christ. The glory of his humanity.

IN my bed by night I sought him whom my soul loveth : I sought him, and found him not.

2 I will rise, and will go about the city : in the streets and the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth : I sought him, and I found him not.

3 The watchmen who keep the city found me : Have you seen him, whom my soul loveth ?

4 When I had a little passed by them, I found him whom my soul loveth : I held him : and I will not let him go, till I bring him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that bore me.

5 I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes and the harts of the fields, that you stir not up, nor awake my beloved, till she please.

6 Who is she that goeth up by the desert, as a pillar of smoke of aromatical spices, of myrrh, and frankincense, and of all the powders of the perfumer ?

7 Behold threescore valiant ones of the most valiant of Israel, surround the bed of Solomon :

8 All holding swords, and most expert in war : every lilies. As married people are two in one flesh, (Eph. v. 31.) Christ and his Church are irrevocably united. C.—She reposes in him. W.

VER. 17. Break. Or "yield a refreshing air," (aspiret) in the morning, (II.) and evening, when she begs he will return, (Theod.) as she could not enjoy his company in the day-time. C. i. 1, and iv. 6.—Bethel. Or the lower Bethoron, near Jerusalem. These short visits in the night, shew the vicissitudes of comfort and distress in the most perfect. Those who are still addicted to their passions, and to the world, can have no pretensions to such favours, which amply repay any passing desolation. S. Bern. ser. lxxiv. C.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Bed. The Church, finding Christ by his own revelation, and not by philosophy, holds him fast. W.—He had delayed coming at the usual hour, to give us to understand, that he is not found amid delights, nor in a crowd, but that we must seek him diligently, like Magdalene. Jo. xv. S. Amb. de Isaac.—The apostles endeavoured to convert the synagogue, but their efforts were rejected, and the guards, or princes, persecuted them. M. C. v. 7. II.

VER. 3. City. To prevent fires, &c. God will require the souls of the flock at the hands of his pastors.

VER. 4. Me. She was perhaps dead. Women had separate apartments, to which none but the husband could have access. Gen. xxiv. 28. At the end of the marriage feast, the bride was conducted to her husband's house. Matt. xxv. 1. C.—The Jews shall in the end acknowledge Christ, (W.) as the Church desires. M.

VER. 5. I. The bridegroom (C.) speaks as c. ii. 7. (W.) and c. viii. 4. He retires early.

VER. 6. Who. The female companions of the spouse, (C.) or the bridegroom's friends, (M.) admire her at a distance. C. vi. 9. and viii. 5. C.—The converted Gentiles change the desert of the world into a paradise, by their good works, which ascend like a perfume. S. Greg. They admire their own conversion, and profess that we must fight for heaven, (W.) and adore Christ, the God-man ; imitating all his virtues, (II.) and preaching his gospel. M.

VER. 7. Bed. Being stationed at the door to prevent any alarm, v. 8. C.—In the Church Christ finds his repose, and daily produces the only heirs of heaven. Ven. Bede.—The angels, saints and pastors watch to defend it against the spirits of darkness. M.

VER. 9. Litter. Sept. to conduct his spouse with solemnity ; or a throne ; though it most probably denotes the bridal bed. C.—Heb. apiron. Greek, σπίλον.

VER. 10. Going. Prot. "covering of it of purple." H.—Death must be endured, if necessary, for the sake of the faith, as this is the highest degree of charity. W.—He, &c. Heb. "is prepared for the beloved above the," &c. See Od. v. 680. C.—Prot. and Pagn. "the midst thereof being paved (Mont. set on fire) with love for (Mont. by) the daughters." H.—The most desirable things adorn the litter, or the Church, that all may come to her, who has God to guide her decisions. M.

VER. 11. Go. All are invited to come to Christ, who, in his sacred humanity, which he took of his mother, was crowned in heaven, after his passion. W. S. Greg. Alcuin.—The synagogue crowned him with thorns, and gave him the man's sword upon his thigh, because of fears in the night.

9 King Solomon hath made him a litter of the wood of Libanus :

10 The pillars thereof he made of silver, the seat of gold, the going up of purple : the midst he covered with charity for the daughters of Jerusalem.

11 Go forth, ye daughters of Sion, and see king Solomon in the diadem, wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his espousals, and in the day of the joy of his heart.

CHAP. IV.

Christ sets forth the graces of his spouse : and declares his love for her.

HOW beautiful art thou, my love, how beautiful art thou ! thy eyes are doves' eyes, besides what is hid within. Thy hair is as flocks of goats, which come up from Mount Galaad.

2 Thy teeth as flocks of sheep, that are shorn, which come up from the washing, all with twins, and there is none barren among them.

3 Thy lips are as a scarlet lace : and thy speech sweet. Thy cheeks are as a piece of a pomegranate, besides that which lieth hid within.

4 Thy neck is as the tower of David, which is built with bulwarks : a thousand bucklers hang upon it, all the armour of valiant men.

5 Thy two breasts like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lilies.

6 Till the day break, and the shadows retire, I will hard bed of the cross. S. Bern. S. Anselm, &c.—Bethsabee might live to see the marriage of her son, who owed the crown to her. 3 K. i. 18. Prov. iv. 3. Both the parties were crowned, (Is. lxi. 10.) and no doubt Solomon would display his usual magnificence. The diadem was a bandage, adorned with embroidery, and precious stones. C.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. How. Christ again praises the beauty of his Church. W.—The dialogue takes place in the country. H.—From corporal beauty, which is often dangerous, and the portion of the most dissolute, we must raise our minds to spiritual advantages, which the Holy Ghost has here in view.—Within. S. Amb. "besides thy taciturnity." Sept. "silence." Rabbins, &c. "hair." Prot. "within thy locks." But what renders this version of trammathec (II.)—uspicious is, that none of the ancients knew of it, and the hair is afterwards specified. C. vi. 4. Moreover, Isaias, (xlvii. 2.) uses it for (C.) "turpitude," (S. Jer.) or the parts which are usually "covered." Sept. II.—Si qua latent, meliora putat. Met. 1500.—All the glory of the king's daughter is within. Ps. xlv. 14. Modesty and silence are the best encomium. C.—The Lord praises the intention, occupations and doctrine of the Church, the twins of faith and good works ; the preaching of Christ's passion without shame, (v. 3.) and the administration of the sacraments, which, like the neck, unite the members to their head ; so that they become invincible, (v. 4.) whether they be of Jewish or Gentile extraction, v. 5. W.—Up. Heb. and Sept. "appear." Jerusalem was the highest part of the country ; (II.) and coming up and down often means no more than coming or going. Jug. xi. 3. and xv. 11. C.—The hair of goats in Lycia was beautifully curled. Elian xvi. 30.—Women used such false hair. Mart. xii. 45.—Though the hair be only an ornament, it is not to be neglected ; so the pious Christian will always treat with respect the ceremonies established chiefly for the instruction of the ignorant. C.—Those simple and fervent souls, by their numbers, adorn the Church, as hair does the body. S. Greg.—The external and internal perfections of the spouse deserve commendation. M.

VER. 2. Them. Those who lay aside the old man, and receive baptism, are filled with grace, to bring forth the fruits of virtue. S. Aug. Doct. ii. 6.—Pastors in particular, must lay aside worldly cares, and attend to their flocks. M.

VER. 3. Scarlet. Preachers of the gospel (S. Greg.) must speak with elegance, and have their lips dyed with the blood of Christ, and purified with coals from the altar. C.—So, if we may use the words of a living critic, who is sometimes accurate, "a commentator ought to study at the foot of his crucifix, and write with ink drawn from the heart of Jesus." H.—Pomegranate. Plump and ruddy, representing the purity of the Church, and of virgins, who are its "flower," (S. Cyp.) and bring forth the fruits of good works. S. Aug. de Virg.

VER. 4. Bulwarks. Heb. Thalpiyth, "at the height of the defiles," probably in Libanus, when David conquered Syria. Thalassar, Thelmea, &c. were such "heights." Bucklers, to be used in case of need, or for ornament. Thus the neck of the spouse was adorned with chains and pearls. The Church is this tower, the pillar of truth, 1 Tim. iii. Matt. xvi. 18. Apostles and prelates are her bucklers.

VER. 5. Roes. This comparison does not seem happy ; but exactitude is not required. C.—Indeed if we were to take all in the literal sense, a very grotesque figure would arise, with a head like Carmel, a nose like a tower, &c. which go to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincense.

7 Thou art all fair, O my love, and there is not a spot in thee.

8 Come from Libanus, my spouse, come from Libanus, come: thou shalt be crowned from the top of Amana, from the top of Sanir and Hermon, from the dens of the lions, from the mountains of the leopards.

9 Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister, my spouse, thou hast wounded my heart with one of thy eyes, and with one hair of thy neck.

10 How beautiful are thy breasts, my sister, my spouse! thy breasts are more beautiful than wine, and the sweet smell of thy ointments above all aromatical spices.

11 Thy lips, my spouse, are as a dropping honeycomb, honey and milk are under thy tongue: and the smell of thy garments, as the smell of frankincense.

12 My sister, my spouse is a garden inclosed, a garden inclosed, a fountain sealed up.

13 Thy plants are a paradise of pomegranates with the fruits of the orchard. Cyprus with spikenard, 14 Spikenard and saffron, sweet cane and cinnamon, with all the trees of Libanus, myrrh and aloes, with all the chief perfumes.

15 The fountain of gardens: the well of living waters, which run with a strong stream from Libanus.

16 Arise, O north wind, and come, O south wind, blow through my garden, and let the aromatical spices thereof flow.

shews that the tropological or allegorical sense must be adopted. D.—The two Testaments given for our instruction, (c. i. 2.) or the charity towards God and our neighbour, may be meant. Theod.

VER. 6. Retire. In the morning, (Sanct.) or rather the bridegroom takes his leave early, promising to return in the evening. C. ii. 17. C.—Myrrh. To Calvary, where the fervent will pour forth their prayers, and learn mortification. C.—Christ dwells in mortified and devout minds.

VER. 7. Thee. All must be pure before they enter heaven, as the blessed Virgin was on earth, (W.) and the Church is still. Eph. v. 27. C.—Before his departure, Christ heaps praises on her.

VER. 8. Thou. Heb. "look from."—Libanus. So Jerusalem is called, Zac. xi. 8. Ribera. M.—Amana. Sept. "faith." By it and charity, we must do good. S. Aug. Pa. lxxvii. Amanus separates Cilicia from Syria.—Sanir is the name given by the Phenicians to Hermon, (Eus.) beyond the Jordan. 1 Par. v. 23.—Leopards. It is not fit for women to hunt such beasts. Ovid (Met. x. 10.) thus speaks of Venus: Nuda prius vestemque ritu succincta Dianæ, &c. The Church leaves Jerusalem to preach the gospel without rear. M.

VER. 9. Wounded. Sym. "given." Sept. Prot. "ravished." Mystic writers suppose, that the spouse had been guilty of some negligence; or, on the contrary, that her department was most enchanting, bent on God, and on good works. C.—Sister. So Assuerus styles himself brother of Esther. xv. 12. Christ died for the unity of his Church. M.

VER. 10. Spices. He returns her compliment. C. i. 2.

VER. 11. Lips. Teachers who accommodate their instructions to the capacity of their audience, (C) giving milk to children. Heb. v. 13. H. 1 Cor. iii. 2. In allusion, perhaps, to this passage, (C) it was customary to give milk and honey to the new baptized. Tert. coron.—Garments. Which were perfumed, (Gen. xxvii. 17. Ps. xlv. 9.) and imply good works, (2 Cor. v. 3. Rom. xiii. 14. C.) and the external service and prayers of the Church, which ascend like incense. Ps. cxl. 2. M.

VER. 12. Up. She is perfectly chaste. Prov. v. 14. The Church excludes from her society all unbelievers and schismatics. The wicked serve to exercise the virtuous. Her pastors explain the Scriptures, the fountains of saving knowledge. C.—Christ is also a fountain. Zac. xiii. 1. and Jo. vii. 37. M.

VER. 13. Plants. The various orders of clergy and laity.—Cyprus, (c. i. 13. C.) whence a healing oil is extracted. Theod.—Prot. "camphire." H.—Spikenard is twice mentioned, as it may be well mixed with cyprus and saffron. M.

VER. 14. Cinnamon. Very rare. Ex. xxx. 23.—Libanus, or "incense." Heb.

VER. 15. Libanus. The law of the gospel was proclaimed by the apostles, who were Jews. They explained the pure doctrine of the Scriptures, and converted many.

VER. 16. Wind. At different times. Let all nations be convinced of thy beauty. C.—The holy Spirit enabled the apostles to convert the world. Nys. Rupert.—All temptations, whether proceeding from cruelty or deceit, "make constant souls more grateful to God." W

CHAP. V.

Christ calls his spouse: she languishes with love: and describes him by his graces.

LET my beloved come into his garden, and eat the fruit of his apple-trees. I am come into my garden, O my sister, my spouse, I have gathered my myrrh, with my aromatical spices: I have eaten the honeycomb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk: eat, O friends, and drink, and be inebriated, my dearly beloved.

2 I sleep, and my heart watcheth: the voice of my beloved knocking: Open to me, my sister, my love, my dove, my undefiled: for my head is full of dew, and my locks of the drops of the nights.

3 I have put off my garment, how shall I put it on? I have washed my feet, how shall I defile them?

4 My beloved put his hand through the key-hole, and my bowels were moved at his touch.

5 I arose up to open to my beloved: my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers were full of the choicest myrrh.

6 I opened the bolt of my door to my beloved: but he had turned aside, and was gone. My soul melted, when he spoke: I sought him, and found him not: I called, and he did not answer me.

7 The keepers that go about the city found me: they struck me, and wounded me: the keepers of the walls took away my veil from me.

8 I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, if you find my beloved, that you tell him that I languish with love.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Apple-trees. The spouse, submitting to God's will, is content to suffer. W.—She addresses her beloved, and as he had praised her, under the similitude of a delightful garden, she invites him into it. C.—I, &c. Christ again approves of her patience, and invites the saints to congratulate with her. W.—He always hears his Church. Matt. xxviii. 20. Mark xi. 24. C.—The saints had prayed for Christ's coming; and accordingly, (Is. lvi. 9.) he takes flesh of the most pure virgin. S. Athan. Synop.—Comb. Sept. "bread."—Milk. Chal. "white wine." But (C) milk and wine may be taken together. Clem. Pæd. i. 6.—The chaste delights of retired and penitent souls are thus described: (C.) Dulciores sunt lacrymæ orantium quam gaudia theatrorum. S. Aug. Pa. exxviii. "The tears of penitents are the wine of angels, because in them is the odour of life." S. Bern. ser. 30.—Inebriated. Not so as to lose reason. Gen. xliii. 34. C.—Prot. marg. "be drunk with loves." H. Prov. v. 19. and vii. 18. This wine of love, is the blessed Eucharist, which maketh virgins to spring forth, (Zac. ix. 17.) and is a foretaste of heaven. Pa. xxxv. 9. It makes us forget the old man, (C.) and raises the mind to God. S. Cyp. ep. 68.—To this feast Christ invites his disciples. Matt. xxvi. and 1 Cor. xi. M.—Myrrh. Implies that they must be mortified. H.

VER. 2. Knocking. The spouse had retired to rest, as her beloved delayed longer than usual. But love is ever on the watch. C.—She wished to meditate, but is called upon to assist others, and excited by Christ's own example. W.—Den. Having been out in the evening, preceding this fourth night. This denotes imperfect Christians, who remain, indeed, attached to the head, but are a disgrace to it, by their scandalous lives. S. Aug. tr. 57. in Jo. S. Greg. C.—Such was the state of many in the days of Luther, who accordingly joined the first reformers. See Philip's Life of Card. Pole, p. 364. H.—Nights. Amæmon (ode 1.) has something similar. Christ knocks by his inspiration and elasticities, and he is better heard in the night of tribulation. Apoc. iii. 20. C.—Heretics began to blaspheme Christ, after the Church had only enjoyed a short peace, (M.) after the ten persecutions.

VER. 3. Garment. By this is designated the tunic, which was undermost. H.—Feet. People in that climate had their feet bare in the house, and even on journeys only wore sandals: so that frequent washing was requisite. Gen. xviii. 4. and 1 Tim. v. 10. These excuses were vain, and Christ would not regard them. Matt. xxv. 1. Lu. xii. 35. Theod. C.—The care of souls brings on many external occupations, which contemplative men would decline. S. Greg. M.

VER. 4. Touch. Of me, (Cassiod.) or rather of the door or window. I was grieved that I had made him wait so long. C.—Heb. "were moved for him." Prot. marg. "or (as some read) in me." Pagnin prefers this; Sept. and Mont. the former explanation of halaiu. H.—Grace moves us to begin and prosecute good works. S. Greg. Nyssen. Theod.—Christ gives it more abundantly, to make the champions of the Church contend with adversity. M.

VER. 5. Arose. The Church employs herself in active life, still retaining a desire to return to contemplation. v. 8. W

9 What manner of one is thy beloved of the beloved, O thou most beautiful among women? what manner of one is thy beloved of the beloved, that thou hast so adjured us?

10 My beloved is white and ruddy, chosen out of thousands.

11 His head is as the finest gold: his locks as branches of palm-trees, black as a raven.

12 His eyes as doves upon brooks of waters, which are washed with milk, and sit beside the plentiful streams.

13 His cheeks are as beds of aromatical spices set by the perfumers. His lips are as lilies dropping choice myrrh.

14 His hands are turned, and as of gold, full of hyacinths. His belly as of ivory, set with sapphires.

15 His legs as pillars of marble, that are set upon bases of gold. His form as of Libanus, excellent as the cedars.

16 His throat most sweet, and he is all lovely: such is my beloved, and he is my friend, O ye daughters of Jerusalem.

17 Whither is thy beloved gone, O thou most beautiful among women? whither is thy beloved turned aside, and we will seek him with thee?

CHAP. VI.

The spouse of Christ is but one: she is fair and terrible.

MY beloved is gone down into his garden, to the bed of aromatical spices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies.

2 I to my beloved, and my beloved to me, who feedeth among the lilies.

3 Thou art beautiful, O my love, sweet and comely as Jerusalem: terrible as an army set in array.

4 Turn away thy eyes from me, for they have made me flee away. Thy hair is as a flock of goats, that appear from Galaad.

5 Thy teeth as a flock of sheep, which come up from the washing, all with twins, and there is none barren among them.

VER. 8. Love. She seems insensible to the insults received. C.—The Church prays to the saints on earth, and in heaven. M.

VER. 10. Ruddy. Or shining. Et color in niveo corpore purpureus. The divine and human nature, or the conception and sufferings of Christ are thus described. C.—The spouse gives this admirable description of her beloved. H.

VER. 11. Gold. Christ is the head of Christ, (1 Cor. xi. 3.) and is most pure. N.—The guards of Solomon were powdered with gold dust. Jos. Ant.—Branches. Elaus, or fruits of the male palm-tree. Theod. Plin. xiii. 4.

VER. 13. Set by. Prot. "as sweet flowers."—Choice. "Lit. 'the first.' v. 5. H.—The modesty and words of Christ excited admiration. 1 Pet. ii. 21. Jo. vii. 16. C.—He exhorted sinners to repent, and rebuked the obstinate. M.

VER. 14. Hyacinths. Or purple veins. C.—Prot. "hands are as gold rings set with the beryl." Heb. "full of Tharais," (H.) or precious stones, (M.) from that country, (Ex. xxviii.) with which his rings were ornamented. C.—Sapphires. His belt or garment is thus ornamented. Sanchez.—The works of Christ proceeded from his infinite charity for mankind, whose salvation he greatly desired, (Mar. vii. 37. and 1 Cor. xv. 22. and 1 Tim. ii. 4.) so that none can perish but by their own fault. C.

VER. 16. Lovely. Heb. and Sept. "desires." M.—The beauty of Christ is chiefly interior; and all must aim at this perfection, who would be his spouses. Ps. xlv. 8. C.

VER. 17. Seek. The fervent resolve to seek Christ, wherever he may be. W.—His praises excite many to love him. M.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Lilies. The church teaches, that God is delighted with the pious desires and works of the faithful. W.—She answers the question which had been put to her. C.—God associates lilies, or the perfect, to his angels. He "feeds his flock," and "is fed," on works of piety, as Heb. and Sept. imply both. M.

VER. 2. Beloved. She speaks thus, when she finds him, and runs to his embraces, having found what trouble her neglect had occasioned. C.

VER. 3. Thou. Christ again commends his Church, which is well composed of distinct orders, some governing, others retired from the world, and the rest

6 Thy cheeks are as the bark of a pomegranate, beside what is hidden within thee.

7 There are threescore queens, and fourscore concubines, and young maidens without number.

8 One is my dove, my perfect one is but one, she is the only one of her mother, the chosen of her that bore her. The daughters saw her, and declared her most blessed: the queens and concubines, and they praised her.

9 Who is she that cometh forth as the morning rising, fair as the moon, bright as the sun, terrible as an army set in array?

10 I went down into the garden of nuts, to see the fruits of the vallies, and to look if the vineyard had flourished, and the pomegranates budded.

11 I knew not: my soul troubled me for the chariots of Aminadab.

12 Return, return, O Sulamitess: return, return, that we may behold thee.

CHAP. VII.

A further description of the graces of the Church, the spouse of Christ.

WHAT shalt thou see in the Sulamitess but the companies of camps? How beautiful are thy steps in shoes, O prince's daughter! The joints of thy thighs are like jewels, that are made by the hand of a skilful workman.

2 Thy navel is like a round bowl, never wanting cups. Thy belly is like a heap of wheat, set about with lilies.

3 Thy two breasts are like two young roes that are twins.

4 Thy neck as a tower of ivory. Thy eyes like the fish-pools in Hesebon, which are in the gate of the daughter of the multitude. Thy nose is as the tower of Libanus, that looketh towards Danascus.

5 Thy head is like Carmel: and the hairs of thy head as the purple of the king bound in the channels.

6 How beautiful art thou, and how comely, my dear est in delights!

exercising works of mercy, amid its troubles, who altogether form a complete army, terrible to all her enemies. W.—Jerusalem. Which was then one of the finest cities in the east. C. The Catholic Church resembles the heavenly Jerusalem. Theod.—Terrible. So great is the power of love, (Rom. viii. 35.) in the martyrs, and of the Church, against infidels! C.—She is lovely to Christ, and terrible to the wicked. Even her spouse is wounded by her glance. M.

VER. 4. Turn. The more one contemplates God's majesty, the more he will be convinced that it is incomprehensible. W.—To pry into mysteries, may cause Christ to retire. Theod. &c.

VER. 7. Number. The true pastors are numerous, but hirelings more so. The faithful are innumerable, and all are united in the same faith. W.—The spouse and the queens represent the more perfect; the concubines, or wives of inferior degree, those who are led by fear; and the maidens, such as are languid and negligent. Orig.—The Roman Church is at the head of all metropolitan, episcopal, and parochial Churches. H.

VER. 9. Who. The companions of the spouse, (C.) or the synagogue, admire the Christian Church. W.—Morning. Aurora. The Church dissipated the darkness of paganism; she appeared as the moon under persecution, and as the sun, after the conversion of Constantine. C.—The like will happen in the days of antichrist. Ven. Bede.—The religion of the patriarchs may be compared to the morning-star: that of Moses, to the moon; and of Christ, to the sun. M.

VER. 11. Aminadab. The devil, (Theod.) or probably some renowned general. Aquila explains it "of the people's leader," (C.) or "munificent one." Mont.—I knew not what forced me to flee with such speed, as if I had been panic-struck, (C.) or the spouse professes that she knew not that he had retired into the garden of nuts, or she would not have been under apprehensions of his being ill-treated by Aminadab, as Christ was by Pilate. M.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. What? Christ commends the Jews, who shall at last embrace the faith with great fervour. W.—Thou. Heb. and Sept. "ye." They join this sentence with the preceding chapter. H.—Companies. Heb. "as it were the choir (or dance) of Mahanaim," (C.) where Jacob saw the camps of angels, near the Jacob. H. Gen. xxxii.—These dances might be proverbial.

7 Thy stature is like to a palm-tree, and thy breasts to clusters of grapes.

8 I said: I will go up into the palm-tree, and will take hold of the fruits thereof: and thy breasts shall be as the clusters of the vine: and the odour of thy mouth like apples.

9 Thy throat like the best wine, worthy for my beloved to drink, and for his lips and his teeth to ruminate.

10 I to my beloved, and his turning is towards me.

11 Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field, let us abide in the villages.

12 Let us get up early to the vineyards, let us see if the vineyard flourish, if the flowers be ready to bring forth fruits, if the pomegranates flourish: there will I give thee my breasts.

13 The mandrakes give a smell. In our gates are all fruits: the new and the old, my beloved, I have kept for thee.

CHAP. VIII.

The love of the Church to Christ: his love to her.

WHO shall give thee to me for my brother, sucking the breasts of my mother, that I may find thee without, and kiss thee, and now no man may despise me?

2 I will take hold of thee, and bring thee into my mother's house: there thou shalt teach me, and I will give thee a cup of spiced wine, and new wine of my pomegranates.

3 His left hand under my head, and his right hand shall embrace me.

4 I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem, that you stir not up, nor awake my love till she please.

5 Who is this that cometh up from the desert, flowing with delights, leaning upon her beloved? Under the apple-tree I raised thee up: there thy mother was corrupted, there she was deflowered that bore thee.

6 Put me as a seal upon thy heart, as a seal upon thy arm: for love is strong as death: jealousy is hard as hell, the lamps thereof are lamps of fire and flames.

7 Many waters cannot quench charity, neither can the floods drown it: if a man should give all the substance of his house for love, he shall despise it as nothing.

8 Our sister is little, and hath no breasts. What shall we do to our sister in the day when she is to be spoken to?

9 If she be a wall, let us build upon it bulwarks of silver: if she be a door, let us join it together with boards of cedar.

10 I am a wall: and my breasts are as a tower, since I am become in his presence as one finding peace.

11 The peaceable had a vineyard, in that which hath people: he let out the same to keepers, every

VER. 4. Ivory. Preachers communicate the sentiments of the Church, (C.) which prevails against the gates of hell. Cassiod.

VER. 5. Carmel. Shaded with trees. C.—Heb. "purple," which colour was sometimes given to the hair. Propert. ii. 18.—Channela. Of the dyers. Heb. "to beams." C.—Prot. "the king is held in the galleries" to view thee. H.—Christ was all charity, and the faithful are twice dyed, with the love of God, and of their neighbour. M.

VER. 7. Grapes. The Church triumphs over her adversaries, and feeds her children. C.

VER. 8. Up. Christ shed his blood on the cross, and enabled his Church, composed of Jews and Gentiles, who were before barren, to produce a numerous progeny. C.—Mouth. Heb. and Sept. "nose."

VER. 9. Lips. Sept. "sufficient for my lips and teeth." H.—The wine in that country was very thick, when kept a long time. It here denotes charity, or the gospel truths. Lu. v. 37. Acts ii. 18. Heb. "causing the lips of them who sleep to speak," (C.) as the apostles did, in transports of zeal. Theod.—Yet the reading of the Sept. Aquila, &c. seems preferable. C.

VER. 10. Turning. The Church is submissive to Jesus Christ, and is entirely actuated by his Spirit. C.—She takes the words, as it were out of his mouth, (v. 9.) and answers, worthy, &c. acknowledging that all the praise belongs to him.

VER. 11. Villages. She begs that he would come and remain with her. W.—She accompanies him into the country, on the morning after the fifth night. There Christ affords the purest delights, (v. 12. C.) and the Church (M.) becomes his mother, while she instructs and feeds others. S. Greg. hom. H.

VER. 12. Mandrakes. Heb. dodai comes from the same root as dodi, "my breasts or loves," v. 12. H.—It may denote oranges, as mandrakes are not spring-fruits. Gen. xxx. 14. C.—Yet (H.) married women eagerly sought after mandrakes. Here they may signify such as are fit to gain souls to Christ. M.—And the old. Or great abundance. Lev. xxvi. 10. Matt. xii. 52. C.—She acknowledges Christ to be the Saviour of all, under the Old and the New Testament. W.—A doctor of the Church shews Christ in the prophets, and figures of the law, as well as manifested in the gospel. Aponius, &c. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Mother. The synagogue continues to pray for Christ's coming. W.—Her request has been heard, and He has assumed our nature; so that we may receive from him all the marks of tenderness, and none but the carnal will shew any signs of contempt. The spouse wishes to manifest her love without restraint, and to be delivered from the shame of sterility, (C.) or the Church desires to see Christ in heaven, and to praise him. M.

VER. 2. Teach me economy, on which subject Xenophon represents the newly married entertaining themselves.—Wine. Mar. xv. 23. Os. xiv. 8. Nectar was of this description, (C.) being composed of wine, honey, and odoriferous flowers. The best was made at Babylon. Athen. i. 26. and ii. 2.—These liquors intimate all the virtues, which Christ has taught; the practice of which affords him the greatest satisfaction, Jo. xiv. 28. They are best learnt in retirement, (C.) and from our great teacher. Mic. iv. 2. M.

VER. 4. Jerusalem. Sept. add, "by the armies and powers of the field," as c. ii. 7. and iii. 5. H.—The spouse presently awakes after the sixth night, and goes out. C.—Christ admonishes all not to disturb those who would serve him. W.

VER. 5. Flowing. Thus speak the companions of the spouse; and the bridegroom, turning to her alone, reminds her of an adventure. The Jews would put this in the mouth of the spouse. C.—Corrupted. Heb. and Sept. "fell in labour, there she was delivered who bore thee." H.—Christ redeemed Eve, who had been seduced to eat the forbidden fruit, and by his sacred blood on the cross, awoke and healed our fallen nature. C.—The court of heaven admires the Church of the Gentiles, and every pious soul ascending from this world, particularly the blessed Virgin. The synagogue was corrupt, when she called for the death of the Son of God, and said, His blood be upon us, &c. We have no king but Cæsar. W.—Grace must go before, that our free-will may also walk forward. M.

VER. 6. Arm. Working by charity. Gal. v. 6. H.—Women in the east imprint what they like most on their bosom and arms, or carry bracelets and gems on those parts, with similar inscriptions. Os. ii. 2. Is. iii. 20. S. Clem. Pæd. ii. 11.—Christ must live in us. C.—Tota ejus species exprimitur in nobis. S. Amb. Isaac viii.—Jealousy. That is, zealous and burning love. Ch.—Hell. Or the grave, which subdues all. Love is a violent passion. C.—Nullus liber erit, si quis amare velit. Prop. ii.—Christ gave his life to redeem mankind, and the martyrs have joyfully endured torments and death, to evince their love. C.—Flames. Heb. "a flame of God," or most vehement. H.

VER. 7. Drown it. As other fires may be extinguished. He who sinks under persecution, has not real charity. Temptation does not weaken a person, but shews what he is. Eccles. xxxiv. 9. C.—He shall. Worldlings will ridicule his parting with temporal delights, for those which do not appear: but the true lover will make no account of the former. C.

VER. 8. Our sister. Christ styles the Church his own and the synagogue's sister, promising her many benefits. W.—The relations of the spouse wish to have her married, though she seemed young. Eze. xvi. 7.—Spoken to, concerning marriage, omits consummation. Gen. xxiv. 6. Dan. xiii. 57. C.—The synagogue had but few to give her proper instructions. M.—But Christ would provide for her, if she were not wanting to herself. H.

VER. 9. Cedar. Procuring for her a rich and steady husband to protect her. These are the words of the bridegroom. The Christian Church seemed weak at first. But her pastors and martyrs caused her to triumph over all the powers of hell. C.—Those who correspond with the first grace, are furnished with others. M.

VER. 11. The. The bridegroom, in the character of a countryman, asserts that he would not give his vineyard or spouse (C.) for all the king's riches.

VER. 12. Before me. I am satisfied with my spouse.—The peaceable. Heb. and Sept. "Solomon." H.—Retain them, and also pay the keepers their wages. I envy not all the treasures of the world; nor would put them in competition with my vineyard, or spouse. The synagogue of Moses and Solomon degenerated, while the Church of Christ has continued faithful, and has always scarce good workmen. S. Greg. Ven. Bede, &c. C.

VER. 13. Hearken. The seventh morning is come, and I must depart to the mountains. C. ii. 17. and iv. 6. Christ, before his ascension, exhorts his Church to present her petitions. He is always ready to hear her, and to grant her aid, in every emergency. See S. Amb. de Virg. xvi. 99.—The virtuous pray that her requests may be granted, (H.) and are eager to know what they are. M.

VER. 14. Flee. The Church consents that her beloved should ascend to heaven, as he still remains with her. Ven. Bede. S. Bern. ser. ix. Qui habet man bringeth for the fruit thereof a thousand pieces of silver.

12 My vineyard is before me. A thousand are for thee, the peaceable, and two hundred for them that keep the fruit thereof.

C.—The whole Church militant requests that he would ascend thither, for the good of all his servants, begging for an abundant supply of grace, that we may ascend the ~~high~~ mountains of perfect charity, and zeal for God's honour; and 13 Thou that dwellest in the gardens, the friends hearken: make me hear thy voice.

14 Flee away, O my beloved, and be like to the roe, and to the young hart upon the mountains of aromatic spices.

that he would make our souls such hills and gardens, adorned with all the flowers and fruits of virtue, in which he may vouchsafe to dwell. Amen. W.—Flee to heaven, and draw me with thee. C. i. 4. M.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM.

THIS book is so called, because it treats of the excellence of Wisdom, the means to obtain it, and the happy fruits it produces. It is written in the person of Solomon, and contains his sentiments. But it is uncertain who was the writer. It abounds with instructions and exhortations to kings and magistrates to administer justice in the commonwealth, teaching all kinds of virtues under the general names of justice and wisdom. It contains also many prophecies of Christ's coming, passion, resurrection, and other Christian mysteries. The whole may be divided into three parts: In the six first chapters, the author admonishes all superiors to love and exercise justice and wisdom. In the next three, he teacheth that wisdom proceedeth only from God, and is procured by prayer, and a good life. In the other ten chapters, he sheweth the excellent effects, and utility of wisdom and justice. Ch.—Their authority is surely greater than that of the Jews, (C.) whom Prot. choose to follow. H.—Before they attack us, they must, however, answer this prescription. C.—S. Iren. Clem. Alex. Origen, S. Athan. &c. attribute this book to Solomon; and, though S. Jerom and S. Aug. call this in question, they maintain its divine authority. Sometimes the Fathers abstain from urging it against the Jews, because they rejected it, for the same reason as our Saviour proved the immortality of the soul, against the Sadducees, from the books of Moses alone, though other texts might have been adduced. The Councils of Carthage, 419, Florence, Trent, &c. declare this book canonical. (W.) agreeably to the ancient Fathers. S. Aug. Præd. xiv. and de Civ. Dei. xvii. 20. &c.—Philo (S. Jer.) the elder, (W. M.) one of the Sept. (Geneb.) might compile this work from the sentences of Solomon, preserved by tradition, as Sirach's son did that of Ecclesiasticus; (W.) or it is styled "Solomon's Wisdom," (Sept. H.) on account of its resembling his works, in like manner as the Second of Kings is called Samuel's, though he wrote none of that book. W.—Sixtus (Bib. viii. hæc. ix.) and others, maintain, that this was written originally in Heb. and some think by Solomon; being translated by the Sept. But these go too far. C.—The nine first chapters seem, however, to be the production of Solomon, though the latter may have been added by the Greek translator, (Houbigant) who must, therefore, have been divinely inspired. H.—The sentiments are very grand, (C.) and contain a prediction of the sufferings of the just one, whence we may infer, that the name of the author was originally in the title, like that of all other prophets. The arguments which Calmet adduces, to prove that Solomon was not the author of the first part of this work, may easily be refuted. In the New Testament, that part is frequently quoted, whence we may gather, that it was allowed to be the work of Solomon. Houbig. præf. p. 176.—Some style this work Panaretos, as being an exhortation to all virtues. C.—All the five sapiential books (Prov. &c.) are cited under the title of Wisdom in the mass-book. Superiors are here admonished to act with justice, and taught that wisdom is to be obtained by prayer, and by a good life. C. ix. Its effects and utility (W.) form the subject of the latter part. See Apocrypha, vol. i. p. 597. H.

CHAP. I.

An exhortation to seek God sincerely, who cannot be deceived, and desireth not our death.

LOVE justice, "you that are the judges of the earth. Think of the Lord in goodness, and seek him in simplicity of heart:

2^b For he is found by them that tempt him not: and he sheweth himself to them that have faith in him.

3 For perverse thoughts separate from God: and his power, when it is tried, reproveth the unwise:

4 For wisdom will not enter into a malicious soul, nor dwell in a body subject to sins.

5 For the Holy Spirit of discipline will flee from the deceitful, and will withdraw himself from thoughts that are without understanding, and he shall not abide when iniquity cometh in.

6^a For the spirit of wisdom is benevolent, and will not acquit the evil speaker from his lips: ^dfor God is witness of his reins, and he is a true searcher of his heart, and a hearer of his tongue.

^a 3 Kings iii. 9. Isai. lvi. 1.—^b 2 Par. xv. 2.—^c Gal. v. 22.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Goodness. Entertain just sentiments of the Deity, and avoid all duplicity. This truth is placed in the strongest light in the five first chapters, or preface.

VER. 3. Unwise. He shews that their wisdom is all folly, and that they cannot withstand his power. C.—There are mortal sins of thought. W.

VER. 4. Subject. Or "enslaved to sin." H.—Soul and body are intimately connected, so that the actions of one defile the other, and banish wisdom.

VER. 5. Discipline. The instructive light of the Holy Ghost.—Understanding. Those who deny God or Providence, (C.) and lead a wicked life, are abandoned.

7^a For the Spirit of the Lord hath filled the whole world: and that which containeth all things, hath knowledge of the voice.

8 Therefore he that speaketh unjust things, cannot be hid, neither shall the chastising judgment pass him by.

9 For inquisition shall be made into the thoughts of the ungodly, and the hearing of his words shall come to God, to the chastising of his iniquities.

10 For the ear of jealousy heareth all things, and the tumult of murmuring shall not be hid.

11 Keep yourselves, therefore, from murmuring, which profiteth nothing, and refrain your tongue from detraction, for an obscure speech shall not go for nought: and the mouth that believeth, killeth the soul.

12 Seek not death in the error of your life, neither procure ye destruction by the works of your hands.

13^c For God made not death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the living.

14 For he created all things, that they might be:

^d Jer. xvii. 10.—^e Isai. vi. 3.—^f Ezec. xviii. 32. and xxxiii. 11.

H.—Not abide. Εἰς τὴν αἰ: "He shall be corrected or manifested," shewing that he will not acquit the guilty, v. 6. M.—When Solomon fell, his wisdom ceased. Iniquity soon betrays itself. C.

VER. 7. That. S. Aug. reads hic, "this who," more correctly than hoc, as it refers to the spirit, (C.) which having made and filled all things, must be perfectly acquainted with every transaction. H.

VER. 10. Jealousy. God is strong and jealous. Ex. xx. C.—He examines the smallest deviation from the paths of rectitude. H.

VER. 12. Seek not with such eagerness (zelare) your own ruin, (C.) by an and he made the nations of the earth for health: and there is no poison of destruction in them, nor kingdom of hell upon the earth.

15 For justice is perpetual and immortal.

16 But the wicked, with works and words have called it^a to them: and esteeming it a friend, have fallen away, and have made a covenant with it: because they are worthy to be of the part thereof.

CHAP. II.

The vain reasonings of the wicked: their persecuting the just, especially the Son of God.

FOR they have said, reasoning with themselves, but not right: ^bThe time of our life is short and tedious, and in the end of a man there is no remedy, and no man hath been known to have returned from hell:

2 For we are born of nothing, and after this we shall be as if we had not been: for the breath in our nostrils is smoke: and speech a spark to move our heart,

3 Which being put out, our body shall be ashes, and our spirit shall be poured abroad as soft air, and our life shall pass away as the trace of a cloud, and shall be dispersed as a mist, which is driven away by the beams of the sun, and overpowered with the heat thereof:

4 And our name in time shall be forgotten, and no man shall have any remembrance of our works.

5 ^cFor our time is as the passing of a shadow, and there is no going back of our end: for it is fast sealed, and no man returneth:

6 ^dCome, therefore, and let us enjoy the good things that are present, and let us speedily use the creatures as in youth.

7 Let us fill ourselves with costly wine, and ointments: and let not the flower of the time pass by us.

8 Let us crown ourselves with roses, before they be withered: let no meadow escape our riot.

9 Let none of us go without his part in luxury: let us every where leave tokens of joy: for this is our portion, and this our lot.

10 Let us oppress the poor just man, and not spare the widow, nor honour the ancient grey hairs of the aged.

our life, (W) or rather throw not the blame on death, as if you were necessitated to sin. God created man to be immortal.

VER. 14. Health. Good. Gen. i. 31. C.—Poison, or medicine, (W.) medicamentum. W.—Poison and wild beasts become noxious to man only after sin. It is this which infects the veins. All may derive an antidote from Jesus Christ.

VER. 16. It. Sept. avrov.—Death. The wicked strive (M.) to draw upon themselves the second death (C.) as they will not repent. W. Is. xxviii. 15. H.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Right. He shews how the wicked brought death into the world, and expresses the sentiments of the epicureans, as in Ecclesiastes. The six first chapters are a sort of paraphrase of the nine first of Proverbs, in which the attractions of virtue and of pleasure are contrasted, &c. C.—Remedy. Lit. "refreshment." Sept. "healing."—Hell, or the grave. H.—They reject as fabulous, the accounts of people being raised to life by miracle. C.—They suppose that the soul is mortal, and that there is neither reward nor punishment after death. W.

VER. 2. Nothing. Sept. "by chance." The epicureans imagined that the first man was produced by the conflux of atoms. Lucret. i. 5. C.—Smoke, or vanishes like it.—And speech. Budeus would substitute "a little spark."—Speech may be used for "thing." Our life is something like a spark. M.—Speech is an effect of the rational soul, as a spark comes from fire. C.

VER. 5. Sealed, like one in the tomb. Matt. xxvii. 66. The epicureans were well convinced of the fragility of our nature: but they drew false inferences from it, pretending that we should enjoy ourselves now, as there will be no future life. This they ought to have proved. C.

VER. 6. Come. From the disbelief of future rewards and punishments proceeds the epicure's life. W.

11 But let our strength be the law of justice: for that which is feeble is found to be nothing worth.

12 Let us, therefore, lie in wait for the just, because he is not for our turn, and he is contrary to our doings, and upbraideth us with transgressions of the law, and divulgeth against us the sins of our way of life.

13 ^aHe boasteth that he hath the knowledge of God, and calleth himself the son of God.

14 ^bHe is become a censurer of our thoughts.

15 He is grievous unto us, even to behold: for his life is not like other men's, and his ways are very different.

16 We are esteemed by him as triflers, and he abstaineth from our ways as from filthiness, and he preferreth the latter end of the just, and glorieth that he hath God for his father.

17 Let us see then if his words be true, and let us prove what shall happen to him, and we shall know what his end shall be.

18 ^cFor if he be the true son of God, he will defend him, and will deliver him from the hands of his enemies.

19 Let us examine him by outrages and tortures, that we may know his meekness, and try his patience.

20 ^dLet us condemn him to a most shameful death: for there shall be respect had unto him by his words.

21 These things they thought, and were deceived: for their own malice blinded them.

22 And they knew not the secrets of God, nor hoped for the wages of justice, nor esteemed the honour of holy souls.

23 ^eFor God created man incorruptible, and to the image of his own likeness he made him.

24 ^fBut by the envy of the devil, death came into the world:

25 And they follow him that are of his side.

CHAP. III.

The happiness of the just: and the unhappiness of the wicked.

BUT the souls of the just are in the hand of God, and the torment of death shall not touch them.

2 In the sight of the unwise they seemed to die: and their departure was taken for misery:

VER. 7. Time. Sept. Alex. "of spring." H.—Youth is the spring of life. The voluptuous conclude, from the transitory nature of things, that we should make use of them. Would it not be more rational to despise them? C.

VER. 11. Worth. Strange maxims! which few will dare to proclaim, though they act according to them. C.

VER. 12. Just. Infidels are not content to live in riot: they also persecute the just. W.—This passage points out the conduct of the Jews towards our Saviour, in so striking a manner, that Grotius would assert it has been altered by some Christian. But the Fathers adduce it as a clear prediction (C.) of the Jewish malice. Matt. xxvii. 41. Mar. xiv. 53. W.

VER. 13. Knowledge. The prophets spoke to sinners in the name of God, and many of them lost their lives in the cause. Christ appeared as a new star, to promote their welfare; yet this only serves to irritate them. C. Jo. viii. 16.

VER. 20. Words. Or he shall be punished for what he has said. Syr. Vat. &c. Matt. xxvi. 61. C.—We shall hence form a judgment of his real merits (M.) unless this be spoken ironically; as if the just had foolishly flattered him self with the divine protection. Matt. xxvii. 48. H.

VER. 22. Secrets. The disbelief of mysteries leads to a dissolute life, and to the persecution of the just. W.—The pagans knew not the advantages of suffering, and even the apostles were ignorant of the mystery of the cross, till after the resurrection. C.

VER. 24. Envy. Lucifer thought that the honour of the hypostatic union (C.) belonged to the angelical, rather than to the human nature; and thus he was guilty of envy, (H.) and strove to become like the most High. Is. xiv. 11. S. Bern. ser. xvii. in Cant. Corn. A. Lap. &c.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Of death, is not in Sept. During life the just are protected by God, (Lu. xii. 7.) and still more in death. This passage is very appli

3 And their going away from us, for utter destruction: but they are in peace.

4 And though in the sight of men they suffered torments, their hope is full of immortality.

5 Afflicted in few things, in many they shall be well rewarded: because God hath tried them, and found them worthy of himself.

6 As gold in the furnace, he hath proved them, and as a victim of a holocaust, he hath received them, and in time there shall be respect had to them.

7 ^aThe just shall shine, and shall run to and fro like sparks among the reeds.

8 ^bThey shall judge nations, and rule over people, and their Lord shall reign for ever.

9 They that trust in him shall understand the truth: and they that are faithful in love, shall rest in him: for grace and peace are to his elect.

10 But the wicked shall be punished according to their own devices: who have neglected the just, and have revolted from the Lord.

11 For he that rejecteth wisdom, and discipline, is unhappy: and their hope is vain, and their labours without fruit, and their works unprofitable.

12 Their wives are foolish, and their children wicked.

13 Their offspring is cursed, for happy is the barren: and the undefiled, that hath not known bed in sin, she shall have fruit in the visitation of holy souls.

14 ^cAnd the eunuch, that hath not wrought iniquity with his hands, nor thought wicked things against God: for the precious gift of faith shall be given to him, and a most acceptable lot in the temple of God.

15 For the fruit of good labours is glorious, and the root of wisdom never faileth.

16 But the children of adulterers shall not come to perfection, and the seed of the unlawful bed shall be rooted out.

17 And if they live long, they shall be nothing cable to martyrs. C.—Temporal death is to the just the road to happiness, where they shall not incur damnation, or the torment of death. Though the martyrs seem to be utterly destroyed, they pass to joys eternal and unspeakable. W.

VER. 2 Woe. In this the wicked are not under a mistake; but they err when they suppose that the just shall be no more. If the hopes of the pious were confined to this world, they would be the most miserable of all. 1 Cor. xv. 19. C.

VER. 6. Holocaust. The sufferings (M.) which they have voluntarily endured, cause them to be pleasing to God. H. Zac. xiii. 9.—Time of judgment, or of death. C.—Sept. "at the time of their visitation, they shall shine, and," &c. v. 7. Matt. xiii. 43. H. Zac. xii. 6.

VER. 8. Judge. All the just shall approve of God's condemning the wicked. W.—They shall be invested with power, (Apoc. ii. 26. Matt. xix. 28.) which, like that of Christ, will be of a spiritual nature, (H.) and will appear most terrible at the last day. Matt. xxviii. 18. Apoc. xix. 6. C.

VER. 9. Elect. Sept. add, "and a visitation for his saints." Charity secures both faith and hope; which, without it, are unavailing to happiness. H.—Those who have the virtue of hope, will await the completion of God's promises.

VER. 12. Foolish. Dissolute, as the sequel shews. Prov. ix. 13. Rom. i. 26. The family of the wicked imitate his conduct, and become his torment. C.—This is often the case. In the moral sense, the sensuality and works of the impious are corrupt. W.

VER. 13. Barren. The Jews deemed this a reproach. But it is better than to have children by a crime. M.—Fruit. Her good works shall serve instead of children for her glory, at the hour of death.

VER. 16. Perfection. Lit. "shall be in consummation," or wholly destroyed. H.—They shall not come to age, or Sept. "initiated." The pagans excluded the base-born from their mysteries, as the Church does from holy orders; and experience shews, that the fruits of adultery are often miserable, (C.) and while they imitate their parents they can have no hope. v. 18.

regarded, and their last old age shall be without honour.

18 And if they die quickly, they shall have no hope, nor speech of comfort in the day of trial.

19 For dreadful are the ends of a wicked race.

CHAP. IV.

The difference between the chaste and the adulterous generations: and between the death of the just, and the wicked.

O HOW beautiful is the chaste generation with glory: for the memory thereof is immortal because it is known both with God and with men.

2 When it is present, they imitate it: and they desire it, when it hath withdrawn itself, and it triumpheth crowned for ever, winning the reward of undefiled conflicts.

3 But the multiplied brood of the wicked shall not thrive, and bastard slips shall not take deep root, nor any fast foundation.

4 ^dAnd if they flourish in branches for a time, yet standing not fast, they shall be shaken with the wind, and through the force of winds they shall be rooted out.

5 For the branches not being perfect, shall be broken, and their fruits shall be unprofitable, and sour to eat, and fit for nothing.

6 For the children that are born of unlawful beds, are witnesses of wickedness against their parents in their trial.

7 But the just man, if he be prevented with death, shall be in rest.

8 For venerable old age is not that of long time, nor counted by the number of years: but the understanding of a man is grey hairs.

9 And a spotless life is old age.

10 ^eHe pleased God, and was beloved, and living among sinners, he was translated.

11 He was taken away, lest wickedness should alter his understanding, or deceit beguile his soul.

VER. 18. Trial. Lit. "of knowing" (H.) the works of all. The crime of adulterers is not imputed to their offspring; and it sometimes happens, that the children of saints are cast away.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Glory. The offspring of the chaste is happy, (C.) and honourable; (H.) very different from that of adulterers. C.—Bodily chastity is a great virtue; but purity of faith is more requisite to please God, being the foundation of all virtues. W.

VER. 2. Itself. Virtue extorts the esteem even of worldlings. Antiochus wept for Onias. 2 Mac. iv. 37. C.—Sublatum ex oculis querimus invidi. Ilor. iii. od. 24.—Conflicts. In the cause of continence. C.

VER. 3. Slips. Vitulumina, a word, to which the people were so habituated, that it could not be altered. S. Aug. de Doct. xii.—Yet some read better (C.) plantationes. S. Bonav. Lyrar.—The offspring of the unchaste will not prosper. C. iii. 16.

VER. 6. Beds. Lit. "sleep," somnis, ἐννοειν. C. vii. 2. H.—Whether the children live or die, they are a reproach to their parents, as those who see them enquire about their birth.

VER. 7. Death. He is always ready; but dies in his youth. C.—Whenever death comes, it is for his advantage, and if he depart in his youth, his immaculate life is to be preferred before the old age of the wicked. v. 16. W.

VER. 11. Away. Like Enoch. Gen. v. 24. Heb. xi. 5. C.—"Bad conversations corrupt the best manners." 1 Cor. xv. 33. Is. lvii. 1. But could not God have supported the just under temptation? Undoubtedly. His judgments are unsearchable. S. Aug. de Præd. xiv. C.—The holy doctor thence proves, that those who die in a just state, might have forfeited it, if they had lived longer. God knew this possibility, and that it would not take place, and his foreknowledge agrees with man's free-will, which some, inclining to Pelagianism, would controvert. They objected to this authority; and he was therefore obliged to prove that the book of Wisdom is canonical. Ib. W.

VER. 12. Bewitching. Thus the pleasures and goods of the world are well described. For as fascination consists in a delusion of the people, who suppose things, and the wandering of concupiscence overturneth the innocent mind.

13 Being made perfect in a short space, he fulfilled a long time.

14 For his soul pleased God: therefore he hastened to bring him out of the midst of iniquities: but the people see this, and understand not, nor lay up such things in their hearts:

15 That the grace of God, and his mercy is with his saints, and that he hath respect to his chosen.

16 But the just that is dead, condemneth the wicked that are living, and youth soon ended, the long life of the unjust.

17 For they shall see the end of the wise man, and shall not understand what God hath designed for him, and why the Lord hath set him in safety.

18 They shall see him, and shall despise him: but the Lord shall laugh them to scorn.

19 And they shall fall after this without honour, and be a reproach among the dead for ever: for he shall burst them puffed up and speechless, and shall shake them from the foundations, and they shall be utterly laid waste: they shall be in sorrow, and their memory shall perish.

20 They shall come with fear at the thought of their sins, and their iniquities shall stand against them to convict them.

CHAP. V.

The fruitless repentance of the wicked in another world: the reward of the just.

THEN shall the just stand with great constancy against those that have afflicted them, and taken away their labours.

2 These seeing it, shall be troubled with terrible fear, and shall be amazed at the suddenness of their unexpected salvation,

3 Saying within themselves, repenting, and groaning for anguish of spirit: These are they, whom we had sometime in derision, and for a parable of reproach.

4 "We fools esteemed their life madness, and their end without honour.

5 Behold, how they are numbered among the children of God, and their lot is among the saints.

6 Therefore we have erred from the way of truth, and the light of justice hath not shined unto us, and the sun of understanding hath not risen upon us.

that their senses are deceived by vain appearances; so it is the mistake of worldlings to believe that the objects of their desires are real goods, and contain no danger.

VER. 19. Speechless. The damned shall have no excuse, being condemned by their own conscience, (W.) which shall be instead of a thousand witnesses. M.—In three words, three different punishments are specified.

VER. 20. Against. Conscience will condemn or acquit those who have no other law. Rom. ii. 15. C.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Then. At the day of judgment. The just and the reprobate know each other's condition. Lu. xvi. 20.—Labours. Defrauding them of their wages, (Lev. xix. 13) or plundering them. Sept. "despised, (C.) or frustrated his labours." H.—Worldlings deride those who strive to obtain the goods of eternity, (C.) and think they labour in vain. W.

VER. 3. Within. Or among themselves.—Repenting. In despair.—Reproach. We diverted ourselves with turning them to ridicule. C.—This change of sentiment (H.) proceeds not from the love of virtue, and is useless. W.

VER. 5. God. As they styled themselves truly, through the merits of Christ. C. ii. 18.

VER. 6. Understanding is not in the Rom. (C.) or Alex. copy. H.—Some read 'of justice.' Ephes. v. 11. C.

VER. 9. Post Sept. "fame."—

7 We wearied ourselves in the way of iniquity and destruction, and have walked through hard ways, but the way of the Lord we have not known.

8 What hath pride profited us? or what advantage hath the boasting of riches brought us?

9 "All those things are passed away like a shadow, and like a post that runneth on,

10 "And as a ship, that passeth through the waves: whereof when it is gone by, the trace cannot be found, nor the path of its keel in the waters:

11 Or as when a bird flieth through the air, of the passage of which no mark can be found, but only the sound of the wings beating the light air, and parting it by the force of her flight: she moved her wings, and hath flown through, and there is no mark found afterwards of her way:

12 Or as when an arrow is shot at a mark, the divided air quickly cometh together again, so that the passage thereof is not known:

13 So we also being born, forthwith ceased to be: and have been able to shew no mark of virtue: but are consumed in our wickedness.

14 Such things as these the sinners said in hell:

15 "For the hope of the wicked is as dust, which is blown away with the wind, and as a thin froth which is dispersed by the storm: and a smoke that is scattered abroad by the wind: and as the remembrance of a guest of one day that passeth by.

16 But the just shall live for evermore: and their reward is with the Lord, and the care of them with the Most High.

17 Therefore shall they receive a kingdom of glory, and a crown of beauty at the hand of the Lord: for with his right hand he will cover them, and with his holy arm he will defend them.

18 "And his zeal will take armour, and he will arm the creature for the revenge of his enemies.

19 He will put on justice as a breastplate, and will take true judgment instead of a helmet:

20 He will take equity for an invincible shield:

21 And he will sharpen his severe wrath for a spear, and the whole world shall fight with him against the unwise.

22 Then shafts of lightning shall go directly from the clouds, as from a bow well bent, they shall be shot out, and shall fly to the mark.

VER. 13. Virtue. How quickly passes the life of man, (Prov. xxx. 18.) and how few leave behind them a good reputation! Many of those whose actions are recorded in history, were falsely admired, (C.) and indeed the scourges of mankind. H.

VER. 14. Such, &c. This is not in the original; but supplied to complete the sense, (C.) as otherwise the following remarks would seem to be the confession of the damned in hell, (H.) or before the judgment-seat. Castro.—The past time is used to shew the certainty of the event. W.

VER. 15. Dust. Sept. Ps. i. 4. Lit. "like the tender beard, (H.) or wool." Lanugo. C.

VER. 16. Care. Lit. "thought." H.—God thinks and provides for them.

VER. 17. Crown. The Scripture thus represents the glory of the blessed, because there is nothing more desirable than independence. But the happiness of the elect will be to throw their crowns at the foot of God's throne, (Apoc. vii. 10. C.) in whom they find every advantage. S. Aug. ser. i. de vit. apost.

VER. 18. Armour. Sept. "he will take zeal, his complete armour." H.—See Is. lix. 17. Eph. vi. 16. C.—The misery of the damned is unchangeable. W.

23 And thick hail shall be cast upon them from the stone-casting wrath: the water of the sea shall rage against them, and the rivers shall run together in a terrible manner.

24 A mighty wind shall stand up against them, and as a whirlwind shall divide them: and their iniquity shall bring all the earth to a desert, and wickedness shall overthrow the thrones of the mighty.

CHAP. VI.

An address to the princes to seek after wisdom: she is easily found by those that seek her.

WISDOM is better than strength: and a wise man is better than a strong man.

2 Hear, therefore, ye kings, and understand, learn ye that are judges of the ends of the earth.

3 Give ear, you that rule the people, and that please yourselves in multitudes of nations:

4 ^bFor power is given you by the Lord, and strength by the Most High, who will examine your works: and search out your thoughts:

5 Because being ministers of his kingdom, you have not judged rightly, nor kept the law of justice, nor walked according to the will of God.

6 Horribly and speedily will he appear to you: for a most severe judgment shall be for them that bear rule.

7 For to him that is little, mercy is granted: but the mighty shall be mightily tormented.

8 ^cFor God will not except any man's person, neither will he stand in awe of any man's greatness: for he made the little and the great, and he hath equally care of all.

9 But a greater punishment is ready for the more mighty.

10 To you, therefore, O kings, are these my words, that you may learn wisdom, and not fall from it.

11 For they that have kept just things justly, shall be justified: and they that have learned these things, shall find what to answer.

12 Covet ye, therefore, my words, and love them, and you shall have instruction.

13 Wisdom is glorious, and never fadeth away, and is easily seen by them that love her, and is found by them that seek her.

VER. 22. Directly. Straight to the mark. M.

VER. 23. Casting. He alludes to the ballista, used to throw stones. Jos. x. vi. These comparisons shew the power of God over all nature. C.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Wisdom, &c. This is not in Greek, and seems out of its place, being taken from Prov. xvi. 82. or Eccles. ix. 16. C.—The connection with the preceding is observable in the next verse. H.

VER. 2. Kings. The author puts these words in the mouth of Solomon to give them greater weight, (C.) or rather, (H.) as the inspiration of God is the most unexceptionable authority, and it would be of no service to introduce a false personage speaking; these nine first chapters were written by Solomon, though the original has since disappeared. This has been the case with respect to the original text of Tobias and Judith, (Houbigant) as well as to that of the many canticles and parables which Solomon wrote. H.

VER. 4. Power. All power is from God, and to be respected, even though the magistrate should sometimes abuse his authority. W. Rom. xiii. 1.—They must render an account to the common master. 2 Par. xix. 6.

VER. 6. Rule. How severely did God chastise Moses, David, and Ezechias.

VER. 7. Little, and ignorant. Those in power ought to know, and to perform their duty.

VER. 8. Equally. In proportion to their exigencies, or he punishes all as they deserve. It is not clear that he speaks of grace, as the Pelagians would, assert, (C.) abusing this passage. See S. Aug. ep. cvi. or clxxxvii.

VER. 9. Mighty. This cannot be too often inculcated, (v. 6.) lest the great 14 She preventeth them that covet her, so that she first sheweth herself unto them.

15 He that awaketh early to seek her, shall not labour: for he shall find her sitting at his door.

16 To think, therefore, upon her, is perfect understanding: and he that watcheth for her, shall quickly be secure.

17 For she goeth about seeking such as are worthy of her, and she sheweth herself to them cheerfully in the ways, and meeteth them with all providence.

18 For the beginning of her is the most true desire of discipline.

19 And the care of discipline is love: and love is the keeping of her laws: and the keeping of her laws is the firm foundation of incorruption:

20 And incorruption bringeth near to God.

21 Therefore the desire of wisdom bringeth to the everlasting kingdom.

22 If then your delight be in thrones, and sceptres, O ye kings of the people, love wisdom, that you may reign for ever.

23 Love the light of wisdom, all ye that bear rule over peoples.

24 Now what wisdom is, and what was her origin, I will declare: and I will not hide from you the mysteries of God, but will seek her out from the beginning of her birth, and bring the knowledge of her to light, and will not pass over the truth:

25 Neither will I go with consuming envy: for such a man shall not be partaker of wisdom.

26 Now the multitude of the wise is the welfare of the whole world: and a wise king is the upholding of the people.

27 Receive, therefore, instruction by my words, and it shall be profitable to you.

CHAP. VII.

The excellence of wisdom: how she is to be found.

I MYSELF also am a mortal man, like all others, and of the race of him, that was first made of the earth, and in the womb of my mother I was fashioned to be flesh.

should forget God and themselves. C.—Each must render an account of his charge, and be punished accordingly if he offend. S. Greg. hom. ix. Evang. W.

VER. 10. Kings. Sept. "tyrants." But this title was not formerly odious.

VER. 11. Just. Sept. "holy." The Jewish judges were generally priests.—Answer. The sovereign judge, to whom Job and David confidently appeal.

VER. 13. Seek her. With the assistance of divine grace. Deut. xxx. 11. Rom. x. 6. The advantages of wisdom invite us to seek her. C.

VER. 15. Door. Ready to introduce herself. H. Prov. i. 20. and viii. 34. and ix. 1.

VER. 16. Think. With eager desire to be guided by her maxima. C.

VER. 17. Providence. To facilitate our just designs. Prov. ix. M.—She is on the watch to save us. H.

VER. 18. Discipline. We must begin with a sincere desire of instruction, and submit to correction, (C.) if we would come near to God. v. 20. H.—Wisdom is attained by this gradation. W.

VER. 21. Everlasting is not in Greek. Wisdom conducts to the throne, (v. 22. C.) which shall last for ever. H.—The sense of the Vulg. is very just. C. v. 17.

VER. 24. Now. The pagans attributed the invention of wisdom to Socrates, or to Pythagoras. But she proceeds from the bosom of God, and was practised long before their times.

VER. 25. Envy. I will not imitate such. C. vii. 13. Wisdom ought to be diffused. C.

VER. 26. World. The wicked is ransomed and healed by the wise. Philo.

3 And being born, I drew in the common air, and fell upon the earth, that is made alike, and the first voice which I uttered was crying, as all others do.

4 I was nursed in swaddling cloths, and with great cares.

5 For none of the kings had any other beginning of birth.

6 "For all men have one entrance into life, and the like going out.

7 Wherefore I wished, and understanding was given me: and I called upon God, and the spirit of wisdom came upon me:

8 And I preferred her before kingdoms and thrones, and esteemed riches nothing in comparison of her.

9 "Neither did I compare unto her any precious stone: for all gold, in comparison of her, is as a little sand; and silver, in respect to her, shall be counted as clay.

10 I loved her above health and beauty, and chose to have her instead of light: for her light cannot be put out.

11 "Now all good things came to me together with her, and innumerable riches through her hands,

12 And I rejoiced in all these: for this wisdom went before me, and I knew not that she was the mother of them all.

13 Which I have learned without guile, and communicate without envy, and her riches I hide not.

14 For she is an infinite treasure to men: which they that use, become the friends of God, being commended for the gifts of discipline.

15 And God hath given to me to speak as I would, and to conceive thoughts worthy of those things that are given me: because he is the guide of wisdom, and the director of the wise:

16 For in his hand are both we, and our words, and all wisdom, and the knowledge and skill of works.

17 For he hath given me the true knowledge of the things that are: to know the disposition of the whole world, and the virtues of the elements,

18 The beginning, and ending, and midst of the times, the alterations of their courses, and the changes of seasons,

19 The revolutions of the year, and the dispositions of the stars,

20 The natures of living creatures, and rage of wild beasts, the force of winds, and reasonings of men, the diversities of plants, and the virtues of roots,

21 And all such things as are hid, and not foreseen, I have learned: for wisdom, which is the worker of all things, taught me.

22 For in her is the spirit of understanding; holy, one, manifold, subtile, eloquent, active, undefiled, sure, sweet, loving that which is good, quick, which nothing hindereth, beneficent,

23 Gentle, kind, steadfast, assured, secure, having all power, overseeing all things, and containing all spirits: intelligible, pure, subtile:

24 For wisdom is more active than all active things; and reacheth every where, by reason of her purity.

25 For she is a vapour of the power of God, and a certain pure emanation of the glory of the Almighty God: and therefore no defiled thing cometh into her.

26 "For she is the brightness of eternal light, and the unspotted mirror of God's Majesty, and the image of his goodness.

27 And being but one, she can do all things: and remaining in herself the same, she reneweth all things, and through nations conveyeth herself into holy souls, she maketh the friends of God and prophets.

28 For God loveth none but him that dwelleth with wisdom.

29 For she is more beautiful than the sun, and above all the order of the stars: being compared with the light, she is found before it.

30 For after this cometh night, but no evil can overcome wisdom.

VER. 6. Out. Augustus asked a little before his death: "Have we acted our part (personæ) well enough?" Suet.—Life is like a stage; before and after which, all are equal.

VER. 15. Would. With sincerity, and in a sententious and captivating manner. 3 K. ix. 24. C.—Thoughts. Presumere has this meaning. H.—Presumption is far removed from true wisdom. Solomon manifested his greatness of soul by his buildings, and wise regulations.

VER. 18. Times. Or "things." S. Amb. VER. 27. Prophets. No age or nation has been left destitute by God. Among the Gentiles, Job was a saint. H.—The philosophers also knew God, (Rom. i. 21.) and taught many important truths, (C.) though they erred in other respects, and dishonoured their profession. True religion has always subsisted, and saints, (H.) yea even pagan philosophers, have borne witness to the truth. Clem. Alex. &c. C.

VER. 30. Evil. Or disgrace. Grot.—The brightest days are succeeded by night. The divine wisdom never fails, though that of man is subject to change, as Solomon has taught us by his own woful example. C.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. She. The uncreated wisdom is infinite; and the created is the most excellent of God's gifts. W.—Sweetly. God is every where present, (S. Bern.) and directeth all with ease. S. Aug. ep. ad Dard. q. i.

VER. 4. Works. Directing us to imitate them, as much as possible. H.—She teaches us how to refer all to God, (M.) while mere philosophers stop at vain speculations, and barren admiration of the Deity.

VER. 6. Are. Wisdom is an universal teacher. But she particularly inculcates virtue. All science which has not this tendency is vain. C.

VER. 8. Speaches. Rhetoric, (Grot.) or doubtful matters, as Solomon discov

2 Her have I loved, and have sought her out from my youth, and have desired to take for my spouse, and I became a lover of her beauty.

3 She glorifieth her nobility by being conversant with God: yea, and the Lord of all things hath loved her.

4 For it is she that teacheth the knowledge of God, and is the chooser of his works.

5 And if riches be desired in life, what is richer than wisdom, which maketh all things?

6 And if sense do work: who is a more artful worker than she of those things that are?

7 And if a man love iustice: her labours have great virtues: for she teacheth temperance, and prudence, and justice, and fortitude, which are such things as men can have nothing more profitable in life.

8 And if a man desire much knowledge: she knoweth things past, and judgeth of things to come: she knoweth the subtilties of speeches, and the solutions of arguments: she knoweth signs and wonders before they be done, and the events of times and ages.

9 I purposed, therefore, to take her to me to live with me: knowing that she will communicate to me of her good things, and will be a comfort in my cares and grief.

10 For her sake I shall have glory among the multitude, and honour with the ancients, though I be young:

11 And I shall be found of a quick conceit in judgment, and shall be admired in the sight of the mighty, and the faces of princes shall wonder at me.

12 They shall wait for me when I hold my peace, and they shall look upon me when I speak; and if I talk much, they shall lay their hands on their mouth.

13 Moreover, by the means of her I shall have immortality: and shall leave behind me an everlasting memory to them that come after me.

14 I shall set the people in order: and nations shall be subject to me.

15 Terrible kings hearing, shall be afraid of me: among the multitude I shall be found good, and valiant in war.

16 When I go into my house, I shall repose myself with her: for her conversation hath no bitterness, nor her company any tediousness, but joy and gladness.

17 Thinking these things with myself, and pondering them in my heart, that to be allied to wisdom is immortality,

18 And that there is great delight in her friendship, and inexhaustible riches in the works of her hands, and in the exercise of conference with her, wisdom, and glory in the communication of her words: I went about seeking, that I might take her to myself.

19 And I was a witty child, and had received a good soul.

20 And whereas I was more good, I came to a body undefiled.

21 And as I knew that I could not otherwise be continent, except God gave it, and this also was a point of wisdom, to know whose gift it was, I went to the Lord, and besought him, and said with my whole heart:

Solomon's prayer for wisdom.

GOD of my fathers,* and Lord of mercy, who hast made all things with thy word,

2 And by thy wisdom hast appointed man, that he should have dominion over the creature that was made by thee,

3 That he should order the world according to equity and justice, and execute justice with an upright heart:

4 Give me wisdom, that sitteth by thy throne, and cast me not off from among thy children:

5 ^bFor I am thy servant, and the son of thy handmaid, a weak man, and of short time, and falling short of the understanding of judgment and laws.

6 For if one be perfect among the children of men, yet if thy wisdom be not with him, he shall be nothing regarded.

7 ^cThou hast chosen me to be king of thy people, and a judge of thy sons and daughters:

8 And hast commanded me to build a temple on thy holy mount, and an altar in the city of thy dwelling-place, a resemblance of thy holy tabernacle, which thou hast prepared from the beginning:

9 ^dAnd thy wisdom with thee, which knoweth thy works, which then also was present when thou madest the world, and knew what was agreeable to thy eyes, and what was right in thy commandments.

10 Send her out of thy holy heaven, and from the throne of thy majesty, that she may be with me, and

M.—When Anaxagoras discovered the latter, he durst not write, but only instructed his disciples in secret, for fear of being taken for an atheist, or magician. Plut. in Nicias.—The sciences, which are now common, were formerly confined to few; and the people looked upon eclipses as so many prodigies. The wise man is possessed of all natural sciences, and can predict the changes of weather, &c. —Ages. Forming a judgment of futurity from past occurrences.

VER. 18. After me. He speaks to the great, who are more sensible of glory. Solomon's fame would have continued untarnished, if he had not fallen, (C.) and we may hope that he repented, and verified this prediction. H.—It is not certain that he obtained immortal glory. W.

VER. 15. Of me. Wisdom is the best protection.—Good and valiant. These are the two most essential qualifications of kings.

VER. 20. More good. The pre-existence of souls seems to be insinuated, though this is not clear, and the opinion is now rejected. Some are born with a better disposition for learning than others. S. Aug. con. Jul. iv. 3.—Yet none possess any seeds of virtue by nature, or are more infected than others, with original sin, as some heretics would assert. C.

VER. 21. Continent. All good must come from God. H.—Chastity cannot be preserved without his aid. S. Aug. Conf. vi. 11.—Yet this seems not to be the literal sense. Solomon prays for the acquisition of wisdom, (C. Eccli. vi. 28. and xv. 1. M.) which includes continence, religion, and every virtue. H.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. God. This prayer, which continues to the end of the book, is a paraphrase of 3 K. iii. 6. &c. with several additional instructions, to remind people in authority of the love of justice. C.

VER. 7. King. Hence it appears, that the sentiments of Solomon are expressed. W.—Judge. This is the first duty of a king.—Thy sons. He ought to govern his people, remembering that they are God's creatures and children.

VER. 8. Beginning. In thy eternal decrees, or when thou madest choice of Israel. H.—The temple was greater, but very like the tabernacle: only the court of the priests was divided from that of the people. In the desert, the whole camp was considered as the court of the latter. C.

VER. 9. With thee. The uncreated wisdom is God himself: that which is communicated to man is his gift. v. 10. W.—World. Prov. viii. 22. This request shews what idea Solomon had of God's majesty, for which he was preparing a temple.

may labour with me. that I may know what is acceptable with thee:

11 For she knoweth and understandeth all things, and shall lead me soberly in my works, and shall preserve me by her power.

12 So shall my works be acceptable, and I shall govern thy people justly, and shall be worthy of the throne of my father.

13 *For who among men is he that can know the counsel of God? or who can think what the will of God is?

14 For the thoughts of mortal men are fearful, and our counsels uncertain.

15 For the corruptible body is a load upon the soul, and the earthly habitation presseth down the mind that museth upon many things.

16 And hardly do we guess aright at things that are upon earth: and with labour do we find the things that are before us. But the things that are in heaven, who shall search out?

17 And who shall know thy thought, except thou give wisdom, and send thy holy Spirit from above:

18 And so the ways of them that are upon earth may be corrected, and men may learn the things that please thee?

19 For by wisdom they were healed, whosoever have pleased thee, O Lord, from the beginning.

CHAP. X.

What wisdom did for Adam, Noe, Abraham, Lot, Jacob, Joseph, and the people of Israel.

SHE preserved him, ^bthat was first formed by God, the father of the world, when he was created alone,

2 °And she brought him out of his sin, and gave him power to govern all things.

3 ^aBut when the unjust went away from her in his anger, he perished by the fury wherewith he murdered his brother.

4 °For whose cause, when water destroyed the earth, wisdom healed it again, directing the course of the just by contemptible wood.

5 'Moreover, when the nations had conspired together to consent to wickedness, she knew the just, and preserved him without blame to God, and kept him strong against the compassion for his son.

6 °She delivered the just man, who fled from the wicked that were perishing, when the fire came down upon Pentapolis:

7 Whose land, for a testimony of their wickedness, is desolate, and smoketh to this day, and the trees bear fruits that ripen not, and a standing pillar of salt is a monument of an incredulous soul.

8 For regarding not wisdom, they did not only slip in this, that they were ignorant of good things, but they left also unto men a memorial of their folly, so that in the things in which they sinned, they could not so much as lie hid.

9 But wisdom hath delivered from sorrow them that attend upon her.

10 °She conducted the just, when he fled from his brother's wrath, through the right ways, and shewed him the kingdom of God, and gave him the knowledge of the holy things, made him honourable in his labours, and accomplished his labours.

11 In the deceit of them that overreached him, she stood by him, and made him honourable.

12 She kept him safe from his enemies, and she defended him from seducers, and gave him a strong conflict, that he might overcome, and know that wisdom is mightier than all.

13 °She forsook not the just, when he was sold, but delivered him from sinners: she went down with him into the pit.

14 °And in bands she left him not, till she brought him the sceptre of the kingdom, and power against those that oppressed him: and shewed them to be liars that had accused him, and gave him everlasting glory.

15 °She delivered the just people, and blameless seed, from the nations that oppressed them.

16 She entered into the soul of the servant of God, and stood against dreadful kings in wonders and signs.

17 And she rendered to the just the wages of their labours, and conducted them in a wonderful way: and she was to them for a covert by day, and for the light of stars by night:

18 °And she brought them through the Red Sea, and carried them over through a great water.

19 But their enemies she drowned in the sea, and from the depth of hell she brought them out. °Therefore the just took the spoils of the wicked.

20 °And they sung to thy holy name, O Lord, and they praised with one accord thy victorious hand.

Other benefits of wisdom to the people of God.

SHE^a prospered their works in the hands of the holy prophet.

2 They went through wildernesses that were not inhabited, and in desert places they pitched their tents.

3 ^bThey stood against their enemies, and revenged themselves of their adversaries.

4 ^cThey were thirsty, and they called upon thee, and water was given them out of the high rock, and a refreshment of their thirst out of the hard stone.

5 For by what things their enemies were punished, when their drink failed them, while the children of Israel abounded therewith, and rejoiced:

6 By the same things they in their need were benefited.

7 For instead of a fountain of an ever-running river, thou gavest human blood to the unjust.

8 And whilst they were diminished for a manifest reproof of their murdering the infants, thou gavest to thine abundant water unlooked for:

9 Shewing by the thirst that was then, how thou didst exalt thine, and didst kill their adversaries.

10 For when they were tried, and chastised with mercy, they knew how the wicked were judged with wrath, and tormented.

11 For, thou didst admonish and try them as a father: but the others, as a severe king, thou didst examine and condemn.

12 For whether absent or present, they were tormented alike.

13 For a double^a affliction came upon them, and a groaning for the remembrance of things past.

14 For when they heard that by their punishments the others were benefited, they remembered the Lord, wondering at the end of what was come to pass.

15 For whom they scorned before, when he was thrown out at the time of his being wickedly exposed to perish, him they admired in the end, when they saw the event: their thirsting being unlike to that of the just.

16 But for the foolish devices of their iniquity, ^dbecause some being deceived worshipped dumb serpents, and worthless beasts, thou didst send upon them a multitude of dumb beasts for vengeance:

17 That they might know that by what things a man sinneth, by the same also he is tormented.

VER. 3. Their enemies. The Amalecites, (Ch.) and all others, who durst attack Moses. Deut. iii. 1.

VER. 5. By what things, &c. The meaning is, that God, who wrought a miracle to punish the Egyptians by thirst, when he turned all their waters into blood, (at which time the Israelites, who were exempt from those plagues, had plenty of water) wrought another miracle in favour of his own people in their thirst, by giving them water out of the rock. Ch.—The Egyptians were thus tormented with thirst, though so near the Nile; and the Hebrews were refreshed in a barren desert. Ex. vii. 20.

VER. 7. River. The Nile, to which the Egyptians gave divine honours. C.—Thou. Sept. "disturbed with corrupted blood, in punishment of the infatigable decree, thou gavest," &c.

18 For thy almighty hand, which made the world of matter without form, was not unable to send upon them a multitude of bears, or fierce lions,

19 Or unknown beasts of a new kind, full of rage either breathing out a fiery vapour, ^aor sending forth a stinking smoke, or shooting horrible sparks out of their eyes:

20 Whereof not only the hurt might be able to destroy them, but also the very sight might kill them through fear.

21 Yea, and without these, they might have been slain with one blast, persecuted by their own deeds, and scattered by the breath of thy power: but thou hast ordered all things in measure, and number, and weight.

22 For great power always belonged to thee alone: and who shall resist the strength of thy arm?

23 For the whole world before thee is as the least grain of the balance, and as a drop of the morning dew, that falleth down upon the earth.

24 But thou hast mercy upon all, because thou canst do all things, and overlookest the sins of men for the sake of repentance.

25 For thou lovest all things that are, and hatest none of the things which thou hast made: for thou didst not appoint, or make any thing hating it.

26 And how could any thing endure, if thou wouldst not? or be preserved, if not called by thee?

27 But thou sparest all: because they are thine, O Lord, who lovest souls.

CHAP. XII.

God's wisdom and mercy in his proceedings with the Chanaanites.

O HOW good and sweet is thy Spirit, O Lord, in all things!

2 And therefore thou chastisest them that err, by little and little: and admonishest them, and speakest to them, concerning the things wherein they offend: that leaving their wickedness, they may believe in thee, O Lord.

7 That the land which of all is most dear to thee, might receive a worthy colony of the children of God.

8 Yet even those thou sparedst as men, and didst send wasps forerunners of thy host, to destroy them by little and little.

9 Not that thou wast unable to bring the wicked under the just by war, or by cruel beasts, or with one rough word to destroy them at once:

10 *But executing thy judgments by degrees, thou gavest them place of repentance, not being ignorant that they were a wicked generation, and their malice natural, and that their thought could never be changed.

11 For it was a cursed seed from the beginning: neither didst thou for fear of any one give pardon to their sins.

12 For who shall say to thee: What hast thou done? or who shall withstand thy judgment? or who shall come before thee to be a revenger of wicked men? or who shall accuse thee, if the nations perish, which thou hast made?

13 For there is no other God but thou, ^bwho hast care of all, that thou shouldst shew that thou dost not give judgment unjustly.

14 Neither shall king, nor tyrant, in thy sight enquire about them whom thou hast destroyed.

15 For so much then, as thou art just, thou orderest all things justly: thinking it not agreeable to thy power, to condemn him who deserveth not to be punished.

16 For thy power is the beginning of justice: and because thou art Lord of all, thou makest thyself gracious to all.

17 For thou shewest thy power, when men will not believe thee to be absolute in power, and thou convince the boldness of them that know thee not.

18 But thou being master of power, judgest with tranquillity, and with great favour disposest of us: for thy power is at hand when thou wilt.

19 But thou hast taught thy people by such works, that they must be just and humane, and hast made thy children to be of a good hope: because in judging, thou givest place for repentance for sins.

20 For if thou didst punish the enemies of thy servants, and that deserved to die, with so great deliberation, giving them time and place whereby they might be changed from their wickedness:

21 With what circumspection hast thou judged thy own children, to whose parents thou hast sworn, and made covenants of good promises?

22 Therefore whereas thou chastisest us, thou scourgest our enemies very many ways, to the end that when we judge we may think on thy goodness: and when we are judged, we may hope for thy mercy.

23 Wherefore thou hast also greatly tormented them, who, in their life, have lived foolishly and unjustly, by the same things which they worshipped.

24 *For they went astray for a long time in the ways of error, holding those things for gods which are the most worthless among beasts, living after the manner of children without understanding.

25 Therefore thou hast sent a judgment upon them, as senseless children, to mock them.

26 But they that were not amended by mockeries and reprehensions, experienced the worthy judgment of God.

27 For seeing, with indignation, that they suffered by those very things which they took for gods, when they were destroyed by the same, they acknowledged him the true God, whom in time past they denied that they knew: for which cause the end also of their condemnation came upon them.

CHAP. XIII.

Idolaters are inexcusable: and those most of all that worship for gods the works of the hands of men.

BUT ^dall men are vain, in whom there is not the knowledge of God: and who by these good things that are seen, could not understand him that is, neither by attending to the works have acknowledged who was the workman:

2 *But have imagined either the fire, or the wind, or the swift air, or the circle of the stars, or the great water, or the sun and moon, to be the gods that rule the world.

3 With whose beauty, if they, being delighted, took them to be gods: let them know how much the Lord of them is more beautiful than they: for the first author of beauty made all those things.

4 Or if they admired their power, and their effects, let them understand by them, that he that made them, is mightier than they:

This species of idolatry was most ancient and general.—Water. The ocean, Neptune, &c. The Egyptians adored water above all, as the origin of other things. Hence

5 For by the greatness of the beauty, and of the creature, the creator of them may be seen, so as to be known thereby.

6 But yet as to these they are less to be blamed. For they perhaps err, seeking God, and desirous to find him.

7 *For being conversant among his works, they search: and they are persuaded that the things are good which are seen.

8 But then again they are not to be pardoned.

9 For if they were able to know so much, as to make a judgment of the world: how did they not more easily find out the Lord thereof?

10 But unhappy are they, and their hope is among the dead, who have called gods the works of the hands of men, gold and silver, the inventions of art, and the resemblances of beasts, or an unprofitable stone the work of an ancient hand.

11 ^bOr if an artist, a carpenter, hath cut down a tree proper for his use, in the wood, and skilfully taken off all the bark thereof, and with his art, diligently formeth a vessel profitable for the common uses of life,

12 And useth the chips of his work to dress his meat:

13 And taking what was left thereof, which is good for nothing, being a crooked piece of wood, and full of knots, carveth it diligently when he hath nothing else to do, and by the skill of his art fashioneth it, and maketh it like the image of a man:

14 Or the resemblance of some beast, laying it over with vermilion, and painting it red, and covering every spot that is in it:

15 And maketh a convenient dwelling-place for it, and setting it in a wall, and fastening it with iron,

16 Providing for it, lest it should fall, knowing that it is unable to help itself: for it is an image, and hath need of help.

17 And then maketh prayer to it, enquiring concerning his substance, and his children, or his marriage. And he is not ashamed to speak to that which hath no life:

18 And for health he maketh supplication to the weak, and for life prayeth to that which is dead, and for help calleth upon that which is unprofitable:

VER. 10. Of men. The pagans in general took the material statue to be the residence of a god. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. C. vii. 6. and viii. 13.—The more learned regarded the figures of the sun, &c. as his representations, while others supposed that Jupiter meant the heavens, Juno the air, Vulcan, fire, &c.—Hand. This is to abuse antiquity. The idol of the Arabs was a rough stone. In more polished nations, the workmanship of Praxiteles, Phidias, &c. was more regarded. C.—As no creature deserves to be esteemed a god, much less do the works of men's hands. W.

VER. 14. Vermilion. The ancients greatly esteemed this colour, (C.) and painted with it the statues of their gods on festival days, and the bodies of those who had the honour of a triumph. Pliny, xxxiii. 6.

VER. 15. Iron. Baruch (vi. 28) ridicules the same custom, and the other prophets intimate that the pagans took these statues to be really gods, otherwise their practice was no more blameable than that of the Jews, who fastened the cherubim to the ark with gold, and carried them. But the latter did not believe that the Deity resided personally in those images; no more than we do, that Christ is attached to his image on the cross. This distinguishes the behaviour of the faithful from that of pagans. O 19 And for a good journey he petitioneth him that cannot walk: and for getting, and for working, and for the event of all things he asketh him that is unable to do any thing.

CHAP. XIV.

The beginning of worshipping idols: and the effects thereof.

A GAIN, another designing to sail, and beginning to make his voyage through the raging waves, calleth upon a piece of wood more frail than the wood that carrieth him.

2 For this the desire of gain devised, and the workman built it by his skill.

3 But thy providence, O Father, governeth it: *for thou hast made a way even in the sea, and a most sure path among the waves,

4 Shewing that thou art able to save out of all things, yea, though a man went to sea without art.

5 But that the works of thy wisdom might not be idle: therefore men also trust their lives even to a little wood, and passing over the sea by ship, are saved.

6 ^dAnd from the beginning also, when the proud giants perished, the hope of the world fleeing to a vessel, which was governed by thy hand, left to the world seed of generation.

7 For blessed is the wood, by which justice cometh.

8 *But the idol that is made by hands, is cursed, as well it, as he that made it: he because he made it; and it because being frail it is called a god.

9 But to God the wicked and his wickedness are hateful alike.

10 For that which is made, together with him that made it, shall suffer torments.

11 Therefore there shall be no respect had even to the idols of the Gentiles: because the creatures of God are turned to an abomination, and a temptation to the souls of men, and a snare to the feet of the unwise.

12 For the beginning of fornication is the devising of idols: and the invention of them is the corruption of life.

13 For neither were they from the beginning, neither shall they be for ever.

14 For by the vanity of men they came into the world: and therefore they shall be found to come shortly to an end.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Him. The folly of exposing one's life, without necessity, to such imminent danger at sea, is great; though much less than to confide in idols, (C.) which are commonly made of more corruptible wood than ships. W.

VER. 3. Waves. Of the Red sea, (Vat.) through which the Israelites passed. (W.) or rather hast taught navigation to Noe, (v. 6.) and enabled him to build the finest vessel that ever appeared.

C.

VER. 15. Servants. This was at first done privately, and made the way for public idolatry. Calvin attempts to refute this assertion, maintaining that 15 For a father being afflicted with bitter grief, made to himself the image of his son, who was quickly taken away: and him who then had died as a man, he began now to worship as a god, and appointed him rites and sacrifices among his servants.

16 Then, in process of time, wicked custom prevailing, this error was kept as a law, and statues were worshipped by the commandment of tyrants.

17 And those whom men could not honour in presence, because they dwelt far off, they brought their resemblance from afar, and made an express image of the king, whom they had a mind to honour: that by this their diligence, they might honour as present, him that was absent.

18 And to the worshipping of these, the singular diligence also of the artificer helped to set forward the ignorant.

19 For he being willing to please him that employed him, laboured with all his art to make the resemblance in the best manner.

20 And the multitude of men, carried away by the beauty of the work, took him now for a god, that a little before was but honoured as a man.

21 And this was the occasion of deceiving human life: for men serving either their affection, or their kings, gave the incommunicable name to stones and wood.

22 And it was not enough for them to err about the knowledge of God, but whereas they lived in a great war of ignorance, they call so many and so great evils peace.

23 *For either they sacrifice their own children, or use hidden sacrifices, or keep watches full of madness,

24 So that now they neither keep life, nor marriage undefiled, but one killeth another through envy, or grieveth him by adultery:

25 And all things are mingled together, blood, murder, theft, and dissimulation, corruption and unfaithfulness, tumults and perjury, disquieting of the good,

26 Forgetfulness of God, defiling of souls, changing of nature, disorder in marriage, and the irregularity of adultery and uncleanness.

27 For the worship of abominable idols is the cause, and the beginning and end of all evil.

28 For either they are mad when they are merry:

* Deut. xviii. 10. Jer. vii. 6.

Laban's idols were more ancient, and not images. But this argument is nugatory, as theraphim may be rendered either images, (Prot. 1552.) or idols. Prot. 1608. The latter version is preferable, as Laban called them his gods, and the Greek and Latin have idols. It is also certain, that Ninus set up the image of his father, Jupiter Belus, to be honoured by the people, before Abraham's time; and the fathers agree, that the making of images in memory of the dead, was the first occasion of idolatry. S. Chrys. hom. 87. in Matt. S. Jer. in Osee ii. &c. W. — Nimrod ordered divine honours to be paid to his deceased son. Gul. Paris. Leg. — Yet this fact is not certain. Diophante, the Lacedemonian, assigns the same origin to idolatry as is here given. Grot.

VER. 18. Ignorant. The arts of sculpture and painting may be prejudicial, (C.) and were therefore banished by Moses from his republic, (Philo) as the Jews were so prone to idolatry. C. xv. 4. The case is different with us. H.

VER. 21. Name. It cannot with propriety be given to any but God. W. — The Jews explain this of the name Jehovah, which they will never pronounce. C.

VER. 23. Children. This was done by the Chanaanites, Hebrews, &c. C. xii. 23. Is. lviii. 5. — Hidden. The sacrifices of Ceres, Bacchus, &c. were performed in the dark, and horrible impurities were committed. Eph. v. 12. — Madness. — Before they be initiated in the mysteries of Ceres, or prostitute themselves in honour of the deities of impurity, (Jos. Ant. xviii. 4.) in the very temples. Quo non prostituta femina templo? Juv. ix. C. — Many crimes proceed from idolatry. W. or they prophecy lies, or they live unjustly, or easily forswear themselves.

29 For whilst they trust in idols, which are without life, though they swear amiss, they look not to be hurt.

30 But for both these things they shall be justly punished, because they have thought not well of God, giving heed to idols, and have sworn unjustly, in guile despising justice.

31 For it is not the power of them, by whom they swear, but the just vengeance of sinners always punisheth the transgression of the unjust.

CHAP. XV.

The servants of God praise him who hath delivered them from idolatry; condemning both the makers and the worshippers of idols.

BUT thou, our God, art gracious and true, patient, and ordering all things in mercy.

2 For if we sin, we are thine, knowing thy greatness: and if we sin not, we know that we are counted with thee.

3 For to know thee is perfect justice: and to know thy justice, and thy power, is the root of immortality.

4 For the invention of mischievous men hath not deceived us, nor the shadow of a picture, a fruitless labour, a graven figure with divers colours,

5 The sight whereof enticeth the fool to lust after it, and he loveth the lifeless figure of a dead image.

6 The lovers of evil things deserve to have no better things to trust in, both they that make them, and they that love them, and they that worship them.

7 ^bThe potter also tempering soft earth, with labour fashioneth every vessel for our service, and of the same clay he maketh both vessels that are for clean uses, and likewise such as serve to the contrary: but what is the use of these vessels, the potter is the judge.

8 And of the same clay by a vain labour he maketh a god: he who a little before was made of earth himself, and a little after returneth to the same out of which he was taken, when his life, which was lent him, shall be called for again.

9 But his care is, not that he shall labour, nor that his life is short, but he striveth with the goldsmiths and silversmiths: and he endeavoureth to do like the workers in brass, and counteth it a glory to make vain things.

^b Rom. ix. 21.

VER. 28. Mad. Like the Bacchanalian women, running crowned with serpents, and eating raw flesh. — Lies. The delusions of the devil, or the fraud of priests. — Easily. Those who believe not in religion, or in the power of him by whom they swear, can give no security by an oath. They fear no harm. v. 29. Yet they are perjured if they believe Jupiter, for example, to be a god, (S. Aug. ep. 54. ad Pub.) and if they do not, they are impious; abusing an oath, which is in itself sacred. C.

VER. 31. Just. Lit. "the punishment of sinners always walketh about," &c. H. — "The stone does not hear thee speaking, but God punishes the deceiver." S. Aug. — The pagans supposed that their idols sometimes punished perjury. Juv. Sat. viii. — It is God who does it. C.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Mercy. The pagans have no real respect for their gods: they fear them not. C. — But we know that Thou governest all, (H.) and wilt punish us, if we transgress. C.

VER. 4. Us. He wrote after the captivity, when the Jews abhorred idolatry, (C.) as they might also do at the beginning of Solomon's reign. H. — Picture. It is not certain that the art was known in the days of Moses, or that he expressly forbade it. Pliny says it was discovered at Corinth, by making the outlines of a man's shadow on the wall. Afterwards one colour was used, till a variety was found to represent things more perfectly, L. xxxv. 3. 4.) so as to deceive the senses, for which reason it is styled a fruitless labour. C.

10 For his heart is ashes, and his hope vain earth, and his life more base than clay :

11 Forasmuch as he knew not his maker, and him that inspired into him the soul that worketh, and that breathed into him a living spirit.

12 Yea, and they have counted our life a pastime, and the business of life to be gain, and that we must be getting every way, even out of evil.

13 For that man knoweth that he offendeth above all others, who of earthly matter maketh brittle vessels, and graven gods.

14 But all the enemies of thy people that hold them in subjection, are foolish, and unhappy, and proud beyond measure :

15 *For they have esteemed all the idols of the heathens for gods, which neither have the use of eyes to see, nor noses to draw breath, nor ears to hear, nor fingers of hands to handle, and as for their feet, they are slow to walk.

16 For man made them: and he that borroweth his own breath, fashioned them. For no man can make a god like to himself.

17 For being mortal himself, he formeth a dead thing with his wicked hands. For he is better than they whom he worshippeth, because he indeed hath lived, though he were mortal, but they never.

18 Moreover, they worship also the vilest creatures: but things without sense, compared to these, are worse than they.

19 Yea, neither by sight can any man see good of these beasts. But they have fled from the praise of God, and from his blessing.

CHAP. XVI.

God's different dealings with the Egyptians, and with his own people.

FOR these things, and by the like things to these, they were worthily punished, and were destroyed by a multitude of beasts.

2 Instead of which punishment, dealing well with thy people, ^bthou gavest them their desire of delicious food, of a new taste, preparing for them quails for their meat :

3 To the end, that they indeed desiring food, by means of those things that were shewn and sent among them, might loath even that which was necessary to satisfy their desire. But these, after suffering want for a short time, tasted a new meat.

4 For it was requisite that inevitable destruction should come upon them that exercised tyranny: but to these it should only be shewn how their enemies were destroyed.

5 *For when the fierce rage of beasts came upon these, they were destroyed by the bitings of crooked serpents.

6 But thy wrath endured not for ever, but they were troubled for a short time for their correction, having a sign of salvation, to put them in remembrance of the commandment of thy law.

7 For he that turned to it, was not healed by that which he saw, but by thee, the Saviour of all.

8 And in this thou didst shew to our enemies, that thou art he who deliverest from all evil.

9 *For the bitings of locusts, and of flies, killed them, and there was found no remedy for their life: because they were worthy to be destroyed by such things.

10 But not even the teeth of venomous serpents overcame thy children: for thy mercy came and healed them.

11 For they were examined for the remembrance of thy words, and were quickly healed, lest falling into deep forgetfulness, they might not be able to use thy help.

12 For it was neither herb, nor mollifying plaster, that healed them, but thy word, O Lord, which healeth all things.

13 *For it is thou, O Lord, that hast power of life and death, and ledest down to the gates of death, and bringest back again :

14 A man indeed killeth through malice, and when the spirit is gone forth, it shall not return, neither shall he call back the soul that is received :

15 But it is impossible to escape thy hand :

16 *For the wicked that denied to know thee, were scourged by the strength of thy arm, being persecuted by strange waters, and hail, and rain, and consumed by fire.

17 And which was wonderful, in water, which extinguisheth all things, the fire had more force: for the world fighteth for the just.

18 For at one time the fire was mitigated, that the beasts which were sent against the wicked might not be burnt, but that they might see, and perceive that they were persecuted by the judgment of God.

worshipped them, (H.) being infested with insects, frogs, locusts, &c. (C. xii. 23. Ex. viii. and x. C.) and seeing their first-born perish for their cruelty. W.

VER. 2. Meat. The second time, God gave them in his anger: but still he dealt favourably with his people, (Ex. xvi. 13. Num. xi. 7. C.) punishing them as a father, for their amendment. W.

VER. 18. Mitigated. The Egyptians could not banish the insects with fire

19 And at another time the fire, above its own power, burnt in the midst of water, to destroy the fruits of a wicked land.

20 *Instead of which things, thou didst feed thy people with the food of angels, and gavest them bread from heaven, prepared without labour; having in it all that is delicious, and the sweetness of every taste.

21 For thy sustenance shewed thy sweetness to thy children, and serving every man's will, it was turned to what every man liked.

22 ^bBut snow and ice endured the force of fire, and melted not: that they might know that the fire, burning in the hail, and flashing in the rain, destroyed the fruits of the enemies.

23 But this same again, that the just might be nourished, did even forget its own strength.

24 For the creature serving thee, the Creator, is made fierce against the unjust for their punishment: and abateth its strength for the benefit of them that trust in thee.

25 Therefore even then it was transformed into all things, and was obedient to thy grace, that nourisheth all, according to the will of them that desired it of thee:

26 That thy children, O Lord, *whom thou lovedst, might know that it is not the growing of fruits that nourisheth men, but thy word preserveth them that believe in thee.

27 For that which could not be destroyed by fire, being warmed with a little sunbeam, presently melted away:

28 That it might be known to all, that we ought to prevent the sun to bless thee, and adore thee at the dawning of the light.

29 For the hope of the unthankful shall melt away as the winter's ice, and shall run off as unprofitable water.

CHAP. XVII.

The Egyptian darkness.

FOR thy judgments, O Lord, are great, and thy words cannot be expressed: therefore undisciplined souls have erred.

2 ^aFor while the wicked thought to be able to have dominion over the holy nation, they themselves being fettered with the bonds of darkness, and a long night, and smoke, (Jans.) or the storm sent by God, did not exterminate the seiniphs, which had caused the magicians to acknowledge a miracle. Ex. viii. 18. The frogs and flies were already gone. Ib. 11. and 21. C.

Naz. or. xlix.—Liked. So that if a person wished to eat an egg, &c. the manna became one, without altering its appearance, which is the case in the blessed Eucharist. Valentia, 4 disp. 6. &c.—But this opinion supposes a continued miracle, which seems not necessary, and it is generally believed that the taste alone was changed, which S. Aug. and others restrain to God's faithful servants, otherwise the Hebrews could not have been disgusted with manna. Num. xi. 6. and xxi. 5. To these it was therefore simply manna. But the others found in it whatever they could desire. S. Greg. Mor. vi. 9.—Yet according to others, (H.) both enjoyed the same privilege. M.—We cannot account for men's fancies.

shut up in their houses, lay there exiled from the eternal providence.

3 And while they thought to lie hid in their obscure sins, they were scattered under a dark veil of forgetfulness, being horribly afraid, and troubled with exceeding great astonishment.

4 For neither did the den that held them, keep them from fear: for noises coming down troubled them, and sad visions appearing to them, affrighted them.

5 And no power of fire could give them light, neither could the bright flames of the stars enlighten that horrible night.

6 But there appeared to them a sudden fire, very dreadful: and being struck with the fear of that face, which was not seen, they thought the things which they saw to be worse:

7 *And the delusions of their magic art were put down, and their boasting of wisdom was reproachfully rebuked.

8 For they who promised to drive away fears and troubles from a sick soul, were sick themselves of a fear worthy to be laughed at.

9 For though no terrible thing disturbed them: yet being scared with the passing by of beasts, and hissing of serpents, they died for fear: and denying that they saw the air, which could by no means be avoided.

10 For whereas wickedness is fearful, it beareth witness of its condemnation: for a troubled conscience always forecasteth grievous things.

11 For fear is nothing else but a yielding up of the succours from thought.

12 And while there is less expectation from within, the greater doth it count the ignorance of that cause which bringeth the torment.

13 But they that during that night, in which nothing could be done, and which came upon them from the lowest and deepest hell, slept the same sleep,

14 Were sometimes molested with the fear of monsters, sometimes fainted away, their soul failing them: for a sudden and unlooked-for fear was come upon them.

15 Moreover, if any of them had fallen down, he was kept shut up in prison without irons.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. Souls. The Egyptians, who were punished with horrible darkness, as they had followed an unjust, dark, and cruel policy against the Hebrews.

VER. 2. Providence, and day-light, like incorrigible slaves, in prison. C.—The Egyptians were three days in darkness, (Ex. x. 22.) and the Gentiles continued without faith in God, till after Christ's resurrection. W.—Only few served him, before that glorious event. H.

VER. 12. Expectation. Or fear. Such an one is filled with a mortal anxiety

VER. 14. Them. From the sight of spectres, and remorse of conscience

16 For if any one were a husbandman, or a shepherd, or a labourer in the field, and was suddenly overtaken, he endured a necessity from which he could not fly.

17 For they were all bound together with one chain of darkness. Whether it were a whistling wind, or the melodious voice of birds, among the spreading branches of trees, or a fall of water running down with violence,

18 Or the mighty noise of stones tumbling down, or the running that could not be seen of beasts playing together, or the roaring voice of wild beasts, or a rebounding echo from the highest mountains: these things made them to swoon for fear.

19 For the whole world was enlightened, with a clear light, and none were hindered in their labours.

20 But over them only was spread a heavy night, an image of that darkness which was to come upon them. But they were to themselves more grievous than the darkness.

CHAP. XVIII.

The slaughter of the first-born in Egypt: the efficacy of Aaron's intercession, in the sedition on occasion of Core.

BUT thy saints had a very great light, and they heard their voice indeed, but did not see their shape. And because they also did not suffer the same things, they glorified thee:

2 And they that before had been wronged, gave thanks, because they were not hurt now: and asked this gift, that there might be a difference.

3 Therefore they received a burning pillar of fire for a guide of the way which they knew not, and thou gavest them a harmless sun of a good entertainment.

4 The others indeed were worthy to be deprived of light, and imprisoned in darkness, who kept thy children shut up, by whom the pure light of the law was to be given to the world.

5 And whereas they thought to kill the babes of the just: one child being cast forth, and saved to reprove them, thou tookest away a multitude of their children, and destroyedst them altogether in a mighty water.

6 For that night was known before by our fathers,

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Their. The Hebrews (M.) or rather the Egyptians' voice. The land of Gessen was preserved from these horrors, (C.) though such Egyptians as might be found there, were exposed to them; and their dismal lamentations made the people of God appreciate their own happiness. They are styled saints, (H.) as the Church is holy, and has always some saints in her society. Out of it there is no sanctity. W.

VER. 3. Therefore. "Instead of those things," (Gr.) darkness and complaints, (H.) God led away his people in triumph. Hab. iii. 3.—A harmless sun. A light that should not hurt or molest them; but that should be an agreeable guest to them; (Ch.) or the desert should receive them, where they should be provided with food. M.

VER. 4. Was. Lit. "began." H.—In Egypt, the Hebrews themselves were unacquainted with the law, which was given at their arrival at Sinai, and by means of the Greek version, and the propagation of the gospel, it was more divulged. C.—The unwritten law was, however, better preserved in that nation, than in any other: and the Jews were selected, in order that they might communicate the treasure to all. H.

VER. 5. One child. Viz. Moses. Ch.—He was preserved to be the leader of the Hebrews, when the Egyptians were drowned (W.) in the Red Sea. M.

that assuredly knowing what oaths they had trusted to, they might be of better courage.

7 So thy people received the salvation of the just, and destruction of the unjust.

8 For as thou didst punish the adversaries: so thou didst also encourage and glorify us.

9 For the just children of good men were offering sacrifice secretly, and they unanimously ordered a law of justice: that the just should receive both good and evil alike, singing now the praises of the fathers.

10 But on the other side there sounded an ill-according cry of the enemies, and a lamentable mourning was heard for the children that were bewailed.

11 And the servant suffered the same punishment as the master, and a common man suffered in like manner as the king.

12 So all alike had innumerable dead, with one kind of death. Neither were the living sufficient to bury them: for in one moment the noblest offspring of them was destroyed.

13 For whereas they would not believe any thing before by reason of the enchantments, then first upon the destruction of the first-born, they acknowledged the people to be of God.

14 For while all things were in quiet silence, and the night was in the midst of her course,

15 Thy Almighty word leaped down from heaven from thy royal throne, as a fierce conqueror into the midst of the land of destruction,

16 With a sharp sword carrying thy unfeigned commandment, and he stood and filled all things with death, and standing on the earth, reached even to heaven.

17 Then suddenly visions of evil dreams troubled them, and fears unlooked for came upon them.

18 And one thrown here, another there, half dead, shewed the cause of his death.

19 For the visions that troubled them foreshewed these things, lest they should perish, and not know why they suffered these evils.

20 But the just also were afterwards touched by an assault of death, and there was a disturbance of the multitude in the wilderness: but thy wrath did not long continue.

VER. 12. Noblest. The first-born (Ch.) of Pharaoh, and those of slaves and cattle, were slain. Ex. xii. C.

VER. 14. Course. This description of the decree, or angel of the Lord, is most magnificent. The Church applies it to Christ's nativity, who is thought to have been born at midnight. C.—It insinuated his coming, when the world should enjoy a profound peace, though buried in the darkness of ignorance. W.

VER. 17. Visions. These informed the Egyptians, that their miseries were not to be attributed to any natural cause. The dying proclaimed the same, as Moses had done. Ex. xi. 4.

21 *For a blameless man made haste to pray for the people, bringing forth the shield of his ministry, prayer, and by incense making supplication, withstood the wrath, and put an end to the calamity, shewing that he was thy servant.

22 And he overcame the disturbance, not by strength of body nor with force of arms, but with a word he subdued him that punished them, alleging the oaths and covenant made with the fathers.

23 For when they were now fallen down dead by heaps one upon another, he stood between and stayed the assault, and cut off the way to the living.

24 ^bFor in the priestly robe which he wore, was the whole world: and in the four rows of the stones, the glory of the fathers was graven, and thy Majesty was written upon the diadem of his head.

25 And to these the destroyer gave place, and was afraid of them: for the proof only of wrath was enough.

CHAP. XIX.

Why God shewed no mercy to the Egyptians. His favour to the Israelites. All creatures obey God's orders for the service of the good, and the punishment of the wicked.

BUT as to the wicked, even to the end there came upon them wrath without mercy. For he knew before also what they would do:

2 For when they had given them leave to depart, and had sent them away with great care, they repented, and pursued after them.

3 *For whilst they were yet mourning, and lamenting at the graves of the dead, they took up another foolish device: and pursued them as fugitives whom they had pressed to be gone:

4 For a necessity, of which they were worthy, brought them to this end: and they lost the remembrance of those things which had happened, that their punishment might fill up what was wanting to their torments:

5 And that thy people might wonderfully pass through, but they might find a new death.

VER. 24. Priestly. Lit. robe of the poderis, (H.) "reaching down to the feet," and made of sky-blue linen, with pomegranates and bells at the bottom. C.—The colours represented the four elements. H.—See S. Jer. ep. cxxviii. Joseph. iii. 8.—Fathers. The twelve descendants of Jacob, whose names appeared in the stones of the breast-plate. Ex. xxviii. 17.—Majesty. On a golden plate worn by the high priest on his forehead, was inscribed "Holiness to the Lord." Ib. xxxvi. C.—Sanctitas Jehova. M.

VER. 25. Afraid. Or shewed a regard for them. H.—Great is the power of a saint, of holy vestments, and of prayer. M.—Enough. God did not intend to exterminate his people, as he had done the first-born of Egypt. C.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Knew. God foresaw the malice of the Egyptians against his people, but was not the author of it. W.

VER. 2. Care. Lit. "solicitude," (H.) so that they would not allow them time to prepare victuals.

VER. 4. Necessity. God permitted them to be blinded by their own obstinacy. C.—They rushed headlong into the channel of the Red Sea. H.

VER. 6. Beginning. It seemed susceptible of any form; and the elements appeared to be of another nature. The fire burnt in water, the sea retired, &c. C. v. 21. and xvi. 24.

VER. 7. Field. Like a meadow, (C.) germinans, "growing grass." Sept. ^a H.—Pliny (xiii. 25.) attests, that "the Red Sea, and all the eastern ocean, are full of wood." The Hebrews passed with as much ease as in a desert, (Ps. cv. 9. Is. xlii. 18.) or place of pasture, while the sea seemed to be in quest of other channels. C. Gen. i. 9. H. commandments, that thy children might be kept without hurt.

7 For a cloud overshadowed their camp, and where water was before, dry land appeared, and in the Red Sea a way without hindrance, and out of the great deep a springing field:

8 Through which all the nation passed which was protected with thy hand, seeing thy miracles and wonders.

9 For they fed on their food like horses, and they skipped like lambs, praising thee, O Lord, who hadst delivered them.

10 For they were yet mindful of those things which had been done in the time of their sojourning, how the ground brought forth flies instead of cattle, and how the river cast up a multitude of frogs instead of fishes.

11 ^aAnd at length they saw a new generation of birds, when, being led by their appetite, they asked for delicate meats.

12 For to satisfy their desire, the quail came up to them from the sea: and punishments came upon the sinners, not without foregoing signs by the force of thunders: for they suffered justly according to their own wickedness.

13 For they exercised a more detestable inhospitality than any: others indeed received not strangers unknown to them, but these brought their guests into bondage that had deserved well of them.

14 And not only so, but in another respect also they were worse: for the others, against their will, received the strangers.

15 But these grievously afflicted them whom they had received with joy, and who lived under the same laws.

16 But they were struck with blindness: *as those others were at the doors of the just man, when they were covered with sudden darkness, and every one sought the passage of his own door.

17 For while the elements are changed in themselves, as in an instrument the sound of the quality is changed, yet all keep their sound: which may clearly be perceived by the very sight.

VER. 12. Thunders. Which took place at the destruction of Sodom, for their warning. C.

VER. 14. In another. Lit. "but there was another respect (or punishment) of them, because unwillingly they received strangers." Gen. xix. 1. H.—The Amorrites would not admit the Israelites. Num. xxi. 21. W.

VER. 15. Laws. Or "rights," justitiis. The Hebrews acknowledged the civil authority (M.) of Pharaoh, though they adopted not his religion. C. xvi. 4. H.

VER. 17. Changed. The meaning is, that whatever changes God wrought in the elements by miracles in favour of his people, they still kept their harmony by obeying his will. Ch.—He answers the objection of philosophers, who argued against the possibility of miracles, as being against the established laws of nature. But they induce no more confusion than the various strings of a harp, when they are touched with skill, though they have each their respective name and sound. The ancients frequently compared the harmony of the universe to a musical instrument. See plut. Macrob. som. ii.—Sight. Sept. add, "of what happened" (H.) in those miraculous changes.

VER. 18. Water. Men, &c. passed through the Red Sea, while frogs got into houses.

VER. 20. Therein. For the punishment of the Egyptians. C. xvi. 18. C.—Food. Manna. Ch.—Sept. "immortal food," ambrosia. H.—Place. This conclusion agrees very well with the preceding observations. But it seems something should be said respecting the original petition for wisdom; whence we conclude, with Grotius, that the work is imperfect; (C.) though this is by no means clear, as the prayer is sufficiently expressed in the nine first chapters, is not in the whole book, and God answers it, 3 K. ix. H.

18 For the things of the land were turned into things of the water: and the things that before swam in the water passed upon the land.

19 The fire had power in water above its own virtue, and the water forgot its quenching nature.

20 On the other side, the flames wasted not the flesh of corruptible animals walking therein, neither did they melt that good food, which was apt to melt as ice. For in all things thou didst magnify thy people, O Lord, and didst honour them, and didst not despise them, but didst assist them at all times, and in every place.

ECCLESIASTICUS.

THIS book is so called from a Greek word that signifies a preacher: because, like an excellent preacher, it gives admirable lessons of all virtues. The author was Jesus, the son of Sirach, of Jerusalem, who flourished about two hundred years before Christ. As it was written after the time of Esdras, it is not in the Jewish canon; but is received as canonical and divine by the Catholic Church, instructed by apostolical tradition, and directed by the Spirit of God. It was first written in Hebrew, but afterwards translated into Greek by another Jesus, the grandson of the author, whose prologue to this book is the following: (Ch.)

THE PROLOGUE.

THE knowledge of many and great things hath been shewn us by the law, and the prophets, and others that have followed them: for which things Israel is to be commended for doctrine and wisdom: because not only they that speak must needs be skilful, but strangers also both speaking and writing, may by their means become most learned. My grandfather, Jesus, after he had much given himself to a diligent reading of the law, and the prophets, and other books, that were delivered to us from our fathers, had a mind also to write something himself, pertaining to doctrine and wisdom: that such as are desirous to learn, and are made knowing in these things, may be more and more attentive in mind, and be strengthened to live according to the law. I entreat you, therefore, to come with benevolence, and to read with attention, and to pardon us for those things wherein we may seem, while we follow the image of wisdom, to come short in the composition of words: for the Hebrew words have not the same force in them, when translated into another tongue. And not only these, but the law also itself, and the prophets, and the rest of the books, have no small difference, when they are spoken in their own language. For in the eight and thirtieth year coming into Egypt, when Ptolemy Evergetes was king, and continuing there a long time, I found there books left, of no small nor contemptible learning. Therefore I thought it good, and necessary for me to bestow some diligence and labour to interpret this book: and with much watching and study, in some space of time, I brought the book to an end, and set it forth for the service of them that are willing to apply their mind, and to learn how they ought to conduct themselves, who purpose to lead their life according to the law of the Lord.

—If some forbear to urge the authority of this book, in disputes with the Jews, we need not be surprised, as there were other proofs against them. We often act with Plot. in the same manner, even using their version, &c. H.—It was alleged in the controversies about baptism and grace, and no one thought of rejecting its testimony. C. xxxiv. 30. S. Cyp. ep. 65. S. Aug. Bap. vi. 34. Grat. ii. 11. &c.—The Councils of Ephesus. 3d Carthage, (c. 47.) Francfort, 8th Toledo, and Trent, ought to settle all doubts on this head. The Jews themselves have a great regard for the book, (though the Talmud condemns it for admitting more persons than one in God) and seem to have copied many sentences from it into the two Syriac alphabets of Ben Sirā. This may be the work which S. Jerom (Pref. in Sal.) testifies he saw in Heb. as that text cannot at present be found. C. See ep. 115. D.—But this is no proof that it was not extant in S. Jerom's time, and the many variations between the Greek copies themselves and the Vulg. may owe their rise to the different translators omitting some parts of it. H.—The same person seems to have translated this and the former book into Latin in the earliest ages, though the present work is more obscure, because the Greek is less beautiful, of which the Rom. edit. is deemed the most correct; though the Compl. agrees better with the Vulg. He appears to have given frequently a double version, for fear of not having expressed the full sense in the first, unless the additions be his, or some other person's glosses, which have crept into the text. C.—ist this be the case, near one hundred verses ought to be cut off, yet as they are published without any distinction by the Church, perhaps it would be as well to adhere to the former sentiment, or to suspend our judgment. C. ix. 12. H.—Many of the Fathers quote this book as the production of Solomon, because it contains many of his sentences preserved by tradition, (M.) and resembles his works. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xvii. 20.—The Greek styles it "The Wisdom of Jesus, the son of Sirach." He has imitated (H.) the Proverbs to c. xxiv. Ecclesiastes to c. xli. 15. where wisdom ends her exhortation, and the Canticle in the remainder of the work, praising God and the great men of the nation, down to Simon II. Vales. in Euseb. iv. 22. C.—The last chapter contains a prayer, which may be in imitation of the book of Wisdom. This work is often styled Panarctos, a collection of pious maxims, (H.) or a "receptacle of all virtues." W.—Many think it was composed between A. M. 3711. and 3783; (Torniel) but it seems rather to have appeared in times of persecution. (c. 36.) after Philopator had been incensed against Simon II. for opposing his entrance into the sanctuary, (c. 1. 4. &c.) for which he ordered the Jews in Egypt to be cruelly butchered, (2 Mac.) and after Epiphanes, the Syrian monarch, had commenced his most cruel persecution of that people, and of Onias III. twenty-two years after the death of Simon II. CHAP. I.

All wisdom is from God, and is given to them that fear and love God.

ALL *wisdom is from the Lord God, and hath been always with him, and is before all time.

2 Who hath numbered the sand of the sea, and the drops of rain, and the days of the world? Who hath measured the height of heaven, and the breadth of the earth, and the depth of the abyss?

* 8 Kings iii. 9. and iv. 29.

CHAP. I. VER 1. Wisdom. In this book, Wisdom is taken for the Deity, the Son, or the gift communicated to men. Prov. iii. 19. Wisd. vii. 25. C.

VER 3. God. This is eternal and unsearchable, more than the sand of the sea, &c. Is. xl. 12. H.—Man cannot comprehend God's works. W. C.

VER 4. Created. Or "generated," if it be understood of the Son. S. Athan. Bos.—The wisdom which is given to man, was in God before the creation. Prov. viii. 22. C.—The decree respecting the incarnation was from eternity. M.

VER 5. Commandments. The wise will observe the law (Deut. iv. 6. H.) and 3 Who hath searched out the wisdom of God, that goeth before all things?

4 Wisdom hath been created before all things, and the understanding of prudence from everlasting.

5 The word of God on high is the fountain of wisdom, and her ways are everlasting commandments.

6 To whom hath the root of wisdom been revealed, and who hath known her wise counsels?

7 To whom hath the discipline of wisdom been rethe Scriptures. This verse is not in the Gr. of Rome, &c. but it is in the edit. of Complut. and Camerarius.

VER 9. In the Holy Ghost, or from himself. See Wisd. i. 5. an i vii. 22. Gr omits these words. C.

VER 11. Joy. Eternal glory is the fruit of the fear of the Lord; not that this virtue sufficeth, but it is the beginning, grounded on true faith, and bringeth forth other virtues, and fruits of the Holy Ghost, and a joyful crown in the end. W.—The virtuous enjoy or deserve honour. C.

vealed and made manifest? and who hath understood the multiplicity of her steps?

8 There is one most high Creator Almighty, and a powerful King, and greatly to be feared, who sitteth upon his throne, and is the God of dominion.

9 He created her in the Holy Ghost, and saw her, and numbered her, and measured her.

10 And he poured her out upon all his works, and upon all flesh, according to his gift, and hath given her to them that love him.

11 The fear of the Lord is honour, and glory, and gladness, and a crown of joy.

12 The fear of the Lord shall delight the heart, and shall give joy, and gladness, and length of days.

13 With him that feareth the Lord, it shall go well in the latter end, and in the day of his death he shall be blessed.

14 The love of God is honourable wisdom.

15 And they to whom she shall shew herself, love her by the sight, and by the knowledge of her great works.

16 *The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and was created with the faithful in the womb, it walketh with chosen women, and is known with the just and faithful.

17 The fear of the Lord is the religiousness of knowledge.

18 Religiousness shall keep and justify the heart, it shall give joy and gladness.

19 It shall go well with him that feareth the Lord, and in the days of his end he shall be blessed.

20 To fear God is the fulness of wisdom, and fulness is from the fruits thereof.

21 She shall fill all her house with her increase, and the storehouses with her treasures.

22 The fear of the Lord is a crown of wisdom, filling up peace and the fruit of salvation:

23 And it hath seen, and numbered her: but both are the gifts of God.

24 Wisdom shall distribute knowledge, and understanding of prudence: and exalteth the glory of them that hold her.

25 The root of wisdom is to fear the Lord: and the branches thereof are long-lived.

26 In the treasures of wisdom is understanding, and religiousness of knowledge: but to sinners wisdom is an abomination.

27 The fear of the Lord driveth out sin:

28 For he that is without fear, cannot be justified: for the wrath of his high spirits is his ruin.

29 A patient man shall bear for a time, and afterwards joy shall be restored to him.

VER. 16. Womb. Grace has prevented them. H.—They are free from evil dispositions. Wis. viii. 19. Job xxxi. 18.—Women; feminis, or rather seminis. C.—Gr. "it shall be intrusted to their seed." H.—"His mercy is fixed with their seed." Syr. M.—This includes both men and women.

VER. 17. Religiousness, or proper application of knowledge. H.—A learned impious man is most dangerous. This and the two next verses are not in Greek.

VER. 27. Sin, by vigilance or by repentance.

VER. 29. To him, as may be seen in the lives of the patriarchs.

VER. 32. Sinner. Such imagine that God's service is insupportable. W.

VER. 35. Faith, or fidelity. M.—The meek shall possess the land. Matt. v. 4 C.

30 A good understanding will hide his words for a time, and the lips of many shall declare his wisdom.

31 In the treasures of wisdom is the signification of discipline:

32 But the worship of God is an abomination to a sinner.

33 Son, if thou desire wisdom, keep justice, and God will give her to thee.

34 For the fear of the Lord is wisdom and discipline: and that which is agreeable to him, 35 Is faith, and meekness: and he will fill up his treasures.

36 Be not incredulous to the fear of the Lord: and come not to him with a double heart.

37 Be not a hypocrite in the sight of men, and let not thy lips be a stumbling-block to thee.

38 Watch over them, lest thou fall, and bring dishonour upon thy soul,

39 And God discover thy secrets, and cast thee down in the midst of the congregation:

40 Because thou camest to the Lord wickedly, and thy heart is full of guile and deceit.

CHAP. II.

God's servants must look for temptations: and must arm themselves with patience and confidence in God.

SON, ^bwhen thou comest to the service of God, stand in justice and in fear, and prepare thy soul for temptation.

2 Humble thy heart, and endure: incline thy ear, and receive the words of understanding: and make not haste in the time of clouds.

3 Wait on God with patience: join thyself to God, and endure, that thy life may be increased in the latter end.

4 Take all that shall be brought upon thee: and in thy sorrow endure, and in thy humiliation keep patience:

5 *For gold and silver are tried in the fire, but acceptable men in the furnace of humiliation.

6 Believe God, and he will recover thee: and direct thy way, and trust in him. Keep his fear, and grow old therein.

7 Ye that fear the Lord, wait for his mercy: and go not aside from him, lest ye fall.

8 Ye that fear the Lord, believe him: and your reward shall not be made void.

9 Ye that fear the Lord, hope in him: and mercy shall come to you for your delight.

10 Ye that fear the Lord, love him, and your hearts shall be enlightened.

11 My children, behold the generations of men: and know ye that no one hath hoped in the Lord, and hath been confounded.

"overcast," obductionis. H.—Desire not death, in order to be covered from the miseries of life; for that would (W.) border on despair. H.

VER. 5. Humiliation. It shews what they really are. C.

VER. 10. Enlightened. With joy. Is. lviii. M.—This verse is not in Greek. To avoid such frequent repetitions, it would be well to mark the passages in 12 *For who hath continued in his commandment, and hath been forsaken? or who hath called upon him, and he despised him?

13 For God is compassionate and merciful, and will forgive sins in the day of tribulation: and he is a protector to all that seek him in truth.

14 Woe to them that are of a double heart, and to wicked lips, and to the hands that do evil, and to the sinner that goeth on the earth two ways.

15 Woe to them that are faint-hearted, who believe not God: and therefore they shall not be protected by him.

16 Woe to them that have lost patience, and that have forsaken the right ways, and have gone aside into crooked ways.

17 And what will they do, when the Lord shall begin to examine?

18 They that fear the Lord, will not be incredulous to his word: and they that love him, will keep his way.

19 They that fear the Lord, will seek after the things that are well pleasing to him: and they that love him, shall be filled with his law.

20 They that fear the Lord, will prepare their hearts, and in his sight will sanctify their souls.

21 They that fear the Lord, keep his commandments, and will have patience even until his visitation,

22 Saying: If we do not penance, we shall fall into the hands of the Lord, and not into the hands of men.

23 For according to his greatness, so also is his mercy with him.

CHAP. III.

Lessons concerning the honour of parents, and humility, and avoiding curiosity.

THE sons of wisdom are the church of the just: and their generation, obedience and love.

2 Children, hear the judgment of your father, and so do that you may be saved.

3 For God hath made the father honourable to the children: and seeking the judgment of the mothers, hath confirmed it upon the children.

4 He that loveth God, shall obtain pardon for his sins by prayer, and shall refrain himself from them, and shall be heard in the prayer of days.

VER. 14. Ways. Attempting to reconcile the service of the world with that of God, who rejects hypocrites, (H.) the inconstant, and faint-hearted. v. 15. and 8 K. xviii. 21. C.—Virtues and sins will receive their due. W.

VER. 20. Hearts. With God's grace (H.) to fight manfully. C.—Sanctify. Greek, "humble their souls, saying, we shall," &c. v. 22. H.—Prayer, vigilance, and humility are the best dispositions to resist the devil.

VER. 3. Seeking. Greek, "and hath confirmed the judgment," &c. H.—God will revenge any disrespect shewn to parents. M.

VER. 7. Father. Greek, "Lord... mother (8.) and will serve them," &c. H.—Though you may feed your parents, you are still much in their debt. S. Amb. in Lu. ii. and xviii. Ex. xx. 12. Job iv. 3.

VER. 9. Father. Greek adds, "and thy mother." C.—Grabe marks this in another character, and substitutes "them" for him. v. 10.—And his, &c. is wholly omitted. H.

VER. 11. Foundations. S. Aug. (de Civ. Dei. xxii. 8.) gives a memorable instance. The pagans deemed such curses most terrible. Orpheus. Gen. ix. 25.—They are executed upon the wicked.

VER. 12. Thee. Boast not of thy superior talents, nor say any thing disrespectful.

5 And he that honoureth his mother, is as one that layeth up a treasure.

6 He that honoureth his father, shall have joy in his own children, and in the day of his prayer he shall be heard.

7 He that honoureth his father, shall enjoy a long life: and he that obeyeth the father, shall be a comfort to his mother.

8 He that feareth the Lord, honoureth his parents, and will serve them as his masters that brought him into the world.

9 *Honour thy father in work and word, and all patience,

10 That a blessing may come upon thee from him, and his blessing may remain in the latter end.

11 *The father's blessing establisheth the houses of the children: but the mother's curse rooteth up the foundations.

12 Glory not in the dishonour of thy father: for his shame is no glory to thee.

13 For the glory of a man is from the honour of his father, and a father without honour is the disgrace of the son.

14 Son, support the old age of thy father, and grieve him not in his life:

15 And if his understanding fail, have patience with him, and despise him not when thou art in thy strength: for the relieving of the father shall not be forgotten.

16 For good shall be repaid to thee for the sin of thy mother.

17 And in justice thou shalt be built up, and in the day of affliction thou shalt be remembered: and thy sins shall melt away as the ice in the fair warm weather.

18 Of what an evil fame is he that forsaketh his father: and he is cursed of God that angereth his mother.

19 My son, do thy works in meekness, and thou shalt be beloved above the glory of men.

20 *The greater thou art, the more humble thyself in all things, and thou shalt find grace before God:

21 For great is the power of God alone, and he is honoured by the humble.

23 For it is not necessary for thee to see with thy eyes those things that are hid.

25 For many things are shewn to thee above the understanding of men.

26 And the suspicion of them hath deceived many, and hath detained their minds in vanity.

28 A heart that goeth two ways shall not have success, and the perverse of heart shall be scandalized therein.

29 A wicked heart shall be laden with sorrows, and the sinner will add sin to sin.

30 The congregation of the proud shall not be healed: for the plant of wickedness shall take root in them, and it shall not be perceived.

An exhortation to works of mercy, and to the love of wisdom.

SON, ^bdefraud not the poor of alms, and turn not away thy eyes from the poor.

2 Despise not the hungry soul: and provoke not the poor in his want.

3 Afflict not the heart of the needy, and defer not to give to him that is in distress.

4 Reject not the petition of the afflicted: and turn not away thy face from the needy.

VER. 29. Wicked. Greek, "hard," obdurate in sin, like Pharaoh. Rom. ii. 5. H.—Sorrows. Or crimes, as the word often implies, and the punishment thereof. C.—"Sin, by its own weight, leads to another, (S. Greg. Mor. xxv. 12.) and while custom is not resisted, a necessity arises." S. Aug. Conf. viii. 5.

VER. 30. Congregation. The proud or obstinate sinner will take no advice. Prov. xviii. 3. C.

VER. 31. Understood. Greek, "shall devise a parable, and the ear of the bearer is the desire of a wise man." H.

VER. 33. Water, &c. He delights to instruct the attentive. C.—Resist. Greek, "shall expiate, or obtain pardon for sins." Dan. iv. 24. and Lu. xi. 41. "Alms-deeds are a sort of baptism, which may be often repeated" to advantage. S. Amb. or. Max.—"When we bestow any thing, it is not of our own, but the gift of Christ. We give bread... He, the poor, renders us the kingdom of heaven." S. Jer. in Ps. exxxiii. God becomes our debtor. S. Chrys. hom. liii. and lviii. (864)

6 For the prayer of him that curseth thee in the bitterness of his soul, shall be heard: for he that made him, will hear him.

7 Make thyself affable to the congregation of the poor, and humble thy soul to the ancient, and bow thy head to a great man.

8 Bow down thy ear cheerfully to the poor, and pay what thou owest, and answer him peaceable words with mildness.

9 Deliver him that suffereth wrong out of the hand of the proud: and be not faint-hearted in thy soul.

10 In judging, be merciful to the fatherless, as a father, and as a husband to their mother:

11 And thou shalt be as the obedient son of the most High, and he will have mercy on thee more than a mother.

12 Wisdom inspireth life into her children, and protecteth them that seek after her, and will go before them in the way of justice.

13 And he that loveth her, loveth life: and they that watch for her, shall embrace her sweetness.

14 They that hold her fast, shall inherit life: and whithersoever she entereth, God will give a blessing.

15 They that serve her, shall be servants to the holy one: and God loveth them that love her.

16 He that hearkeneth to her, shall judge nations: and he that looketh upon her, shall remain secure.

17 If he trust to her, he shall inherit her, and his generation shall be in assurance.

18 For she walketh with him in temptation, and at the first she chooseth him.

19 She will bring upon him fear, and dread, and trial: and she will scourge him with the affliction of her discipline, till she try him by her laws, and trust his soul.

20 Then she will strengthen him, and make a straight way to him, and give him joy,

21 And will disclose her secrets to him, and will heap upon him treasures of knowledge, and understanding of justice.

22 But if he go astray, she will forsake him, and deliver him into the hands of his enemy.

23 Son, observe the time, and fly from evil.

—Our inheritance is secured. S. Cyp. de Op.—But then charity and repentance must accompany our alms. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. 21. ult.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Alms. Gr. "life," and of what is necessary to support it. Si non pavisti, occidisti. S. Tho. (ii. 2. q. xxxii. 5.) quoting the offices of S. Amb. though the sentence is not to be found there. C.—Christians are not masters of what is superfluous, no more than those who have the goods of the Church. S. Chrys. Corn. a Lap.—Turn. Gr. "draw not after thee indigent eyes." H.—Make not the poor wait long for relief. 2 Cor. ix. 7. Rom. xii. 8. Prov. viii. 28. C.—Qui tarde dat, diu noliit. Sen. Ben. i. 1.—Fames et mora bilem in nasum concitant. Plaut.

VER. 5. For... anger, and behind, &c. is not in Gr. H.—He thrice repents the same injunction. Ex. xxii. 22. C.—Deal not cruelly with the poor; for God will revenge their injuries. W.

VER. 7. Of the. Gr. "and bow," &c. H.—Submission to magistrates is enforced. C.

VER. 8. And... owest, is not in Gr. H.—People in office must attend to all. C.

VER. 15. One. Or "sanctuary." They shall be honoured like priests. Is. lxi. 6. Birth, rather than merit, gave a title to the Jewish priests; but those who are wise shall minister in a more glorious temple. C.

VER. 18. In temptation, &c. The meaning is, that before wisdom will choose any for her favourites, she will try them by leading them through contradictions, afflictions, and temptations, the usual noviceship of the children of God. Ch.—Gr. "for sideways or through crooked paths she shall walk with him at first, (19.) she," &c. H.—The narrow path leads to heaven, (Matt. vii. 13.) and to virtue. Hesiod.

24 For thy soul, be not ashamed to say the truth.

25 For there is a shame that bringeth sin, and there is a shame that bringeth glory and grace.

26 Accept no person against thy own person, nor against thy soul a lie.

27 Reverence not thy neighbour in his fall:

28 And refrain not to speak in the time of salvation. Hide not thy wisdom in her beauty.

29 For by the tongue wisdom is discerned: and understanding, and knowledge, and learning by the word of the wise, and steadfastness in the works of justice.

30 In no wise speak against the truth, but be ashamed of the lie of thy ignorance.

31 Be not ashamed to confess thy sins, *but submit not thyself to every man for sin.

32 Resist not against the face of the mighty, and do not strive against the stream of the river.

33 Strive for justice for thy soul, and even unto death fight for justice, and God will overthrow thy enemies for thee.

34 Be not hasty in thy tongue: and slack, and remiss in thy works.

35 Be not as a lion in thy house, terrifying them of thy household, and oppressing them that are under thee.

36 Let not thy hand be stretched out to receive, and shut when thou shouldst give.

CHAP. V.

We must not presume of our wealth or strength: nor of the mercy of God, to go on in sin: we must be steadfast in virtue and truth.

SET not thy heart upon unjust possessions, and say not: I have enough to live on: for it shall be of no service in the time of vengeance and darkness.

2 Follow not in thy strength the desires of thy heart:

3 And say not: How mighty am I? and who shall bring me under for my deeds? for God will surely take revenge.

* Infra vi. 6.—^b Prov. x. 6.

VER. 21. To him. And explain why she has treated him so roughly.

VER. 22. Enemy. Gr. "ruin." This road leads to eternal misery. H.

VER. 23. Time. For all things. Eccl. iii. 1. All depends on the proper season.

VER. 24. Ashamed, to ask for relief, (v. 25. C.) or to say the truth, as the martyrs have done. This is not in Greek.

VER. 25. Sin. Thus to refuse asking for what is necessary to support life, would be criminal.—Grace. When we refrain from doing things truly shameful. C. xli. C.—To abhor sin is glorious; but to yield to it, through shamefacedness, or not to reprove it, is vicious. W.

VER. 27. Fall. Excuse not his faults, (C.) lest thou partake in them.

VER. 28. Hide, &c. is not in the Alex. copy, though inserted by Grabe. H.—Ostentation is blameable; still we must speak in defence of the truth. C.

VER. 29. Tongue. Gr. "by speech, wisdom shall be known, and instruction by the word of the tongue."

VER. 30. Lie. Gr. "of thy want of information." Yet Grabe and the Comp. edit. have lie, &c. H.—Always yield to the truth, (C.) and never tell a lie, but speak the truth at proper times. W.

VER. 32. River. Useless resistance is to be avoided; and when it is requisite to oppose the demands of the great, we must do it with reserve. v. 33. C.

VER. 33. Strive. Gr. "unto death strive for the truth, and the Lord God will fight for thee." H.—The saints were modest, but intrepid. C.—All must rather lose their lives than act against justice or truth. W.

VER. 34. Works. Perform what thou hast promised.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Unjust. The translator styles riches unjust, because they often proceed from, or tend to injustice. They can afford no protection in death. Ps. xlviii. 17. Lu. xii. 19. and xvi. 9. C.

VER. 2. Heart. If no man can oppose thee, remember God's judgments. W.

VER. 3. How mighty am I? is not in Gr. though read by S. Cyp. and S. Aug. Spec.—Sennacherib's vain boasting was soon punished. Is. xxxvii. 36. C.

VER. 4. Rewarder. Gr. "is long-suffering, he will not let thee escape."

4 Say not: I have sinned, and what harm hath befallen me? for the most High is a patient rewarder.

5 Be not without fear about sin forgiven, and add not sin upon sin:

6 And say not: The mercy of the Lord is great, he will have mercy on the multitude of my sins.

7 ^bFor mercy and wrath quickly come from him, and his wrath looketh upon sinners.

8 Delay not to be converted to the Lord, and defer it not from day to day.

9 For his wrath shall come on a sudden, and in the time of vengeance he will destroy thee.

10 *Be not anxious for goods unjustly gotten: for they shall not profit thee in the day of calamity and revenge.

11 Winnow not with every wind, and go not into every way: for so is every sinner proved by a double tongue.

12 Be steadfast in the way of the Lord, and in the truth of thy judgment, and in knowledge, and let the word of peace and justice keep with thee.

13 Be meek to hear the word, that thou mayst understand: and return a true answer with wisdom.

14 If thou have understanding, answer thy neighbour: but if not, let thy hand be upon thy mouth, lest thou be surprised in an unskilful word, and be confounded.

15 Honour and glory is in the word of the wise, but the tongue of the fool is his ruin.

16 Be not called a whisperer, and be not taken in thy tongue, and confounded.

17 For confusion and repentance is upon a thief, and an evil mark of disgrace upon the double-tongued, but to the whisperer hatred, and enmity, and reproach.

18 Justify alike the small, and the great.

CHAP. VI.

Of true and false friends: and of the fruits of wisdom.

INSTEAD of a friend, become not an enemy to thy neighbour: for an evil man shall inherit reproach

* Prov. xi. 4. and 28.

VER. 5. And add. Gr. "to add." Take not occasion from God's goodness to offend him. H.—He will punish at last. Jans.—Though you may have taken pains to repent, are you assured of being forgiven? Eccl. ix. 1. A relapse calls for greater severity, though the graces of God are without repentance. Rom. xi. 29. He does not recal his favours, but he hates the ungrateful, v. 6. Bell. Just. iii. 4. C.—Satisfaction must be made even after the sin has been remitted. W.—This may be feared. M.

VER. 7. Looketh. Gr. "shall rest" in hell, to punish the abuse of mercy. H.

VER. 8. Day. A rabbin being asked when one must repent? answered, the day before death. But we know not when that will take place! Then, replied he, we must repent to-day. Drus.—"God has promised thee pardon, if thou repent, but he has not promised thee to-morrow." S. Aug. Ps. cxiv.

VER. 12. The way. Gr. "thy knowledge or sentiment, and let thy speech be one," (H.) that men may depend upon thee.

VER. 13. Word. Comp. adds, "of God." But the Rom. edit. has, "be quick to hear, and answer slowly." Jam. i. 19. "It is safer to hear than to preach." S. Aug. lix. in Jo.—Constancy in virtue will obtain the promised peace. W.

VER. 14. Lest. Gr. "honour and infamy is in speech; and the tongue of man proves his ruin." H.—Nothing can be productive of better or of worse consequences. Prov. xviii. 21. C.

VER. 16. Be. Gr. "ensnare not by thy tongue, (17.) for evil confusion is upon the thief, and great condemnation on the double-tongued. (18.) Be not ignorant in any thing, great or small." H.—The detractor is more dangerous than the thief. He pierces without being seen. Eccl. x. 11. Prov. xxvi. 20. Rom. i. 29.

VER. 18. Great. Only examine the justice of the cause; or, according to the Greek, commit no fault of ignorance, nor say, "I did not think." C.—Acknowledge thy friend in his poverty, as well as in his greatness. H.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Instead. Gr. "and instead," &c. Syriac begins this chap. with the preceding verse, with which this is connected. Detraction will separate friends.

and shame, so shall every sinner that is envious and double-tongued.

2 *Extol not thyself in the thoughts of thy soul like a bull: lest thy strength be quashed by folly,

3 And it eat up thy leaves, and destroy thy fruit, and thou be left as a dry tree in the wilderness.

4 For a wicked soul shall destroy him that hath it, and maketh him to be a joy to his enemies, and shall lead him into the lot of the wicked.

5 A sweet word multiplieth friends, and appeaseth enemies, and a gracious tongue in a good man aboundeth.

6 Be in peace with many, but let one of a thousand be thy counsellor.

7 If thou wouldst get a friend, try him before thou takest him, and do not credit him easily.

8 For there is a friend for his own occasion, and he will not abide in the day of thy trouble.

9 And there is a friend that turneth to enmity: and there is a friend that will disclose hatred and strife, and reproaches.

10 And there is a friend, a companion at the table, and he will not abide in the day of distress.

11 A friend, if he continue steadfast, shall be to thee as thyself, and shall act with confidence among them of thy household.

12 If he humble himself before thee, and hide himself from thy face, thou shalt have unanimous friendship for good.

13 Separate thyself from thy enemies, and take heed of thy friends.

14 A faithful friend is a strong defence: and he that hath found him, hath found a treasure.

15 Nothing can be compared to a faithful friend, and no weight of gold and silver is able to countervail the goodness of his fidelity.

16 A faithful friend is the medicine of life and immortality: and they that fear the Lord, shall find him.

17 He that feareth God, shall likewise have good friendship: because according to him shall his friend be.

18 My son, from thy youth up receive instruction, and even to thy grey hairs thou shalt find wisdom.

19 Come to her as one that plougheth, and soweth, and wait for her good fruits.

20 For in working about her, thou shalt labour a little, and shalt quickly eat of her fruits.

21 How very unpleasant is wisdom to the unlearned, and the unwise will not continue with her.

22 She shall be to them as a mighty stone of trial, and they will cast her from them before it be long.

23 For the wisdom of doctrine is according to her name, and she is not manifest unto many, but with them to whom she is known, she continueth even to the sight of God.

24 Give ear, my son, and take wise counsel, and cast not away my advice.

25 Put thy feet into her fetters, and thy neck into her chains:

26 Bow down thy shoulder, and bear her, and be not grieved with her bands.

27 Come to her with all thy mind, and keep her ways with all thy power.

28 Search for her, and she shall be made known to thee, and when thou hast gotten her, let her not go:

29 For in the latter end thou shalt find rest in her, and she shall be turned to thy joy.

30 Then shall her fetters be a strong defence for thee, and a firm foundation, and her chain a robe of glory.

31 For in her is the beauty of life, and her bands are a healthful binding.

32 Thou shalt put her on as a robe of glory, and thou shalt set her upon thee as a crown of joy.

33 My son, if thou wilt attend to me, thou shalt learn: and if thou wilt apply thy mind, thou shalt be wise.

34 If thou wilt incline thy ear, thou shalt receive instruction: and if thou love to hear, thou shalt be wise.

* Rom. xii. 6. Phil. ii. 8.

VER. 2. Extol. This conduct is inimical to true friendship, which requires that we should make allowances for one another's faults. C.—Like. Gr. "lest thy soul be torn away like a bull. Thou wilt eat," &c. H.—Vulg. is better. C.

VER. 3. Wilderness. Thus was Nabuchodonosor humbled. Dan. iv. M.

VER. 5. Appeaseth. Gr. "and an eloquent tongue multiplies good words." H.—The affable gain our affections. Gideon pacified the incensed Ephraimites by a mild answer. Jud. viii. W.

VER. 6. Counsellor. Only few are capable of this office, (H.) or of keeping a secret. Yet we must have peace, if possible, with all. Rom. xii. 18. C.—The Scythians condemned many friends, no less than many wives, (Luc. Tox.) and Aristotle (Eth. ix. 10.) commends this maxim of Hesiod: πρὸς πολλοῖς φίλοις ἀσέβητος; "neither to have too many guests, or intimate friends, nor to be without any."

VER. 7. Get. Lit. "dost possess a friend, possess him in trial," (H.) as the Greek also has it. But the Heb. term kanah, means likewise, "to acquire," and a friend ought to be chosen with judgment. It is too late to try him after he has been received. C.—One must try much before a companion be chosen, that he may be afterwards preserved. Plut.—"Possess not friends quickly, but those whom thou hast obtained, reject not with disgrace." Solon. Laert. i. and ii. 8.

VER. 8. Trouble. Such are interested friends; but true friendship is a kind and perfect agreement in all divine and human affairs" Cic. S. Aug. c. Acad. iii.—Religion must be the foundation.

VER. 9. Reproaches. Disclosing all your imperfections. C.—"The closest alliances, being broken, produce the most bitter enmities." Pliny, xxxvii. 4.

VER. 12. Humble. "Friends must have a respect for each other." Cic.

VER. 13. Friends. Such as have been just described. Of these the maxim of Bias may be true, that people should "love as if they were to hate," at some future period. Laert. i.—Entire confidence becomes those who are friends indeed.

VER. 14. Defence. Jonathas and Chusai saved David.

VER. 16. And immortality, is not in Greek. C.—But shews the meaning of life is this place; as a true friend will not cease to give good advice for eternity. H.—But even in this world, nothing can be more advantageous. C.—Amicus magis necessarius est quam ignis et aqua. Cic. S. Amb. off. iii.—Him. Cicero himself says, "friendship can subsist only among the virtuous." Yet these, judging of others by themselves, are more easily imposed upon, and ought, therefore, to address themselves to God. C.

VER. 17. Be. He will instil into his friend sentiments of piety, if he have them not before. Amicitia similes invenit aut facit. "Pythagoras desires that in friendship one should be formed of many." Cic. v. 11. H.

VER. 18. Wisdom. A good education will, at last, bring forth fruit, though the passions may choke the good seed for a time. C.—"Take wisdom for the provision on thy journey, from youth to old age." Bias. Laert. i.

VER. 22. Trial. Such stones were used to try people's strength, (Zach. xii. 3. C.) or to try gold. Vat.—The Syriac explains it of a precious stone. But the first idea is preferable. Many will not so much as attempt to become acquainted with wisdom and piety.

VER. 23. Name. Perhaps the author may compare the Greek word Sophia, (C.) with Tropie, (H.) "hidden," or with another Greek term, zophos, which means "darkness." See c. xliii. 8. and xlv. 1. The original Heb. text is lost, so that we cannot determine to what word allusion is made. See Corn. a Lapide, who has written the best commentary on this book.—But, &c. is not in Greek. C.—Many prefer learning before piety. But S. Aug. says, the unlearned rise and take the kingdom of heaven, while we with our learning, devoid of heart (or charity. H.) behold we fall into the dirt. Conf. viii. 8. W.

VER. 28. Thee. She will even seek thee first. Wisd. vi. 14. Prov. viii. Matt. vii. 7.—Gotten. Continence does not here signify being chaste, (C.) though this is one of the fruits of wisdom. Wisd. viii. 21. Gal. v. 23. H.

VER. 30. Firm. Lit. "bases of virtue;" (H.) which is not in Gr. and rather embarrasses the sentence; (C.) though it may signify, that if we serve the Lord with fidelity, our building will never be overturned. H.

VER. 35. Wise. Lit. "prudent." The Latin has this epithet, because old 35 *Stand in the multitude of ancients that are wise, and join thyself from thy heart to their wisdom, that thou mayst hear every discourse of God, and the sayings of praise may not escape thee.

36 And if thou see a man of understanding, go to him early in the morning, and let thy foot wear the steps of his doors.

37 *Let thy thoughts be upon the precepts of God, and meditate continually on his commandments: and he will give thee a heart, and the desire of wisdom shall be given to thee.

CHAP. VII.

Religious and moral duties.

DO no evils, and no evils shall lay hold of thee.

2 Depart from the unjust, and evils shall depart from thee.

3 My son, sow not evils in the furrows of injustice, and thou shalt not reap them seven-fold.

4 Seek not of the Lord a pre-eminence, nor of the king the seat of honour.

5 *Justify not thyself before God, for he knoweth the heart: and desire not to appear wise before the king.

6 Seek not to be made a judge, unless thou have strength enough to extirpate iniquities: least thou fear the person of the powerful, and lay a stumbling-block for thy integrity.

7 Offend not against the multitude of a city, neither cast thyself in upon the people,

8 *Nor bind sin to sin: for even in one thou shalt not be unpunished.

9 Be not faint-hearted in thy mind:

10 Neglect not to pray, and to give alms.

11 Say not: God will have respect to the multitude of my gifts, and when I offer to the most high God, he will accept my offerings.

VER. 4. Honour. Ambition is the source of ruin to men and empires. Jam. iii. 1. C.

VER. 5. God. Gr. “the Lord, and affect not wisdom (σοφίαν) before the king.” H.—Of ourselves we are despicable; and kings love not those whose superior talents seem to eclipse their own. David’s valour excited the hatred of Saul, and Alexander “was indignant that Antipater (his general, H.) had conquered, thinking his own glory was diminished by that which another acquired.” Curt. vi.

VER. 6. Integrity. A judge is exposed to many dangers. 2 Par. xix. 6. C.—“He must be prudent and firm.” Plato, 2 Rep.—What will become of those who push themselves forward? S. Chrys. hom. xxxiv. in Heb. xiii.

VER. 8. To sin. Correct not thy severity by too great indulgence, nor entangle thyself with the sins of others, as with a chain. Is. v. 18.

VER. 9. Mind. If thou hast committed a fault, despair not, but pray, (v. 10.) avoiding presumption. v. 14.

VER. 12. Soul. Whether the person have incurred a fault or not, we ought to shew pity, reflecting on our own frailty. 1 Cor. x. 12.

VER. 13. Devise. Lit. “plough.” But Heb. Charasch, means also to machinate.—Brother. We cannot hence infer, with Grotius, that the Jews allowed themselves to deceive strangers. C.

VER. 14. Good, but very pernicious, (Mat. v. 37. Apoc. xxi. 3. S. Aug.

13 Devise not a lie against thy brother: neither do the like against thy friend.

14 Be not willing to make any manner of lie: for the custom thereof is not good.

15 Be not full of words in a multitude of ancients and repeat not the word in thy prayer.

16 Hate not laborious works, nor husbandry ordained by the Most High.

17 Number not thyself among the multitude of the disorderly.

18 Remember wrath, for it will not tarry long.

19 Humble thy spirit very much: for the vengeance on the flesh of the ungodly is fire and worms.

20 Do not transgress against thy friend, deferring money, nor despise thy dear brother for the sake of gold.

21 Depart not from a wise and good wife, whom thou hast gotten in the fear of the Lord: for the grace of her modesty is above gold.

22 *Hurt not the servant that worketh faithfully, nor the hired man that giveth thee his life.

23 Let a wise servant be dear to thee as thy own soul, defraud him not of liberty, nor leave him needy.

24 Hast thou cattle? have an eye to them: and if they be for thy profit, keep them with thee.

25 Hast thou children? instruct them, and bow down their neck from their childhood.

26 Hast thou daughters? have a care of their body, and shew not thy countenance gay towards them.

27 Marry thy daughter well, and thou shalt do a great work, and give her to a wise man.

28 If thou hast a wife according to thy soul, cast her not off: and to her that is hateful, trust not thyself. With thy whole heart,

29 *Honour thy father, and forget not the groanings of thy mother:

Mend.) though some have thought that lies might be told to prevent evil. Orig. &c. C.

VER. 15. Repeat not. Make not much babbling by repetition of words, but aim more at fervour of heart. Ch.—A supplication ought to be drawn up in a concise manner. H.—Judges and orators should speak with due reserve. Prayer must be unceasing: yet many words must not be used to inform God of our wants. Our Saviour seems to allude to this text. Mat. vi. 7.

VER. 16. High. Gen. ii. 15. and iii. 18. The patriarchs and the most famous Roman generals followed this employment.

VER. 19. On the flesh, is not in Greek. Christ appears to have had this passage in view, Mark ix. 44. Many suppose that both allude to the fire which burnt dead bodies, &c. in the vale of Hinnon. But all allow that the inextinguishable flames of hell are meant. Whether the fire and worms be corporeal or not has been questioned: the Greek Fathers, and Church of Florence, generally maintain the negative, and the Latins assert it on better grounds. S. Thomas adopts the opinion of many of the Fathers, who explain the worm to denote the remorse of conscience. Yet many take it to be a worm, though not like those with which we are acquainted. Horreo vermem mendacem et mortem vivacem. S. Bern. cons. v. See S. Jer. Is. lxvi. A. Lap. S. Greg. Dial. iv. 29. S. Aug. De C. xx. 10. S. Amb. vii. in Lu. xiv. C.—Fire and the worm of conscience are both eternal. W.—The punishment at least is such, and more intense than we can conceive.

VER. 21. Wife. The virtuous never approved of divorcing any but the incorrigible. C. Dis.

VER. 27. Man. The Jews in general embraced the married state in their youth. S. Paul prefers virginity. 1 Cor. vii. 8.

VER. 28. Hateful. To marry such a one would be an occasion of divorce, which is always odious.

VER. 29. Groanings, in child-bed, and (C.) during thy infancy. M. Job iv. 4.

VER. 33. Priests. Gr. “priest, and give him the portion which is enjoined thee, the first-fruit, and for negligence, and the gift of the shoulders, and the,”

31 With all thy soul fear the Lord, and reverence his priests.

32 With all thy strength love him that made thee: and forsake not his ministers.

33 *Honour God with all thy soul, and give honour to the priests, and purify thyself with thy arms.

34 Give them their portion, ^aas it is commanded thee, of the first-fruits, and of purifications: and for thy negligences purify thyself with a few.

35 Offer to the Lord the gift of thy shoulders, and the sacrifice of sanctification, and the first-fruits of the holy things:

36 And stretch out thy hand to the poor, that thy expiation and thy blessing may be perfected.

37 A gift hath grace in the sight of all the living, and restrain not grace from the dead.

38 *Be not wanting in comforting them that weep, and walk with them that mourn.

39 ^aBe not slow to visit the sick: for by these things thou shalt be confirmed in love.

40 In all thy works remember thy last end, and thou shalt never sin.

Other lessons of wisdom and virtue.

STRIVE not with a powerful man, lest thou fall into his hands.

2 *Contend not with a rich man, lest he bring an action against thee.

3 ^aFor gold and silver hath destroyed many, and hath reached even to the heart of kings, and perverted them.

4 Strive not with a man that is full of tongue, and heap not wood upon his fire.

5 Communicate not with an ignorant man, lest he speak ill of thy family.

6 Despise not a man that turneth away from sin, ^anor reproach him therewith: remember that we are all worthy of reproof.

7 ^bDespise not a man in his old age: for we also shall become old.

8 Rejoice not at the death of thy enemy: knowing that we all die, and are not willing that others should rejoice at our death.

VER. 37. Dead: detained in purgatory. W.—And restrain not grace from the dead. Withhold not from them the benefit of alms, prayers, and sacrifices. Such was the doctrine and practice of the Church of God, even in the time of the Old Testament. And the same has always been continued from the days of the apostles in the Church of the New Testament. Ch.—Meat was also placed on the tombs of the deceased, for the benefit of the poor. Tob. iv. 18. S. Aug. Conf. vi. 2.

9 ^aDespise not the discourse of them that are ancient and wise, but acquaint thyself with their proverbs.

10 For of them thou shalt learn wisdom, and instruction of understanding, and to serve great men without blame.

11 Let not the discourse of the ancients escape thee, for they have learned of their fathers:

12 For of them thou shalt learn understanding, and to give an answer in time of need.

13 Kindle not the coals of sinners by rebuking them, lest thou be burnt with the flame of the fire of their sins.

14 Stand not against the face of an injurious person, lest he sit as a spy to entrap thee in thy words.

15 ^aLend not to a man that is mightier than thyself: and if thou lendest, count it as lost.

16 Be not surety above thy power: and if thou be surety, think as if thou wert to pay it.

17 Judge not against a judge: for he judgeth according to that which is just.

18 ^aGo not on the way with a bold man, lest he burden thee with his evils: for he goeth according to his own will, and thou shalt perish together with his folly.

19 ^aQuarrel not with a passionate man, and go not into the desert with a bold man: for blood is as nothing in his sight, and where there is no help he will overthrow thee.

20 Advise not with fools, for they cannot love but such things as please them.

21 Before a stranger do no matter of counsel: for thou knowest not what he will bring forth.

22 Open not thy heart to every man: lest he repay thee with an evil turn, and speak reproachfully to thee.

Cautions with regard to women, and dangerous conversations.

BE not jealous over the wife of thy bosom, lest she shew in thy regard the malice of a wicked lesson.

VER. 22. Evil. Gr. "false kindness." The rest is omitted. H.—Samson was undone by Dalila. When Pompey was going on an embassy, he was taken by king Gentius, who wished to extort his secret from him; but he put his finger in the flame of a candle, that he might see that all his attempts would be fruitless. CHAP. IX. VER. 1. Let. "A husband should teach his wife to be chaste by his own example." Lact. Relig. vi.

4 Use not much the company of her that is a dancer, and hearken not to her, lest thou perish by the force of her charms.

5 ^a Gaze not upon a maiden, lest her beauty be a stumbling-block to thee.

6 ^b Give not thy soul to harlots in any point: lest thou destroy thyself and thy inheritance.

7 Look not round about thee in the ways of the city, nor wander up and down in the streets thereof.

8 ^c Turn away thy face from a woman dressed up, and gaze not about upon another's beauty.

9 For many have perished by the beauty of a woman, and hereby lust is enkindled as a fire.

10 Every woman that is a harlot, shall be trodden upon as dung in the way.

11 Many, by admiring the beauty of another man's wife, have become reprobate, for her conversation burneth as fire.

12 Sit not at all with another man's wife, nor repose upon the bed with her:

13 And strive not with her over wine, lest thy heart decline towards her, and by thy blood thou fall into destruction.

14 Forsake not an old friend, for the new will not be like to him.

15 A new friend is as new wine: it shall grow old, and thou shalt drink it with pleasure.

16 ^d Envy not the glory and riches of a sinner, for thou knowest not what his ruin shall be.

17 Be not pleased with the wrong done by the unjust, knowing that even to hell the wicked shall not please.

18 Keep thee far from the man that hath power to kill, so thou shalt not suspect the fear of death.

19 And if thou come to him, commit no fault, lest he take away thy life.

VER. 8. Up. Gr. "of a fine appearance." Grabe substitutes, "who has found favour." H.—The Fathers condemn too much dressing as a mark of levity and incontinence.

VER. 12. Nor, &c. is also admitted in many copies, though found in the Comp. and Ald. edit. C.—Grabe replaces it on the authority of Clem. (Pæd. ii. 7.) as he does many other passages, which are erroneously left out in several editions. Prolog. t. 4. c. 3. It would therefore be injurious to the word of God, if we were always to reject the additions in the Vulg. which are not in the Vat. 22 Let just men be thy guests, and let thy glory be in the fear of God.

25 A man full of tongue is terrible in his city, and he that is rash in his word shall be hateful.

CHAP. X.

The virtues and vices of men in power: the great evil of pride.

A WISE judge shall judge his people, and the government of a prudent man shall be steady.

2 ^a As the judge of the people is himself, so also are his ministers: and what manner of man the ruler of a city is, such also are they that dwell therein.

3 ^b An unwise king shall be the ruin of his people: and cities shall be inhabited through the prudence of the rulers.

4 The power of the earth is in the hand of God and in his time he will raise up a profitable ruler over it.

5 The prosperity of man is in the hand of God, and upon the person of the scribe he shall lay his honour.

6 Remember not any injury done thee by thy neighbour, ^c and do thou nothing by deeds of injury.

7 Pride is hateful before God and men: and all iniquity of nations is execrable.

8 ^d A kingdom is translated from one people to another, because of injustices, and wrongs, and injuries, and divers deceits.

9 But nothing is more wicked than the covetous man. Why is earth and ashes proud?

10 There is not a more wicked thing than to love money: for such a one setteth even his own soul to sale: because while he liveth, he hath cast away his bowels.

11 All power is of short life. A long sickness is troublesome to the physician.

12 The physician cutteth off a short sickness: so also a king is to-day, and to-morrow he shall die.

VER. 10. Bowels, and would have no compassion for others or for himself. (869)

13 For when a man shall die, he shall inherit serpents, and beasts, and worms.

14 The beginning of the pride of man is to fall off from God:

15 Because his heart is departed from him that made him: *for pride is the beginning of all sin: he that holdeth it, shall be filled with maledictions, and it shall ruin him in the end.

16 Therefore hath the Lord disgraced the assemblies of the wicked, and hath utterly destroyed them.

17 God hath overturned the thrones of proud princes, and hath set up the meek in their stead.

18 God hath made the roots of proud nations to wither, and hath planted the humble of these nations.

19 The Lord hath overthrown the lands of the Gentiles, and hath destroyed them even to the foundation.

10 He hath made some of them to wither away, and hath destroyed them, and hath made the memory of them to cease from the earth.

21 God hath abolished the memory of the proud, and hath preserved the memory of them that are humble in mind.

22 Pride was not made for men: nor wrath for the race of women.

23 That seed of men shall be honoured, which feareth God: but that seed shall be dishonoured, which transgresseth the commandments of the Lord.

24 In the midst of brethren their chief is honourable: so shall they that fear the Lord, be in his eyes.

25 The fear of God is the glory of the rich, and of the honourable, and of the poor:

26 Despise not a just man that is poor, and do not magnify a sinful man that is rich.

27 The great man, and the judge, and the mighty, is in honour: and there is none greater than he that feareth God.

29 Extol not thyself in doing thy work, and linger not in the time of distress.

30 ^aBetter is he that laboureth, and aboundeth in all things, than he that boasteth himself and wanteth bread.

31 My son, keep thy soul in meekness, and give it honour according to its desert.

32 Who will justify him that sinneth against his own soul? and who will honour him that dishonoureth his own soul?

33 The poor man is glorified by his discipline and fear: and there is a man that is honoured for his wealth.

34 But he that is glorified in poverty, how much more in wealth? and he that is glorified in wealth, let him fear poverty.

Lessons of humility and moderation in all things.

THE *wisdom of the humble shall exalt his head, and shall make him sit in the midst of great men.

2 ^fPraise not a man for his beauty, neither despise a man for his look.

3 The bee is small among flying things, but her fruit hath the chiefest sweetness.

5 Many tyrants have sat on the throne, and he whom no man would think on hath worn the crown.

6 ^hMany mighty men have been greatly brought down, and the glorious have been delivered into the hand of others.

7 Before thou inquire, blame no man: and when thou hast inquired, reprove justly.

Constantine the Great grieved for having put his son Crispus to death on too weak evidence; and Theodosius repented for the sentence he had rashly passed on the inhabitants of Thessalonica. VER. 8. Discourse. This is a mark of impertinence. Prov. xviii. 13. C.—Let others finish their sentence, and wait if there be any elder or better informed to speak. W.

VER. 10. Escape. God will grant thee riches without so much solicitude; thou pursue after, thou shalt not overtake: and if thou run before, thou shalt not escape.

11 *There is an ungodly man that laboureth, and maketh haste, and is in sorrow, and is so much the more in want.

12 Again, there is an inactive man that wanteth help, is very weak in ability, and full of poverty:

13 ^bYet the eye of God hath looked upon him for good, and hath lifted him up from his low estate, and hath exalted his head: and many have wondered at him, and have glorified God.

14 °Good things and evil, life and death, poverty and riches, are from God.

15 Wisdom and discipline, and the knowledge of the law, are with God. Love and the ways of good things are with him.

16 Error and darkness are created with sinners: and they that glory in evil things, grow old in evil.

17 The gift of God abideth with the just, and his advancement shall have success for ever.

18 There is one that is enriched by living sparingly, and this is the portion of his reward.

19 In that he saith: °I have found me rest, and now I will eat of my goods alone:

20 And he knoweth not what time shall pass, and that death approacheth, and that he must leave all to others, and shall die.

21 Be steadfast in thy covenant, and be conversant therein, and grow old in the work of thy commandments.

22 Abide not in the works of sinners. But trust in God, and stay in thy place.

23 For it is easy in the eyes of God on a sudden to make the poor man rich.

24 The blessing of God maketh haste to reward the just, and in a swift hour his blessing beareth fruit.

VER. 21. Covenant. All the Israelites partook in the covenants entered into between God and their fathers, which became their own by circumcision, as we become entitled to the alliance of Christ by baptism.

VER. 22. Place. If God bestow not riches, it may be for thy advantage.

VER. 24. Fruit. Prosperity was a sign of God's favour, under the old law. Now nothing is more equivocal, and the poor are declared blessed. C.

VER. 26. Myself. Neither the poor nor the rich can be independent of God. H.—Perhaps no one dares to hold this language. But many act as if they thought themselves gods, and some have claimed divine honours. 4 K. xviii. 34. Is. xiv. 13. Ezec. xxix. 3.

VER. 28. Death, in old age, (Grot.) or rather after the soul's departure. The pagans had not this consolation. Their hopes were confined to the earth; and as they saw many honest people miserable, they introduced a chimerical idea of happiness, consisting in virtue alone. The views of Christians are chiefly bent on future rewards.

VER. 29. Hour. The last of life. It demonstrates the vanity of past

28 For it is easy before God in the day of death to reward every one according to his ways.

29 The affliction of an hour maketh one forget great delights, and in the end of a man is the disclosing of his works.

30 Praise not any man before death, for a man is known by his children.

31 Bring not every man into thy house: for many are the snares of the deceitful.

32 For as corrupted bowels send forth stinking breath, and as the partridge is brought into the cage, and as the roe into the snare: so also is the heart of the proud, and as a spy that looketh on the fall of his neighbour.

33 For he lieth in wait, and turneth good into evil, and on the elect he will lay a blot.

34 Of one spark cometh a great fire, and of one deceitful man much blood: and a sinful man lieth in wait for blood.

35 Take heed to thyself of a mischievous man, for he worketh evils: lest he bring upon thee reproach for ever.

36 Receive a stranger in, and he shall overthrow thee with a whirlwind, and shall turn thee out of thy own.

CHAP. XII.

We are to be liberal to the just: and not to trust the wicked.

IF thou do good, know to whom thou dost it, and there shall be much thanks for thy good deeds.

2 Do good to the just, and thou shalt find great recompence: and if not of him, assuredly of the Lord.

3 For there is no good for him that is always occupied in evil, and that giveth no alms: for the Highest hateth sinners, and hath mercy on the penitent.

4 'Give to the merciful, and uphold not the sinner: God will repay vengeance to the ungodly and to sinners, and keep them against the day of vengeance.

5 Give to the good, and receive not a sinner.

6 Do good to the humble, and give not to the ungodly: hold back thy bread, and give it not to him, lest thereby he overmaster thee.

8 A friend shall not be known in prosperity, and an enemy shall not be hidden in adversity.

9 In the prosperity of a man, his enemies are grieved: and a friend is known in his adversity.

10 Never trust thy enemy: for as a brass pot his wickedness rusteth:

11 Though he humble himself and go crouching, yet take good heed and beware of him.

12 Set him not by thee, neither let him sit on thy right hand, lest he turn into thy place, and seek to take thy seat: and at the last thou acknowledge my words, and be pricked with my sayings.

13 Who will pity an enchanter struck by a serpent, or any that come near wild beasts? so is it with him that keepeth company with a wicked man, and is involved in his sins.

14 For an hour he will abide with thee: but if thou begin to decline, he will not endure it.

15 *An enemy speaketh sweetly with his lips, but in his heart he lieth in wait to throw thee into a pit.

16 An enemy weepeth with his eyes: but if he find an opportunity, he will not be satisfied with blood:

17 And if evils come upon thee, thou shalt find him there first.

18 An enemy hath tears in his eyes, and while he pretendeth to help thee, will undermine thy feet.

19 He will shake his head, and clap his hands, and whisper much, and change his countenance.

CHAP. XIII.

Cautions in the choice of company.

HE^b that toucheth pitch, shall be defiled with it: and he that hath fellowship with the proud, shall put on pride.

2 He shall take a burden upon him that hath fellowship with one more honourable than himself. And have no fellowship with one that is richer than thyself.

3 What agreement shall the earthen pot have with the kettle? for if they knock one against the other, it shall be broken.

4 The rich man hath done wrong, and yet he will fume: but the poor is wronged, and must hold his peace.

* Jerem. xli. 6.—^b Deut. vii. 2.

not partake in the crimes of others. We may also make presents to the virtuous, and pass over people of a different character, particularly when they would abuse our gifts. The honest poor must be preserved.

VER. 10. Rusteth. So his malice always returns, (C.) and he shews what he is. Vat.—Christianity does not blame due reserve in treating with those whom we know not, or who have formerly injured us. Though we must love them from our heart, yet we need not intrust our secrets to them, nor even to every friend. Job always retained a hatred for Abner, and Absalom for his brother and father, though they dissembled their resentment. C.—So the wicked commonly act. H.—We must love, but not trust them, being wise as serpents. Matt. x. W.

VER. 11. Of him. Gr. adds, "and thou shalt be to him as one who has rubbed a mirror, (of brass from the rust. It returns perpetually. C.) and shalt know that the rust is not removed for ever. Grabe. H.

VER. 18. Beasts. Vipers, &c. Why should they familiarize themselves with such? Some Italians still handle serpents without fear, pretending that they are the descendants of S. Paul. C.—But he was never married, (1 Cor. vii. H.) and they are rather of the race of the Marsi, who formerly claimed the same privilege, having made use of some drugs to prevent the poison. The ancients believed that they could charm serpents.

VER. 16. Blood. Jer. xli. 6. Samson yielded to the tears of women. Judg. xiv. 16. and xvi. 6.

VER. 18. Eyes. Is taken from v. 16. It is not in Gr. H.—His tears are like those of crocodiles, which cry when they are going to kill a man. C.

5 If thou give, he will make use of thee: and if thou have nothing, he will forsake thee.

6 If thou have any thing, he will live with thee, and will make thee bare, and he will not be sorry for thee.

7 If he have need of thee, he will deceive thee; and smiling upon thee, will put thee in hope; he will speak thee fair, and will say: What wantest thou?

8 And he will shame thee by his meats, till he have drawn thee dry twice or thrice, and at last he will laugh at thee: and afterward, when he seeth thee, he will forsake thee, and shake his head at thee.

9 Humble thyself to God, and wait for his hands.

10 Beware that thou be not deceived into folly, and be humbled.

11 Be not lowly in thy wisdom, lest being humbled thou be deceived into folly.

12 If thou be invited by one that is mightier, withdraw thyself: for so he will invite thee the more.

13 Be not troublesome to him, lest thou be put back: and keep not far from him, lest thou be forgotten.

14 Affect not to speak with him as an equal: and believe not his many words: for by much talk he will sift thee, and smiling, will examine thee concerning thy secrets.

15 His cruel mind will lay up thy words: and he will not spare to do thee hurt, and to cast thee into prison.

16 Take heed to thyself, and attend diligently to what thou hearest: for thou walkest in danger of thy ruin.

17 When thou hearest those things, see as it were in sleep, and thou shalt awake.

18 Love God all thy life, and call upon him for thy salvation.

19 Every beast loveth its like: so also every man him that is nearest to himself.

20 All flesh shall consort with the like to itself, and every man shall associate himself to his like.

21 If the wolf shall at any time have fellowship with the lamb, so the sinner with the just.

22 *What fellowship hath a holy man with a dog, or what part hath the rich with the poor?

* 2 Cor. vi. 14.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Pride. We are naturally prone to it, and the friendship and manners of the proud will increase it. C.—If, therefore, the rich be not virtuous, it is dangerous to keep their company, (W.) both for this and the next world.

VER. 3. Kettle. Made of iron. It will presently be broken. So the poor must suffer, if they marry, or ~~mix~~ society with those who are much above their rank. C.

VER. 7. Thou? Distrust those who promise much. C.—Spem pretio non emo. Ter.

VER. 8. Drawn. Lit. "exhaust." H.—He will feast thee, while he wants thy service, or he will come to dine with thee, and thus reduce thee to distress. Prov. xlii. 1. C.

VER. 10. Humbled. By foolishly attempting to rival the sumptuous feasts of the great. V. 9. and 11. are not in the Greek. H.

VER. 11. Wisdom. Depend not on others' bounty. M.—When the cause of God is at stake, be firm, like S. Paul. C.—Fusillanimity in a superior might cause him to neglect his duty. W.

VER. 14. Concerning, &c. is not expressed in Gr. H.—If a person be so weak as to disclose his secret to a great man, he will never be trusted by him. C.

VER. 17. Awake. Be cautious even in sleep, if possible; or seem not to hear what passes at court. C.

VER. 19. Himself. Similarity of manners and of condition is favourable to friendship. C.—The good and bad cannot be friends, their manners are so different. Cic.

23 The wild ass is the lion's prey, in the desert: so also the poor are devoured by the rich.

24 And as humility is an abomination to the proud, so also the rich man abhorreth the poor.

25 When a rich man is shaken, he is kept up by his friends; but when a poor man is fallen down, he is thrust away even by his acquaintance.

26 When a rich man hath been deceived, he hath many helpers: he hath spoken proud things, and they have justified him.

27 The poor man was deceived, and he is rebuked also: he hath spoken wisely, and could have no place.

28 The rich man spoke, and all held their peace; and what he said, they extol even to the clouds.

29 The poor man spoke, and they say: Who is this? and if he stumble, they will overthrow him.

30 Riches are good to him that hath no sin in his conscience: and poverty is very wicked in the mouth of the ungodly.

31 The heart of a man changeth his countenance, either for good or for evil.

32 The token of a good heart, and a good countenance, thou shalt hardly find, and with labour.

CHAP. XIV.

The evil of avarice: works of mercy are recommended, and the love of wisdom.

BLESSED * is the man that hath not slipt by a word out of his mouth, and is not pricked with the remorse of sin.

2 Happy is he that hath had no sadness of his mind, and who is not fallen from his hope.

3 Riches are not comely for a covetous man and a niggard, and what should an envious man do with gold?

4 He that gathereth together by wronging his own soul, gathereth for others, and another will squander away his goods in rioting.

5 He that is evil to himself, to whom will he be good? and he shall not take pleasure in his goods.

6 There is none worse than he that envieth himself, and this is the reward of his wickedness:

7 And if he do good, he doth it ignorantly and unwillingly: and at the last he discovereth his wickedness.

VER. 21. Lamb. Christ has taught people of different tempers to embrace the faith, which shows his admirable power. Is. xi. 6.

VER. 25. Away. Ps. lxi. 4. C.—"It is inhuman to push those who are falling." Cic. pro Rabir.

VER. 26. Helpers. Who prevent his ruin, (C.) and turn his words to a good sense? M.—Proud. Gr. "what should not be disclosed," avopnra. H. C.—Their "fault increases, being fed by applause." S. Greg. Mor. iv. 29.

VER. 28. Clouds. People suppose that the rich must possess genius. Hor. ii. Sat. iii.—"Every one honours the rich." Theog. C.—Exception of persons hinders many good counsels, and promotes evil. W.

VER. 30. Ungodly. The abuse of riches is alone blameable. All things are clean for the clean, while the wicked pervert every advantage.

VER. 31. Evil. Sorrow will manifest itself. C.—Innago animi vultus. Cic. Decorat. iii.

VER. 32. Find. Few are perfectly sincere. C.—Gr. "a cheerful countenance is the vestige of a heart in good things, (H. prosperity. M.) and the discovery of parables is the effect of laborious enquiries." H.—Study makes the countenance serious. C.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Mouth. He is perfect. James iii. 2.

VER. 3. Envious. Who will neither use his wealth himself, nor bestow it. The true use of riches is to take a sufficiency, and to relieve the poor. C.

VER. 4. Gathereth. Gr. "taketh from his," &c. H.—Such misers are continually derided, but will never be cured. Eccl. ii. 18. and vi. 2. An old proverb says, "The miser doth nothing right but when he dies." C.

8 The eye of the envious is wicked: and he turneth away his face, and despiseth his own soul.

9 The eye of the covetous man is insatiable in his portion of iniquity: he will not be satisfied till he consume his own soul, drying it up.

10 An evil eye is towards evil things: and he shall not have his fill of bread, but shall be needy and pen-sive at his own table.

11 My son, if thou have any thing, do good to thyself, and offer to God worthy offerings.

12 Remember that death is not slow, and that the covenant of hell hath been ~~newn~~ ^{newn} to thee: for the covenant of this world shall surely die.

13 ^bDo good to thy friend before thou die; and according to thy ability, stretching out thy hand, give to the poor.

14 Defraud not thyself of the good day, and let not the part of a good gift overpass thee.

15 Shalt thou not leave to others to divide by lot thy sorrows and labours?

16 Give and take, and justify thy soul.

17 Before thy death work justice: for in hell there is no finding food.

18 *All flesh shall fade as grass, and as the leaf that springeth out on a green tree.

19 Some grow, and some fall off: so is the generation of flesh and blood: one cometh to an end, and another is born.

20 Every work that is corruptible, shall fail in the end: and the worker thereof shall go with it.

21 And every excellent work shall be justified: and the worker thereof shall be honoured therein.

22 ^dBlessed is the man that shall continue in wisdom, and that shall meditate in his justice, and in his mind shall think of the all-seeing eye of God.

23 He that considereth her ways in his heart, and hath understanding in her secrets, who goeth after her as one that traceth and stayeth in her ways:

24 He who looketh in at her windows, and hearkeneth at her door:

VER. 11. Offerings. Make a proper use of what God has bestowed. C.

VER. 12. The covenant of hell. The decree by which all are to go down to the regions of death, (Ch.) which hell frequently denotes. H.—Under the old law, all went down into some part of hell. W.—Hath been. Gr. "hath not," &c. We know not when we shall die, though all must taste of death, (H.) and therefore we must make haste to do good. VER. 20. End. The fruits of the Spirit are alone immortal. v. 21. Gal. vi. 8.

VER. 27. Glory. As under the miraculous pillar. Ex. xxiv. 17. He who shall abide with wisdom shall have nothing to fear. C.

26 He shall set his children under her shelter, and shall lodge under her branches :

27 He shall be protected under her covering from the heat, and shall rest in her glory.

CHAP. XV.

Wisdom embraceth them that fear God. God is not the author of sin.

HE that feareth God, will do good : and he that possesseth justice, shall lay hold on her.

2 And she will meet him as an honourable mother, and will receive him as a wife married of a virgin.

3 With the bread of life and understanding she shall feed him, and give him the water of wholesome wisdom to drink : and she shall be made strong in him, and he shall not be moved :

4 And she shall hold him fast, and he shall not be confounded : and she shall exalt him among his neighbours,

5 And in the midst of the church she shall open his mouth, and shall fill him with the spirit of wisdom and understanding, and shall clothe him with a robe of glory.

6 She shall heap upon him a treasure of joy and gladness, and shall cause him to inherit an everlasting name.

7 But foolish men shall not obtain her : and wise men shall meet her, foolish men shall not see her : for she is far from pride and deceit.

8 Lying men shall not be mindful of her : but men that speak truth shall be found with her, and shall advance, even till they come to the sight of God.

9 Praise is not seemly in the mouth of a sinner :

10 For wisdom came forth from God : for praise shall be with the wisdom of God, and shall abound in a faithful mouth, and the sovereign Lord will give praise unto it.

11 Say not : It is through God that she is not with me : for do not thou the things that he hateth.

12 Say not : He hath caused me to err : for he hath no need of wicked men.

13 The Lord hateth all abomination of error, and they that fear him shall not love it.

14 God made man from the beginning, and left him in the hand of his own counsel.

C.—Beza says, that God ordained Adam's fall, but for a good end ; and decreed justly what men unjustly perform, (ref. Castel. ii.) which is refuted here, and Deut. vii. 11. &c. W.

VER. 14. Counsel. Many explain this of Adam, before his fall, when he stood not in need of asking continually for God's assistance. S. Aug. correp. ii. n. 35.

15 He added his commandments and precepts.

16 ^b If thou wilt keep the commandments, and perform acceptable fidelity for ever, they shall preserve thee.

17 He hath set water and fire before thee : stretch forth thy hand to which thou wilt.

18 ^c Before man is life and death, good and evil ; that which he shall choose shall be given him :

19 For the wisdom of God is great, and he is strong in power, seeing all men without ceasing.

20 ^d The eyes of the Lord are towards them that fear him, and he knoweth all the work of man.

21 He hath commanded no man to do wickedly, and he hath given no man licence to sin :

22 For he desireth not a multitude of faithless and unprofitable children.

CHAP. XVI.

It is better to have none than many wicked children. Of the justice and mercy of God. His ways are unsearchable.

REJOICE not in ungodly children, if they be multiplied : neither be delighted in them, if the fear of God be not with them.

2 Trust not to their life, and respect not their labours.

3 For better is one that feareth God than a thousand ungodly children.

4 And it is better to die without children, than to leave ungodly children.

5 By one that is wise, a country shall be inhabited ; the tribe of the ungodly shall become desolate.

6 Many such things hath my eye seen, and greater things than these my ear hath heard.

7 ^e In the congregation of sinners a fire shall be kindled, and in an unbelieving nation wrath shall flame out.

8 ^f The ancient giants did not obtain pardon for their sins, who were destroyed, trusting to their own strength :

9 And he spared not the place where Lot sojourned, but abhorred them for the pride of their word.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Rejoice. Gr. "desire not an useless multitude of children," &c.

VER. 2. Labours. All will end in ruin which springs from corruption. II.—Achab and Gedeon had seventy sons, but all were presently exterminated, while Abraham had a numerous posterity by his son Isaac.

VER. 7. Out. They shall perish by civil and foreign wars, (C.) and by God's indignation. Deut. xxxii. 23. H.—They who yield to the fire of concupiscence, will feel God's wrath for ever. W.

VER. 9. Of their word, is not in Gr. but may imply the effrontery of the men, who were gathered together in the hardness of their heart: and if one had been stiff-necked, it is a wonder if he had escaped unpunished:

12 For mercy and wrath are with him. He is mighty to forgive, and to pour out indignation:

13 According as his mercy is, so his correction judgeth a man according to his works.

14 The sinner shall not escape in his rapines, and the patience of him that sheweth mercy shall not be put off.

15 *All mercy shall make a place for every man according to the merit of his works, and according to the wisdom of his sojournment.

16 Say not: I shall be hidden from God, and who shall remember me from on high?

17 In such a multitude I shall not be known: for what is my soul in such an immense creation?

18 Behold the heaven, and the heavens of heavens, the deep, and all the earth, and the things that are in them, shall be moved in his sight:

19 The mountains also, and the hills, and the foundations of the earth: when God shall look upon them, they shall be shaken with trembling.

20 And in all these things the heart is senseless: and every heart is understood by him:

21 And his ways who shall understand, and the storm, which no eye of man shall see?

22 For many of his works are hidden: but the works of his justice who shall declare? or who shall endure? for the testament is far from some, and the examination of all is in the end.

23 He that wanteth understanding, thinketh vain things: and the foolish and erring man thinketh foolish things.

24 Hearken to me, my son, and learn the discipline of understanding, and attend to my words in thy heart.

25 And I will shew forth good doctrine in equity, and will seek to declare wisdom: and attend to my words in thy heart, whilst with equity of spirit I tell thee the virtues that God hath put upon his works from the beginning, and I shew forth in truth his knowledge.

The creation and favour of God to man. An exhortation to turn to God.

GOD created man of the earth,^b and made him after his own image.

2 And he turned him into it again, and clothed him with strength according to himself.

3 He gave him the number of his days and time, and gave him power over all things that are upon the earth.

4 He put the fear of him upon all flesh, and he had dominion over beasts and fowls.

5 *He created of him a help-mate like to himself: he gave them counsel, and a tongue, and eyes, and ears, and a heart to devise: and he filled them with the knowledge of understanding.

6 He created in them the science of the spirit, he filled their heart with wisdom, and shewed them both good and evil.

7 He set his eye upon their hearts, to shew them the greatness of his works:

8 That they might praise the name which he hath sanctified: and glory in his wondrous acts, that they might declare the glorious things of his works.

9 Moreover, he gave them instructions, and the law of life for an inheritance.

10 He made an everlasting covenant with them, and he shewed them his justice and judgments.

18 ^bThe alms of a man ^cas a signet with him, and shall preserve the grace of a man as the apple of the eye:

19 ^eAnd afterward he shall rise up, and shall render them their reward, to every one upon their own head, and shall turn them down into the bowels of the earth.

20 But to the penitent he hath given the way of justice, and he hath strengthened them that were fainting in patience, and hath appointed to them the lot of truth.

21 Turn to the Lord, and forsake thy sins:

22 Make thy prayer before the face of the Lord, and offend less.

23 Return to the Lord, and turn away from thy injustice, and greatly hate abomination.

24 And know the justices and judgments of God, and stand firm in the lot set before thee, and in prayer to the most high God.

25 Go to the side of the holy age, ^dwith them that live and give praise to God.

26 Tarry not in the error of the ungodly, give glory before death. Praise perisheth from the dead as nothing.

27 Give thanks whilst thou art living, whilst thou art alive and in health thou shalt give thanks, and shalt praise God, and shalt glory in his mercies.

^a Rom. xiii. 1.—^b Infra xxix. 6.—^c Mat. xxv. 35.

VER. 13. Eyes. He conducted them in the pillar, and always watched over them. Gr. Rom. adds, "their ways are bent on evils from youth, and he could not." Comp. "for every man is bent on evils from youth, and they could not from stony hearts make them fleshy, (Ezec. xxxvi. 26. C.) for in the division of the nations of all the earth (14.) over," &c. Grabe.

VER. 15. God. Comp. adds, "he nourishes him as his first-born with instruction, and dividing the light of love, he does not abandon him." H.—But the Rom. edit. agrees with us. God declared himself king of Israel, (C.) and its guardian, while he intrusted other nations to angels. Orig. S. Aug. Pa. cxxxviii. Glossa. Deut. xxxii. 8.

VER. 16. Ways. He suffers them not to follow their own inclinations, like the Gentiles; but chastises them if they have done wrong. Acts xiv. 15. C.

VER. 17. Covenants. Gr. "injustices were not concealed from him, and all," &c. H.—God. Comp. adds, "but the Lord being good, and knowing his work, neither left nor abandoned them, still sparing them." Heb. xiii. 5. H.—This is a gloss omitted in the Rom. edit. Pa. lxxvii. 34.

VER. 18. Alms, and all good works are placed in God's treasury, and as a ring which a person wears on his finger with the utmost care. Jer. xxii. 24. Cant. viii. 6.—Eye. Gr. Comp. adds, (C) "dividing to his sons and daughters penance, (19.) And." H.—The Rom. and Ald. edit. agree with the Vulg.—Dead. Giving a crown of glory.—And shall, &c. is not in Greek. It implies that the wicked will be punished like Core. C.

VER. 22. Offend less: minue offendicula. That is, remove sins, and the occasions of sins. Ch.

VER. 24. And. Gr. "return to the Highest, and be converted from injustice, (for he shall lead from darkness to the light of health) and greatly abhor abomination. Who shall praise the most high in hell, instead of the living, and of those who make a return of praise, or confession! Praise perisheth from the dead, as from one who has had no being. The living and sound of heart shall praise the Lord, (28.) How," &c. H. Pa. lxxxvii. 11. C.—We cannot merit perseverance, but must pray for it incessantly. W.

VER. 25. Go to the side, &c. Fly from the side of satan and sin, and join 28 How great is the mercy of the Lord, and his forgiveness to them that turn to him!

29 For all things cannot be in men, because the sun of man is not immortal, and they are delighted with the vanity of evil.

30 What is brighter than the sun? yet it shall be eclipsed. Or what is more wicked than that which flesh and blood hath invented? and this shall be re-proved.

31 He beholdeth the power of the height of heaven: and all men are earth and ashes.

CHAP. XVIII.

God's works are wonderful: we must serve him, and not our lusts.

HE that liveth for ever, ^ecreated all things together. God only shall be justified, and he remaineth an invincible king for ever.

2 Who is able to declare his works?

3 For who shall search out his glorious acts?

4 And who shall shew forth the power of his majesty? or who shall be able to declare his mercy?

5 Nothing may be taken away, nor added, neither is it possible to find out the glorious works of God:

6 When a man hath done, then shall he begin: and when he leaveth off, he shall be at a loss.

7 What is man, and what is his grace? and what is his good, or what is his evil?

8 ^fThe number of the days of men at the most are a hundred years: as a drop of water of the sea are they esteemed: and as a pebble of the sand, so are a few years compared to eternity.

9 Therefore God is patient in them, and poureth forth his mercy upon them.

10 He hath seen the presumption of their heart, that it is wicked, and hath known their end, that it is evil.

11 Therefore hath he filled up his mercy in their favour, and hath shewn them the way of justice.

12 The compassion of man is toward his neighbour: but the mercy of God is upon all flesh.

with the holy ones that follow God and godliness. Ch.—Christ is styled the father of the age to come. Ia. ix. M.

VER. 29. Immortal. We all stand in need of a pardon. C.—And. Gr. (80) "what... and it fails. And flesh and blood shall study evil. (31.) He." H.—We cannot exact absolute perfection from any mortal. But still a person may be watchful, and trust in God's mercies. C. xviii. C.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Together, as to their substance, though they received different forms successively, as Moses relates. Both writers are divinely inspired. S. Aug. de Gen. ad Lit. iv. 83. W. S. Tho. i. p. 974. a. 2.—Some suppose that all things were really formed in an instant, and that the order described by Moses is only as we should conceive it. Cajet.—This passage only means that God alone was the creator both of the sun and of man, and without him nothing was made, (Jo. i. Pa. xxxii. 15.) as he gave existence to all, common, "in common," C.—And he. Gr. "and there is no other besides him who steers the world with the palm of his hand. And all things obey his will; for he is king of all, in his might, separating what is holy among them from the profane. (2.) He has enabled no one to," &c. H.

VER. 5. Added. The works speak for themselves, though man be silent. C.

VER. 6. Begin. God is so great and incomprehensible, that when man has done all that he can to find out his greatness and boundless perfections, he is still to begin: for what he has found out, is but a mere nothing, in comparison of his infinity. Ch.—It is best to adore him in silence and humility. C.

VER. 7. Grace. Gr. "utility." H.—Evil. What can man do for or against God! Job xxii. 3. Pa. xv. 2.

VER. 8. Years. Seneca fixes on the same number; (Brev. Vitæ. 3.) Macrobius on seventy, for the life of man; which nearly agrees with the author of Pa. lxxxix. 10. H.—It seldom happens that people exceed 70, or 100 years. But what is this compared with eternity! C.—Gr. "a hundred years are many... so are a thousand years in the day of the age," or of æons, eternity. H. Pa. lxxxix. 4. and 2 Pet. iii. 8.

VER. 9. Them. Human misery calls forth God's pity. C.

VER. 12. Flesh. It is infinite and disinterested. Man assists his neighbour expecting a recompense, and remembering that he may be distressed.

13 He hath mercy, and teacheth, and correcteth, as a shepherd doth his flock.

14 He bath mercy on him that receiveth the discipline of mercy, and that maketh haste in his judgments.

15 My son, in thy good deeds, make no complaint, and when thou givest any thing, add not grief by an evil word.

16 Shall not the dew assuage the heat? so also the good word is better than the gift.

17 Lo, is not a word better than a gift? but both are with a justified man.

18 A fool will upbraid bitterly: and a gift of one ill taught consumeth the eyes.

19 Before judgment prepare thee justice, and learn before thou speak.

20 Before sickness take a medicine, *and before judgment examine thyself, and thou shalt find mercy in the sight of God.

21 Humble thyself before thou art sick, and in the time of sickness shew thy conversation.

22 Let nothing hinder thee from praying always, and be not afraid to be justified even to death: for the reward of God continueth for ever.

23 Before prayer prepare thy soul: and be not as a man that tempteth God.

24 *Remember the wrath that shall be at the last day, and the time of repaying, when he shall turn away his face.

25 *Remember poverty in the time of abundance, and the necessities of poverty in the day of riches.

26 From the morning until the evening the time shall be changed, and all these are swift in the eyes of God.

27 A wise man will fear in every thing, and in the days of sins will beware of sloth.

28 Every man of understanding knoweth wisdom, and will give praise to him that findeth her.

VER. 21. Sick. Rom. Gr. adds, "by abstinence, and in the time of sins, manifest a conversion." H.—If we take precautions to avoid illness, why should we neglect the concerns of our soul?—Conversation, or good conduct.

Examine well if thou intend to perform it. C.

VER. 23. God. Can we expect that he will hear what we do not ourselves! To approach his majesty, without repentance and attention, is presumptuous. We must ask God to open our lips, and do what lies in us. Trid. C.

31 If thou give to thy soul her desires, she will make thee a joy to thy enemies.

32 Take no pleasure in riotous assemblies, be they ever so small: for their concertation is continual.

33 Make not thyself poor by borrowing to contribute to feasts when thou hast nothing in thy purse: for thou shalt be an enemy to thy own life.

Admonitions against sundry vices.

A WORKMAN that is a drunkard shall not be rich: and he that contemneth small things, shall fall by little and little.

2 *Wine and women make wise men fall off, and shall rebuke the prudent:

3 And he that joineth himself to harlots, will be wicked. Rottenness and worms shall inherit him, and he shall be lifted up for a greater example, and his soul shall be taken away out of the number.

4 *He that is hasty to give credit, is light of heart, and shall be lessened: and he that sinneth against his own soul, shall be despised.

5 He that rejoiceth in iniquity, shall be censured, and he that hateth chastisement, shall have less life: and he that hateth babbling, extinguisheth evil.

6 He that sinneth against his own soul, shall repent: and he that is delighted with wickedness, shall be condemned.

7 Rehearse not again a wicked and harsh word, and thou shalt not fare the worse.

VER. 8. Not. Only to God and his minister. Friends do not require to be informed of such things. Gr. "disclose not the conduct of others."—Be. Gr. "be not." Do not boast of sins which thou hast not committed, (C.) as S. Aug. did before his conversion. H.—But the Vulg. seems preferable. C.—In ordinary conversation to reveal our faults would be dangerous, but not in confession, or in religious orders, for advancement in virtue. W.

VER. 9. Hate thee. Whether thou hast spoken of thy own or of others faults, he will distrust thee.

and as it were defending thy sin, he will hate thee, and so will he be with thee always.

10 Hast thou heard a word against thy neighbour? let it die within thee, trusting that it will not burst thee.

11 At the hearing of a word the fool is in travail, as a woman groaning in the bringing forth a child.

12 As an arrow that sticketh in a man's thigh: so is a word in the heart of a fool.

13 *Reprove a friend, lest he may not have understood, and say; I did it not: or if he did it, that he may do it no more.

14 Reprove thy neighbour, for it may be he hath not said it: and if he hath said it, that he may not say it again.

15 Admonish thy friend: for there is often a fault committed.

16 And believe not every word. There is one, that slippeth with the tongue, but not from his heart.

17 ^bFor who is there that hath not offended with his tongue? Admonish thy neighbour before thou threaten him.

18 And give place to the fear of the Most High: for the fear of God is all wisdom, and therein is to fear God, and the disposition of the law is in all wisdom.

19 But the learning of wickedness is not wisdom: and the device of sinners is not prudence.

20 There is a subtle wickedness, and the same is detestable: and there is a man that is foolish, wanting in wisdom.

21 Better is a man that hath less wisdom, and wanteth understanding, with the fear of God, than he that aboundeth in understanding, and transgresseth the law of the Most High.

22 There is an exquisite subtilty, and the same is unjust.

23 And there is one that uttereth an exact word, telling the truth. There is one that humbleth himself wickedly, and his interior is full of deceit.

Rules with regard to correction, discretion, and avoiding lies.

HOW much better is it to reprove, than to be angry, and not to hinder him that confesseth in prayer?

2 *The lust of an eunuch shall deflower a young maiden:

3 So is he that by violence executeth unjust judgment.

4 How good is it, when thou art reprov'd, to shew repentance! for so thou shalt escape wilful sin.

5 There is one that holdeth his peace, that is found wise: and there is another that is hateful, that is bold in speech.

6 There is one that holdeth his peace, because he knoweth not what to say: and there is another that holdeth his peace, knowing the proper time.

7 A wise man will hold his peace till he see opportunity: but a babbler, and a fool, will regard no time.

8 He that useth many words shall hurt his own soul: and he that taketh authority to himself unjustly, shall be hated.

15 He will give a few things, and upbraid much: and the opening of his mouth is the kindling of a fire.

16 To-day a man lendeth, and to-morrow he asketh it again: such a man as this is hateful.

17 A fool shall have no friend, and there shall be no thanks for his good deeds.

18 For they that eat his bread are of a false tongue. How often, and how many will laugh him to scorn?

19 For he doth not distribute with right understanding that which was to be had: in like manner also that which was not to be had.

20 The slipping of a false tongue is as one that falleth on the pavement: so the fall of the wicked shall come speedily.

21 A man without grace is as a vain fable, it shall be continually in the mouth of the unwise.

22 A parable coming out of a fool's mouth shall be rejected: for he doth not speak it in due season.

23 There is that is hindered from sinning through want, and in his rest he shall be pricked.

24 There is that will destroy his own soul through shamefacedness, and by occasion of an unwise person he will destroy it: and by respect of person he will destroy himself.

25 There is that for bashfulness promiseth to his friend, and maketh him his enemy for nothing.

26 A lie is a foul blot in a man, and yet it will be continually in the mouth of men without discipline.

27 A thief is better than a man that is always lying: but both of them shall inherit destruction.

28 The manners of lying men are without honour: and their confusion is with them without ceasing.

29 A wise man shall advance himself with his words, and a prudent man shall please the great ones.

VER. 33. Folly. He may still appear to have some sense, and injures none. C.—It is convenient to conceal faults, provided they be amended. W.

33 Better is he that hideth his folly, than the man that hideth his wisdom.

CHAP. XXI.

Cautions against sin in general, and some sins in particular.

MY son, hast thou sinned? do so no more: but for thy former sins also pray that they may be forgiven thee.

2 Flee from sins as from the face of a serpent: for if thou comest near them, they will take hold of thee.

3 The teeth thereof are the teeth of a lion, killing the souls of men.

4 All iniquity is like a two-edged sword, there is no remedy for the wound thereof.

5 Injuries and wrongs will waste riches: and the house that is very rich shall be brought to nothing by pride: so the substance of the proud shall be rooted out.

6 The prayer out of the mouth of the poor shall reach the ears of God, and judgment shall come for him speedily.

7 He that hateth to be reproved walketh in the trace of a sinner: and he that feareth God will turn to his own heart.

8 He that is mighty by a bold tongue is known afar off, but a wise man knoweth to slip by him.

9 He that buildeth his house at other men's charges, is as he that gathereth himself stones to build in the winter.

10 *The congregation of sinners is like tow heaped together, and the end of them is a flame of fire.

11 The way of sinners is made plain with stones, and in their end is hell, and darkness, and pains.

12 He that keepeth justice shall get the understanding thereof.

13 The perfection of the fear of God is wisdom and understanding.

14 He that is not wise in good, will not be taught.

15 But there is a wisdom that aboundeth in evil: and there is no understanding where there is bitterness.

16 The knowledge of a wise man shall abound like a flood, and his counsel continueth like a fountain of life.

VER. 7. Sinner. He rejects all medicines. How shall he be cured? C.—They who fear God, will examine their actions when they are warned. W.

VER. 8. By him. And to avoid his reproaches. Gr. "knoweth when he is ruined." H.—He is more reserved, and escapes the dangers of talkativeness.

VER. 9. Winter. This season is unfit for building; so the man who borrows, may be forced to pay again (C.) before it is convenient for him. H.—Injustice will bring on ruin. Jer. xxiii. 13. Some Gr. copies have, "stones for a heap over his tomb," as Achan and Absalom were treated. Reputation, or goods ill-acquired, will not continue long. W.

VER. 10. Fire. All their grandeur will end in smoke. H.—Mal. iv. 1. Matt. xiii. 30.

VER. 11. Stones. It is broad and easy. Matt. vii.

VER. 12. Whereof. Practice makes perfect. A painter may produce a better piece by this means, than one who is more acquainted with theory, (C.) and neglects it. H.

17 The heart of a fool is like a broken vessel, and no wisdom at all shall it hold.

18 A man of sense will praise every wise word he shall hear, and will apply it to himself: the luxurious man hath heard it, and it shall displease him, and he will cast it behind his back.

19 The talking of a fool is like a burden in the way: but in the lips of the wise grace shall be found.

20 The mouth of the prudent is sought after in the church, and they will think upon his words in their hearts.

21 As a house that is destroyed, so is wisdom to a fool: and the knowledge of the unwise is as words without sense.

22 Doctrine to a fool is as fetters on the feet, and like manacles on the right hand.

23 A fool lifteth up his voice in laughter: but a wise man will scarce laugh low to himself.

24 Learning to the prudent is as an ornament of gold, and like a bracelet upon his right arm.

25 The foot of a fool is soon in his neighbour's house: but a man of experience will be abashed at the person of the mighty.

26 A fool will peep through the window into the house: but he that is well taught, will stand without.

27 It is the folly of a man to hearken at the door: and a wise man will be grieved with the disgrace.

28 The lips of the unwise will be telling foolish things: but the words of the wise shall be weighed in a balance.

29 The heart of fools is in their mouth: and the mouth of wise men is in their heart.

30 While the ungodly curseth the devil, he curseth his own soul.

31 The tale-bearer shall defile his own soul, and shall be hated by all: and he that shall abide with him shall be hateful: the silent and wise man shall be honoured.

CHAP. XXII.

3 A son ill taught is the confusion of the father: and a foolish daughter shall be to his loss.

4 A wise daughter shall bring an inheritance to her husband: but she that confoundeth, becometh a disgrace to her father.

5 She that is bold shameth both her father and husband, and will not be inferior to the ungodly: and shall be disgraced by them both.

6 A tale out of time is like music in mourning: but the stripes and instruction of wisdom are never out of time.

7 He that teacheth a fool, is like one that glueth a potsherd together.

8 He that telleth a word to him that heareth not, is like one that waketh a man out of a deep sleep.

9 He speaketh with one that is asleep, who uttereth wisdom to a fool: and in the end of the discourse he saith: Who is this?

10 *Weep for the dead, for his light hath failed: and weep for the fool, for his understanding faileth.

11 Weep but a little for the dead, for he is at rest.

12 For the wicked life of a wicked fool is worse than death.

13 ^bThe mourning for the dead is seven days: but for a fool and an ungodly man all the days of their life.

14 Talk not much with a fool, and go not with him that hath no sense.

15 Keep thyself from him, that thou mayst not have trouble, and thou shalt not be defiled with his sin.

16 Turn away from him, and thou shalt find rest, and shalt not be wearied out with his folly.

17 What is heavier than lead? and what other name hath he but fool?

18 ^cSand and salt, and a mass of iron, is easier to bear, than a man without sense, that is both foolish and wicked.

19 A frame of wood bound together in the foundation of a building, shall not be loosed: so neither shall the heart that is established by advised counsel.

20 The thought of him that is wise at all times, shall not be depraved by fear.

21 As pales set in high places, and plasterings made without cost, will not stand against the face of the wind:

* Infra xxxviii. 16.—^b Gen. i. 10.—^c Prov. xxvii. 3.

VER. 4. Inheritance. Her wisdom and economy. Prov. xxxi. 29. Women had no inheritance among the Jews, when they had brothers.

VER. 5. Bold. In speaking and acting without restraint. C.

VER. 6. Mourning. S. Jer. (ep. ad Julian) quoting this sentence, calls it "divine Scripture." Prov. xxv. 20.—Of time. Or "stripes and instruction well-timed, are wisdom." H.—Only the wise know how to correct with advantage.

VER. 7. Fool. Who is incapable of understanding. Those who have sense may be corrected, though they may have taken evil courses.

VER. 9. This? The Athenian philosophers and Festus derided S. Paul. Acts. xvii. 32.

VER. 10. For the fool. In the language of the Holy Ghost, he is styled a fool that turns away from God to follow vanity and sin. And what is said by the wise man against fools is meant of such fools as these. Ch.—Their wicked life is worse than death. W.

VER. 13. Days. There was a longer time assigned for great men. Gen. i. 2 Num. xx. 30. and Deut. xxxiv. 8.—Life. This is understood of those who have lost all reason, or sense of religion. S. Monica wept for her son, hoping that he would repent, as a certain bishop had comforted her. S. Aug. Conf. iii. ult.

VER. 17. Lead? Gold alone is heavier. But the fool is compared with lead, and is most insupportable.

VER. 19. Wood. Such were used in the walls of Jerusalem, (4 Mac. ii.) and of the temple and palace. 3 K. vi. 36. and vii. 12.

VER. 21. Cost. Of lime. C.—Gr. omits this comparison, as well as the 23d verse. H.

22 So also a fearful heart in the imagination of a fool shall not resist against the violence of fear.

23 As a fearful heart in the thought of a fool at all times will not fear, so neither shall he that continueth always in the commandments of God.

24 He that pricketh the eye, bringeth out tears: and he that pricketh the heart, bringeth forth resentment.

25 He that flingeth a stone at birds, shall drive them away: so he that upbraideth his friend, breaketh friendship.

26 Although thou hast drawn a sword at a friend, despair not: for there may be a returning. To a friend, 27 If thou hast opened a sad mouth, fear not, for there may be a reconciliation: except upbraiding, and reproach, and pride, and disclosing of secrets, or a treacherous wound: for in all these cases a friend will flee away.

28 Keep fidelity with a friend in his poverty, that in his prosperity also thou mayst rejoice.

29 In the time of his trouble continue faithful to him, that thou mayst also be heir with him in his inheritance.

30 As the vapour of a chimney, and the smoke of the fire goeth up before the fire: so also injurious words, and reproaches, and threats, before blood.

31 I will not be ashamed to salute a friend, neither will I hide myself from his face: and if any evil happen to me by him, I will bear it.

32 But every one that shall hear it, will beware of him.

33 *Who will set a guard before my mouth, and a sure seal upon my lips, that I fall not by them, and that my tongue destroy me not?

CHAP. XXIII.

A prayer for grace to flee sin: cautions against profane swearing and other vices.

O LORD Father, and Sovereign Ruler of my life, leave me not to their counsel: nor suffer me to fall by them.

2 Who will set scourges over my thoughts, and the discipline of wisdom over my heart, that they spare me not in their ignorances, and that their sins may not appear:

* Ps. cxl. 3.

VER. 23. Not fear. This seems contrary to what goes before. But fools are sometimes intrepid even to harshness. C

VER. 24. Resentment. Or "sense," (H.) by means of pungent reprimands. C

VER. 25. Away. (Gr.) Lit. "will knock them down," deficiet. H.—Deliberate provocations (v. 27.) are pardoned with more difficulty than a sudden impulse of wrath. v. 26. On such occasions we may withdraw our confidence, but not our charity and patience. Matt. v. 11. C.—A true friend will not be lost for a temporal damage; but he must not be slighted. W.

VER. 29. Inheritance. Gr. adds, "for poverty is not always contemptible, nor is the senseless rich worthy of admiration." H.

VER. 32. Of him. Yet I will not follow their example. C.—If my friend has behaved ill to me, he will be the greatest sufferer. H.

VER. 33. Not. Ps. cxl. 3. Who can sufficiently guard his tongue? C.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. By them. Viz. the tongue and the lips, mentioned in the last verse of the foregoing chapter. Ch.—We cannot resist of ourselves, and must therefore pray to God. W.—We have need of a good master to correct our eagerness in speaking. C.

VER. 2. Ignorances, &c. That is, that the scourges and discipline of wisdom may restrain the ignorances, that is, the slips and offences which are usually committed by the tongue and the lips. Ch.—The tongue is a restless evil. Jam. i. 8.

VER. 3. Over me. The noblest motives are not always proposed first.

VER. 5. Eyes. God never makes such presents, but he permits us to fall in punishment of former transgressions. C.—Coveting. Gr. "from thy servants all giant-like affection. Vain hopes and desires remove from me; and thou shalt possess him who wishes to serve thee without ceasing." Grabe. H.

3 Lest my ignorances increase, and my offences be multiplied, and my sins abound, and I fall before my adversaries, and my enemy rejoice over me?

4 O Lord Father, and God of my life, leave me not to their devices.

5 Give me not haughtiness of my eyes, and turn away from me all coveting.

6 Take from me the greediness of the belly, and let not the lusts of the flesh take hold of me, and give me not over to a shameless and foolish mind.

7 Hear, O ye children, the discipline of the mouth: and he that will keep it, shall not perish by his lips, nor be brought to fall into most wicked works.

8 A sinner is caught in his own vanity, and the proud and the evil speakers shall fall thereby.

9 *Let not thy mouth be accustomed to swearing: for in it there are many falls.

10 And let not the naming of God be usual in thy mouth, and meddle not with the names of saints, for thou shalt not escape free from them.

11 For as a slave daily put to the question, is never without a blue mark: so every one that sweareth, and nameth, shall not be wholly pure from sin.

12 A man that sweareth much, shall be filled with iniquity, and a scourge shall not depart from his house.

13 And if he make it void, his sin shall be upon him: and if he dissemble it, he offendeth double:

14 And if he swear in vain, he shall not be justified: for his house shall be filled with his punishment.

15 There is also another speech opposite to death, let it not be found in the inheritance of Jacob.

16 For from the merciful all these things shall be taken away, and they shall not wallow in sins.

17 Let not thy mouth be accustomed to indiscreet speech: for therein is the word of sin.

18 Remember thy father and thy mother, for thou sittest in the midst of great men;

19 Lest God forget thee in their sight, and thou, by thy daily custom, be infatuated and suffer reproach: and wish that thou hadst not been born, and curse the day of thy nativity.

20 *The man that is accustomed to opprobrious words, will never be corrected all the days of his life.

* Ex. xx. 7. Matt. v. 33.—* 2 K. xvi. 7.

VER. 6. Foolish, (infrunite) is used in this sense by Seneca. C.—Gr. has not this epithet. The title, "instruction of the mouth," follows, (H.) to v. 20. C.

VER. 10. Them. Gr. Alex. has only (9.) "swearing, (10.) and have not a custom of naming the Most High." Other editions have "the holy one." H.—Rash and false oaths are forbidden. Jer. iv. Matt. v. W.

VER. 11. Sin. "No swearing is secure." S. Aug.—Slaves were forced to confess the truth by torments; free-men took an oath; and priests gave their word. Plut. Prob.

VER. 13. Dissemble. Gr. "despise." He will be punished, at least, by God. C.

VER. 14. In vain. Without a design to execute, (Grot.) or through levity, or rather falsely. Ex. xxiii. 1. Deut. v. 11.

VER. 15. Opposite. Or equal. Gr. "clothed with death." He denotes blasphemy, (Lex. xxiv. 14.) or the invitation to idolatry, (Deut. xiii. 1.) or calumny. v. 17. Lev. xix. 12. C.—In oaths God is called to witness, as being unable to deceive. But blasphemy attributes to him or to others what does not belong to them. W.

VER. 16. Merciful. Or true believers, Aasideans. 1 Mac. ii. 42

VER. 17. Of sin. A Hebrew idiom, to imply something criminal. Those who have laid aside shame, are capable of any wickedness.

VER. 18. Men. Treat thy parents with no less regard, (C.) even though thou shouldst be exalted in dignity. Lyr.—Thus thou wilt be rewarded, (C.) or if thou transgress, wilt be brought to judgment. Bossuet.—Gr. "thou shalt sit," &c. H.

VER. 19. Nativity. Wish not that thou hadst not been born of such parents. Grot.

VER. 20. Life. For who will admonish him?

21 Two sorts of men multiply sins, and the third bringeth wrath and destruction.

22 A hot soul is a burning fire, it will never be quenched till it devour something.

23 And a man that is wicked in the mouth of his flesh, will not leave off till he hath kindled a fire.

24 To a man that is a fornicator, all bread is sweet; he will not be weary of sinning unto the end.

25 Every man that passeth beyond his own bed, despising his own soul, and saying: "Who seeth me?"

26 Darkness compasseth me about, and the walls cover me, and no man seeth me: whom do I fear? the Most High will not remember my sins.

27 And he understandeth not that his eye seeth all things, for such a man's fear driveth from him the fear of God, and the eyes of men fearing him:

28 And he knoweth not that the eyes of the Lord are far brighter than the sun, beholding round about all the ways of men, and the bottom of the deep, and looking into the hearts of men, into the most hidden parts.

29 For all things were known to the Lord God before they were created: so also, after they were perfected, he beholdeth all things.

30 This man shall be punished in the streets of the city, and he shall be chased as a colt: and where he suspected not, he shall be taken.

31 And he shall be in disgrace with all men, because he understood not the fear of the Lord.

32 "So also every woman that leaveth her husband, and bringeth in an heir by another:

33 For first she hath been unfaithful to the law of the Most High: and secondly, she hath offended against her husband: thirdly, she hath fornicated in adultery, and hath gotten her children of another man.

34 This woman shall be brought into the assembly, and inquisition shall be made of her children.

35 Her children shall not take root, and her branches shall bring forth no fruit.

36 She shall leave her memory to be cursed, and her infamy shall not be blotted out.

37 And they that remain shall know, that there is nothing better than the fear of God: and that there is nothing sweeter than to have regard to the commandments of the Lord.

^a Is. xxix. 15.—^b Lev. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 21.

VER. 30. And he. Gr. "and where," &c. He shall be stoned. Lev. xx. 10. C.—Taken. Gr. subjoins (v. 32.) "so," &c. H.—If carnal adultery be thus punished, how much more will spiritual adultery, schism, and apostasy from the Catholic religion? W.

VER. 38. Shall. Gr. "that thou shouldst be taken under his protection." H. CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Wisdom. Gr. title, "the praise of wisdom." Here the book of Ecclesiastes is imitated. H.—See also Prov. viii. and Wisd. vii. 24. and viii. 1. The pagans boasted of their philosophy. But it was not to be compared with the true religion, which the Israelites possessed.—Own self. Lit. "soul." She alone is capable of this office. C.—In God. Referring all the glory to him. M.—This sentence is not in Gr. H.—The second person of the Trinity proclaims his own praises. W.

38 It is great glory to follow the Lord: for length of days shall be received from him.

CHAP. XXIV.

Wisdom praiseth herself: her origin, her dwelling, her dignity, and her fruits

WISDOM shall praise her own self, and shall be honoured in God, and shall glory in the midst of her people,

2 And shall open her mouth in the churches of the Most High, and shall glorify herself in the sight of his power,

3 And in the midst of her own people she shall be exalted, and shall be admired in the holy assembly,

4 And in the multitude of the elect she shall have praise, and among the blessed she shall be blessed, saying:

5 I came out of the mouth of the Most High, the first-born before all creatures:

6 I made that in the heavens there should rise light that never faileth, and as a cloud I covered all the earth:

7 I dwelt in the highest places, and my throne is in a pillar of a cloud.

8 I alone have compassed the circuit of heaven, and have penetrated into the bottom of the deep, and have walked in the waves of the sea,

9 And have stood in all the earth: and in every people,

10 And in every nation I have had the chief rule:

11 And by my power I have trodden under my feet the hearts of all the high and low: and in all these I sought rest, and I shall abide in the inheritance of the Lord.

12 Then the creator of all things commanded, and said to me: and he that made me, rested in my tabernacle,

13 And he said to me: Let thy dwelling be in Jacob, and thy inheritance in Israel, and take root in my elect.

14 "From the beginning, and before the world, was I created, and unto the world to come I shall not cease to be, and in the holy dwelling-place I have ministered before him.

15 And so was I established in Sion, and in the holy city likewise I rested, and my power was in Jerusalem.

16 And I took root in an honourable people, and in

VER. 3. And. Gr. (6.) "I came out of the mouth of the Highest, (6.) and as," &c. H.—He alludes to the darkness which covered the earth. Gen. i. 2. Job xxxviii. 2. Many explain this of the uncreated wisdom, born in the womb of the blessed Virgin; and the Church, in her office, applies it to her in a mystical sense. But it seems literally to refer to the wisdom and grace granted to the saints, which enlightens every man, and presides over the creation.

VER. 7. Cloud. Guiding the Israelites (Ex. xiii. 21.) or near the throne of God. Wisd. ix. 4. C.

the portion of my God his inheritance, and my abode is in the full assembly of saints.

17 I was exalted like a cedar in Libanus, and as a cypress-tree on Mount Sion.

18 I was exalted like a palm-tree in Cades, and as a rose-plant in Jericho :

19 As a fair olive-tree in the plains, and as a plane-tree by the water in the streets, was I exalted.

20 I gave a sweet smell like cinnamon, and aromatic balm : I yielded a sweet odour like the best myrrh :

21 And I perfumed my dwelling as storax, and galbanum, and onyx, and aloes, and as the frankincense not cut, and my odour is as the purest balm.

22 I have stretched out my branches as the turpentine-tree, and my branches are of honour and grace.

23 As the vine I have brought forth a pleasant odour : and my flowers are the fruit of honour and riches.

24 I am the mother of fair love, and of fear, and of knowledge, and of holy hope.

25 In me is all grace of the way, and of the truth ; in me is all hope of life and of virtue.

26 Come over to me, all ye that desire me, and be filled with my fruits.

27 For my spirit is sweet above honey, and my inheritance above honey and the honeycomb.

28 My memory is unto everlasting generations.

29 *They that eat me shall yet hunger : and they that drink me, shall yet thirst.

30 He that hearkeneth to me, shall not be confounded : and they that work by me, shall not sin.

31 They that explain me, shall have life everlasting.

32 All these things are the book of life, and the covenant of the Most High, and the knowledge of truth.

VER. 31. They. Gr. "all these things are the book of the covenant of the most high God, the law which Moses gave unto us, an inheritance to the synagogues of Jacob." Grabe puts in a different character from the Compl. "Lose not strength in the Lord, but stick to him, that he may strengthen you. The Lord Almighty is the only God, and there is no other Saviour." Then follows, (v. 35.) "who," &c. H.—Everlasting. Provided his life correspond with his doctrine. No occupation can be more glorious. 38 Who first hath perfect knowledge of her, and a weaker shall not search her out.

39 For her thoughts are more vast than the sea, and her counsels more deep than the great ocean.

40 I wisdom have poured out rivers.

41 I like a brook out of a river of a mighty water, I like a channel of a river, and like an aqueduct came out of paradise.

42 I said : I will water my garden of plants, and I will water abundantly the fruit of my meadow.

43 And behold my brook became a great river, and my river became near to a sea :

44 For I make doctrine to shine forth to all as the morning light, and I will declare it afar off.

45 I will penetrate to all the lower parts of the earth, and will behold all that sleep, and will enlighten all that hope in the Lord.

46 I will yet pour out doctrine as prophecy, and will leave it to them that seek wisdom, and will not cease to instruct their offspring even to the holy age.

47 ^aSee ye that I have not laboured for myself only, but for all that seek out the truth.

VER. 32. Truth. They are equally certain, and no more is required. C.—He that loves has fulfilled the law. H.

VER. 34. King. Viz Christ, who by his gospel, like an overflowing river, hath enriched the earth with heavenly wisdom. Ch.—Ever. The Lord (H.) is a king, (Carriers) who, &c. v. 35. H.—Solomon's wisdom is also praised. C.—The sceptre of David remained till the captivity, and the royal family continued in esteem till Christ. Yet David was only a figure of Christ, the eternal king. W.

VER. 35. Phison. Or Phase of Colchis, which rises in Armenia, like the Tigris and Euphrates, all which overflow their banks at the beginning of summer, on account of the snow melting.

VER. 36. Harvest. The snow of Libanus makes the Jordan swell at Pentecost. Jos. iii. 15.

VER. 37. Light. Giving "all the light of reason, and to Israel the law. Pa. cxlvii. 20.—Gehon. Or Araxes, which descends from Armenia into the Caspian sea, though some erroneously take it to be the Nile, (C.) which overflows at the same time as the Euphrates. Pliny xviii. 18. Solin. xli.

VER. 38. Of her. Christ was the first that had perfect knowledge of heavenly wisdom. Ch.—This is the privilege of God. Gr. "the first hath not perfect," &c.

VER. 40. Rivers of saving waters, on all, but particularly (H.) on Judea. v. 42. Gr. "and like a ditch (dioryx. C.) from a river, and as an aqueduct, I came into paradise," (H.) like the four rivers aforesaid. Gen. ii.

VER. 44. Off. He alludes to the conversion of the Gentiles.

VER. 45. I will. Many Fathers explain this of Christ's descent into hell. But as it occurs not in the Gr. it may be considered as the tradition of the first Christians, who gave this version, (C.) or they found it in their copies. H.

VER. 46. Prophecy. Of no less authority. The prophets had ceased for some time before Christ. C.—Them. Gr. "to ages of ages. See," &c. H.

VER. 47. I. Wisdom, or the author of this book. C. xxxiii. 18. Wisd. vii. 13. C.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Pleased. Wisdom still speaks. Solomon often makes similar divisions, to make the deeper impression. Prov. xxx. 15. 24.

3 Three sorts my soul hateth, and I am greatly grieved at their life:

4 A poor man that is proud: a rich man that is a liar: an old man that is a fool, and doting.

5 The things that thou hast not gathered in thy youth, how shalt thou find them in thy old age?

6 O how comely is judgment for a grey head, and for ancients to know counsel!

7 O how comely is wisdom for the aged, and understanding and counsel to men of honour!

8 Much experience is the crown of old men, and the fear of God is their glory.

9 Nine things that are not to be imagined by the heart have I magnified, and the tenth I will utter to men with my tongue.

10 A man that hath joy of his children: and he that liveth and seeth the fall of his enemies.

11 *Blessed is he that dwelleth with a wise woman, and that hath not slipped with his tongue, and that hath not served such as are unworthy of him.

12 Blessed is he that findeth a true friend: and that declareth justice to an ear that heareth.

13 How great is he that findeth wisdom and knowledge! but there is none above him that feareth the Lord.

14 The fear of God hath set itself above all things:

15 Blessed is the man, to whom it is given to have the fear of God: he that holdeth it, to whom shall he be likened?

16 The fear of God is the beginning of his love: and the beginning of faith is to be fast joined unto it.

17 The sadness of the heart is every plague: and the wickedness of a woman is all evil.

18 And a man will choose any plague, but the plague of the heart:

19 And any wickedness, but the wickedness of a woman:

20 And any affliction, but the affliction from them that hate him:

21 And any revenge, but the revenge of enemies.

22 There is no head worse than the head of a serpent:

* Infra xxvi. 1.—^b Supra xiv. 1. and xix. 16. James iii. 2.

VER. 4. Fool. Gr. "adulterer, devoid of sense." Ia. lxx. 20. C.—Luxuria .. senectuti foedissima. Cie. off. i.

VER. 5. Age? Wisdom, says Bias, "is more durable than other possessions." Laert.

VER. 9. Things. Gr. "nine suppositions I have blessed in my heart," (H.) or thought that they may confer felicity. But the tenth will certainly do it. C. xiv.

VER. 10. Enemies. Not out of revenge, but for the glory of God. See Matt. v. 46.

VER. 12. A true. Gr. "prudence." C.

VER. 14. Things. Gr. adds, "for light (15.) he that," &c. H.

VER. 16. It. This is not in the edit. of Rome, or of Aldus: but it is in the rest. Fear commonly begins the work of salvation, and love perfects it. 1 Tim. i. 5. C.—All happiness in this life is grounded on the fear of God. W.

VER. 17. Evil. Gr. reads not this; but the Syriac does, omitting the two next verses. C.—Heresy is described under the idea of a wicked woman, concealing her malice. W.

VER. 18. Choose. Lit. "see." H.—Some supply 'send any plague,' &c.

VER. 21. Enemies. Which they wish, or may behold. C. xviii. 31. C.

VER. 22. Head. Or poison, as the Heb. rosh signifies both. Rondet.

VER. 23. Woman. Gr. "enemy." C.—Revenge is the passion of little souls, and of women. Juv. xiii.—Dragon. This is not exaggerated, if we reflect on the evils occasioned by Eve, Dalila, Athalia, &c. C.—"A woman is the greatest wild-beast." Menander.

VER. 24. Sackcloth. And is black when passion bursts forth, though women too frequently conceal their anger to take deeper vengeance.

23 And there is no anger above the anger of a woman. *It will be more agreeable to abide with a lion and a dragon, than to dwell with a wicked woman.

24 The wickedness of a woman changeth her face: and she darkeneth her countenance as a bear: and sheweth it like sackcloth. In the midst of her neighbours, 25 Her husband groaned, and hearing, he sighed a little.

26 All malice is short to the malice of a woman: let the lot of sinners fall upon her.

27 As the climbing of a sandy way is to the feet of the aged, so is a wife full of tongue to a quiet man.

28 Look not upon a woman's beauty, and desire not a woman for beauty.

29 *A woman's anger, and impudence, and confusion is great.

30 A woman, if she have superiority, is contrary to her husband.

31 A wicked woman abateth the courage, and maketh a heavy countenance and a wounded heart.

32 Feeble hands, and disjointed knees, a woman that doth not make her husband happy.

33 *From the woman came the beginning of sin, and by her we all die.

34 Give no issue to thy water, nor not a little: nor to a wicked woman liberty to gad abroad.

35 If she walk not at thy hand, she will confound thee in the sight of thy enemies.

36 Cut her off from thy flesh, lest she always abuse thee.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of good and bad women.

HAPPY is the husband of a good wife: for the number of his years is double.

2 A virtuous woman rejoiceth her husband, and shall fulfil the years of his life in peace.

3 A good wife is a good portion: she shall be given in the portion of them that fear God, to a man for his good deeds:

4 Rich or poor, if his heart is good, his countenance shall be cheerful at all times.

* Prov. xxi. 19.—^d Infra xlii. 6.—^e Gen. iii. 6.

VER. 25. Groaned. Gr. "shall fall."—Little. Gr. "bitterly." He cannot avoid hearing of his wife's misconduct. H.—She will raise him enemies on all sides.

VER. 26. Her. I could wish no greater evil to the worst of enemies. Eccles. vii. 27.

VER. 27. Man. He cannot advance. C.—Semper habet lites. Juv. vi.

VER. 28. Beauty. Other qualifications of more importance must be regarded. H.—He should choose one who may be a companion and assistant in domestic concerns. Grot.

VER. 30. A. Gr. "If she bring a fortune to her husband," (H.) she will continually upbraid him with it, and cover him with confusion. v. 29. C.—Lay-headship in spiritual things is so unreasonable, that few heretics will endure it. W.

VER. 32. Happy. A lazy wife will give no content.

VER. 33. Die. Eve tempted her husband, and thus we are all involved in sin. 1 Tim. ii. 14.

VER. 34. Water. Incontinency. C. xxvi. 15. Prov. v. 15. If water find a hole, it will presently flow away. Women were kept much at home in the East, as they are in many parts of Europe. C.—Retirement and silence are the characteristics of a wise woman. Æschyl. Thebas.

VER. 35. She will. Gr. "cut her off from thy flesh." Grabe and Comp. add, (H.) "give a bill of divorce or her dowry, and send her away." C.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. Double. Uneasiness deprives a person of much comfort. W.

VER. 3. To a, &c. is not in Gr. H.

VER. 5. Fourth. A jealous wife. v. 8.

5 Of three things my heart hath been afraid, and at the fourth my face hath trembled:

6 The accusation of a city, and the gathering together of the people:

7 And a false calumny, all are more grievous than death.

8 A jealous woman is the grief and mourning of the heart.

9 With a jealous woman is a scourge of the tongue which communicateth with all.

10 As a yoke of oxen that is moved to and fro, so also is a wicked woman: he that hath hold of her, is as he that taketh hold of a scorpion.

11 A drunken woman is a great wrath: and her reproach and shame shall not be hid.

12 The fornication of a woman shall be known by the haughtiness of her eyes, and by her eye-lids.

13 *On a daughter that turneth not away herself, set a strict watch: lest finding an opportunity she abuse herself.

14 Take heed of the impudence of her eyes, and wonder not if she slight thee.

15 She will open her mouth as a thirsty traveller to the fountain, and will drink of every water near her, and will sit down by every hedge, and open her quiver against every arrow, until she fail.

16 The grace of a diligent woman shall delight her husband, and shall fatten his bones.

17 Her discipline is the gift of God.

18 Such is a wise and silent woman, and there is nothing so much worth as a well instructed soul.

19 A holy and shamefaced woman is grace upon grace.

20 And no price is worthy of a continent soul.

21 As the sun, when it riseth to the world in the high places of God, so is the beauty of a good wife for the ornament of her house.

22 As the lamp shining upon the holy candlestick, so is the beauty of the face in a ripe age.

23 As golden pillars upon bases of silver, so are the firm feet upon the soles of a steady woman.

* Infra xlii. 11.

VER. 6. City. When all are charged with a crime, or when all rise up against a man. C.

VER. 8. Woman. Gr. adds, "against another woman."

VER. 9. With. Gr. "and the scourge of the tongue, which," &c. H.—Back-biting occasions the four evils aforesaid. Grot.

VER. 10. Woman. When oxen move, the yoke moves also: Thus heresy will suffer none to rest. W.—The yoke ought to fit the neck, and not be fastened to the horns. Colum. ii. 2.

VER. 11. Ibid. She will be given to debauchery. S. Chrysa. C.—Romulus ordered wives to be slain, like adulteresses, who had drunk wine at home. V. Max. vi. 3.

VER. 12. Eye-lids. Shewing her impudence. 2 Pet. ii. 14. Is. iii. 16.

VER. 13. Herself. From gazing at men. C.—Love manifests itself by the eyes. Propert.

VER. 15. Hedge. Or "stake," palum, (H.) on which tents were fixed. Gen. xxxviii. 14. C.—Fail. Incontinence will at last ruin her health. H.

VER. 16. Bones. The Catholic faith is the ground of all virtues. W.

VER. 18. Worth. Lit. "exchange." Gr. (H.) such a wife is above all price. M.

VER. 20. Continent. Adhering to virtue. C.

VER. 22. Holy. Made of gold, and placed in the sanctuary. M.

VER. 23. Soles. Gr. "heels." Comp. "solid pavement." A long addition follows in this edit. which is inserted by Grabe, (H. but is not in the best copies. C.) instead of the following verse. H.

VER. 26. Poverty. The Romans provided for veteran soldiers, as Louis XIV. did with great magnificence. C.—Greenwich hospital is for the same purpose. H.—Despised. Solomon makes the same complaint. Eccle. ix. 15.

VER. 27. To sin. He is less excusable, as he knows what he abandons. Jer. ii. 12. C.

24 As everlasting foundations upon a solid rock, so the commandments of God in the heart of a holy woman.

25 At two things my heart is grieved, and the third bringeth anger upon me:

26 A man of war fainting through poverty: and a man of sense despised:

27 And he that passeth over from justice to sin, God hath prepared such an one for the sword.

28 Two sorts of callings have appeared to me hard and dangerous: a merchant is hardly free from negligence: and a huckster shall not be justified from the sins of the lips.

CHAP. XXVII.

Dangers of sin from several heads: the fear of God is the best preservative. He that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it.

THROUGH poverty many have sinned: and he that seeketh to be enriched, turneth away his eye.

2 As a stake sticketh fast in the midst of the joining of stones, so also in the midst of selling and buying, sin shall stick fast.

3 Sin shall be destroyed with the sinner.

4 Unless thou hold thyself diligently in the fear of the Lord, thy house shall quickly be overthrown.

5 As when one sifteth with a sieve, the dust will remain: so will the perplexity of a man in his thoughts.

6 The furnace trieth the potter's vessels, and the trial of affliction just men.

7 As the dressing of a tree sheweth the fruit thereof, so a word out of the thought of the heart of man.

8 Praise not a man before he speaketh, for this is the trial of men.

9 If thou followest justice, thou shalt obtain her: and shalt put her on as a long robe of honour, and thou shalt dwell with her: and she shall protect thee for ever, and in the day of acknowledgment thou shalt find a strong foundation.

10 Birds resort unto their like: so truth will return to them that practise her.

11 The lion always lieth in wait for prey: so do sins for them that work iniquities.

VER. 28. Two. Gr. "scarcely is a merchant exempted from negligence, and the seller of wine, and eatables, (Grot.) or retailer (Voss. καπηλος) shall not be justified from sin." H.—Negligence. That is, from the neglect of the service of God: because the eager pursuit of the mammon of this world, is apt to make men of that calling forget the great duties of loving God above all things, and their neighbours as themselves.—A huckster. Or a retailer of wine. Men of that profession are both greatly exposed to danger of sin themselves, and are too often accessory to the sins of others. Ch.—Lips. Innkeepers talk much to please, and thus fall into danger. Prov. x. 19. W.—They are also exposed to lying, (M.) and to adulterate their merchandise. C.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 1. Poverty. Gr. "the indifferent thing," as the Stoics represented money. C. vii. 20.—Sinned. Hence proceeds the danger to which little merchants are exposed. Involuntary poverty is very miserable. Prov. xxx. 9.

VER. 2. Fast. Anacharsis styled "the market-place the receptacle of mutual cheating." Laert. 1.—The seller praises his goods to get them off: (Hor.) the buyer says it is bad. Prov. xx. 14. The next verse is a gloss omitted in Gr. C.

VER. 4. Fear. By this the soul is preserved in a good state. W.

VER. 5. Thoughts. The more he thinks on some things, the more is he perplexed. C.—After sin is purged away, there remain some defects like dust. Ps. l. 4. W.

VER. 6. Affliction. Gr. "thought," (H.) or speech. C.—A young man being brought to Socrates, that he might pass judgment on his dispositions, the philosopher ordered him to "speak." Cic.

VER. 7. As. Gr. "the fruit shews the dressing," &c.

VER. 9. Honour. The desire of justice is the sure method to obtain it. The rest is not in Gr. H.

VER. 11. Iniquities. They fall deeper, or sin entails punishment. C.

12 A holy man continueth in wisdom as the sun: but a fool is changed as the moon.

13 In the midst of the unwise keep in the word till its time: but be continually among men that think.

14 The discourse of sinners is hateful, and their laughter is at the pleasures of sin.

15 The speech that sweareth much shall make the hair of the head stand upright: and its irreverence shall make one stop his ears.

16 In the quarrels of the proud is the shedding of blood: and their cursing is a grievous hearing.

17 He that discloseth the secret of a friend, loseth his credit, and shall never find a friend to his mind.

18 Love thy neighbour, and be joined to him with fidelity.

19 But if thou discover his secrets, follow no more after him.

20 For as a man that destroyeth his friend, so also is he that destroyeth the friendship of his neighbour.

21 And as one that letteth a bird go out of his hand, so hast thou let thy neighbour go, and thou shalt not get him again.

22 Follow after him no more, for he has gone afar off, he is fled, as a roe escaped out of the snare: because his soul is wounded.

23 Thou canst no more bind him up. And of a curse there is reconciliation:

24 But to disclose the secrets of a friend leaveth no hope to an unhappy soul.

25 He that winketh with the eye forgeth wicked things, and no man will cast him off:

26 In the sight of thy eyes he will sweeten his mouth, and will admire thy words: but at the last he will writhe his mouth, and on thy words he will lay a stumbling-block.

27 I have hated many things, but not like him, and the Lord will hate him.

28 If one cast a stone on high, it will fall upon his own head: and the deceitful stroke will wound the deceitful.

29 He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it: and he that setteth a stone for his neighbour, shall stumble upon it: and he that layeth a snare for another, shall perish in it.

30 A mischievous counsel shall be rolled back upon the author, and he shall not know from whence it cometh to him.

31 Mockery and reproach are of the proud, and vengeance as a lion shall lie in wait for him.

32 They shall perish in a snare that are delighted with the fall of the just: and sorrow shall consume them before they die.

33 Anger and fury are both of them abominable, and the sinful man shall be subject to them.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Lessons against revenge and quarrels. The evils of the tongue.

HE "that seeketh to revenge himself, shall find vengeance from the Lord, and he will surely keep his sins in remembrance.

2 Forgive thy neighbour if he hath hurt thee: and then shall thy sins be forgiven to thee when thou prayest.

3 Man to man reserveth anger, and doth he seek remedy of God?

4 He hath no mercy on a man like himself, and doth he entreat for his own sins?

5 He that is but flesh, nourisheth anger, and doth he ask forgiveness of God? who shall obtain pardon for his sins?

6 Remember thy last things, and let enmity cease!

7 For corruption and death hang over in his commandments.

8 Remember the fear of God, and be not angry with thy neighbour.

9 Remember the covenant of the most High, and overlook the ignorance of thy neighbour.

10 Refrain from strife, and thou shalt diminish thy sins:

11 For a passionate man kindleth strife, and a sinful man will trouble his friends, and bring in debate in the midst of them that are at peace.

12 For as the wood of the forest is, so the fire burneth: and as man's strength is, so shall his anger be, and according to his riches he shall increase his anger.

13 A hasty contention kindleth a fire: and a hasty quarrel sheddeth blood: and a tongue that beareth witness bringeth death.

14 If thou blow the spark, it shall burn as a fire: and if thou spit upon it, it shall be quenched: both come out of the mouth.

* Deut. xxxii. 35. Mat. vi. 14. Mark xi. 25. Rom. xii. 19.

VER. 12. A. Gr. "the speech of the wise man is wisdom throughout: but," &c. H.—The fool always mixes something improper with what good he speaks. C.—Sun. The wise man preserves his virtue, whether it appear or not. W.

VER. 13. Keep. Gr. "wait an opportunity." H.—Go but seldom. Their discourse tends to promote iniquity, (v. 14.) and blasphemous oaths, (v. 15.) and bloodshed. v. 16. C.

VER. 15. Bars. The Jews did so, when they heard blasphemy. Acts vii. 6. M.

VER. 17. Mind. In Egypt, those who disclosed a secret to the enemy, were condemned to have their tongues cut out. Diod. ii. 2.

VER. 19. Him. He will never trust thee more. v. 22.

VER. 20. Friend. Sept. Rom. and Alex. "enemy." H.—This crime is like murder. The Romans sometimes solemnly renounced the friendship of those who had offended them, as Germanicus and Caius did that of Piso. Tacit. An. 2. Suet. 3.

VER. 22. Because. Gr. "for one may bind up a wound, and an insult may be pardoned. But he who hath revealed secrets, hath lost all hope," (H.) or "confidence," v. 24. c. xxii. 27.

VER. 25. Off. Some Gr. copies have, "he who knows him will depart from him." It is difficult to guard against a false friend, who winks as if he desired to please us, (C.) while he really seeks our ruin. v. 26.

VER. 28. Wound. Gr. "deal wounds. He," &c. H.—Traitors, in the dark often wound their fellows, (C.) or themselves. M.

VER. 29. Setteth. Gr. "layeth a snare, shall perish in it."

VER. 30. Him. God will punish, when the sinner has perhaps forgotten his offence. C.—Such are often chastised here, and always hereafter. W.

VER. 33. Them. He shall feel the indignation of God, (C.) and shall repine. H.

CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1. Sins. To seek revenge out of rancour, or contrary to justice, is a grievous sin. W.—Retaliation was tolerated, (Ex. xxi. 24.) but love was not to be laid aside. Deut. xxxiii. 35. Lev. xxi. 17. Ps. vii. 5. Mat. vii. 2.

VER. 2. Forgive. This charity enforces, when the offender is penitent, if the remission of punishment be not contrary to justice and discipline. W.—Mat. vi. 12. and xviii. 32. Lu. vi. 37. We all stand in need of pardon. C.

VER. 5. And doth. Gr. "who will expiate his sins?" Is God bound to receive his victims or prayers while he entertains such dispositions? C.

VER. 7. In his commandments. Supply the sentence out of the Greek thus: Remember corruption and death, and abide in the commandments, (Ch.) which condemn revenge. Ex. xxiii. 4. C.—Comp. "and do not rage or menace thy neighbour with destruction and death; yea, stick to the commandments. Be mindful of the precepts, and be not angry with thy neighbour; and of the covenant," &c. v. 9. H.

VER. 9. Ignorance. He uses a softer term. In effect, most quarrels proceed from a misunderstanding. "Every sinner is ignorant."

* VER. 12. Burneth. The more fuel, the greater will be the blaze.

VER. 13. And a, &c. is not in Gr. Prov. xix. 12. and xxvi. 21.

15 The whisperer and the double-tongued is accursed: for he hath troubled many that were at peace.

16 The tongue of a third person hath disquieted many, and scattered them from nation to nation.

17 It hath destroyed the strong cities of the rich, and hath overthrown the houses of great men.

18 It hath cut in pieces the forces of people, and undone strong nations.

19 The tongue of a third person hath cast out valiant women, and deprived them of their labours.

20 He that hearkeneth to it, shall never have rest, neither shall he have a friend in whom he may repose.

21 The stroke of a whip maketh a blue mark: but the stroke of the tongue will break the bones.

22 Many have fallen by the edge of the sword, but not so many as have perished by their own tongue.

23 Blessed is he that is defended from a wicked tongue, that hath not passed into the wrath thereof, and that hath not drawn the yoke thereof, and hath not been bound in its bands:

24 For its yoke is a yoke of iron: and its bands are bands of brass.

25 The death thereof is a most evil death: and hell is preferable to it.

26 Its continuance shall not be for a long time, but it shall possess the ways of the unjust: and the just shall not be burnt with its flame.

27 They that forsake God shall fall into it, and it shall burn in them, and shall not be quenched, and it shall be sent upon them as a lion, and as a leopard it shall tear them.

28 Hedge in thy ears with horns, hear not a wicked tongue, and make doors and bars to thy mouth.

29 Melt down thy gold and silver, and make a balance for thy words, and a just bridle for thy mouth:

30 And take heed lest thou slip with thy tongue, and fall in the sight of thy enemies who lie in wait for thee, and thy fall be incurable unto death.

CHAP. XXIX.

Of charity in lending money, and justice in repaying. Of alms, and of being surety.

HE that sheweth mercy, lendeth to his neighbour: and he that is stronger in hand keepeth the commandments.

2 Lend to thy neighbour in the time of his need, and pay thou thy neighbour again in due time.

VER. 16. Third. Who carries stories between friends, to set them at variance. C.

VER. 18. It, &c. is omitted in Gr. H.—Indiscreet reports often cause dissensions. W.

VER. 19. Labours. Causing their husbands to suspect them.

VER. 22. Their own. Gr. “the.” Detraction separates many friends. C.

VER. 25. Hell. Or rather “the grave.”

VER. 26. Its. Gr. “it shall not take hold of the pious, and they shall not,” &c. H.—Their virtue shall quickly shine forth. C.

VER. 28. Hear. Gr. “lo, hedge in thy possessions with thorns: bind up thy silver and gold.” H.—To pay attention to detraction is as bad as to utter it. W.

VER. 29. Just. Gr. “a door and bolt,” &c. as v. 28. If people guard their property with so much care, why do they make light of words? H.—These ought to be weighed with more attention than money, and we ought to spare no pains or expense on this head. C.

VER. 30. Tongue. Gr. “by them, lest thou fall before him who lays snares.” C. xxix. H.

CHAP. XXIX. VER. 1. Hand. That is, he that is hearty and bountiful in lending to his neighbour in his necessity. Ch.—Fœnus, in this book means simply “lending.” Rondet.—This is a work of mercy, and a sort of alms. Justice requires that the thing should be restored, and if any one refuse on purpose, he is as bad as a thief. W.—He who lends will receive usury from the Lord. Prov. xix. 17. Ps. xxxvi. 21.—In hand. Rich.

3 Keep thy word, and deal faithfully with him: and thou shalt always find that which is necessary for thee.

4 Many have looked upon a thing lent as a thing found, and have given trouble to them that helped them.

5 Till they receive, they kiss the hands of the lender and in promises they humble their voice:

6 But when they should repay, they will ask time, and will return tedious and murmuring words, and will complain of the time:

7 And if he be able to pay, he will stand off, he will scarce pay one half, and will count it as if he had found it.

8 But if not, he will defraud him of his money, and he shall get him for an enemy without cause:

9 And he will pay him with reproaches and curses, and instead of honour and good turn will repay him injuries.

10 Many have refused to lend, not out of wickedness, but they were afraid to be defrauded without cause.

11 But yet towards the poor be thou more hearty, and delay not to shew him mercy.

12 Help the poor because of the commandment: and send him not away empty-handed because of his poverty.

13 Lose thy money for thy brother and thy friend: and hide it not under a stone to be lost.

14 *Place thy treasure in the commandments of the most High, and it shall bring thee more profit than gold.

15 Shut up alms in the heart of the poor, and it shall obtain help for thee against all evil.

16 Better than the shield of the mighty, and better than the spear:

17 It shall fight for thee against thy enemy.

18 A good man is surety for his neighbour: and he that hath lost shame will leave him to himself.

19 Forget not the kindness of thy surety: for he hath given his life for thee.

20 The sinner and the unclean fleeth from his surety.

29 Be contented with little instead of much, and thou shalt not hear the reproach of going abroad.

30 It is a miserable life to go as a guest from house to house: for where a man is a stranger, he shall not deal confidently, nor open his mouth.

31 He shall entertain, and feed, and give drink to the unthankful, and moreover he shall hear bitter words.

32 Go, stranger, and furnish the table, and give others to eat what thou hast in thy hand.

33 Give place to the honourable presence of my friends: for I want my house, my brother being to be lodged with me.

34 These things are grievous to a man of understanding: the upbraiding of house-room, and the reproaching of the lender.

8 A horse not broken becometh stubborn, and a child left to himself will become headstrong.

9 Give thy son his way, and he shall make thee afraid: play with him, and he shall make thee sorrowful.

14 Better is a poor man who is sound, and strong of constitution, than a rich man who is weak, and afflicted with evils.

15 Health of the soul in holiness of justice, is better than all gold and silver: and a sound body, than immense revenues.

16 There is no riches above the riches of the health of the body: and there is no pleasure above the joy of the heart.

17 Better is death than a bitter life: and everlasting rest, than continual sickness.

CHAP. XXXI.

Of the desire of riches, and of moderation in eating and drinking.

WATCHING for riches consumeth the flesh, and the thought thereof driveth away sleep.

2 The thinking beforehand turneth away the understanding, and a grievous sickness maketh the soul sober.

3 The rich man hath laboured in gathering riches together, and when he resteth he shall be filled with his goods.

4 The poor man hath laboured in his low way of life, and in the end he is still poor.

5 He that loveth gold, shall not be justified: and he that followeth after corruption, shall be filled with it.

6 ^bMany have been brought to fall for gold, and the beauty thereof hath been their ruin.

7 Gold is a stumbling-block to them that sacrifice to it: woe to them that eagerly follow after it, and every fool shall perish by it.

8 Blessed is the rich man that is found without blemish: and that hath not gone after gold, nor put his trust in money nor in treasures.

9 Who is he, and we will praise him? for he hath done wonderful things in his life.

10 Who hath been tried thereby, and made perfect, he shall have glory everlasting. He that could have transgressed, and hath not transgressed: and could do evil things, and hath not done them:

11 Therefore are his goods established in the Lord, and all the church of the saints shall declare his alms.

26 Hear me, my son, and despise me not: and in the end thou shalt find my words.

27 In all thy works be quick, and no infirmity shall come to thee.

28 The lips of many shall bless him that is liberal of his bread, and the testimony of his truth is faithful.

VER. 25. Vomit. Some have omitted this term as indelicate; but the Scripture does not approve of intemperance, while it advises the preventing of a disorder. A man's stomach may sometimes be innocently overcharged. On such occasions, an emetic was prescribed. The ancients had not the same horror of it as moderns. Prov. xxiii. 8. VER. 28. Bread. And other provisions; while the miser is contented. Prov. xii. 9. C.—Bread supports the body and instruction the soul. If it be bad, it does the reverse. W.

32 Wine taken with sobriety is equal life to men: if thou drink it moderately, thou shalt be sober.

33 What is his life, who is diminished with wine?

34 What taketh away life? death.

35 "Wine was created from the beginning to make men joyful, and not to make them drunk.

36 Wine drunken with moderation is the joy of the soul, and the heart.

37 Sober drinking is health to soul and body.

38 Wine drunken with excess raiseth quarrels, and wrath, and many ruins.

39 Wine drunken with excess is bitterness of the soul.

40 The heat of drunkenness is the stumbling-block of the fool, lessening strength, and causing wounds.

14 Before a storm goeth lightning: and before shamefacedness goeth favour: and for thy reverence good grace shall come to thee.

15 And at the time of rising be not slack: but be first to run home to thy house, and there withdraw thyself, and there take thy pastime.

16 And do what thou hast a mind, but not in sins or proud speech.

17 And for all these things bless the Lord, that made thee, and that replenisheth thee with all his good things.

18 He that feareth the Lord, will receive his discipline: and they that will seek him early, shall find a blessing.

19 He that seeketh the law, shall be filled with it: and he that dealeth deceitfully, shall meet with a stumbling-block therein.

22 A man of counsel will not neglect understanding, a strange and proud man will not dread fear:

23 Even after he hath done with fear without counsel, he shall be controlled by the things of his own seeking.

24 My son, do thou nothing without counsel, and thou shalt not repent when thou hast done.

CHAP. XXXIII.

The fear of God is the best security. Times and men are in the hands of God. Take care of thyself as long as thou livest, and look to thy servants.

NO evils shall happen to him that feareth the Lord, but in temptation God will keep him, and deliver him from evils.

21 As long as thou livest, and hast breath in thee, let no man change thee.

22 For it is better that thy children should ask of thee, than that thou look toward the hands of thy children.

23 In all thy works keep the pre-eminence.

24 Let no stain sully thy glory. In the time when thou shalt end the days of thy life, and in the time of thy decease, distribute thy inheritance.

25 Fodder, and a wand, and a burden, are for an ass: bread, and correction, and work, for a slave.

26 He worketh under correction, and seeketh to rest: let his hands be idle, and he seeketh liberty.

27 The yoke and the thong bend a stiff neck, and continual labours bow a slave.

28 Torture and fetters are for a malicious slave: send him to work, that he be not idle:

29 For idleness hath taught much evil.

CHAP. XXXIV.

The vanity of dreams. The advantage of experience, and of the fear of God.

THE hopes of a man that is void of understanding are vain and deceitful: and dreams lift up fools.

2 The man that giveth heed to lying visions, is like which those are most certainly liberated who obtain their freedom. But where are the rest left; except in the mass of perdition, by the just judgment of the Deity? S. Aug. Persev. xiv. n. 35, and Corrupt. xiii. n. 42.

VER. 15. Another. Lights and shades both contribute to form the beauty of a picture. H.—Antitheses adorn a discourse, as opposite things do the universe. S. Aug. de Civ. Dei. xi. 18.—God will make the wicked subservient to his glory.

VER. 16. Of all. Solomon, Ezechias, &c. made various collections of similar maxims. C.—The books of the Machabees were alone written after this in the Old Testament. M.—Gr. places what follows after C. xxx. 26. These four verses may be regarded as a sort of preface. H.

VER. 21. Change thee. That is, so as to have this power over thee. Ch.—Be inflexible on this head. C.

VER. 23. The pre-eminence. That is, be master in thy own house, and part not with thy authority. Ch.—Let not thy wife or servants rule in thy name. M.

VER. 25. Fodder. Gr. prefixes "on slaves." H.—They were bought like horses. Aristotle (Econ. i. 5.) gives the like instructions on their treatment. C.

VER. 27. A stiff. Gr. "the neck, (28.) torture," &c. H.

VER. 31. Faithful, is not expressed in Gr. but must be understood.—Blood. Taking him prisoner at the hazard of thy life. The like misfortune might easily have befallen thee. C.—Seneca (ep. 47.) says, "live so with thy inferior, as thou wouldst have thy superior live with thee."

VER. 33. Thou. Gr. "on what road wilt thou seek for him?"

to him that catcheth at a shadow, and followeth after the wind.

3 The vision of dreams is the resemblance of one thing to another: as when a man's likeness is before the face of a man.

4 What can be made clean by the unclean? and what truth can come from that which is false?

5 Deceitful divinations, and lying omens, and the dreams of evil doers, are vanity.

6 And the heart fancieth as that of a woman in travail: except it be a vision sent forth from the Most High, set not thy heart upon them.

7 For dreams have deceived many, and they have failed that put their trust in them.

8 The word of the law shall be fulfilled without a lie, and wisdom shall be made plain in the mouth of the faithful.

9 What doth he know, that hath not been tried? A man that hath much experience, shall think of many things: and he that hath learned many things, shall shew forth understanding

10 He that hath no experience, knoweth little: and he that hath been experienced in many things, multiplieth prudence.

11 He that hath not been tried, what manner of things doth he know? he that hath been surprised, shall abound with subtlety.

12 I have seen many things by travelling, and many customs of things.

13 Sometimes I have been in danger of death for these things, and I have been delivered by the grace of God.

14 The spirit of those that fear God, is sought after, and by his regard shall be blessed.

15 For their hope is on him that saveth them, and the eyes of God are upon them that love him.

16 He that feareth the Lord shall tremble at nothing, and shall not be afraid: for he is his hope.

17 The soul of him that feareth the Lord is blessed.

18 To whom doth he look, and who is his strength?

19 *The eyes of the Lord are upon them that fear him, he is their powerful protector, and strong stay,

CHAP. XXXIV. VER. 1. The. Gr. "on dreams. The," &c. H.—No dependence can be had on the pretended interpretation of dreams, which do not come from God; (C.) as some do. Mat. i. Dan. ii. W.

VER. 3. Man. When he turns away from the mirror, it appears no more. Jam. i. 23.

VER. 4. Unclean. This text has been abused, to prove that the sinner cannot confer grace in the sacraments. C.—But Christ does this by his ministry. S. Aug. Pa. x. n. 6.

VER. 5. Deceitful. Gr. "divinations, and auguries, and dreams, are vain."

VER. 6. Travail. Such things cannot be explained. Twenty people will all give different interpretations.—High, as those of Jacob, Joseph, &c. were. Yet it is difficult to make the discrimination. S. Greg. dial. iv. 48.—Homer admits of two sorts of dreams. Odys. xix.

VER. 7. Them. The devil takes advantage of their weakness, and they have recourse to magic, &c. C.

VER. 8. Law, which forbids attention to dreams. Lev. xix. 26. Is. viii. 20. A Lap.—No part of the law shall perish; and some will always explain it truly. W.

VER. 9. What. Gr. "A man who has travelled, knows much," &c. H.—Thus Ulysses became so wise, (Homer) as well as the ancient philosophers, Pythagoras, &c. S. Jer. ad Paulin.—The knowledge derived from books will not suffice. C.

VER. 10. Experienced. Gr. "much abroad, shall abound with subtlety. (11.) I," &c.

VER. 12. And. Gr. "And I know more than I announce." Grabe's edit.

VER. 13. For. Gr. "On account of these things I have been saved:" (H.) by my great experience, which gives weight to my instructions.

a defence from the heat, and a cover from the sun at noon.

20 A preservation from stumbling, and a help from falling; he raiseth up the soul, and enlighteneth the eyes, giving health, and life, and blessing.

21 ^bThe offering of him that sacrificeth of a thing wrongfully gotten, is stained; and the mockeries of the unjust are not acceptable.

22 The Lord is only for them that wait upon him in the way of truth and justice.

23 *The Most High approveth not the gifts of the wicked: neither hath he respect to the oblations of the unjust, nor will he be pacified for sins by the multitude of their sacrifices.

24 He that offereth sacrifice of the goods of the poor, is as one that sacrificeth the son in the presence of his father.

25 The bread of the needy is the life of the poor: he that defraudeth them thereof, is a man of blood.

26 He that taketh away the bread gotten by sweat, is like him that killeth his neighbour.

27 He that sheddeth blood, ^dand he that defraudeth the labourer of his hire, are brothers.

28 When one buildeth up, and another pulleth down: what profit have they but the labour?

29 When one prayeth, and another curseth: whose voice will God hear?

30 He that washeth himself after touching the dead, if he toucheth him again, what doth his washing avail?

31 *So a man that fasteth for his sins, and doth the same again, what doth his humbling himself profit him? who will hear his prayer?

CHAP. XXXV.

What sacrifices are pleasing to God.

HE that keepeth the law, multiplieth offerings.

2 ^eIt is a wholesome sacrifice to take heed to the commandments, and to depart from all iniquity.

3 And to depart from injustice, is to offer a propitiatory sacrifice for injustices, and a begging of pardon for sins.

4 He shall return thanks that offereth fine flour: and he that doth mercy offereth sacrifice.

VER. 14. Is.—Gr. "shall live. (15.) For... them. (16.) He," &c. H.

VER. 20. From falling, or when a person is fallen.

VER. 21. Mockeries. Some Gr. copies have "gifts." Such unjust presents, or sacrifices, God will abhor. Is. xli. 8. Deut. xxiv. 15. C.

VER. 22. Lord. Gr. (23.) "most... wicked, nor," &c.

VER. 26. Bread. Gr. "a livelihood, killeth his neighbour; and he sheddeth blood, who keepeth back the hire of the workman." H.

VER. 28. Labour? So, if your sacrifices be ill-gotten, they will not be received; and if you relapse, you will be as bad as ever. C.

VER. 30. Dead. Lit. "is baptized by or from the dead;" baptizatur a mortuo. H.—S. Cyprian thought this text was peremptory against the baptism of heretics, and the Donatists were of the same opinion. They seem not to have read, if he touch him again, which entirely alters the meaning. S. Aug. admonishes them of this; though he explains it of the pagan rather than of the Jewish purifications, to which it refers. Num. xix. 11. See S. Aug. c. Cres. l. 24. and ii. 25. c. Petil. i. 9. S. Cyp. ep. ad Quint. C.

VER. 31. Prayer. A relapse makes the former repentance useless. Mat. xviii. 33. W.

CHAP. XXXV. VER. 1. Offerings. He cannot otherwise observe the law. H.—Virtue is the most acceptable sacrifice. C.—The sacrifices of penance, of justice, and of praise, are to be preferred before all external ones. W.

VER. 2. And to. Gr. (4.) "He," &c. H.—The peace-offering and that for sin, as well as the oblation of fine flour and of praise, (which is the most perfect of all) are noticed. C.—External sacrifice must not be neglected. W.

VER. 4. Sacrifice. Gr. adds, "of praise." H.—This was the true spirit of the law. C.

VER. 6. Lord. The poor, who present a virtuous heart, are more acceptable

5 *To depart from iniquity, is that which pleaseth the Lord, and to depart from injustice, is an entreaty for sins.

6 ^bThou shalt not appear empty in the sight of the Lord.

7 For all these things are to be done, because of the commandment of God.

8 The oblation of the just maketh the altar fat, and is an odour of sweetness in the sight of the Most High.

9 The sacrifice of the just is acceptable, and the Lord will not forget the memorial thereof.

10 Give glory to God with a good heart: and diminish not the first-fruits of thy hands.

11 *In every gift shew a cheerful countenance, and sanctify thy tithes with joy.

12 Give to the Most High according to what he hath given to thee, and with a good eye do according to the ability of thy hands:

13 For the Lord maketh recompense, and will give thee seven times as much.

14 ^aDo not offer wicked gifts, for such he will not receive.

15 And look not upon an unjust sacrifice, for the Lord is judge, *and there is not with him respect of person.

16 The Lord will not accept any person against a poor man, and he will hear the prayer of him that is wronged.

17 He will not despise the prayers of the fatherless: nor the widow, when she poureth out her complaint.

18 Do not the widow's tears run down the cheek, and her cry against him that causeth them to fall?

19 For from the cheek they go up even to heaven, and the Lord that heareth will not be delighted with them.

20 He that adoreth God with joy, shall be accepted, and his prayer shall approach even to the clouds.

21 The prayer of him that humbleth himself shall pierce the clouds: and till it come nigh he will not be comforted: and he will not depart till the Most High behold.

22 And the Lord will not be slack, but will judge for the just, and will do judgment: and the Almighty will not have patience with them, that he may crush their back:

23 And he will repay vengeance to the Gentiles, till he have taken away the multitude of the proud, and broken the sceptres of the unjust,

24 Till he have rendered to men according to their deeds: and according to the works of Adam, and according to his presumption.

25 Till he have judged the cause of his people, and he shall delight the just with his mercy.

26 The mercy of God is beautiful in the time of affliction, as a cloud of rain in the time of drought.

CHAP. XXXVI.

A prayer for the church of God. Of a good heart, and a good wife.

HAVE mercy upon us, O God of all, and behold us, and shew us the light of thy mercies:

2 And send thy fear upon the nations, that have not sought after thee: that they may know that there is no God beside thee, and that they may shew forth thy wonders.

3 Lift up thy hand over the strange nations, that they may see thy power.

4 For as thou hast been sanctified in us in their sight, so thou shalt be magnified among them in our presence,

5 That they may know thee, as we also have known thee, that there is no God beside thee, O Lord.

6 Renew thy signs, and work new miracles.

7 Glorify thy hand, and thy right arm.

8 Raise up indignation, and pour out wrath.

9 Take away the adversary, and crush the enemy.

10 Hasten the time, and remember the end, that they may declare thy wonderful works.

11 Let him that escapeth be consumed by the rage of the fire: and let them perish that oppress thy people.

12 Crush the head of the princes of the enemies, that say: There is no other beside us.

13 Gather together all the tribes of Jacob: that they may know that there is no God besides thee, and may declare thy great works: and thou shalt inherit them as from the beginning.

14 Have mercy on thy people, upon whom thy name is invoked: and upon Israel, ^awhom thou hast raised up to be thy first-born.

15 Have mercy on Jerusalem, the city which thou hast sanctified, the city of thy rest.

16 Fill Sion with thy unspeakable words, and thy people with thy glory.

than the rich, who are buried in sin, though the latter may offer the most splendid sacrifices. H.—God requires that all should do according to their abilities. VER. 26. The. Gr. "mercy is beautiful," &c. Ps. ix. 10. H.

CHAP. XXXVI. VER. 1. Have. He has pointed out the conditions for prayer, and now he gives a model. The Jews were at this time dispersed and subservient to the Egyptians or Syrians, which greatly afflicted them. C.—And shew. Gr. (2.) "send."

VER. 2. That. Gr. Rom. omits the rest. But Grabe retains, "all nations which seek not after thee." H.—This prayer implies a prediction of the Gentiles' conversion, as the psalms do frequently in like terms. Ps. lxiv. W.

VER. 4. Sanctified, by chastising us, or by protecting our fathers in the desert.

VER. 10. End of our sufferings. The malice of our enemies is at the height.

VER. 11. Escapeth the sword. Deut. xxii. 36. He foretells the event, or wishes that they may be chastised, in order that they may enter into themselves, and adore the one true God.

VER. 12. Other lord. The Syrian and Egyptian monarchs sometimes claimed divine honours. Dan. vii. 25. and xi. 36. C.

17 Give testimony to them that are thy creatures from the beginning, and raise up the prophecies which the former prophets spoke in thy name.

18 Reward them that patiently wait for thee, that thy prophets may be found faithful: and hear the prayers of thy servants,

19 *According to the blessing of Aaron over thy people, and direct us into the way of justice, and let all know that dwell upon the earth, that thou art God, the beholder of all ages.

20 The belly will devour all meat, yet one meat is better than another.

21 The palate tasteth venison, and the wise heart false speeches.

22 A perverse heart will cause grief, and a man of experience will resist it.

23 A woman will receive every man: yet one daughter is better than another.

24 The beauty of a woman cheereth the countenance of her husband, and a man desireth nothing more.

25 If she have a tongue that can cure, and likewise mitigate and shew mercy: her husband is not like other men.

26 He that possesseth a good wife, beginneth a possession: she is a help like to himself, and a pillar of rest.

27 Where there is no hedge, the possession shall be spoiled: and where there is no wife, he mourneth that is in want.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Of the choice of friends and counsellors.

EVERY friend will say: I also am his friend: but there is a friend, that is only a friend in name. Is not this a grief even to death?

2 But a companion and a friend shall be turned to an enemy.

3 O wicked presumption, whence camest thou to cover the earth with thy malice, and deceitfulness?

4 There is a companion who rejoiceth with his friend in his joys, but in the time of trouble he will be against him.

VER. 18. Thee The Jews were more faithful after the captivity. The author seems to beg for the coming of the Messiah.

VER. 20. Another. Thus act discreetly in the pursuit of knowledge. The good may be distinguished from bad, as easily as venison can from other meats. C.—As there is a difference of meats, so must discretion be used in words, in the choice of a wife, &c. W.

VER. 22. Resist. Gr. "requite it," as it deserves. H.

VER. 23. Man. Yet in marriage the temper of the person is to be considered.

VER. 24. More. Love is the most violent of all the passions, and nothing can afford greater content than a virtuous and consoling wife. C. xxvi. 21. C.

VER. 26. Good, is not in Greek, but the context shews that it is necessary. H.—By concord small possessions increase, as by discord the greatest are lost. W.

VER. 28. Rest, or abode with his wife and family. The Jews in general married, and such as delayed were deemed suspicious characters. Prov. xxvii. 8. C.

CHAP. XXXVII. VER. 1. Death. Gr. explains this: (C.) I mean (2.) "a companion and friend turned?" &c. H.—True friendship is most necessary, and false most dangerous. W.

VER. 5. Will. Grotius suspects that not is wanting. Yet, if such a false

5 There is a companion who condoleth with his friend for his belly's sake, and he will take up a shield against the enemy.

6 Forget not thy friend in thy mind, and be not unmindful of him in thy riches.

7 Consult not with him that layeth a snare for thee, and hide thy counsel from them that envy thee.

8 Every counsellor giveth out counsel, but there is one that is a counsellor for himself.

9 Beware of a counsellor. And know before what need he hath: for he will devise to his own mind:

10 Lest he thrust a stake into the ground, and say to thee:

11 Thy way is good; and then stand on the other side to see what shall befall thee.

12 Treat not with a man without religion concerning holiness, nor with an unjust man concerning justice, nor with a woman touching her of whom she is jealous, nor with a coward concerning war, nor with a merchant about traffic, nor with a buyer of selling, nor with an envious man of giving thanks,

13 Nor with the ungodly of piety, nor with the dishonest of honesty, nor with the field-labourer of every work,

14 Nor with him that worketh by the year of the finishing of the year, nor with an idle servant of much business: give no heed to these in any matter of counsel.

15 But be continually with a holy man, whomsoever thou shalt know to observe the fear of God,

16 Whose soul is according to thy own soul: and who, when thou shalt stumble in the dark, will be sorry for thee.

17 And establish within thyself a heart of good counsel: for there is no other thing of more worth to thee than it.

18 The soul of a holy man discovereth sometimes true things, more than seven watchmen that sit in a high place to watch.

19 But above all these things pray to the Most High, that he may direct thy way in truth.

20 In all thy works let the true word go before thee, and steady counsel before every action.

22 A skilful man hath taught many, and is sweet to his own soul.

23 He that speaketh sophistically, is hateful: he shall be destitute of every thing.

24 Grace is not given him from the Lord: for he is deprived of all wisdom.

25 There is a wise man that is wise to his own soul: and the fruit of his understanding is commendable.

26 A wise man instructeth his own people, and the fruits of his understanding are faithful.

27 A wise man shall be filled with blessings, and they that see shall praise him.

29 A wise man shall inherit honour among his people, and his name shall live forever.

30 My son, prove thy soul in thy life: and if it be wicked, give it no power:

31 For all things are not expedient for all, and every kind pleaseth not every soul.

32 Be not greedy in any feasting, and pour not out thyself upon any meat:

VER. 31. Soul. "We must not dispute about tastes." H.—They are as various as men's faces. All conditions do not suit every person.

VER. 33. Choler, or indigestion. "Gluttony has slain more than the sword." C. CHAP. XXXVIII. VER. 1. Honour and pay. Prov. viii. 9. C.—Gr. adds, with his fees." H.—The health of body and soul must be regarded. W.

VER. 2. King. Physicians were formerly kept at the king's expense. Pliny xix. 1.

VER. 4. Them, as he will all superstitious remedies. C.—"A crowd of physicians killed Cæsar," said Adrian, on his death-bed. They often try experiments, and kill with impunity. Pliny xxxix. 1.—Yet we must not condemn the prudent use of medicine. C.

VER. 5. Wood, of various sorts. Grot.—Many suppose that he alludes to the miracle of Moses, (Ex. xv. 25.) who thus was supernaturally informed (C.) of the effects of a certain wood. T. M. S. Aug. q. lvii. in Ex.

edge of men, and the Most High hath given knowledge to men, that he may be honoured in his wonders.

7 By these he shall cure and shall allay their pains, and of these the apothecary shall make sweet confections, and shall make up ointments of health, and of his works there shall be no end.

8 For the peace of God is over all the face of the earth.

9 My son, in thy sickness neglect not thyself, but pray to the Lord, and he shall heal thee.

10 Turn away from sin, and order thy hands aright, and cleanse thy heart from all offence.

11 Give a sweet savour, and a memorial of fine flour, and make a fat offering, and then give place to the physician.

12 For the Lord created him: and let him not depart from thee, for his works are necessary.

13 For there is a time when thou must fall into their hands:

14 And they shall beseech the Lord, that he would prosper what they give for ease and remedy, for their conversation.

15 He that sinneth in the sight of his Maker, shall fall into the hands of the physician.

16 My son, shed tears over the dead, and begin to lament as if thou hadst suffered some great harm, and according to judgment cover his body, and neglect not his burial.

17 And for fear of being ill spoken of, weep bitterly for a day, and then comfort thyself in thy sadness.

18 And make mourning for him according to his merit, for a day or two, for fear of detraction.

19 For of sadness cometh death, and it overwhelmeth the strength, and the sorrow of the heart boweth down the neck.

20 In withdrawing aside, sorrow remaineth: and the substance of the poor is according to his heart.

21 Give not up thy heart to sadness, but drive it from thee: and remember the latter end.

22 Forget it not: for there is no returning, and thou shalt do him no good, and shalt hurt thyself.

^c Prov. xv. 18. and xvii. 22.

VER. 6. The. Gr. "that his or its virtue might be known by man."

VER. 7. These plants.—And of. Gr. "Of these the maker of ointments shall compose a mixture and his works are not yet finished, when peace (health) from him appears on the face of the earth." H.—Diseases flee before him; so powerful are his medicines, that the very smell effects a cure.

VER. 9. Thee. We must neither trust too much in physicians, (2 Par. xvi. 12.) nor despise them, as this would be tempting God.

VER. 10. Sin. All diseases are in consequence of original sin, and many are inflicted for actual transgressions. Jo. ix. 2. and 1 Cor. xi. 30. Num. xii. 10. C.

VER. 11. Then. Gr. "as being no longer. Yet give," &c. H.—Be converted and offer sacrifice, as if there were no hopes of life. Still do not despair. C.

VER. 13. Thou. Gr. "a sweet smell (success) shall be in their hands." H.

VER. 15. Physician.—This state is very troublesome, and a punishment of sin. v. 10.

VER. 16. Burial. Thus we must shew our respect for the deceased. The Jews also prayed for them. 2 Mac. xii. 42. C.—"The care... and pomp of funerals are rather the consolations of survivors than of service to the dead." S. Aug. cura 2.

VER. 17. For. Gr. "and shed burning tears of mourning, (18) and lament for," &c. H.—Sorrow would be unsuitable for the saints, and useless for the damned, who being rebellious to God do not deserve our lamentations. Yet nature dictates, and people expect we should allow something to the first emotions of sorrow, (C.) for a day or two; and we may receive the consolatory visits of our friends, during the seven days of mourning. C. xxii. 13. Jo. xi. 19. S. Paulin. ad Pam.—To avoid the evil reports of men, we must shew ourselves to be really sorry; yet we must not suffer grief to hurt our health. W.

23 Remember my judgment: for thine also shall be so: yesterday for me, and to-day for thee.

24 *When the dead is at rest, let his remembrance rest, and comfort him in the departing of his spirit.

25 The wisdom of a scribe cometh by his time of leisure: and he that is less in action, shall receive wisdom.

26 With what wisdom shall he be furnished that holdeth the plough, and that glorieth in the goad, that driveth the oxen therewith, and is occupied in their labours, and his whole talk is about the offspring of bulls?

27 He shall give his mind to turn up furrows, and his care is to give the kine fodder.

28 So every craftsman and workmaster that labour-eth night and day, he who maketh graven seals, and by his continual diligence varieth the figure: he shall give his mind to the resemblance of the picture, and by his watching shall finish the work.

29 So doth the smith, sitting by the anvil, and considering the iron-work. The vapour of the fire wasteth his flesh, and he fighteth with the heat of the furnace:

30 The noise of the hammer is always in his ears, and his eye is upon the pattern of the vessel he maketh.

31 He setteth his mind to finish his work, and his watching to polish them to perfection.

32 So doth the potter sitting at his work, turning the wheel about with his feet, who is always carefully set to his work, and maketh all his work by number:

33 He fashioneth the clay with his arm, and boweth down his strength before his feet.

34 He shall give his mind to finish the glazing, and his watching to make clean the furnace.

35 All these trust to their hands, and every one is wise in his own art.

36 Without these a city is not built.

37 And they shall not dwell nor walk about therein, and they shall not go up into the assembly.

38 Upon the judges' seat they shall not sit, and the ordinance of judgment they shall not understand, neither shall they declare discipline and judgment, and they shall not be found where parables are spoken:

* 2 Kings ii. 21.

VER. 19. And the, &c. is not in GRÆK. Excessive sorrow brings on sickness, and renders us unfit for any thing.

VER. 20. Aside, in solitude.—Substance; or what the poor has to live on, will seem sweet or bitter according as he is affected with joy or grief.

VER. 21. And. This is the chief utility derived from attending funerals.

VER. 23. Thee. A man on his death-bed, or already dead, is intrusted speaking. C.

VER. 25. A scribe; that is, a doctor of the law, or a learned man. Ch.—Sorrow (H.) and too much employment, are injurious to learning. C.—Sapientia otia negotia sunt. S. Bern. ser. 85. Cant.—When pastors have leisure, they would do well to write, in imitation of S. Paul, &c. W.

VER. 28. Work: engraving on gold, or silver, or on precious stones.

VER. 29. Sitting. Such was the ancient custom of smiths, (C.) who carried all their implements with them, and laboured with much pain. Chardin.

VER. 34. Glazing. The earthen vessel would otherwise spoil all but oil and water. C.

VER. 37. Dwell. Gr. "travel," to get a livelihood, (Grot.) or to acquire wisdom, (C. xxxiv. 9. and xxxix. 5.) and walk about like the ancient philosophers. They shall not be chosen magistrates. C.

VER. 38. Spoken. They have not leisure to attend the lectures of sages; (H.) nor are they ever quoted by them.

VER. 39. World, giving children to the commonwealth, (M.) and employing themselves in useful arts. The Jews would not allow magicians, players, &c. to reside in the country.—Craft. They pray that they may succeed in their employment, while some also strive to comply with their religious duties. C.—Apply. (1896)

39 But they shall strengthen the state of the world, and their prayer shall be in the work of their craft, applying their soul, and searching in the law of the Most High.

CHAP. XXXIX.

The exercises of the wise man. The Lord is to be glorified for his works.

THE wise man will seek out the wisdom of all the ancients, and will be occupied in the prophets.

2 He will keep the sayings of renowned men, and will enter withal into the subtilties of parables.

3 He will search out the hidden meanings of proverbs, and will be conversant in the secrets of parables.

4 He shall serve among great men, and appear before the governor.

5 He shall pass into strange countries: for he shall try good and evil among men:

6 He will give his heart to resort early to the Lord, that made him, and he will pray in the sight of the Most High.

7 He will open his mouth in prayer, and will make supplication for his sins.

8 For if it shall please the great Lord, he will fill him with the spirit of understanding:

9 And he will pour forth the words of his wisdom as showers, and in his prayer he will confess to the Lord.

10 And he shall direct his counsel, and his knowledge, and in his secrets shall he meditate.

11 He shall shew forth the discipline he hath learned, and shall glory in the law of the covenant of the Lord.

12 Many shall praise his wisdom, and it shall never be forgotten.

13 The memory of him shall not depart away, and his name shall be in request from generation to generation.

14 Nations shall declare his wisdom, and the church shall shew forth his praise.

15 If he continue, he shall leave a name above a thousand: and if he rest, it shall be to his advantage.

16 I will yet meditate, that I may declare: for I am filled as with holy transport.

17 By a voice he saith: Hear me, ye divine off-

ing. Gr. refers this to the following chap. "As for him who applies his soul and meditates on the law of the Most High, he will," &c. H.

CHAP. XXXIX. VER. 1. Ancients. The Essenes (Jos. Bel. i. 7.) and Therapists (Philo. Contemp.) were most famous for doing so. In general the Jews despise the learning of foreign nations: but some have applied themselves to it, particularly Philo, Josephus, &c. 1 Mac. i. 11. and 2 Mac. iv. 11.—Prophets. These required the utmost study, before the coming of Christ. 1 Pet. i. 11. Dan. ix. 9. C.—The virtuous must follow both an active and contemplative life. W.

VER. 2. Sayings, or history of Abraham, &c.—Parables. This was most in vogue. 3 K. x. But mechanics abstained from this study. C. xxxviii. 38. C.—To meditate well, 1. knowledge; 2. virtue; 3. humility; and 4. hope, are requisite. W.

VER. 4. Governor of the province or army. The most enlightened were chosen, like Joseph. Daniel i. 4. &c.

VER. 5. Men. Travelling was very requisite, (C. xxxiv. 11.) and history records the actions of the bad as well as of the good, for the instruction of the public.

VER. 6. Pray. Diligence and prayer are the means to acquire wisdom. C. iv. 18.

VER. 9. Lord, being in a sort of rapture, and enlightened by Him.

VER. 13. Generation. With what care do we not preserve the Scriptures? &c.

VER. 15. Thousand. Children or other men.—Rest, in death. C.

VER. 16. With. Gr. "as the moon in the first quarter," διχομνία. H.—The Vulg. has read διχομνία, "divine transport." The author declares that he was inspired. C.

VER. 17. By. Gr. "Hear me, ye holy children."—Offspring. Lit. "fruits." H.—He speaks to the children of Israel, the people of God: whom he exhorts to bud forth and flourish with virtue. Ch.

spring, and bud forth as the rose planted by the brooks of waters.

18 Give ye a sweet odour as frankincense.

19 Send forth flowers, as the lily, and yield a smell, and bring forth leaves in grace, and praise with canticles, and bless the Lord in his works.

20 Magnify his name, and give glory to him with the voice of your lips, and with the canticles of your mouths, and with harps: and in praising him, you shall say in this manner:

21 *All the works of the Lord are exceeding good.

22 *At his word the waters stood as a heap: and at the words of his mouth the receptacles of waters:

23 For at his commandment favour is shewn, and there is no diminishing of his salvation.

24 The works of all flesh are before him, and there is nothing hid from his eyes.

25 He seeth from eternity to eternity, and there is nothing wonderful before him.

26 There is no saying: What is this, or what is that? for all things shall be sought in their time.

27 His blessing hath overflowed like a river:

28 *And as a flood hath watered the earth; so shall his wrath inherit the nations that have not sought after him:

29 *Even as he turned the waters into a dry land, and the earth was made dry: and his ways were made plain for their journey: so to sinners they are stumbling-blocks in his wrath.

30 Good things were created for the good from the beginning; so for the wicked, good and evil things.

31 *The principal things necessary for the life of men, are: water, fire, and iron, salt, milk, and bread of flour, and honey, and the cluster of the grape, and oil, and clothing.

32 All these things shall be for good to the holy; so to the sinners, and the ungodly, they shall be turned into evil.

33 There are spirits that are created for vengeance, and in their fury they lay on grievous torments:

34 In the time of destruction they shall pour out their force: and they shall appease the wrath of him that made them.

* Gen. i. 81. Mark vii. 87.—^b Gen. viii. 3.—^c Gen. vii. 21.—^d Exod. xiv. 21.

VER. 19. Bring. Gr. "praise a canticle."
VER. 20. Voice. Gr. "songs of your lips, (H.) and with ancient lyres," &c. C.
VER. 22. Waters. At the world's creation, or at the passage of the Israelites. C.

VER. 23. Salvation. None can prevent the salvation of God's elect. H.
VER. 25. Wonderful, or new. C.—The greatest miracles cost him nothing. H.
VER. 26. Time. The veil shall be withdrawn, and Providence will appear. Gr. "all things are made for their proper use."

VER. 28. That. Gr. "as he changed the waters into saltness," (H.) at Sodom, (C.) "his ways are plain for the saints: so to sinners they are stumbling-blocks," v. 30. The Red Sea gave a passage to Israel, and overwhelmed the Egyptians. H.—Him. God does all with grandeur. He poured his graces upon Israel, and overwhelmed the giants in the deluge. C.

VER. 30. Good and, is omitted in Gr. Before the fall, all was happiness. Now, the wicked have still some mixture of good. v. 32. Bossuet.

VER. 31. Water and fire. These are requisite to prepare bread. The Romans refused them to the enemies of the state.—Cluster. Gr. "blood," as Deut. xxxii. 14. C.—God gives the necessities of life, which the virtuous use well, for their reward; and the wicked ill, to their ruin. W.

* VER. 32. Evil. The good or bad use of them decides all. Wisd. xiv. 11. Rom. viii. 18. Tit. i. 15.

VER. 33. Spirits. Storms (Ps. x. 7. and cxlviii. 8.) good angels, (Gen. xix. 11. Is. xxxvii. 36.) or rather devils: who, though created in holiness, fell, and became executioners of the wicked. C.—They abused their free-will, and are eternally punished. W.

35 Fire, hail, famine, and death: all these were created for vengeance.

36 The teeth of beasts, and scorpions, and serpents, and the sword taking vengeance upon the ungodly unto destruction.

37 In his commandments they shall feast, and they shall be ready upon earth when need is, and when their time is come, they shall not transgress his word.

38 Therefore, from the beginning I was resolved, and I have meditated and thought on these things, and left them in writing.

39 *All the works of the Lord are good, and he will furnish every work in due time.

40 It is not to be said: This is worse than that: for all shall be well approved in their time.

41 Now, therefore, with the whole heart and mouth praise ye him, and bless the name of the Lord.

CHAP. XL.

The miseries of the life of man are relieved by the grace of God and his fear.

GR^{EAT} labour is created for all men, and a heavy yoke is upon the children of Adam, from the day of their coming out of their mother's womb, until the day of their burial into the mother of all.

2 Their thoughts and fears of the heart, their imagination of things to come, and the day of their end:

3 From him that sitteth on a glorious throne, unto him that is humbled in earth and ashes:

4 From him that weareth purple, and beareth the crown, even to him that is covered with rough linen: wrath, envy, trouble, unquietness, and the fear of death, continual anger and strife,

5 And in the time of rest upon his bed, the sleep of the night changeth his knowledge.

6 A little and as nothing is his rest, and afterward in sleep, as in the day of keeping watch.

7 He is troubled in the vision of his heart, as if he had escaped in the day of battle. In the time of his safety he rose up, and wondereth that there is no fear:

8 Such things happen to all flesh, from man even to beast, and upon sinners are sevenfold more.

9 *Moreover, death and bloodshed, strife and sword, oppressions, famine, and affliction, and scourges:

* Supra xxix. 28.—^f Gen. i. 31. Mark vii. 87.—^g Supra xxxix. 35. and 86.

VER. 34. Destruction, and final ruin of the impious, or at the last day. C.—Appease. God is pleased with the execution of justice. M.—Yet the devil's cannot obtain a reconciliation; neither do they act to please God, having their wills obstinately bent against him, though they be forced to obey. H.

VER. 36. Beasts. Wolves, &c. with which the country was infested. Deut. vii. 22. and xxii. 24.—Sword. War.

VER. 37. Feast. Gr. "rejoice," as at a feast. Ezek. xxxix. 16.—Word. They will be ready at the first sign. C.—All creatures, but the rebel angels and man, obey God. H.

VER. 38. Resolved. Lit. "confirmed" in this opinion by a divine light. v. 16. 21.

VER. 39. Time. If we receive not at first, we must have patience.

VER. 40. That. Even sin contributes to manifest the justice and mercy of God; and we are not to judge of his works, but to praise him; as every thing is created for wise purposes, and evil proceeds from our abuse of things. C.

CHAP. XL. VER. 1. Labour, "anxiety," ασχολια. M.—All misery (C.) is in consequence of original sin. W.—The life of man is a trial. Job vii. 1. and xiv. 1.—Of all. The earth, (C.) which covers us, when all other things cast us away. Pliny ii. 68.

VER. 4. Purple. Lit. "hyacinth," (H.) or violet colour. Purple was more like scarlet.

VER. 5. Knowledge. He is disquieted by restless (C.) and frightful dreams. v. 6. H.

VER. 7. Fear, or no reason for it. C.

VER. 8. Beast. Their instinct causes them to fear death, to fight, &c.

VER. 9. Moreover. Gr. "death," &c. are all destined for the wicked. (897)

10 All these things are created for the wicked, and for their sakes came the flood.

11 All things that are of the earth shall return to the earth again, and all waters shall return to the sea.

12 All bribery and injustice shall be blotted out, and fidelity shall stand for ever.

13 The riches of the unjust shall be dried up like a river, and shall pass away with a noise like a great thunder in rain.

14 While he openeth his hands, he shall rejoice: but transgressors shall pine away in the end.

15 The offspring of the ungodly shall not bring forth many branches, and make a noise as unclean roots upon the top of a rock.

16 The weed growing over every water, and at the bank of the river, shall be pulled up before all grass.

17 Grace is like a paradise in blessings, and mercy remaineth for ever.

18 The life of a labourer, that is content with what he hath, shall be sweet, and in it thou shalt find a treasure.

19 Children, and the building of a city, shall establish a name; but a blameless wife shall be counted above them both.

20 Wine and music rejoice the heart: but the love of wisdom is above them both.

21 The flute and the psaltery make a sweet melody, but a pleasant tongue is above them both.

22 Thy eye desireth favour and beauty, but more than these green sown fields.

23 A friend and companion meeting together, in season; but above them both, is a wife with her husband.

24 Brethren are a help in the time of trouble, but mercy shall deliver more than they.

25 Gold and silver make the feet stand sure, but wise counsel is above them both.

26 Riches and strength lift up the heart, but above these is the fear of the Lord.

27 There is no want in the fear of the Lord, and it needeth not to seek for help.

* Gen. vii. 10.—^b Infra xli. 13.—^c Eccle. i. 7.

VER. 12. Out, and severely punished. C.—They shall not appear in the book of life.

VER. 14. Rejoice. The corrupt judge once rejoiced: but now he shall mourn. H.—The possessions and grandeur of the unjust shall end in a moment, like a clap of thunder. Ps. xxxvi. 36. Prov. x. 25. C.

VER. 15. And make. Gr. "they are unclean," (H.) and will produce no fruit.

VER. 16. Weed. Lit. "verdure." Gr. ἄχνη, (H.) properly denotes the rush, papyrus, which grows on the banks of the Nile, (Gen. xli. 2. C.) and was used for fuel. Alpin. i. 7. Matt. vi. 30.—Thus the wicked will presently (C.) be treated. M.

VER. 17. Grace. The beneficent will produce fruits, like those of paradise. Gen. ii. 8.

VER. 18. That is. Gr. "and of one that."—In it. Gr. "and more than both is one discovering a treasure," (H.) who finds himself rich, without labour or injustice.

VER. 19. Both. Thus Judith, Zenobia, &c. ennobled their husbands. Prov. xxxi. 10.

VER. 20. Wisdom. Virtue gives more content to the soul than corporal pleasures do to the body. It brings us near to God. C.

VER. 22. Green. "The sight of no colour is more agreeable to the eyes." Pliny xxxvii. 1.—The Church is more excellent than the synagogue. W.

VER. 23. Husband. Their union is closer, and they can best assist each other.

VER. 25. Counsel. By this the Romans conquered the world. 1 Mac. viii. 31. Prov. xi. 14.

VER. 26. Heart, and make people presumptuous; while piety gives real courage. Ps. xxvi. 1. C.

VER. 28. It, or "him." H.—The virtuous man is covered with glory.

VER. 29. Indigent. Gr. "live not by begging," being too lazy to work, or incurring this punishment for thy sins. Lev. xxvi. 16. Ps. cviii. Deut. xv. 4.

28 The fear of the Lord is like a paradise of blessing, and they have covered it above all glory.

29 My son, in thy life-time be not indigent; for it is better to die than to want.

30 The life of him that looketh toward another man's table, is not to be counted a life: for he feedeth his soul with another man's meat.

31 But a man well instructed and taught, will look to himself.

32 Begging will be sweet in the mouth of the unwise, but in his belly there shall burn a fire.

CHAP. XLI.

Of the remembrance of death: of an evil and of a good name: of what things we ought to be ashamed.

O DEATH, how bitter is the remembrance of thee to a man that hath peace in his possessions!

2 To a man that is at rest, and whose ways are prosperous in all things, and that is yet able to take meat!

3 O death, thy sentence is welcome to the man that is in need, and to him whose strength faileth:

4 Who is in a decrepit age, and that is in care about all things: and to the distrustful that loseth patience!

5 Fear not the sentence of death. Remember what things have been before thee, and what shall come after thee: this sentence is from the Lord upon all flesh.

6 And what shall come upon thee by the good pleasure of the Most High? whether ten, or a hundred, or a thousand years.

7 For among the dead there is no accusing of life.

8 The children of sinners become children of abominations, and they that converse near the houses of the ungodly.

9 The inheritance of the children of sinners shall perish, and with their posterity shall be a perpetual reproach.

10 The children will complain of an ungodly father, because for his sake they are a reproach.

11 Woe to you, ungodly men, who have forsaken the law of the most high Lord.

12 And if you be born, you shall be born in malediction: and if you die, in malediction shall be your portion.

Involuntary poverty is a most severe scourge. C.—All are bound to labour for what is needful; (W.) some by prayer, others by trade, &c. H.

VER. 30. Meat. Such is the condition of the parasite, (C.) and of the beggar. H.

VER. 32. Unwise. Some read, "impudent man," with the Gr.—ἄφρων. He shall feel the inconveniences of poverty; (H.) yet will not work, being lost to all shame. C.—Plato (Leg. 11.) orders magistrates to "clear the country of such an animal," ζῷον, (H.) and the Lacedemonians suffered no beggars among them.

CHAP. XLI. VER. 1. Death is terrible to all, but most to those who live comfortably. C.—O vita misero longa, felici brevis. Sen.

VER. 3. Sentence, pronounced on Adam and all his posterity. C.

VER. 5. Flesh. "It is a great consolation to share the fate of all." Sen. Provid. v.

VER. 6. What. Gr. "why wouldst thou refuse to submit to the?" &c. H.

VER. 7. Life. Thou wilt not be asked how long, but how well thou hast lived. No one will then envy thy long life. C.—It will be in vain to plead that the length or shortness of life has occasioned thy sins; for God does all with justice and for the best, if men would use rightly his benefits. W.—Thou wilt not repine at having lived too short a time. M.—An evil life will be alone condemned. Wisd. v. D.

VER. 8. Ungodly. They adopt the wicked manners of their parents (C.) and companions, and thus become still more criminal. H.

Progeniem vitiosiorum.—Hor. iii. ode 6.

—This was terribly verified in the three French assemblies, which overturned the Church and state. A. 1793. See Barruel. H.

VER. 10. Father. He is rather their executioner, (C.) and would have been less cruel, if he had murdered them while they were innocent. Wisd. xii. 10. H.

13 *All things that are of the earth, shall return into the earth: so the ungodly shall from malediction to destruction.

14 The mourning of men is about their body, but the name of the ungodly shall be blotted out.

15 Take care of a good name: for this shall continue with thee more than a thousand treasures, precious and great.

16 A good life hath its number of days: but a good name shall continue for ever.

17 My children, keep discipline in peace: ^bfor wisdom that is hid, and a treasure that is not seen, what profit is there in them both?

18 Better is the man that hideth his folly, than the man that hideth his wisdom.

19 Wherefore, have a shame of these things I am now going to speak of.

20 For it is not good to keep all shamefacedness, and all things do not please all men, in opinion.

21 Be ashamed of fornication before father and mother; and of a lie before a governor and a man in power;

22 Of an offence before a prince and a judge; of iniquity before a congregation and a people;

23 Of injustice before companion and friend: And in regard to the place where thou dwellest,

24 Of theft, and of the truth of God, and the covenant; of leaning with thy elbow over meat, and of deceit in giving and taking;

25 Of silence before them that salute thee; of looking upon a harlot; and of turning away thy face from thy kinsman.

26 Turn not away thy face from thy neighbour; and of taking away a portion, and not restoring.

27 *Gaze not upon another man's wife, and be not inquisitive after his handmaid, and approach not her bed.

28 Be ashamed of upbraiding speeches before friends; and after thou hast given, upbraid not.

* Supra. xl. 11.—^b Supra xx. 32.—^c Matt. v. 28.

VER. 12. Portion. It would have been better for them never to have existed. Mat. xxvi. 24. This the case of heresiarcha. C.

VER. 13. From. Gr. "go to destruction." H.—It is their destination (C. xl. 11. C.) and choice. H.

VER. 14. Body. The death of the body is bewailed in the just, but that of the soul also of wicked people calls for our tears. They will soon perish. Ps. ix. 7.

VER. 15. Great. The concern which all have for a good name, is one of the strongest proofs of the soul's immortality. Prov. xxii. 11.

VER. 17. Peace, with docility, (Mat. xi. 25.) or in the midst of prosperity, be on your guard. C. xx. 32. C.

VER. 19. Have a shame, &c. That is to say, be ashamed of doing any of these things, which I am now going to mention: for though sometimes shamefacedness is not to be indulged, yet it is often good and necessary; as in the following cases. Ch.—Disciples ought to esteem what their masters teach, though they do not perceive the reasonableness of what they assert. W.

VER. 20. Opinion. Grotius corrects the Gr. "It is not laudable to be incredulous in all."

VER. 21. Mother. Thy misconduct seems to redound to their dishonour, as if they had not given thee a proper education.

VER. 22. People. They will stone thee. Remember the fate of Roboam. S. K. xii. C.

VER. 24. And of. Lit. "out of respect for thee," &c. De veritate Dei & testamenti. H.—The same words occur C. xlii. 2; whence Jansenius thinks they have been transferred hither. Most refer them to what goes before. Blush for lying, which is contrary to the truth of God; and for the other sins which injure his covenant.—Meat. This posture betrays idleness or pride.

CHAP. XLII.

Of what things we ought not to be ashamed. Cautions with regard to women. The works and greatness of God.

REPEAT not the word which thou hast heard, and disclose not the thing that is secret; so shalt thou be truly without confusion, and shalt find favour before all men: be not ashamed of any of these things, ^aand accept no person to sin thereby.

2 Of the law of the Most High, and of his covenant, and of judgment to justify the ungodly.

3 Of the affair of companions and travellers, and of the gift of the inheritance of friends.

4 Of exactness of balance and weights, of getting much or little.

5 Of the corruption of buying, and of merchants, and of much correction of children, and to make the side of a wicked slave to bleed.

6 Sure keeping is good over a wicked wife.

7 Where there are many hands, shut up, and deliver all things in number and weight; and put all in writing that thou givest out or receivest in.

8 Be not ashamed to inform the unwise and foolish, and the aged, that are judged by young men: and thou shalt be well instructed in all things, and well approved in the sight of all men living.

9 The father waketh for the daughter when no man knoweth, and the care for her taketh away his sleep, when she is young, lest she pass away the flower of her age, and when she is married lest she should be hateful:

10 In her virginity, lest she should be corrupted, and be found with child in her father's house; and having a husband, lest she should misbehave herself, or at the least become barren.

11 Keep a sure watch over a shameless daughter; lest at any time she make thee become a laughing-stock to thy enemies, and a bye-word in the city, and a reproach among the people, and she make thee ashamed before all the multitude.

those which follow. C.—"Of repeating [and] of the speech which thou hast heard, and of revealing secret words; (things. H.) and thou shalt be truly bashful, (αἰσχύνῃς. C.) and find favour with every man." Grabe's edit. H.—Thereby. In such cases we must shew a holy impudence, like Jeremias, i. 10. 18.

VER. 2. Covenant. We must be ashamed of transgressing these, (C. xli. 24.) but not of complying with them. This is the first duty of man.—Ungodly. Blush not to oppose such a judgment, (C.) though all the judges should be against thee. Follow no collusion of man to do evil. H.—Pass sentence without respect of persons, (Deut. i. 16. C.) whether the parties be thy companions, or only travellers. v. 3. H.

VER. 3. Friends. Be not ashamed to leave something to thy friends, though relations may grumble; or execute thy friend's will exactly. C.

VER. 4. Little. Be scrupulously exact in thy dealings, but not afraid of advancing thy fortune by lawful means.

VER. 5. Buying. This regards magistrates, who must correct such frauds. Gr. "of the money (C.) to purchase from merchants." H.—We may examine whether the coin be good, and strive to get things as cheap as we can.—Bleed. Great severity was formerly used. C. xxx. 12. C.

VER. 6. Keeping. Lit. "a seal." H.—All must be locked up.

VER. 7. In. Not out of distrust so much, as to keep servants honest. All who have written on economy give the same rules.

VER. 8. Men. So Daniel discovered the malice of the two ancients. Dan. xiii. 46. Acquiesce the aged not to enter into disputes, or strive with the young. C.

VER. 9. Knoweth. Lit. "who is hidden." H.—An unmarried woman was styled Halma, or "hidden." Is. vii. 11. C.—Pass away. Gr. "abuse." H.—Some read adultera, (Sext. V. Jans.) instead of adulta, improperly. It was deemed shameful for a parent not to have his daughter married soon. 1 Cor. vii. 36.—Hateful. Deut. xxiv.

VER. 10. Barren. And thus fall into contempt. Deut. vii. 14. If she committed adultery she must die; or if she were only suspected, she must drink the waters of jealousy. Num. v. 17. Husbands would often seek a divorce, on such occasions; which would involve the father in fresh difficulties.

VER. 11. Multitude, who will accuse thee of negligence. C.

12 Behold not every body's beauty: and tarry not among women.

13 For from garments cometh a moth, and from a woman the iniquity of a man.

14 For better is the iniquity of a man, than a woman doing a good turn, and a woman bringing shame and reproach.

15 I will now remember the works of the Lord, and I will declare the things I have seen. By the words of the Lord are his works.

16 The sun giving light hath looked upon all things, and full of the glory of the Lord is his work.

17 Hath not the Lord made the saints to declare all his wonderful works, which the Lord Almighty hath firmly settled to be established for his glory?

18 He hath searched out the deep, and the heart of men, and considered their crafty devices.

19 For the Lord knoweth all knowledge, and hath beheld the signs of the world, he declareth the things that are past, and the things that are to come, and revealeth the traces of hidden things.

20 No thought escapeth him, and no word can hide itself from him.

21 He hath beautified the glorious works of his wisdom: and he is from eternity to eternity, and to him nothing may be added,

22 Nor can he be diminished, and he hath no need of any counsellor.

23 O how desirable are all his works, and what we can know is but as a spark!

24 All these things live and remain forever, and for every use all things obey him.

25 All things are double, one against another, and he hath made nothing defective.

26 He hath established the good things of every one. And who shall be filled with beholding his glory?

CHAP. XLIII.

The works of God are exceedingly glorious and wonderful: no man is able sufficiently to praise him.

THE firmament on high is his beauty, the beauty of heaven with its glorious shew.

VER. 12. Body's. Lit. "man's." But females are included in this term. H.—It was also necessary to guard the Greeks, and pagans in general, against a criminal affection for boys.

VER. 13. Man. Gr. "woman." Malice is natural to her. Beauty becomes her ruin, as well as that of others. C.—The Fathers compare women to a loadstone. S. Bas.—Men who come near them, are greatly exposed. C.

VER. 14. Better, &c. That is, there is, commonly speaking, less danger to be apprehended to the soul from the churlishness, or injuries we receive from men, than from the flattering favours and familiarity of women. Ch.—Josephus (c. Ap. ii.) attributes this sentence to Moses, and prefers the worst man to the best woman, as Euripides does in Clem. Strom. iv. C.—But this is ridiculous.—Reproach. This explains what sort of good the woman aforesaid has done; she had fostered the passions of men, and brought them to shame, which all the malevolence of an enemy could not have done. H.—The company of women is therefore more dangerous. C. ix. W.

VER. 15. Remember, or publish. He praises God and the great men of his nation, to the end of the book, (C.) or to C. l. 29. H.—By. Lit. "in." H.—I have only abridged what the sacred Scriptures relate.

VER. 16. Work. The world displays God's glory and power. Ps. xviii. 6.

VER. 17. Saints, in heaven, or rather the Israelites. Ps. cxlvii. 20. C.

VER. 19. Signs. Lit. "sign," the order of the stars, &c. H.—Yet God does not study these things, to discover what will happen. He is the author of nature. C.—From his works, we are to form some idea of his greatness. Job xxxviii. &c. W.

VER. 25. Another. By this opposition the world subsists, according to Linus, Epimenides, &c. Hanc Deus et melior litem natura diremit. Met. i. See C. xxxiii. 16.

VER. 26. He. Gr. "one thing establishes the good of another," (H.) serving as a counterpoise. C.—Black colours cause the white to shine forth. Youth is guided by the experience of old age. M.

2 The sun, when he appeareth shewing forth at his rising, an admirable instrument, the work of the Most High.

3 At noon he burneth the earth; and who can abide his burning heat? As one keeping a furnace in works of heat:

4 The sun three times as much, burneth the mountains, breathing out fiery vapours, and shining with his beams, he blindeth the eyes.

5 Great is the Lord that made him, and at his words he hath hastened his course.

6 And the moon in all in her season, is for a declaration of times and a sign of the world.

7 From the moon is the sign of the festival-day, a light that decreaseth in her perfection.

8 The month is called after her name, increasing wonderfully in her perfection.

9 Being an instrument of the armies on high, shining gloriously in the firmament of heaven

10 The glory of the stars is the beauty of heaven; the Lord enlighteneth the world on high.

11 By the words of the holy one they shall stand in judgment, and shall never fail in their watches.

12 Look upon the rainbow, and bless him that made it: *it is very beautiful in its brightness.

13 It encompasseth the heaven about with the circle of its glory, the hands of the Most High have displayed it.

14 By his commandment he maketh the snow to fall apace, and sendeth forth swiftly the lightnings of his judgment.

15 Through this are the treasures opened, and the clouds fly out like birds.

16 By his greatness he hath fixed the clouds, and the hailstones are broken.

17 At his sight shall the mountains be shaken, and at his will the south wind shall blow.

18 The noise of his thunder shall strike the earth, so doth the northern storm, and the whirlwind:

19 And as the birds lighting upon the earth, he

CHAP. XLIII. VER. 1. Shew. We cannot behold these things without admiration of God.

VER. 2. High. The sun is the most excellent of all irrational creatures, affording light (W.) and heat for the production of things; (H.) whence Aristotle (de Anima ii.) styles it "father of men and of gods." Yet it is inferior to man, being devoid of reason. All creatures manifest God's majesty; the little as well as the great. W.

VER. 5. Hastened. Some Gr. copies read "slackened," alluding to Jos. x. 13.

VER. 6. In all. Gr. Gomp. "to stand guard." Other copies agree with the Vulg. though embarrassed.—World. To mark out the seasons. Gen. i. 14. Ps. ciii. 19.

VER. 7. Day. The lunar system prevailed only after the captivity. The Passover was celebrated on the 14th of the moon of Nisan.

VER. 8. Name. Meni is used for the moon, (Jer. lxxv. 11.) which resembles the Gr. mên, "month." This is also derived from mênê, "the moon." We know not what Heb. words were used. C. vi. 23. The two former may both come from manah, "to divide."

VER. 9. Armies. The stars, &c. are compared to a camp or army.

VER. 11. Judgment. The angels are not pure before God; (Job iv. 18. and xv. 15.) or rather the stars obey his orders. Bar. iii. 34. Judg. v. 20. Ps. cxviii. 91. C.

20 The eye admireth at the beauty of the whiteness thereof, and the heart is astonished at the shower thereof.

21 He shall pour frost as salt upon the earth: and when it freezeth, it shall become like the tops of thistles.

22 The cold north wind bloweth, and the water is congealed into crystal: upon every gathering together of waters it shall rest, and shall clothe the waters as a breastplate.

23 And it shall devour the mountains, and burn the wilderness, and consume all that is green as with fire.

24 A present remedy of all is the speedy coming of a cloud, and a dew that meeteth it, by the heat that cometh, shall overpower it.

25 At his word the wind is still, and with his thought he appeaseth the deep, and the Lord hath planted islands therein.

26 Let them that sail on the sea, tell the dangers thereof: and when we hear with our ears, we shall admire.

27 There are great and wonderful works: a variety of beasts, and of all living things, and the monstrous creatures of whales.

28 Through him is established the end of their journey, and by his word all things are regulated.

29 We shall say much, and yet shall want words: but the sum of our words is, He is all.

30 What shall we be able to do to glorify him: for the Almighty himself is above all his works.

31 The Lord is terrible, and exceeding great, and his power is admirable.

32 Glorify the Lord as much as ever you can, for he will yet far exceed, and his magnificence is wonderful.

33 Blessing the Lord, exalt him as much as you can: for he is above all praise.

34 When you exalt him, put forth all your strength, and be not weary: for you can never go far enough.

35 ^a Who shall see him, and declare him? and who shall magnify him as he is from the beginning?

CHAP. XLIV.

The praises of the holy fathers, in particular of Enoch, Noe, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

LET us now praise men of renown, and our fathers in their generation.

2 The Lord hath wrought great glory through his magnificence, from the beginning.

3 Such as have borne rule in their dominions, men of great power, and endued with their wisdom, shewing forth in the prophets the dignity of prophets,

4 And ruling over the present people, and by the strength of wisdom instructing the people in most holy words.

5 Such as by their skill sought out musical tunes, and published canticles of the scriptures.

6 Rich men in virtue, studying beautifulness: living at peace in their houses.

7 All these have gained glory in their generations, and were praised in their days.

8 They that were born of them have left a name behind them, that their praises might be related:

9 And there are some, of whom there is no memorial: who are perished, as if they had never been: and are born, as if they had never been born, and their children with them.

10 But these were men of mercy, whose godly deeds have not failed:

11 Good things continue with their seed,

12 Their posterity are a holy inheritance, and their seed hath stood in the covenants:

13 And their children for their sakes remain for ever: their seed and their glory shall not be forsaken.

14 Their bodies are buried in peace, and their name liveth unto generation and generation.

15 Let the people shew forth their wisdom, and the church declare their praise.

thor here imitates the third work of Solomon. H.—He had given rules for all virtues; and he now sets before us those who had put them in practice. C.—It was the custom to sound forth the praises of these fathers in the temple and synagogues. v. 15. Grot.

VER. 2. Glory. Gr. adds, "in them." He was the author of all their virtue, (H) and has acquired much glory by their means, (C) among men; though his essential glory can never increase.

VER. 3. In the. Gr. "futura by their predictions." Kings, judges, and prophets are praised. H.—The virtuous are justly styled kings. Gen. xxiii. W.

VER. 4. The present. Gr. "the people by counsels, and by the knowledge of the office of scribes of the people. Wise in speech by their instruction. (5.) Seeking out," &c. H.—Prudence and eloquence ought to appear in a ruler.

VER. 6. In. Gr. "established in power, living," &c. (H.) like Abraham, Ezechias, &c. C.

VER. 10. Mercy. Assideans, (1 Par. vi. 41. and 1 Mac. vii. 13.) or true Israelites.

VER. 14. Peace. The Jews were very solicitous about this. Gen. xxxv. 8. C.

VER. 16. Into. Gr. "a model of penance to past or future generations." H.—The Latin fathers suppose that Enoch was translated to heaven, or to the paradise, that he may give repentance to the nations.

17 ^aNoe was found perfect, just, and in the time of wrath he was made a reconciliation.

18 Therefore was there a remnant left to the earth, when the flood came.

19 ^bThe covenants of the world were made with him, that all flesh should no more be destroyed with the flood.

20 ^cAbraham was the great father of a multitude of nations, and there was not found the like to him in glory, who kept the law of the Most High, and was in covenant with him.

21 ^dIn his flesh he established the covenant, ^eand in temptation he was found faithful.

22 Therefore, by an oath he gave him glory in his posterity, that he should increase as the dust of the earth,

23 And that he would exalt his seed as the stars, and they should inherit from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth.

24 And he did in like manner with Isaac, for the sake of Abraham, his father.

25 The Lord gave him the blessing of all nations, and confirmed his covenant upon the head of Jacob.

26 He acknowledged him in his blessings, and gave him an inheritance, and divided him his portion in twelve tribes.

27 And he preserved for him men of mercy, that found grace in the eyes of all flesh.

CHAP. XLV.

The praises of Moses, of Aaron, and of Phinees.

MOSES ^f*was* beloved of God, and men: whose memory is in benediction.

2 He made him like the saints in glory, and magnified him in the fear of his enemies, and with his words he made prodigies to cease.

CHAP. XLV. VER. 1. Men. Pharaoh, Jethro, and the whole nation of the Hebrews, whom he governed as a father, being the mildest of men. Num. xii. 23. 4 ^hHe sanctified him in his faith and meekness, and chose him out of all flesh.

5 For he heard him, and his voice, and brought him into a cloud.

6 And he gave him commandments before his face, and a law of life and instruction, that he might teach Jacob his covenant, and Israel his judgments.

7 He exalted Aaron, his brother and like to himself of the tribe of Levi:

8 He made an everlasting covenant with him, and gave him the priesthood of the nation, and made him blessed in glory,

9 And he girded him about with a glorious girdle, and clothed him with a robe of glory, and crowned him with majestic attire.

10 He put upon him a garment to the feet, and breeches, and an ephod, and he compassed him with many little bells of gold all round about,

11 ⁱThat as he went there might be a sound, and a noise made that might be heard in the temple, for a memorial to the children of his people.

12 He gave him a holy robe of gold, and blue, and purple, a woven work, of a wise man, endued with judgment and truth:

13 Of twisted scarlet, the work of an artist, with precious stones cut and set in gold, and graven by the work of a lapidary, for a memorial, according to the number of the tribes of Israel.

14 And a crown of gold upon his mitre, wherein was engraven Holiness, an ornament of honour: a work of power, and delightful to the eyes for its beauty.

15 Before him there were none so beautiful, even from the beginning.

16 No stranger was ever clothed with them, but only his children alone, and his grand-children for ever.

17 His sacrifices were consumed with fire every day.

the office of the priesthood, and to have praise, and to glorify his people in his name.

20 He chose him out of all men living, to offer sacrifice to God, incense, and a good savour, for a memorial to make reconciliation for his people :

21 And he gave him power in his commandments, in the covenants of his judgments, that he should teach Jacob his testimonies, and give light to Israel in his law.

22 * And strangers stood up against him, and through envy, the men that were with Dathan and Abiron, compassed him about in the wilderness, and the congregation of Core, in their wrath.

23 The Lord God saw, and it pleased him not, and they were consumed in his wrathful indignation.

24 He wrought wonders upon them, and consumed them with a flame of fire.

25 And he added glory to Aaron, and gave him an inheritance, and divided unto him the first-fruits of the increase of the earth.

26 He prepared them bread in the first place unto fulness: for the sacrifices also of the Lord they shall eat, which he gave to him, and to his seed.

27 But he shall not inherit among the people in the land, and he hath no portion among the people: for he himself is his portion and inheritance.

28 ^b Phinees, the son of Eleazar, is the third in glory, by imitating him in the fear of the Lord :

29 And he stood up in the shameful fall of the people: in the goodness and readiness of his soul, he appeased God for Israel.

30 Therefore he made to him a covenant of peace, to be the prince of the sanctuary, and of his people, that the dignity of priesthood should be to him and to his seed for ever.

31 And a covenant to David, the king, the son of Jesse, of the tribe of Juda, an inheritance to him and to his seed, that he might give wisdom into our heart to judge his people in justice, that their good things might not be abolished, and he made their glory in their nation everlasting.

* Num. xvi. 1. and 3.—^b Num. xxv. 7. 1 Mac. ii. 26. 54.

VER. 17. His. Gr. Comp. "their." H.—Some of the ordinary priests offered the daily holocausts.

VER. 18. Filled. Consecrated. Lev. viii. 26.

VER. 19. Testament. It prefigured that of Christ, which lasts for ever. Heb. vii. C.—Execute. Gr. "serve him, both by executing the priestly office, and by blessing the people," &c. H.—This was one of the high priest's functions. Num. vi. 23. The rest might offer sacrifice and incense, except on the day of expiation, (Lev. xvi.) and on solemn festivals, though the Scripture is silent on the latter head.

VER. 21. Laws. The most important causes were to be tried before the high priest, who, with his brethren, were the interpreters of the law. Matt. ii. 6.

VER. 24. Fire. Thus consuming 250 men. Num. xvi. 30.

VER. 26. Eat. The skin of holocausts was alone given to the priests.

VER. 27. People. Having only 2,000 cubits round their cities. Num. xxxv. The priests were thus interested to keep the people to their duty, as their own subsistence depended on the devotion and gifts of the latter. C.—They had no distinct territory, like the rest of the tribes. W.

"and (Grabe puts according to) the covenant made to David... that the king's son successively should alone inherit, the inheritance of Aaron was for his posterity. May he impart wisdom to your heart" &c.—He made. Gr. "glory during their age." H.—The sacred writer pours forth this prayer for God's ministers, (C.) that their good things and glory may never end, as long as the Jewish dispensation should last. He is equally solicitous for the priesthood as for the sceptre of David. In both the families of Aaron and of David children succeeded to their fathers dignity, and God had made a covenant for that pur-

The praise of Josue, of Caleb, and of Samuel.

VALIANT in war was Jesus, the son of Nave, who was successor of Moses among the prophets, who was great according to his name,

2 Very great for the saving the elect of God, to overthrow the enemies that rose up against them, that he might get the inheritance for Israel.

3 How great glory did he gain when he lifted up his hands, and stretched out swords against the cities?

4 Who before him hath so resisted? for the Lord himself brought the enemies.

5 * Was not the sun stopped in his anger, and one day made as two?

6 He called upon the most high Sovereign, when the enemies assaulted him on every side, and the great and holy God heard him by hailstones of exceeding great force.

7 He made a violent assault against the nation of his enemies, and in the descent he destroyed the adversaries,

8 That the nations might know his power, that it is not easy to fight against God. And he followed the mighty one:

9 ^a And in the days of Moses he did a work of mercy, he and Caleb, the son of Jephone, in standing against the enemy, and withholding the people from sins, and appeasing the wicked murmuring.

10 And they two being appointed, were delivered out of the danger, from among the number of six hundred thousand men on foot, to bring them into their inheritance, into the land that floweth with milk and honey.

11 And the Lord gave strength also to Caleb, and his strength continued even to his old age, so that he went up to the high places of the land, and his seed obtained it for an inheritance:

12 That all the children of Israel might see, that it is good to obey the holy God.

13 Then all the judges, every one by name, whose

CHAP. XLVI. VER. 1. Jesus, the son of Nave. So Josue is named in the Greek Bible. For Josue and Jesus signify the same thing, viz. a Saviour; (Ch.) and Nave is the Greek pronunciation of Nun; (H.) or this is an old fault of transcribers. C.—Among. Gr. "in the prophecies." II.—He was endued with the prophetic spirit, and was raised up by God as a noble figure of the great prophet. Deut. xviii. 15. C.—He succeeded Moses in the temporal power; the spiritual belonged to the sons of Aaron. Num. xxvii. W.

VER. 2. Israel. He led the people into Chanaan, and divided it among them.

VER. 3. Hands. To pray, (Vat.) or fight, (Boss.) or to give a signal. Jos. viii. 26. A. Lap.—Stretched. Lit. threw (H.) darts, romphaus.

VER. 4. The. Gr. "he conducted the wars of the Lord." C.—Other edit agree with us.

VER. 5. In. Gr. "by his hand," (H.) and order, so that the day-light continued 24 hours.

VER. 7. Adversaries. The hail destroyed more than the sword. Jos. x. 11.

VER. 8. Power. Gr. "complete armour for his warfare was before the Lord, since he," &c. They found it was impossible to resist such weapons. H.—One. "Follow God," was a maxim of the ancient sages, which they even attributed to Apollo. Josue and Caleb did so in opposition to the rebels. Num. xiv. 24. 15 And their name continue for ever, the glory of the holy men remaining unto their children.

16 Samuel, the prophet of the Lord, the beloved of the Lord, his God, established a new government, and anointed princes over his people.

17 By the law of the Lord he judged the congregation, and the God of Jacob beheld, and by his fidelity he was proved a prophet.

18 And he was known to be faithful in his words, because he saw the God of light:

19 *And called upon the name of the Lord Almighty, in fighting against the enemies who beset him on every side, when he offered a lamb without blemish.

20 And the Lord thundered from heaven, and with a great noise made his voice to be heard,

21 And crushed the princes of the Tyrians, and all the lords of the Philistines:

22 ^bAnd before the time of the end of his life in the world, he protested before the Lord, and his anointed; money, or any thing else *even to a shoe, he had not taken of any man, and no man did accuse him.

23 And after this he slept, *and he made known to the king, and shewed him the end of his life, and he lifted up his voice from the earth in prophecy, to blot out the wickedness of the nation.

The praise of Nathan, of David, and of Solomon: of his fall and punishment.

THIEN Nathan, *the prophet, arose in the days of David.

2 And as the fat taken away from the flesh, so was David chosen from among the children of Israel.

3 *He played with lions as if with lambs: and with bears he did in like manner as with the lambs of the flock, in his youth.

4 *Did not he kill the giant, and take away reproach from his people?

VER. 13. Lord. Abimelec must be excepted (C.) as he was only an usurper. H.—Th. Judges were all saved, though some have been great sinners. W.

VER. 14. Place. At the resurrection, which the Jews firmly believed. Ezech. xxxvii. 4.

VER. 16. People. Though he disapproved of their resolution. 1 K. viii. 6. Os. xiii. 11.

VER. 17. And the. Sixt. V. &c. read, "and he beheld the God." 1 K. iii. 7. C.—Vulg. may signify also, "God beheld Jacob," (Gr.) with a favourable eye, and enabled Samuel to restore their fallen state, and to recover the ark. H.

VER. 18. Because. Gr. has not faithful, or what follows. C.—Yet Grabe's copy retains πιστος απατος, "faithful in seeing" into futurity; so that his predictions were always verified, and he acquired the confidence of all. 1 K. iii. 20. Prophets were formerly styled seers: yet they could not behold God, as he inhabits light inaccessible. 1 Tim. vi. 15. H.—Light. S. James (i. 17.) seems to allude to this passage. M.

VER. 19. Without. Gr. "fed with milk." 1 K. vii. 6. The Philistines were discomfited, and continued peaceable during the rest of Samuel's government.

VER. 21. Tyrians, who were auxiliaries, or in league with the Philistines. C.

VER. 22. Shoe. So Abraham declared he would not receive the latchet of a shoe from the king of Sodom. Gen. xiv. 23.—Him. All confessed his integrity, before he delivered up the sovereign power to Saul. 1 K. xii.

VER. 23. Nation. Foretelling that Israel should be defeated. Some doubt whether the soul of Samuel appeared; but it seems clear from this passage, (1 K. xxviii. 18. C. Dias.) as he could not otherwise be praised for it. W.

CHAP. XLVII. VER. 1. Nathan. Many other prophets lived at the same time. But he was most conspicuous, and crowned Solomon. C.—Gr. "and after him Nathan arose to prophesy," (H.) and keep up the succession.

VER. 2. Flesh. Gr. "peace-offering." The fat was deemed most delicate. (1804)

5 In lifting up his hand, with the stone in the sling he beat down the boasting of Goliath:

6 For he called upon the Lord, the Almighty, and he gave strength in his right hand, to take away the mighty warrior, and to set up the horn of his nation.

7 *So in ten thousand did he glorify him, and praised him in the blessings of the Lord, in offering to him a crown of glory:

8 For he destroyed the enemies on every side, and extirpated the Philistines, the adversaries unto this day: he broke their horn for ever.

9 In all his works he gave thanks to the holy One, and to the Most High, with words of glory.

10 With his whole heart he praised the Lord, and loved God that made him: and he gave him power against his enemies.

11 And he set singers before the altar, and by their voices he made sweet melody.

12 And to the festivals he added beauty, and set in order the solemn times, even to the end of his life, that they should praise the holy name of the Lord, and magnify the holiness of God in the morning.

13 *The Lord took away his sins, and exalted his horn for ever: and he gave him a covenant of the kingdom, and a throne of glory in Israel.

14 After him arose up a wise son, and for his sake he cast down all the power of the enemies.

15 *Solomon reigned in days of peace, and God, brought all his enemies under him, that he might build a house in his name, and prepare a sanctuary for ever: O how wise wast thou in thy youth!

16 *And thou wast filled as a river with wisdom, and thy soul covered the earth.

17 And thou didst multiply riddles in parables: thy name went abroad to the islands far off, and thou wast beloved in thy peace.

18 The countries wondered at thee for thy canticles, and proverbs, and parables, and interpretations,

VER. 6. Nation. Who were no longer under the control of the Philistines. H.

VER. 7. Thousand. This was sung in the cities, (1 K. xviii. 7. C.) and excited the envy of Saul, who nevertheless could not prevent David's exaltation. H.—Did he, or the people who praised the Lord and David. C.

VER. 8. Horn. Power and glory. H.—For ever, is not in Gr. David defeated the Philistines at the beginning of his reign. C.

VER. 14. Enemies. The piety of David was thus rewarded. H.—It must have been the greatest satisfaction to him, to see so wise a son on the throne, and all in perfect peace. 3 K. i. 48. and iv. 24. C.—These blessings were a reward of his virtue. W.

VER. 15. Youth. When others are less informed. This serves to place the apostacy of Solomon in a more striking light. C.—The author seems astonished both at the wisdom and at the folly of this prince, (H.) and apostrophises him. W.

VER. 16. Earth. Or explored all the secrets of nature, reticis. 3 K. iv. 29.

20 *Thou didst gather gold as copper, and didst multiply silver as lead,

21 And thou didst bow thyself to women: and by thy body thou wast brought under subjection.

22 Thou hast stained thy glory, and defiled thy seed, so as to bring wrath upon thy children, and to have thy folly kindled,

23 That thou shouldst make the kingdom to be divided, and out of Ephraim a rebellious kingdom to rule.

24 But God will not leave off his mercy, and he will not destroy, nor abolish his own works, neither will he cut up by the roots the offspring of his elect: and he will not utterly take away the seed of him that loveth the Lord.

25 Wherefore he gave a remnant to Jacob, and to David, of the same stock.

26 And Solomon had an end with his fathers.

27 And he left behind him of his seed, the folly of the nation,

28 Even Roboam, that had little wisdom, who turned away the people through his counsel:

29 *And Jeroboam, the son of Nabat, who caused Israel to sin, and shewed Ephraim the way of sin, and their sins were multiplied exceedingly.

30 They removed them far away from their land.

31 And they sought out all iniquities, till vengeance came upon them, and put an end to all their sins.

The praise of Elias, of Eliseus, of Ezechias, and of Isaias.

AND ^aElias, the prophet, stood up, as a fire, and his word burnt like a torch.

2 He brought a famine upon them, and they that provoked him in their envy, were reduced to a small number, for they could not endure the commandments of the Lord.

3 *By the word of the Lord he shut up the heaven, and he brought down fire from heaven thrice.

4 Thus was Elias magnified in his wondrous works. And who can glory like to thee?

5 *Who raisedst up a dead man from below, from the lot of death, by the word of the Lord God.

6 Who broughtest down kings to destruction, and brokest easily their power in pieces, and the glorious from their bed.

7 Who hearest judgment in Sina, and in Horeb the judgments of vengeance.

8 Who anointest kings to penance, and makest prophets successors after thee.

9 *Who wast taken up in a whirlwind of fire, in a chariot of fiery horses.

10 Who art registered in the judgments of times to appease the wrath of the Lord, ^ato reconcile the heart of the father to the son, and to restore the tribes of Jacob.

11 Blessed are they that saw thee, and were honoured with thy friendship.

12 For we only live in our life, but after death our name shall not be such.

13 *Elias was indeed covered with the whirlwind, and his spirit was filled up in Eliseus: in his days he feared not the prince, and no man was more powerful than he.

14 No word could overcome him, ^aand after death his body prophesied.

15 In his life he did great wonders, and in death he wrought miracles.

16 For all this the people repented not, neither did

VER. 29. Jeroboam. Though not of his seed, as we only find Roboam mentioned of all the thousand wives of Solomon. He left behind him Jeroboam, notwithstanding his desire to have him slain; and this man brought ruin on the nation. H.—Sin. This is the usual title given to this introducer of idolatry. He engaged the ten tribes in the worship of the golden calves, which ruined the state and religion of Israel.

17 And there was left but a small people, and a prince in the house of David.

18 Some of these did that which pleased God: but others committed many sins.

19 Ezechias fortified his city, and brought in water into the midst thereof, and he digged a rock with iron, and made a well for water.

20 *In his days Sennacherib came up, and sent Rabshaces, and lifted up his hand against them, and he stretched out his hand against Sion, and became proud through his power.

21 Then their hearts and hands trembled: and they were in pain as women in travail.

22 And they called upon the Lord, who is merciful, and spreading their hands, they lifted them up to heaven: and the holy Lord God quickly heard their voice.

23 He was not mindful of their sins, neither did he deliver them up to their enemies, but he purified them by the hand of Isaias, the holy prophet.

24 ^bHe overthrew the army of the Assyrians, and the angel of the Lord destroyed them.

25 For Ezechias did that which pleased God, and walked valiantly in the way of David, his father, which Isaias, the great prophet, and faithful in the sight of God, had commanded him.

26 *In his days the sun went backward, and he lengthened the king's life.

27 With a great spirit he saw the things that are to come to pass at last, and comforted the mourners in Sion.

28 He shewed what should come to pass for ever, and secret things before they came.

VER. 3. Directed. Gr. "prosperous in converting the people." 4 K. xxii. and 2 Par. xxxiv. H.—He began when he was only eight years old: but set to work more effectually ten years afterwards. The prophets complain of the disorders which prevailed before that period. C.

VER. 4. Sinners. Or "sins," when iniquity was become fashionable. He consulted no false policy, (H.) but boldly exerted himself in God's service, and even invited the Israelites out of his dominions to come and celebrate the pass-over. 2 Par. xxxiv. 6. C.—They belonged, in effect to him, as the twelve tribes were all promised to David's family, and the kingdom of Jeroboam was only a rebellion. C. xlvii. 23. H.

VER. 5. Sin. The two former effaced their sins by repentance, and never tolerated idolatry, which even Josaphat and Asa did, (3 K. xxii. 43. &c. C.) not destroying the high places. Many others yielded not to idol worship. W.

2 His remembrance shall be sweet as honey in every mouth, and as music at a banquet of wine.

3 He was directed by God unto the repentance of the nation, and he took away the abominations of wickedness.

4 And he directed his heart towards the Lord, and in the days of sinners he strengthened godliness.

5 Except David, and Ezechias, and Josias, all committed sin.

6 For the kings of Juda forsook the law of the Most High, and despised the fear of God.

15 And let Nehemias be a long time remembered, who raised up for us our walls that were cast down, and set up the gates and the bars, who rebuilt our houses.

The praises of Simon, the high priest. The conclusion.

SIMON, ^bthe high priest, the son of Onias, who in his life propped up the house, and in his days fortified the temple.

2 By him also the height of the temple was founded, the double building, and the high walls of the temple.

3 In his days the wells of water flowed out, and they were filled as the sea above measure.

4 He took care of his nation, and delivered it from destruction.

5 He prevailed to enlarge the city, and obtained glory in his conversation with the people: and enlarged the entrance of the house, and the court.

6 He shone in his days as the morning star in the midst of a cloud, and as the moon at the full.

7 And as the sun when it shineth, so did he shine in the temple of God.

8 And as the rainbow giving light in the bright clouds, and as the flower of roses in the days of the spring, and as the lilies that are on the brink of the water, and as the sweet smelling frankincense in the time of summer.

9 As a bright fire, and frankincense burning in the fire.

10 As a massy vessel of gold, adorned with every precious stone.

11 As an olive-tree budding forth, and a cypress-tree rearing itself on high, when he put on the robe of glory, and was clothed with the perfection of power.

12 When he went up to the holy altar, he honoured the vesture of holiness.

13 And when he took the portions out of the hands

17 He poured out at the foot of the altar a divine odour to the Most High Prince.

18 Then the sons of Aaron shouted, they sounded with beaten trumpets, and made a great noise, to be heard for a remembrance before God.

19 Then all the people together made haste, and fell down to the earth upon their faces, to adore the Lord, their God, and to pray to the Almighty God, the Most High.

21 And the people in prayer besought the Lord, the Most High, until the worship of the Lord was perfected, and they had finished their office.

CHAP. LI.

A prayer of praise and thanksgiving.

A PRAYER of Jesus, the son of Sirach. I will give glory to thee, O Lord, O King, and I will praise thee, O God, my Saviour.

2 I will give glory to thy name: for thou hast been a helper and protector to me.

3 And hast preserved my body from destruction, from the snare of an unjust tongue, and from the lips of them that forge lies, and in the sight of them that stood by, thou hast been my helper.

4 And thou hast delivered me according to the multitude of the mercy of thy name, from them that did roar, prepared to devour.

5 Out of the hands of them that sought my life, and from the gates of afflictions, which compassed me about:

6 From the oppression of the flame which surrounded me, and in the midst of the fire I was not burnt.

7 From the depth of the belly of hell, and from an unclean tongue, and from lying words, from an unjust king, and from a slanderous tongue:

8 My soul shall praise the Lord even to death:

9 And my life was drawing near to hell beneath.

10 They compassed me on every side, and there was no one that would help me. I looked for the succour of men, and there was none.

11 I remembered thy mercy, O Lord, and thy works, which are from the beginning of the world.

12 How thou deliverest them that wait for thee, O Lord, and savest them out of the hands of the nations

13 Thou hast exalted my dwelling-place upon the earth, and I have prayed for death to pass away.

14 I called upon the Lord, the Father of my Lord, that he would not leave me in the day of my trouble, and in the time of the proud, without help.

15 I will praise thy name continually, and will praise it with thanksgiving, and my prayer was heard.

16 And thou hast saved me from destruction, and hast delivered me from the evil time.

17 Therefore, I will give thanks, and praise thee, and bless the name of the Lord.

18 When I was yet young, before I wandered about, I sought for wisdom openly in my prayer.

19 I prayed for her before the temple, and unto the very end I will seek after her, and she flourished as a grape soon ripe.

20 My heart delighted in her, my foot walked in the right way, from my youth up I sought after her.

21 I bowed down my ear a little, and received her.

22 I found much wisdom in myself, and I profited much therein.

23 To him that giveth me wisdom, will I give glory.

24 For I have determined to follow her: I have had a zeal for good, and shall not be confounded.

25 My soul hath wrestled for her, and in doing it I have been confirmed.

26 I stretched forth my hands on high, and I bewailed my ignorance of her.

27 I directed my soul to her, and in knowledge I found her.

28 I possessed my heart with her from the beginning: therefore I shall not be forsaken.

Seir, the Philistines, and the Samaritans, who dwelt in Sichem, and had their schismatical temple in that neighbourhood. Ch.—This was the source of continual dissensions. Joseph. xi. 8. and xii. 2. Jo. iv. 20. The Jews and Samaritans are still at variance. The former, in the days of Esdras, pronounced a curse against the latter, forbidding any of them to become converts to their religion. (Grot.) which, if true, shews a very blameable malice. See Deut. xxvii. 4. Il.—Which, &c. is omitted in Gr. These three nations had evinced the greatest hatred towards the Jews, and thus deserved to be accounted objects of horror, though if the author harboured any ill-will, his conduct is not praised, (C.) but only recorded. Il.—The Samaritans consisted of Assyrians, Jews, &c. and therefore are styled no nation; and they were foolish in mixing idolatry with the true worship. W.

VER. 28. Seir. Gen. xiv. 6. All the Greek copies read corruptly "of Samaria."—Foolish.—Thus Christ said, you adore what you know not. Jo. iv. 22. C. See 4 K. xvii. 29. W.

VER. 29. Jesus. He declares his name, and concludes with wishing peace to the observers of these maxims. Grotius thinks that this was inserted by the grandson, (C.) who translated the work into Greek. H.—But there is no reason for this supposition. Solomon puts his name at the beginning and at the end of Ecclesiastes, and he frequently commends his own instructions, as this author does. C. xxxiii. 17. and xxxix. 16. and li. 19. C.

VER. 31. Steps. He... shall have the light of life. Jo. viii. 12. M.—Some Gr. copies add, "and to the pious he has given wisdom. Blessed be the Lord for ever. So be it. So be it." H.

CHAP. LI. VER. 1. Sirach. This prayer may be in imitation of the book of Wisdom. H.—Grotius assigns it to the grandson, without reason; as the author continues to speak of his travels, &c. He seems to have lived under Onias III. and under Seleucus and Antiochus Epiphanes, of Syria, to whom he was probably accused, and hence took occasion to retire into Egypt, where Ptolemy Epiphanes was king. C.—Others think (H.) that he was accused before Ptolemy Lagus, when he took Jerusalem. M.—We know too little of his life to decide any thing. C. See c. l. i. H.—Saviour. When we are not able to make a return, we must shew greater marks of gratitude, and particularly to God, for the favours which we have not deserved. W.

VER. 3. By. To accuse me. Zac. iii. 1. C.

VER. 5. Gates. Gr. "many." H.—He exaggerates the danger to which he was exposed, as he was not miraculously delivered from the flames, &c. (C.) though this might be the case. At least he thanks God for preserving him (H.) from the various torments which were then in use.

VER. 6. In. Gr. "from the midst of a fire which I did not enkindle," or deserve by any crime.

VER. 7. Hell. The grave. I was preserved like Jonas. C.—Unjust. Gr. "the accusation was made to the king, by an unjust tongue. My soul approached unto death, and my life," &c. H.

VER. 11. World. Shewn to Noe, Joseph, &c. C.—Nations. Gr. "enemies." v. 12.

VER. 13. Thou. Gr. "I raised my supplicating voice from the earth, and I." &c. H.

VER. 14. The Father. Grotius asserts boldly, that it should be, "my Father," and that some Christian has changed this. But his authority may be rejected, when he brings no proof; and Bossuet has solidly refuted him. The passage clearly proves the belief of the second person, and seems to allude to Ps. cix. 1. Drus. Vat. &c. C.

VER. 18. When. He now gives some account of himself, and exhorts all to seek for wisdom. H.—He was advanced in years, when he fell into the aforesaid danger, after his travels. C. xxxiv. 9. C.—Wisdom is most easily acquired, while a person is innocent. Eccle. xii. W.

VER. 19. After her. Being convinced that prayer is a requisite for the preservation and improvement of such a treasure. See 3 K. iii. 8. C.—And. Gr. "from the flower as of a ripening grape. My heart," &c.

VER. 22. Wisdom. Gr. "instruction for myself." H.

VER. 25. Wrestled. Against pleasure, idleness, &c. This shews how arduous a task it is to attain wisdom. C.—Confirmed. Greek, "in earnest."

VER. 27. Knowledge. Gr. Alex. "time of harvest." Grabe substitutes, "in purification," (H.) or the practice of virtue. Wisd. i. 4.

VER. 28. Heart. Or understanding, as the Heb. place 'his in the heart. 3 K. iii. 9.

29 My entrails were troubled in seeking her: therefore shall I possess a good possession.

30 The Lord hath given me a tongue for my reward: and with it I will praise him.

31 Draw near to me, ye unlearned, and gather yourselves together into the house of discipline.

ON THE PROPHETS.

WE come now to another division of the Bible, specified by our Saviour: All things must needs be fulfilled which are written in the law of Moses, and in the Prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me. Luke xxiv. 44. He more frequently comprises all the Scriptures under the titles of Moses, or the Law and the Prophets; (ib. v. 27.) as in effect, all the sacred writings refer ultimately to him, who is the end of the law; (Rom. x. 4.) and the Jews comprise under the name of the first prophets, the histories of Josue, &c. H.—God has kept up a succession of prophets from the beginning, who either by word of mouth or by writing, established the true religion. Their predictions are the most convincing proof of its divine origin. Is. xli. 23. They contain many things clear, and others obscure: having, for the most part, a literal, and a mystical sense. C.—Yet some relate solely to Christ, while others must not be applied to him. Bossuet.—The Fathers, in imitation of the ancient Jews, and of the apostles, discover frequently a spiritual sense, concealed under the letter, as Christ himself declared that Jonas, in the whale's belly, prefigured his burial and resurrection on the third day. See Mat. xii. 39. Mar. ix. 11. Gal. iv. 24. When the figurative sense is thus authorized, it may serve to prove articles of faith; and such arguments must be more cogent in disputes with the Jews, than what can be drawn from their authors. They must confess that the New Testament contains a true history, or they cannot require that we should pay greater deference to the Old. Tertullian (Præc.) well observes, that heretics have no right to the Scriptures: But if they will quote them, they must receive them all, and adopt the sense given to them by the Church. C.—The providence of God, in giving prophets, and other guides to direct his people, was ever an object of admiration and gratitude. The prophets were enabled, by a supernatural light, superior to that of faith, though beneath that of glory, to announce the secrets of futurity, as eye-witnesses; whence their predictions are styled visions, as such witnesses deserve the utmost credit. We have the writings of the four great, and the twelve less prophets. In these, many things are hard to be understood, which must not be interpreted by the private spirit. 2 Pet. i. A large commentary would be requisite to explain these to the bottom, and we must refer the curious to the works of the Fathers, &c. as the subsequent notes will be rather briefer than usual. W.—The Sept. varies much from the original in Isaias. But we cannot specify every particular. C.—S. Jerom has frequently given a double version in his learned comments on the prophets, as he would not peremptorily decide which exhibited the sense of God's word more accurately. H.

THE PROPHECY OF ISAIAS.

THIS inspired writer is called by the Holy Ghost, (Ecclesiastic. xlviii. 25.) the great prophet; from the greatness of his prophetic spirit, by which he hath foretold, so long before, and in so clear a manner, the coming of Christ, the mysteries of our redemption, the calling of the Gentiles, and the glorious establishment, and perpetual flourishing of the Church of Christ: insomuch that he seems to have been rather an evangelist than a prophet. His very name is not without mystery: for Isaias in Hebrew signifies the salvation of the Lord, or, Jesus is the Lord. He was, according to the tradition of the Hebrews, of the blood royal of the kings of Juda; and after a most holy life, ended his days by a glorious martyrdom; being sawed in two, at the command of his wicked son-in-law, king Manasses, for reproving his evil ways. Ch.—He began to prophesy ten years before the foundation of Rome, and the ruin of Nineve. His style is suitable to his high birth. He may be called the prophet of the mercies of the Lord. Under the figure of the return from captivity, he foretells the redemption of mankind (C.) with such perspicuity, that he might seem to be an evangelist. S. Jer.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Amos. His name is written in a different manner, in Heb. from that of the third among the minor prophets, (W.) though S. Aug. has confounded them.—Ezechias. He wrote this title towards the end of his life, or it was added by Eadras, &c.

2 Hear, O ye heavens, and give ear, O earth, for the Lord hath spoken. I have brought up children, and exalted them, but they have despised me.

VER. 2. Earth. He apostrophises these insensible things, (C.) because they contain all others, and are the most durable. Theod. Deut. xxxi. 1.
VER. 5-7. Sad. This was spoken after Ozias had given way to pride, when the Ammonites, &c., began to disturb Juda, (4 K. xv. 37. and 2 Par. xxvii. 7.)

4 Woe to the sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a wicked seed, ungracious children: they have forsaken the Lord, they have blasphemed the holy One of Israel, they are gone away backwards.

5 For what shall I strike you any more, you that increase transgression? the whole head is sick, and the whole heart is sad.

6 From the sole of the foot unto the top of the head, there is no soundness therein: wounds and bruises, and swelling sores: they are not bound up, nor dressed, nor fomented with oil.

7 "Your land is desolate, your cities are burned with fire: your country strangers devour before your face, and it shall be desolate as when wasted by enemies.

8 And the daughter of Sion shall be left as a covert in a vineyard, and as a lodge in a garden of cucumbers, and as a city that is laid waste.

9 "Except the Lord of hosts had left us seed," we had been as Sodom, and we should have been like to Gomorrah.

10 Hear the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom, give ear to the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah.

11 "To what purpose do you offer me the multitude of your victims, saith the Lord? I am full, I desire not holocausts of rams, and fat of fatlings, and blood of calves, and lambs, and buck-goats.

12 When you came to appear before me, who required these things at your hands, that you should walk in my courts?

13 Offer sacrifice no more in vain: incense is an abomination to me. The new moons, and the sabbaths, and other festivals, I will not abide, your assemblies are wicked.

14 My soul hateth your new moons, and your solemnities: they are become troublesome to me, I am weary of bearing them.

15 And when you stretch forth your hands, I will turn away my eyes from you: and when you multiply prayer, I will not hear: "for your hands are full of blood.

16 "Wash yourselves, be clean, take away the evil of your devices from my eyes: cease to do perversely,

17 Learn to do well: seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge for the fatherless, defend the widow.

18 And then come, and accuse me, saith the Lord: if your sins be as scarlet, they shall be made as white as snow: and if they be red as crimson, they shall be white as wool.

19 If you be willing, and will hearken to me, you shall eat the good things of the land.

20 But if you will not, and will provoke me to wrath: the sword shall devour you, because the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

21 How is the faithful city, that was full of judgment, become a harlot? justice dwelt in it, but now murderers.

22 Thy silver is turned into dross: thy wine is mingled with water.

23 Thy princes are faithless, companions of thieves: they all love bribes, they run after rewards. "They judge not for the fatherless: and the widow's cause cometh not in to them.

24 Therefore, saith the Lord, the God of hosts, the mighty one of Israel: Ah! I will comfort myself over my adversaries: and I will be revenged of my enemies.

25 And I will turn my hand to thee, and I will clean purge away thy dross, and I will take away all thy tin.

26 And I will restore thy judges as they were before, and thy counsellors as of old. After this thou shalt be called the city of the just, a faithful city.

27 Sion shall be redeemed in judgment, and they shall bring her back in justice.

28 And he shall destroy the wicked, and the sinners together: and they that have forsaken the Lord, shall be consumed.

29 For they shall be confounded for the idols, to which they have sacrificed: and you shall be ashamed of the gardens which you had chosen.

30 When you shall be as an oak with the leaves falling off, and as a garden without water.

31 And your strength shall be as the ashes of tow, and your work as a spark: and both shall burn together, and there shall be none to quench it.

CHAP. II.

All nations shall flow to the Church of Christ. The Jews shall be rejected for their sins. Idolatry shall be destroyed.

THE word that Isaiah, the son of Amos, saw, concerning Juda and Jerusalem.

VER. 11. Victims. Without piety, they are useless. God tolerated bloody victims to withdraw the people from idolatry, but he often shewed that they were not of much importance, in order that they might be brought to offer the sacrifice of the new law, which eminently includes all the rest. VER. 2. Days. The whole time of the new law, from the coming of Christ till the end of the world, is called in the Scripture the last days; because no other age, or time shall come after it, but only eternity. Ch.—It is therefore styled the last hour. 1 Jo. ii. W.—Mountains. This shews the perpetual visibility of the Church of Christ: for a mountain upon the top of mountains cannot be hid.

3 And many people shall go, and say: Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob, and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall come forth from Sion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.

4 And he shall judge the Gentiles, and rebuke many people: and they shall turn their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into sickles: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they be exercised any more to war.

5 O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord.

6 For thou hast cast off thy people, the house of Jacob: because they are filled as in times past, and have had soothsayers as the Philistines, and have adhered to strange children.

7 Their land is filled with silver and gold: and there is no end of their treasures.

8 And their land is filled with horses: and their chariots are innumerable. Their land also is full of idols: they have adored the work of their own hands, which their own fingers have made.

9 And man hath bowed himself down, and man hath been debased: therefore, forgive them not.

10 Enter thou into the rock, and hide thee in the pit from the face of the fear of the Lord, and from the glory of his majesty.

11 The lofty eyes of man are humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be made to stoop: and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.

12 Because the day of the Lord of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and high-minded, and upon every one that is arrogant, and he shall be humbled.

8 For Jerusalem is ruined, and Juda is fallen: because their tongue, and their devices, are against the Lord, to provoke the eyes of his majesty.

9 The shew of their countenance hath answered them: and they have proclaimed abroad their sin as Sodom, and they have not hid it: woe to their soul, for evils are rendered to them.

10 Say to the just man that it is well, for he shall eat the fruit of his doings.

11 Woe to the wicked unto evil: for the reward of his hands shall be given him.

12 As for my people, their oppressors have stripped them, and women have ruled over them. O my people, they that call thee blessed, the same deceive thee, and destroy the way of thy steps.

14 The Lord will enter into judgment with the ancients of his people, and its princes: for you have devoured the vineyard, and the spoil of the poor is in your house.

15 Why do you consume my people, and grind the faces of the poor, saith the Lord, the God of hosts?

CHAP. V.

The reprobation of the Jews is foreshewn under the parable of a vineyard. A woe is pronounced against sinners: the army God shall send against them.

I WILL ^asing to my beloved the canticle of my cousin concerning his vineyard. My beloved had a vineyard on a hill in a fruitful place.

2 And he fenced it in, and picked the stones out of it, and planted it with the choicest vines, and built a tower in the midst thereof, and set up a wine-press therein: and he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

3 And now, O ye inhabitants of Jerusalem, and ye men of Juda, judge between me and my vineyard.

4 What is there that I ought to do more to my vineyard, that I have not done to it? was it that I looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it hath brought forth wild grapes?

5 And now I will shew you what I will do to my vineyard. I will take away the hedge thereof, and it shall be wasted: I will break down the wall thereof, and it shall be trodden down.

6 And I will make it desolate: it shall not be pruned, and it shall not be digged: but briars and thorns shall come up: and I will command the clouds to rain no rain upon it.

7 For the vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel: and the man of Juda, his pleasant plant: and I looked that he should do judgment, and behold iniquity: and do justice, and behold a cry.

8 Woe to you that join house to house, and lay field to field, even to the end of the place: shall you alone dwell in the midst of the earth?

9 These things are in my ears, saith the Lord of hosts: unless many great and fair houses shall become desolate, without an inhabitant.

10 For ten acres of vineyard shall yield one little measure, and thirty bushels of seed shall yield three bushels.

11 Woe to you that rise up early in the morning to follow drunkenness, and to drink till the evening, to be inflamed with wine.

12 The harp, and the lyre, and the timbrel, and the pipe, and wine, are in your feasts: and the work of the Lord you regard not, nor do you consider the works of his hands.^b

13 Therefore is my people led away captive, because they had not knowledge, and their nobles have perished with famine, and their multitude were dried up with thirst.

14 Therefore hath hell enlarged her soul, and opened her mouth without any bounds, and their strong ones, and their people, and their high and glorious ones shall go down into it.

15 And man shall be brought down, and man shall be humbled, and the eyes of the lofty shall be brought low.

16 And the Lord of hosts shall be exalted in judgment, and the holy God shall be sanctified in justice.

17 And the lambs shall feed according to their order, and strangers shall eat the deserts turned into fruitfulness.

18 Woe to you that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as the rope of a cart.

19 That say: Let him make haste, and let his work come quickly, that we may see it: and let the counsel of the holy one of Israel come, that we may know it.

20 Woe to you that call evil good, and good evil: that put darkness for light, and light for darkness: that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter.

21 ^aWoe to you that are wise in your own eyes, and prudent in your own conceits.

22 Woe to you that are mighty to drink wine, and stout men at drunkenness.

23 That justify the wicked for gifts, and take away the justice of the just from him.

24 Therefore, as the tongue of the fire devoureth the stubble, and the heat of the flame consumeth it; so shall their root be as ashes, and their bud shall go up as dust: for they have cast away the law of the Lord of hosts, and have blasphemed the word of the holy one of Israel.

25 Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled against his people, and he hath stretched out his hand upon them, and struck them: and the mountains were troubled, and their carcasses became as dung in the midst of the streets. For all this his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

28 Their arrows are sharp, and all their bows are bent. The hoofs of their horses shall be like the flint, and their wheels like the violence of a tempest.

CHAP. VI.

A glorious vision, in which the prophet's lips are cleansed: he foretelleth the obstinacy of the Jews.

IN the year that king Ozias died, ^aI saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and elevated: and his train filled the temple.

2 Upon it stood the Seraphims: the one had six wings, and the other had six wings: with two they covered his face, and with two they covered his feet, and with two they flew.

3 And they cried one to another, and said: ^bHoly, holy, holy, the Lord God of Hosts, all the earth is full of his glory.

4 And the lintels of the doors were moved at the voice of him that cried, and the house was filled with smoke.

5 And I said: Woe is me, because I have held my peace; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people that hath unclean lips, and I have seen with my eyes the King, the Lord of hosts.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Died. Either a natural (C.) or a civil death, by means of the leprosy. Chal. Tostat. 7.—This and the former chapters relate to the commencement of Jonathan's reign, whether before or after the death of Ozias. C.—Many think that this was the first prediction of Isaias. Orig. VER. 5. Peace. It is proper for sinners to do so. Eccli. xv. 9. The prophet was grieved that he was unworthy to join in the acclamation of the Seraphim,

6 And one of the Seraphims flew to me, and in his hand was a live coal, which he had taken with the tongs off the altar.

7 And he touched my mouth, ^aand said: Behold this hath touched thy lips, and thy iniquities shall be taken away, and thy sin shall be cleansed.

8 And I heard the voice of the Lord, saying: Whom shall I send? and who shall go for us? And I said: Lo, here am I, send me.

9 And he said: Go, and thou shalt say to this people: ^aHearing, hear, and understand not: and see the vision, and know it not.

10 Blind the heart of this people, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes: lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and be converted, and I heal them.

11 And I said: How long, O Lord? And he said: Until the cities be wasted without inhabitant, and the houses without man, and the land shall be left desolate.

12 And the Lord shall remove men far away, and she shall be multiplied that was left in the midst of the earth.

13 And there shall be still a tithing therein, and she shall turn, and shall be made a shew as a turpentine-tree, and as an oak that spreadeth its branches: that which shall stand therein, shall be a holy seed.

CHAP. VII.

The prophet assures king Achaz that the two kings, his enemies, shall not take Jerusalem. A virgin shall conceive and bear a son.

AND ^ait came to pass in the days of Achaz, the son of Joathan, the son of Ozias, king of Juda, that Rasin, king of Syria, and Phacee, the son of Romelia, king of Israel, came up to Jerusalem, to fight against it: but they could not prevail over it.

2 And they told the house of David, saying: Syria hath rested upon Ephraim, and his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the woods are moved with the wind.

and had reason to fear death. Gen. xvi. 13. Ex. xxxiii. 20. He finds himself less able to speak than before, like Moses. Ex. iv. 10. and vi. 12.

VER. 6. Coal. "Carbuncle," (Sept.) the word of God, (S. Basil) spirit of prophecy, (S. Jer. 142. ad Dam.) &c.

VER. 7. Sin. Impediment in speech. All defects were attributed to some sin, (Jo. ix. 2.) as Job's friends maintained.

VER. 8. For us. Hence arises a proof of the plurality of persons. C.—Send me. Thus Isaias was an evangelical and apostolical prophet. S. Jer. W.

VER. 10. Blind. The prophets are said to do what they denounce. S. Tho. 1. q. xxiv. 3. Sanct.—Sept. "heavy or gross is the heart," &c. The authors of the New Testament quote it thus less harshly.—Them. Is God unwilling to heal? Why then does he send his prophet? C.—He intimates that all the graces offered would be rendered useless by the hardened Jews. S. Isid. Pelus. 2. ep. 270.—Heb. may be, "surely they will not see," &c. C.

VER. 11. Desolate. By means of Nabuchodonosor, (S. Chrysa.) and the Romans, (Eus. &c.) or even till the end of the world, their obstinacy will continue.

VER. 12. Earth. After the captivity, the people shall be more docile. But this was more fully verified by the preaching of the gospel.

VER. 13. Tithing. The land shall produce its fruits, and people shall bring their tithes. Ezech. xx. 40. There shall be some left; (c. i. 9. and iv. 3. C.) though only a tenth part will embrace Christianity. S. Bas.—Made. Sept. "ravaged." They shall be exposed to many persecutions under Epiphane, and few shall escape the arms of the Romans, (C.) those particularly (H.) who shall be a holy seed. C.—The apostles were of Jewish extraction, (H.) and spread the gospel throughout the world. CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Achaz. This must be seventeen years later than the former prediction. 4 K. xv. 37. The kings of Syria and Israel jointly attacked Juda, but were forced to raise the siege of Jerusalem. The next year they came separately, and committed the following ravages. The news of their junction threw all into confusion. v. 2. Isaias was then sent to inform the king, that the designs of his enemies should not take effect. Yet the two kings obtained each

3 And the Lord said to Isaias: Go forth to meet Achaz, thou and Jasub, thy son, that is left, to the conduit of the upper pool, "in the way of the fullers' field.

4 And thou shalt say to him: See thou be quiet: fear not, and let not thy heart be afraid of the two tails of these fire-brands, smoking with the wrath of the fury of Rasin, king of Syria, and of the son of Romelia.

5 Because Syria hath taken counsel against thee, unto the evil of Ephraim and the son of Romelia, saying:

6 Let us go up to Juda, and rouse it up, and draw it away to us, and make the son of Tabeel king in the midst thereof.

7 Thus saith the Lord God: It shall not stand, and this shall not be.

8 But the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rasin: and within threescore and five years, Ephraim shall cease to be a people:

9 And the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria, the son of Romelia. If you will not believe, you shall not continue.

10 And the Lord spoke again to Achaz, saying:

11 Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God, either unto the depth of hell, or unto the height above.

12 And Achaz said: I will not ask, and I will not tempt the Lord.

13 And he said: Hear ye, therefore, O house of David: Is it a small thing for you to be grievous to men, that you are grievous to my God also?

14 Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign. Behold a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and his name shall be called Emmanuel.

15 He shall eat butter and honey, that he may know to refuse the evil, and to choose the good.

16 For before the child know to refuse the evil, and to choose the good, the land which thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of the face of her two kings.

a victory. But they could not dethrone Achaz, as they intended. C.—Paine traduces this prophecy as a lie, asserting that they succeeded. What! did they make Tabeel king! v. 6. The Israelites would not even keep the captives who had been taken. 2 Chron. xxviii. 15. Watson, let. 5.—Achaz had been made captive before. But now the Lord defeated the projects of his enemies, as he will the conspiracy of heretics against his Church. W

VER. 3. Jasub. This name was mysterious: Shear-Jashub meaning "the rest shall return" from Babylon, or be converted under Ezechias. C. x. 22. C.—Prot. Go "thou, and Shear-Jashub, thy son, at the end of the conduit," &c. H.

VER. 4. Tails. So he styles the two kings in derision. The distrust of Achaz was punished by the loss of many of his subjects, but he was not dethroned, having engaged the Egyptians and Assyrians to attack his enemies. v. 17.

VER. 6. Tabeel. Chal. "whom we shall think proper." He will not so much as name him.

VER. 8. Rasin. Both the king and his capital shall be ruined.—And five. Capellus (p. 497.) would read six and five; or, in eleven years time. But (C.) Ephraim was led captive twenty-one years after, and the Cutheans took their place when sixty-five years had elapsed. A. 3327. Usher.—Most people date from the prophecy of Amos to the ruin of Samaria, just sixty-five years. The former solution seems preferable. C.

VER. 12. Lord. He was afraid of being forced to relinquish his evil ways. S. Jer.—Though an idolater, he knew he ought not to tempt God.

VER. 14. Virgin, halma, (H.) one secluded from the company of men. Alma in Latin signifies "a holy person," and in Punic "a virgin." The term is never applied to any but "a young virgin." If it only meant a young woman, what sort of a sign would this be? S. Jer.—It was indeed above the sagacity of man to declare that the child to be born would be a boy, and live till the kings should be destroyed. But the prophet undoubtedly speaks of Jesus Christ, the wonderful, &c. (c. ix. 5.) as well as of a boy, who should prefigure him, and be an earnest of the speedy destruction of the two kings. He was to be born of Isaias; (c. viii. 4.) and of all the qualities belonging to the true Emmanuel, only 17 The Lord shall bring upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon the house of thy father, days that have not come since the time of the separation of Ephraim from Juda, with the king of the Assyrians.

18 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall hiss for the fly, that is in the uttermost parts of the rivers of Egypt, and for the bee that is in the land of Assyria.

19 And they shall come, and shall all of them rest in the torrents of the valleys, and in the holes of the rocks, and upon all places set with shrubs, and in all hollow places.

20 In that day the Lord shall shave with a razor that is hired by them that are beyond the river, by the king of the Assyrians, the head and the hairs of the feet, and the whole beard.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, that a man shall nourish a young cow, and two sheep,

22 And for the abundance of milk he shall eat butter: for butter and honey shall every one eat that shall be left in the midst of the land.

23 And it shall come to pass in that day, that every place where there were a thousand vines, at a thousand pieces of silver, shall become thorns and briers.

24 With arrows and with bows they shall go in thither: for briers and thorns shall be in all the land.

25 And as for all the hills that shall be raked with a rake, the fear of thorns and briers shall not come thither, but they shall be for the ox to feed on, and the lesser cattle to tread upon.

CHAP. VIII.

"in making speed to the spoil, he hasteneth the prey." H.—Chashbaz, the son of Isaias, was a sign that Syria and Israel should soon be rendered desolate; and in a more elevated sense, he shewed that Christ should overturn the powers of hell. C.—The virgin's son took the prey from the devil, who before possessed almost all the world.

2 And I took unto me faithful witnesses, Urias, the priest, and Zacharias, the son of Barachias.

3 And I went to the prophetess, and she conceived, and bore a son. And the Lord said to me: Call his name, Hasten to take away the spoils: Make haste to take away the prey.

4 For before the child know to call his father and his mother, the strength of Damascus, and the spoils of Samaria shall be taken away before the king of the Assyrians.

5 And the Lord spoke to me again, saying:

6 Forasmuch as this people hath cast away the waters of Siloe, that go with silence, and hath rather taken Rasin, and the son of Romelia:

7 Therefore, behold the Lord will bring upon them the waters of the river, strong and many, the king of the Assyrians, and all his glory: and he shall come up over all his channels, and shall overflow all his banks,

8 And shall pass through Juda, overflowing, and going over, shall reach even to the neck. And the stretching out of his wings shall fill the breadth of thy land, O Emmanuel.

9 Gather yourselves together, O ye people, and be overcome, and give ear, all ye lands afar off: strengthen yourselves, and be overcome, gird yourselves, and be overcome.

10 Take counsel together, and it shall be defeated: speak a word, and it shall not be done: because God is with us.

11 For thus saith the Lord to me: As he hath taught me, with a strong arm, that I should not walk in the way of this people, saying:

12 Say ye not: A conspiracy: for all that this people speaketh, is a conspiracy: neither fear ye their fear, nor be afraid.

VER. 6. Silence. Being willing to receive Tabeel, instead of their lawful prince. Achaz was then terrified, and chose to become tributary, rather than to lose his crown. Herein both offended God, in whom they ought to have trusted; and the auxiliary king looked upon himself as master of the country. 2 Par. xxviii. 20. 21 And they shall pass by it, they shall fall, and be hungry: and when they shall be hungry, they will be angry, and curse their king, and their God, and look upwards.

22 And they shall look to the earth, and behold trouble and darkness, weakness and distress, and a mist following them, and they cannot fly away from their distress.

5 For every violent taking of spoils, with tumult, and garment mingled with blood, shall be burnt, and be fuel for the fire.

6 For a CHILD IS BORN to us, and a son is given to us, and the government is upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, God the Mighty, the Father of the world to come, the Prince of Peace.

7 His empire shall be multiplied, and there shall be no end of peace: he shall sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom: to establish it, and strengthen it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth and for ever: the zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.

8 The Lord sent a word into Jacob, and it hath lighted upon Israel.

9 And all the people of Ephraim shall know, and the inhabitants of Samaria, that say in the pride and haughtiness of their heart:

10 The bricks are fallen down, but we will build with square stones: they have cut down the sycamores, but we will change them for cedars.

11 And the Lord shall set up the enemies of Rasin over him, and shall bring on his enemies in a crowd:

From whom all good advice proceeds. Grotius falsely translates, "the consuler of the strong God," meaning Ezechias. Though he deemed the Socinians unworthy of the Christian name, (Ep. ad Vallem.) he too often sides with them. Johels always means one who "gives counsel." C. xl. 13. Ezechias was at this time ten years old, and he did not always take advice, nor was his reign peaceful, &c.—God. The three Greek versions maliciously render El "the strong," though it be uncertain that it ever has that meaning, as it certainly has not when joined with gibbor, "mighty." Why should two terms of the same import be used? The Sept. copies vary much. Some read only, "he shall be called the angel of the great council, for I will bring peace upon the princes and his health." S. Jerom thinks they were afraid to style the child God. But this reason falls to the ground, as other copies have, (C.) after council, "Wonderful, Counsellor, God, the Mighty, the Potent, ἐκπαινετής, the Prince of Peace, the Father of the world to come, for, &c. (7.) His." Grabe (de Vitiis lxx. p. 29.) asserts that the former is the genuine version, and that the inserted titles are a secondary one; so that there must have been two versions before the days of Aquila, as the text is thus quoted at large by Clement and S. Ireneus, A. 180; Kennicott adds also by S. Ignatius, A. 110. H.—The omnipotent God became a little child, and without violence subdued the world, which he still governs. W.

them to err: and they that are called blessed, shall be thrown down headlong.

17 Therefore the Lord shall have no joy in their young men: neither shall he have mercy on their fatherless, and widows: for every one is a hypocrite and wicked, and every mouth hath spoken folly. For all this his indignation is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

18 For wickedness is kindled as a fire, it shall devour the brier and the thorn: and shall kindle in the thicket of the forest, and it shall be wrapped up in smoke, ascending on high.

19 By the wrath of the Lord of hosts the land is troubled, and the people shall be as fuel for the fire: no man shall spare his brother.

20 And he shall turn to the right hand, and shall be hungry: and shall eat on the left hand, and shall not be filled: every one shall eat the flesh of his own arm: Manasses Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they together shall be against Juda.

21 After all these things his indignation is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

Woe to the makers of wicked laws. The Assyrians shall be a rod for punishing Israel: but for their pride they shall be destroyed: and a remnant of Israel saved.

WOE to them that make wicked laws: and when they write, write injustice:

2 To oppress the poor in judgment, and do violence to the cause of the humble of my people: that widows might be their prey, and that they might rob the fatherless.

3 What will you do in the day of visitation, and of the calamity which cometh from afar? to whom will ye flee for help? and where will ye leave your glory?

4 That you be not bowed down under the bond, and fall with the slain? In all these things his anger is not turned away, but his hand is stretched out still.

5 Woe to the Assyrian, he is the rod and the staff of my anger, and my indignation is in their hands.

6 I will send him to a deceitful nation, and I will give him a charge against the people of my wrath, to take away the spoils, and to lay hold on the prey, and to tread them down like the mire of the streets.

VER. 7. Peace. Christ gives it, and propagates his Church. Heb. xii. 2.

VER. 18. High. All shall witness the fall of Israel, (C.) like a forest on fire. H.

VER. 19. Brother. Civil wars shall rage. 4 K. xv. Josephus (Bel. vii.) perhaps alluded to this passage, when he said, that an ancient prophecy announced ruin to the Jews, when they should turn their arms against each other. C.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Injustice. These great ones excite God's indignation. C.—Jeroboam forbidding any to go to Jerusalem; and the Pharisees establishing their wicked traditions, ruined all. W.

VER. 5. Woe. Or come on, Hous, though (C.) ho is ordinarily rendered, alas. It here indicates that God makes use of this scourge with regret, and will afterwards consign it to the flames. H.—The prophet speaks of Salmanassar, or of Sennacherib. S. Cyr. S. Jer.

7 But he shall not take it so, and his heart shall not think so: but his heart shall be set to destroy, and to cut off nations not a few.

8 For he shall say:

9 Are not my princes as so many kings? is not Calano as Charcamis: and Emath as Arphad? is not Samaria as Damascus?

10 As my hand hath found the kingdoms of the idol, so also their idols of Jerusalem, and of Samaria.

11 Shall I not, as I have done to Samaria and her idols, so do to Jerusalem and her idols?

12 And it shall come to pass, that when the Lord shall have performed all his works in Mount Sion, and in Jerusalem, I will visit the fruit of the proud heart of the king of Assyria, and the glory of the haughtiness of his eyes.

13 For he hath said: By the strength of my own hand I have done it, and by my own wisdom I have understood: and I have removed the bounds of the people, and have taken the spoils of their princes, and as a mighty man have pulled down them that sat on high.

14 And my hand hath found the strength of the people as a nest: and as eggs are gathered that are left, so have I gathered all the earth: and there was none that moved the wing, or opened the mouth, or made the least noise.

15 Shall the axe boast itself against him that cutteth with it? or shall the saw exalt itself against him by whom it is drawn? as if a rod should lift itself up against him that lifteth it up, and a staff exalt itself, which is but wood.

16 Therefore, the sovereign Lord, the Lord of hosts, shall send leanness among his fat ones: and under his glory shall be kindled a burning, as it were the burning of a fire.

17 And the light of Israel shall be as a fire, and the holy One thereof as a flame: and his thorns and his briars shall be set on fire, and shall be devoured in one day.

18 And the glory of his forest, and of his beautiful hill, shall be consumed from the soul even to the flesh, and he shall run away through fear.

19 And they that remain of the trees of his forest shall be so few, that they shall easily be numbered, and a child shall write them down.

20 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the remnant of Israel, and they that shall escape of the house of Jacob, shall lean no more upon him that striketh them: but they shall lean upon the Lord, the holy One of Israel in truth.

21 The remnant shall be converted, the remnant, I say, of Jacob, to the mighty God.

22 For if thy people, O Israel, shall be as the sand of the sea, a remnant of them shall be converted, the consumption abridged shall overflow with justice.

23 For the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, and an abridgment in the midst of all the land.

24 Therefore, thus saith the Lord, the God of hosts: O my people, that dwellest in Sion, be not afraid of the Assyrian: he shall strike thee with his rod, and he shall lift up his staff over thee in the way of Egypt.

25 For yet a little, and a very little while, and my indignation shall cease, and my wrath shall be upon their wickedness.

26 And the Lord of hosts shall raise up a scourge against him, according to the slaughter of Madian in the rock of Oreb, and his rod over the sea, and he shall lift it up in the way of Egypt.

27 And it shall come to pass in that day, that his burden shall be taken away from off thy shoulder, and his yoke from off thy neck, and the yoke shall putrefy at the presence of the oil.

28 He shall come into Aiath, he shall pass into Magron: at Machmas he shall lay up his carriages.

29 They have passed in haste, Gaba is our lodging: Rama was astonished, Gabaath of Saul fled away.

30 Lift up thy voice, O daughter of Gallim; attend, O Laisa, poor Anathoth.

31 Medemena is removed: ye inhabitants of Gabim, take courage.
